5. When a person becomes highly spiritually advanced, more and more of purity from the Lord shines through and less of impurity shows as such impurity has been negated to a large extent. Such a person then exhibits more of universal love and higher traits towards one and all. This is what is meant by saying that spiritual advancement leads to true love towards the whole world, for that person has started seeing the imperishable Lord in everything.

6. It is incorrect to say that advanced spiritual beings do not care for us. They work silently and remotely doing that which one is destined to receive from them. But for such grace, one should first prove oneself to be deserving through self-effort.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Thanks for the reply!
This gives a more deeper perspective on relationships...
I can understand something on "runa" with people, but what is Runa with property? I thought we can have relationships and debts only with people and not with inanimate objects like property,etc....
Can you elaborate on this?

Answer
The term ‘Runa’ also covers that which is due to one as an effect of past karma. If one’s past actions (representing ‘punyam’ or meritorious deeds) are such that he is destined to own a house, he manages to acquire such a property etc. He may acquire it with his own effort or come by ancestral property (in which case there is some karmic connection with such ancestors/father etc.) There is no debt with inanimate objects.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhananjay,

Yes! I am going through guilt trip, a severe one, not that I gave in to lust or sexual pleasure, but I gave in to emotion, severe emotional blindness, which completely obliterated the reality. I fell for a girl, all emotionally, I controlled the sexual feelings, never have been physical but extremely emotional about her. At times when she responded I used to feel elated yet whenever she snubbed I lost faith in myself. This rollercoaster ride has happened so many times.
Is loving a girl, not for sexual gratification but to make her a part of my life and live a "happy married life" a "sin" as per the principles of Brahmacharya? Should I never fall in love or expect to fall in love? Does love always have to be with sexual undertones?
Regards

Answer
1. Any relationship with the opposite sex (as man/woman), outside the precincts of marriage ends in sorrow. Hence interaction with the opposite sex should be kept free from emotion to the best possible extent and limited to necessity.

2. Love for a woman when let to grow with the intention of marriage (carried out at the earliest and not delayed) reduces the chances of suffering. The longer the delay, the more are the chances of breakup ending in sorrow. The purpose of cupid between man and woman is marriage that leads to offspring & a family. The longer this objective is delayed, the higher the chances of suffering

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
hello sir,
your answers are very inspiring and help to continue efforts without giving up even in the face of failures.
earlier also in a question which asked if you had any published book you said that you would publish a book only when you attain self realization , but can you compile all the knowledge that you have shared on this portal on brahmacharya and your read knowledge on self realization and illustrations and examples in the from a pdf or other such document and upload it somewhere in the form of a file for download which then can be printed and kept as a book.that would not be publishing a book but just sharing your knowledge.your answers apply to the present day conditions and give highly practical advice.It will benefit many people and reading from a book is more benefitting than reading on the web.also any needed topic can be read as the answers on this portal are not arranged topic wise.
also if any of the readers of this portal have already made a book of these answers i request them to upload it and share it on this portal as a follow up to this question.
i am sorry for asking you to do so much work but i dont know how to compile a book like document and also being a student in an important year , i dont find much time to learn the technique and arranging the answers topic wise.
thank you for taking the pains to answer to so many questions and changing many lives by inspiring them.

Answer
Since questions & answers continuously keep getting added and as the volume of material is large, the answers have to be indexed category wise by readers themselves in a personal database and kept updated. If uploaded onto a site, the same can be shared with readers here.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Sir,

I hope you are doing well. After being clean for 39 days, I got agitated and broke my celibacy. Was this due to pressure built up by the semen formed? I was feeling uneasy with some withdrawal symptoms before slipping. Has all progress become nullified because of the slip? How long does one have to be abstinent before the semen starts getting reabsorbed?

Thank you,
Amit

Answer
Do not worry about failure. Take it as a stepping stone to success. Learn from the mistake and avoid repetition. Earlier your period of Brahmacharya was much shorter. Now it has become a little more longer. Gradually increase this period to the best extent possible through devotion to God and personal efforts. With a proper Yogic lifestyle, the breaks reduce and the practice becomes life long. This is the only way.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
hi dhananjay,

some questions i want to ask are.

1.while reading Bhagavad Gita i have some doubt in chapter 2 verse 61 in this Lord Krishna says that one who is able to draw his senses inward and fixes his buddhi on the lord gets free from sense pleasures what does this mean and how to draw senses inward.

2.in one of the article i was reading some days back i have a query the author says about a balloon seller who ties the balloons in his hands after filling gas and gives away when some one buys and new balloon takes its place so the author says that our desires are like the balloons and once a desire is fulfilled another desire arises to overcome this we should make "chitta shuddi" what does this term mean can you please elaborate.

thanking you
Ganapathi.

Answer
1. Through the long practice of a life of Yoga & Brahmacharya, the past impressions and tendencies start to dissolve and weaken, whereupon comes to the Yogi deep meditation and constant contemplation upon his true self (Lord). This automatically enables one to withdraw from the senses and merge the mental vehicles into the Atman.

2. Purification at the physical, mental and karmic levels leads to 'Chitta Shuddhi' (pure existence). It is attained by the same method described above.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Dhananjay Sir,
Hope you are fine. Thanks for the priceless service you are offering here. My life has reformed and become meaningful after overcoming masturbation and porn. I have become healthy and happy, all by your grace and guidance. My marriage has become strong and is in good relations. Thanks again for the great service. I have two questions seeking your reply:

1. In one of your earlier answers you mentioned that married people can practice non-ejaculatory sex with their wife to start with as this prevents loss of semen and is better than ejaculation sex. Does this give same benefits as complete Brahmacharya?

2. Other experts on this site such as Doug Adams and Anthony Tarqinto don't support Brahmacharya and encourage masturbation and sex release. They are misguiding youngsters and encouraging immorality. I feel very sad to see such misinformation as I have personally suffered very much from the effects of semen wastage and porn. How can they be proven wrong? How to make them realise their mistake? Thanks once more sir.

Answer
1. Non-ejaculatory sexual relations (not ejaculating during the sexual act through breath control [kumbhaka] helps one overcome slavery to the act of ejaculation to some extent). It can be practiced during the first few months of Brahmacharya in case of married people who find it unable to give up sexual contact all of a sudden.

However, even such contact has to be gradually tapered and complete abstinence from all forms of sexual contact through mind & body have to be eventually mastered if Brahmacharya is to lead to its true objective namely perfect health of the body and mind and finally self-realization.

The purpose of the sexual act is procreation and not recreation. Any recreational sexual activity will eventually end in sorrow. It creates bondage and densifies the past sexual samskara-s. Loss of Prana (though lesser than ejaculatory sex) still occurs and desire remains strong. As long as recreational sex (even without ejaculation) is not overcome, one cannot become an Urdhvareta as the production of semen does not stop. Only when all forms of physical and mental enjoyments in the sex plane are given up and a life of Yoga adhered to with regular meditation does one become an Urdhvareta after many years of unbroken practice.

True bliss, perfect health, strength and liberation are possible through complete Brahmacharya alone and not otherwise. Words cannot describe the joy, freedom and strength that the true Brahmachari experiences. Hence one should gradually taper even a non-ejaculatory relationship within marriage and take up cent percent Brahmacharya of the mind and body. This alone is real Brahmacharya.

2. All Jiva-s will eventually realize what is true and untrue. It is the purpose of the human birth, to gain knowledge regarding 'Sat' (the absolute truth) by overcoming belief in 'Asat' (falsity born of Maya). This process applies to every being, right from a little ant to the human. It does not matter whether one want's this or doesn't, whether one accepts this or does not. And so it follows that nothing needs to be proven. At the right time, after much personal experience, every Jiva will realize what is right and what is wrong. This is the grand plan of the Almighty. All this is HIS Leela (play). Then, things get proven automatically. Fortunate are those who learn from the mistakes of others and apply wisdom. To all others, there is always the classroom called life which has its own unique way of correcting and educating its students through the harsh lessons called experience.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Respected Sir,

Hope you are well and in good health. In an upnishad it is written that there are only two paths to liberation. Known as Shuka path or bird's path and Vama path or ant's path. These paths are laid by great sages Shukadeva and Vamadeva. The former leading to immediate and latter to much slower and gradual liberation. What is wanted to know was which of the two is easier to follow and which is the one most aspirants take.

Answer
The Shuka path is the most safe and suggested method. Any path to self-realization is never easy. It is always an uphill task with various chances to downfall. The grace of God alone matters and such grace dawns further to honest and sincere efforts from one's side.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
HELLO SIR

I AM READ ALL THE ANSWER OF YOU. BUT I HAVE EAGER TO KNOW ABOUT THE WHAT IS MORE DAMAGE IN TWO PRACTICE OR TWO DIFFERENT LIFESYTLE WHICH PERSON LEAD IN THERE LIFE.
WHEN Mr.A IS STRICTLY SAVE AND ACCUMULATED HIS VITAL ENERGY FROM STARTING TO AGE OF 27. AND SUDDENLY AFTER HE STARTED DOING SOME ALL WRONGFUL ACT SUCH AS TWO TIMES OF THREE TIMES SEW WITH GIRLS. TILL THE LIFE.
IN OTHER CASE Mr.B IS NOT SAVE OF ACCUMULATED HIS VITAL ENERGY FROM AGE 13 TO 26. AND DOING IN THAT AGE LOTS OF MASTURBATION.
AND AFTER REALIZATION OF THE PRACTICE OF BRAMCHARIYA AND VITAL ENERGY HE STARTED THE SAVE VITAL ENERGY AND PRACTICE OF BRAMCHARIYA TILL LIFE. AND DOING FREQUENTLY JAPA AND REMEMBERING GOD AND MEDITATION IN THERE LIFE AND AFTER HIS MARRIAGE ALSO DOING THE SAME FOLLOW BRAMCHARIYA.
SO I WANT TO KNOW WHAT IS MORE PREFERABLE FOR LIFE OR MORE DAMAGING SIDE OF THE ABOVE.
plz give answer because i eager to know about that.

Answer
1. A starts loosing the benefits he accrued and degenerates further to the deviation.

2. B starts overcoming his shortcomings and ascends physically, mentally and spiritually.

However, a person who has lead the life of A for more than a decade will not get the mind to break his practice and even if he does will immediately realize his mistake and revert to the practice.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Respected Dhananjay,

As per your guidance through various of your previous posts and answers to my queries I have been trying very hard to follow abstinence yet I observed few behavioral changes and finally slipped to relieve extreme sexual anxiety.

1.In the first fifteen days the sexual urge which developed was controllable and I could contain it, then after a week, the urge resurfaced and there was a sort of anxiety and restlessness which developed in my behaviour. I tried chanting God's names yet after few hours the sexual urge re-emerged with a greater intensity. I continued to subdue it and noticed an increase in frustration and aggressive behavioral aspect in me, leading to short-temper, ego, attention-span deficit etc. Finally while I was sleeping at night, I was woken up by the same urge and after a total of 22-23 days I slipped into self-inflicted sexual relief. It did cause an extreme calming effect, but it turned the guilt pangs on. Is it so tough to control or I am feeding acceptance to a weak mind and will power?

2. It's so tough Dhananjay, also I subconsciously started viewing few women who had shown interest towards me with lust. I viewed them in that manner for few seconds without deliberate conscious in the weeks of control of urge and then quickly changed my vision. Yet that fraction of a second of deviation had caused all the harm to the overall mindframe, it was like the pictures got etched in mind and only after relieving myself of the pent-up sexual urge I could erase those pictures.

Kindly suggest suitably the cause and the action steps.

Thanks and Regards

Answer
Past Samskara-s (impressions) & Vasana-s (tendencies) that densely envelop the Atman cause consciousness to associate itself with the body-mind complex resulting in strong sexual tendencies. The way to overcome the same is through a life of Yoga with Brahmacharya and meditation. Practices such as Pranayama attenuate such karma slowly and make Brahmacharya longer.

Indulge in Yogic practice twice a day as explained earlier with 4.00 A.M wake up and much meditation. Such sincere practice will gradually dissolve unwanted tendencies and make Brahmacharya unbroken. Then, you will slowly start to realize the bliss of the Atman

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
hi dhananjay

thank you for your response,

1.can you please explain what are Samskaras and Vasanas? how they are formed? i read from your many posts when aspirants ask about their temptation and fall you say that rise of past samskaras and vasanas. how does these actually formed and what should we do in order to eliminate future samskaras and vasanas.

2.I read that Karma is formed by our actions,thoughts,words and every response from us and is responsible for a jiva taking different bodies. so what is your advice so that we don't bound our self in karma which should not be done by us which lead us to further births.

3.I have this question from long time, people are doing holy bath and rituals to ward off their misfortune or bad deeds on some auspicious days or some duration in river bath so what is your take on this do they suffer their karma or the karma will be nullified.

thanks,
Ganapathi.

Answer
1. Every action carried out with the active 'I-sense' (Ego) creates Samskara-s & Vasana-s. In other words, these are the frameworks that constitute karma. Good actions carried out as a part of one's duty, with a selfless perspective, as service to God create benefic Samskara-s & Vasana-s which donot cause bondage (such karma is called 'Nishkama Karma' or desire-less actions). The Yogi who practices Brahmacharya and a life of Yoga with the sole objective of self-realization is a 'Nishkama Karma Yogi'. He has a bright chance of early liberation. This is the way of preventing the accumulation of harmful karma and thus future births (further to clearance of already existing karma).

2. Answer 1 clears question 2.

3. Such rituals are only a method of making the common man become aware of karma and righteousness. These are steps that help the common man become aware of God and his true spiritual nature. This way, he sets aside at least some time to connect to God and think divine. There is no further significance to any such ritual. Having a holy bath does not negate karma. If such was the case, all the sinners in this world would have washed away their past karma in holy rivers and attained liberation.

But this is not the case. Karma once accrued has to be worked out. It cannot be side stepped. This is why even liberated saints such as Bhagavan Ramana Maharishi or Shri. Ramakrishna Paramahansa suffered from diseases such as cancer before giving up the body after self-realization. The karmic account had to be cleared with such suffering as such karma was due for cleansing.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Sir

i follow yours guideline from last couple-up months. at one time i happy and also upset about my old masturbation from last 12years. sir i am in field of Advocates and i have to read and search lost of law-books and focus on accuracy on judgement. but i never focus or give best or even single confers answer about any critical case which i face. i passed all my exam by lost of hard working by reading numbers of times because of my poor memory.

which i feel due to this my masturbation or lost of my vital energy. now i completely give up this habit from eights months except lost in night-mare. now i feel new freshness and get inner strengths. but still i not remember some critical aspects of my profession and suddenly forget about past activity. so i want to know can i improve or get memorably power which i lost by regular practice of BRAMCHARIYA. or yes so how much time it will takes .

Answer
A life of Yoga & Brahmacharya carried out with God devotion will gradually improve one's physical, mental and spiritual states and cause betterment. There is nothing more potent that Ojas to improve memory and mental faculties. After a few years of such unbroken practice, the Yogi will find himself slowly excelling in his field of work. This is the truth and beyond doubt.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello sir,

Sir lately i have developed an intense desire to become an sanyassi, so sir please advise me where to find a guru and is it advisable to get become a naga saint at kumbh mela?
or shall i keep practicing brahmacharya and carry on with mundane life?

Thank you

Answer
In the Bhagavad-gita, Lord Krishna describes a true Sanyasi as one who has given up all material desire with the sole quest to realize the absolute truth (Parabrahman) to attain liberation.

It does not matter whether one wears the ochre robes or does not. It does not matter whether one is married or single. These things are not connected in any way to Sanyas. One who has a pure mind, who wishes good to all, who does not expect anything from another, who does not harm any creature (even when harmed by it), who does not crave for sense enjoyment (through 'Indriya Nigraha' or restraint of the senses), who does not covet after material things, whose mind is clear with devotion and longing for the Lord, whose life objective is to realize the absolute truth and who constantly strives in this direction is the real Sanyasi.

Perform the duty entrusted to you by God. This may include mundane work as in a job, duty as a student/son/husband/father etc. Practice a life of Yoga & Brahmacharya with the sole intent of self-realization with devotion to the Lord. This is real 'Sanyas'. At the right time, you will know who your Guru is. You will know it when it happens.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Sir,

Does too much masturbation make the face ugly and red? From your experience, is stopping masturbation helps reduce this redness and ugliness?

I'm a male--a 38 years old. I've been masturbating for at least 13 years. My face has become red because of this act. I do not have a medical or skin condition that would cause that. When I stop masturbating, I feel that my face redness decreases and I become a bit happier.
Is there hope?

Answer
It is possible that the redness could be an effect of some other cause. Masturbation drains vital energy and generally makes the face go pale.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
NAMASKAR DHANANJAYJI
I am 26 year old boy. I have follow your maximum answer i completely removed all sexual thoughts in my mind by filing god prayer and watching regular spiritual (TV-serial). But I can't stop night-fall on night, which falls two times in month. Such night-fall became confusion and shame and create embarrassing situation before my family members. I want to know any special diet on diner which stops the night-fall. i can not do yoga because my house is so small and occupied by family members.
Sir plz do needful and effective answers because i want to stop such falling as soon as possible.

Answer
A pure vegetarian diet (as described in previous answers) with 4.00 A.M wake up and a life of Yogic practice with Brahmacharya is required to overcome nightfall. After many years of such unbroken practice, night emissions reduce and gradually taper away. If not possible to practice Yoga at home, some other place offering solitude should be chosen.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Celibacy/Abstinence / Mental state/Yoga sutra-s

Advertisement

Expert: Dhananjay - 8/25/2012

Question
hello sir,
i wanted to ask what work the mind should be occupied with when we are ill. as empty mind is a devil's workshop and swami sivanada says that we should be extra careful when ill. i dont know whether my illness is karmic or not because even though i have been trying to get establish in brahmacharya since march i have had not much success , the best being 22 days and current stretch is 9 days this time i have to achieve brahmacharya with yoga and have to make some strides towards self realization.the illness is not severe but is causing very tiredness and weakness.

2)i also had a doubt about yama and niyama. In the book by I K Taimni on Yoga II-34 :"As improper thoughts, emotions (and actions) such as those of violence etc., whether they are done (indulged in), caused to be done or abetted, whether caused by greed, anger or delusion, whether present in mild, medium or intense degree, result in endless pain and ignorance; so there is the necessity of pondering over the opposites."

he explains that
"The man who sees a thief breaking into a house but does not do anything to prevent the crime is partly responsible for the crime and will to that extent have to bear the Karmic result and degradation of character.But more noteworthy than this doing of evil action indirectly is perhaps the third way of participating in it. We some times witness a crime but owing to callous ness or desire to avoid getting into trouble do nothing about it or may even silently approve of it. We assume that because we have not taken any part direct or indirect in the crime we are quite free from blame. But it is not so according to the Yogic ethics embodied in Yama-Niyama. According to the more stringent rules of Yogic morality a man who connives at or is indifferent to a crime being done in his presence in which, from common humaneness he should have interfered is partly guilty of the crime. 'Inaction in a deed of mercy is action in a deadly sin' as the Buddha warned."
but in a past answer you said that we must ignore the surroundings and be indifferent to people otherwise we may get very involved with them which may prove harmful.
this time i am taking the practice of yama niyama seriously as i have realized that without them no meditation can be possible and maintaining brahmacharya is also not possible.this time i have to achieve this ideal and experience what happiness is in samadhi which as said by everyone that it has to experienced and cannot be described.

Answer

1. Keeping the mind centered on God (such as chanting his name etc.) is the way at all times and especially when ill. Persevere in a life of Yoga & Brahmacharya, success will eventually come.

2. Non-interferance in worldly matters as described earlier means not involving in situations/circumstances/talk etc. which are useless in terms of their substance. Gossip, useless discussions and arguments etc. fall under such category. It does not mean being indifferent to each and every situation in general or being inhuman/merciless. One has to use his discretion and decide if an action will be of any use in the overall sense of righteousness to both the giver and the taker.

In Chap I, 33 of the 'Yoga Darsana', Sage Pathanjali mentions that one should develop indifference towards the wicked. This does not however mean that indifference should be extended towards good people as well. However, an attitude of Vairagya (dispassion) is to be developed towards the entire world.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Honorable Sir,
I have started practicing Brahamcharya from past few days.But i watched a porn movie 2 days before and my penis was erect and was lubricated but no emmision was there.I am continuing practicing Brahamcharya now but anxiety have grown in my mind about the movie i watched and i feel that ater watching that movie my stamina has broken and the semen is at the tip of my penis nd i feel uncomfortable.I think i should masturbate once and start again but i ear about the loss of semen i have been saving from one month.What shoul i do?I am confused.
I am also a gym member and loves to wear good dress.it is neccessary to live simple to maintain Brahamcharya?I think i can continue Practicing Brahamcharya by wearing stylish clothes.So What should i do?

Same is the case o alcohol and non veg.I need non veg to maintain my physique.Also i love to eat it.I also think i can practice Brahacharya by eating non veg. and drinking beers.So can i????
PLZZ help me out.I will be eagerly waiting or your answer..

Answer
1. One should never indulge in a voluntary break. Indulge in Yogic practice and a pure lifestyle with devotion to the Lord & meditation. Perform physical exercise. Donot repeat the mistake.

2. When a life of Yoga & Brahmacharya is practiced with honesty, the desire for external things such as clothes etc. will gradually reduce by itself after a few years.

3. You have yourself experienced the effects of such indulgence. A pure vegetarian diet helps maintain Brahmacharya better during the initial years. The type of food does not matter much to the advanced Yogi; the same however cannot be said of the beginner. Alcohol is also unwanted and unfavorable to the practice.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Respected Dhananjay,

Though I have been following Brahmacharya to the best of my extent,although it is a struggle to keep oneself aligned, I realised sometimes the focus gets dissipated due to these emotions.

1. Anger - Many a times through the course of the day are such when anger seems like a tool to self-defence. If you might say anger is an impediment to Brahmacharya then how do we deal with day-to-day matters of facing rudeness, some sort of injustice or even aggressive behaviour from someone else. Should we just keep calm and smile back at them. What if a person induces physical harm on us or someone in my family. Should I not be physically defending myself or the member then? Infact, if I don't react then it might be detrimental or it might be viewed as non-manly.

Also I wanted to know, that do such situation arise due to effect of some past karma?

2. Love - I know the love I will be talking about will be the worldly love. As from one of your past answers I have tried to contain this feeling but again I have fallen on my knees with an emotionally charged feeling of helplessness for someone. As I feel happy sometimes while thinking of or interacting with that person, the same way I get hurt when it doesn't happen.

I am sure these forms of emotions are not aligned with the practice of Brahmacharya, but they are so ubiquitous in the daily run of life,so how can one shun them?

Reverent Regards

Answer
1. No situation can be bettered using anger. It is the firmness & sureness in action that helps one achieve success, be it in any situation. The calm and controlled person alone has such confidence. Anger drains this surety and makes one weak and vulnberable. Terrible mistakes will be committed under the sway of anger. It is not the style of the wise. Hence anger should be chanellized into firmness and the situation handled with confidence using discretion and intelligence. When such a technique is practiced, even rude and excited people eventually come under control.

2. It is allright to defend, but one should not offend. Only those actions necessary to negate the situation and walk away make sense. Any other offense ends with suffering. Such action backed by wisdom is true manliness.

3. Every event in life is the product of karma.

4. Adhere to the honest practice of a life of Yoga & Brahmacharya and keep the body and mind occupied with physical exercise and constructive work. Practice much meditation. The feeling of helplessness and vulnerability as regards the opposite sex will eventually taper & wither away after a few years of such practice as and when the Yogi develops true wisdom. He then starts realizing this world & woman to be nothing but an illusion. Thereafter develops the greatest strength, mental clarity and peace of mind accompanied by the bliss of the Atman in meditation

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Dhananjay Sir,

I am trying hard to follow path to salvation from few months.
I have had falls but it seems like i dont want to give up now however hard and how many times i fail.

I always used to be a calm person [atleast on outside].
Since starting of practice, Most of the time there is still poise ... but sometimes there is a burst of emotion especially anger which seems uncontrollable for the moment. Also these mood swings are without any reason.

Where am i missing out?

I had one more question, should we sleep without blanket because i have noticed that im more prone to bad dreams with blanket, maybe it has something to do with heat.

PS: Sorry for the use so much 'I' :)

Answer
1. Brahmacharya increases the overall energy. When the Brahmachari succumbs to lower traits such as anger (which is nothing but energy in the negative form), the intensity is higher as more energy is within store. Anger however dissipates all the saved and built up energy which is to be used for self-realization. Hence one should overcome anger through the practice of Yoga & 'Gnyana' (knowledge of the absolute truth).

2. There is no harm in using a blanket under cold conditions.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
hi dhananjay,

i have some doubts regarding marriage in brahmacharya.

1.I experienced some postive change in my health condition and courage after performing brahmacharya and i made promise to lord that i will not masturbate.I am 29+ now and will marry in 2 or 3 years and i said to my mother that i will take up yoga before 34 as said by HH swami sivananda and my mother said that you start at the age of 45 and i don't want to hurt her, she is also saying that if you do like that then you will do injustice to the girl by not fulfilling her dreams of married life and the girls parents say words to my parents that even though you know about your son's intentions why did you married to our daughter, i saw in my childhood many of my relatives(married females)complaining to their parents about their husbands not being active in the act and the husbands got scolding from both sides even though i was child then i remember the incidents.

2.In one of your posts i read that if we practice brahmachraya before marriage and there are breaks after marriage apart from progency then we will face health problems and other problems due to long period of brahmacharya and breaking it.so i am thinking like this (A)i will perform unbroken brahmacharya till marriage(so that i become somewhat healthy and other benefits) and then according to spouse's desire i break my brahmacharya for some period (2-3 years)then make her understand the purpose and start my practice again.(B)I will break brahmacharya every 40 or 50 days(so as to eliminate the problems faced in future) and then continue like this till i start unbroken brahmacharya after my marriage. please tell me right path if my thinking is odd.

i don't want to hurt my mother and my future wife and i also said to my mother that upper limit of performing yoga is under 40 years i think she thought ok to that even though she didn't tell.

please tell me your valube advice
ganapathi.

Answer
1. Adhere to the practice with honesty and devotion to the Lord. At the right time, you will find a suitable wife who will help you evolve. Donot worry much about the future as all this is decided by the Lord. Our’s is to follow our Dharma (duty) and leave the rest to HIM. Marrying early is the right approach. Whether a person takes up Brahmacharya at 29 or 45 is decided by HIM and not us. Immaterial of what we want or don’t, HIS decision alone transpires.

2. A person who has practiced many years of unbroken Brahmacharya with deep meditation will generally not get the mind to squander his resources in a life of wanton sexuality. His indulgence gets limited to progeny automatically further to the ‘Gnyana’ (wisdom) he acquires from the years of practice. Also, such an honest aspirant who is spiritually evolved will most often get blessed with a wife who is also spiritually compatible to his level of progress. Give consent to marriage at the earliest with devotion to the Lord and as a part of duty. Things will work as destined and the journey called life moves on.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

SIR,
Continuous loss of semen by nighfall has made me weak, my face is glowless, eyes are sunken, earlier I used to be a smart guy, but now i have lot of health related problems.....
I just want to know can I ever become smart as I were earlier, Can I ever Recover.....And MOST IMPORTANT how long it will take to restore to my original health and looks,...
PLS PLS PLS help me

Answer

Take up the practice of Yoga & unbroken Brahmacharya as explained in past answers. After a few years of such practice, things will improve and come back to normalcy by the grace of the Lord.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Hello Dhananjayji

i have read this Answer and past answer on marriage relationship or limitation on sexual-activities after getting one or two child. but the problem is there when our partner demean or wants to further Act or for enjoyment or for satisfaction of her demand so how can i or we convince on BRAMCHARIYA or what is purpose of sex. today we seen that in our society 90% modern women or lady have lost of passion or urge on sex with his husband. they treat love is equal to sex. so how a normal man can select or detect a taste of woman or features before marriage to solve this problem after marriage. plz give reply because i don't want to do in such activities after marriage.

Answer

Like all other things, the nature of the partner that one gets is already decided in destiny. If the practice of Yoga & Brahmacharya for self-realization is genuine with God devotion and surrender, things eventually fall in place and the partner becomes supportive.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

When I tried to analyse my past failures in celibacy, or I should rather call it my succumbing to indulgence, I observe that after remaining celibate for a while, the bodily heat is increasing, and I am feeling uncomfortable and sleepless, and finally reaching a point where one feels like having a break atleast to get some good sleep.
Also the mood of happiness due to our internal state or due to achieving anything outside,creates an escape for mind to celebrate by indulgence...
How do we get out of thid kind of traps?

Answer

Through ‘Srvana’ (reading material related to self-realization such as the Bhagavad Gita, the Upanishads, Pathanjali Yoga sutra-s and the words of the wise), ‘Manana’ (contemplation on what has been read & learnt) and ‘Nidhidhyasana’ (meditation), the mind gradually becomes poised towards unbroken Brahmacharya and divinity. Wisdom becomes stronger.To achieve all these a life of Yogic practice is to be adhered to with commitment. The Astanga-s (8 limbs of Yoga) when practiced with sincerity instill the strength to ward away Maya which is the cause behind breaks.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I have practiced various forms of meditation for much of my life and have experimented with abstinence. Only recently have I sought to fully embrace brahmacharya. In embracing brahmacharya, I am getting a sense of it's liberating power. I am already in my late fifties. I have never married nor do I have children. My libido is still strong and brahmacharya is often a struggle. For the past ten years I have struggled with intense fatigue. I work full time in the social services and view this as a kind of karma yoga. But due to my fatigue, I must spend most of my weekends in bed. I also feel that my meditation practice (and brahmacharya practice)would be stronger if I had more time and energy, but I feel a sense of responsibility to keep my job.
At my age do you believe brahmacharya could restore the lost energy I have experienced. I believe I drained my energy with a nervous disposition and through putting myself through college and graduate school at a late age. Any comments would be appreciated.

Answer
A life of unbroken Brahmacharya carried out with God devotion & meditation will always better the situation and help one take strides towards overall development and liberation. When such practice is carried out for a long period of time, the layers of ignorance surrounding the Atman (pure soul) gradually attenuate and one evolves linerarly. There is no strength higher than that which comes from a life of Yoga & Brahmacharya. It is the greatest mode of life. Hence one should strive to make this the lifestyle, immaterial of age.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

Om Sri Raghvendray Namaha

As metioned by you "Self realized soul merges with Almighty, just like a drop of water merges into the ocean".
Then my question to you is while entering the Vrindavana, HH Guru Raghavendra Swami stated that he would be there (in the Vrindavana) for 700 years and he would continue to bestow his grace on his devotees from Mantralayam for 700 years.Can you make my understandings correct?

Dear Dhananjay,

I really want to know your matrubhasha. May I know your matrubhasha?

Thanks.

Answer
For complete liberation (without return to the physical/mental & causal planes) the Jiva should be free from both 'Punyam' (merit) and 'Paapam' (demerit) born of karma. Suppose a Yogi has attained to self-realization but still has much merit left in his karmic account due to the various good deeds performed by him (with the I-sense before attaining enlightenment), then he either has to enjoy such good karma in the physical/astral planes or he can distribute such merit to others based on devine will. Enlightened souls such as Guru Raghavendra Swami do not have any desire for material/physical enjoyments. Hence the only option left is to reside in the 'Sukshma Sharira' (astral body) and guide others till all the merit is exhuasted and the passage for irreversible liberation clear.

This is what Swamiji meant when he stated that he would reside in the Vrindavana for some more time. He still resides in the holy place of Mantralayam in his astral body, constantly in the state of 'Sahaja Nirvikalpa Samadhi'. When devotees who deserve help/guidance approach him, he expends some part of the accumulated merit in attending to them.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Hi sir
i am 25year old boy. i had habit of masturbation from last 12 years. now i stop that one from last 12 months. but i found semen in my urine when i go to discharge urine or when i sit constant i feel the semen leak in pipe. so this the features of prostate ? i little bit worry now, because this not leak when i had habit of masturbation. there is something big-problem for stomping the masturbation. because ultimately semen is leak with urine at every time. plz give answer and thanks.

Answer

Lead a lifestyle comprising of early morning wake up with Yogasana, Pranayama and meditation as described in earlier answers. Play a sport or regularly exercise. Give adequate mental work to the brain. It is not possible to practice Brahmacharya merely by refraining from masturbation. A life of Yoga is equally important. Once such a life is incorporated, the problem will resolve.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Hello Sir, I have almost five months of unbroken brahmacharya. I am mostly confident with avoiding self-stimulation, but I am concerned about temptation with an actual woman. It seems as if I am receiving a bit more attention lately from women, almost as if I am being tested. I do not want to lose brahmacharya, but I know I would be vulnerable if an actual woman was available to me. Any suggestions?

Answer

Contact with women should be brief, to the point & always be limited to necessity. A sense of Vairagya (dispassion) should be always kept in the mind as regards all worldly things including the impermanent body of a woman which degrades with time and is nothing but a flesh bag containing excrement. When such efforts are applied with an absolute life of Yoga supported by devotion to the Lord and much meditation, things becomes easier and the boat called Brahmacharya braves troubled waters.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
hi dhananjay,

This query is from the previous posts which i was reading earlier this day.

1.in one of your posts you said that before marriage we should maintain celibacy and after marriage we should perform the act only for progency and if the partner wants then we should perform non ejaculatory sex in the initial years for the bond between couple, so my doubt is if the partner performs non ejaculatory sex then after the act the semen in ejaculatory mode will escape as it has no outlet and this is equal to tantrik sex (if i am wrong correct me and voluntarily stopping the ejaculation might cause health problems.) so in this way he is losing his prana while engaging in the whole act and he is refraining from ejaculation and this results in wet dream.

so is it better to use the above method or is it better to ejaculate in the act(through health point of view and in this method will he be having the craving for sense pleasure as in the first method).

2.in the other posts forms of semen you said that the sexual excitement takes every essence of body and produces semen. i am little confused at what point of time the body takes the essence and converts into semen.

1.if the sexual thoughts arises and we think of god, these thoughts alternate one after other (this is my case i don't know what to do).
2.if we unintentionally see women for some seconds or minutes(in magazines,newspapers,tv.

i want to confirm so that we can know the exact point where it happens so that we can be extra careful.

thanks,
ganapathi.

Answer
1. Non-ejaculatory sex can be applied only for a few months so as to overcome the slavery to the sensation of ejaculation in the process of attaining to complete Brahmacharya. Since there is the absence of voluntary ejaculation, and since there is no direct expulsion of veerya, the energy lost is somewhat lesser. However, wet-dreams do not reduce or stop. Only cent percent Brahmacharya with meditation leads to Urdhvaretas. When such a life of honesty is adhered to, everything falls in place.

2. 'Bindu' (seed) under sexual excitement leads to formation of semen (which gets supercharged with Prana). The net sum of all essences in the body is Prana and it is Prana which is lost through loss of veerya.

3. The lesser the mind focuses on the sense of sexuality, the better are the chances of maintaining Brahmacharya. The more the time spent on sight/fantasy/imagination, the faster becomes the loss of Prana through formation of semen. The exact point cannot be determined as the whole process is seamless and quick. Such is the Leela of the Lord. The best option is to divert the mind at the very moment a sexual signal arises from within and reinforce Vairagya

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Is having sex with one's wedded wife less depressing and weakening than losing semen in other forms like masturbation, etc?
This has been my observation but just want to know your opinion on this.

Answer
Masturbation is an unnatural activity (as the purpose of the sexual act is procreation). Hence the effects are undesirable.

Sexual relations with one's spouse when limited to procreation with a life of Brahmacharya give the best results leading to excellent health & strength (of the body/mind) and speedy spiritual progress towards self-realization. The benefits of such a life cannot be weighed in words. It's effects are matchless.

With sexual relations carried out for recreation, these effects dilute to a large extent and health/strength/spiritual progress slows down rapidly (though it may appear lesser than a life of masturbation). Loss of Bindu (seed) always leads to debility of the body/mind and causes bondage to Maya. Hence cent percent Brahmacharya is to be eventually established if the bliss of the Atman is to be savored.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: I have never read the vedas but from various articles on the internet I got the following info:
~Vedas speak of an everlasting, all seeing, all hearing God to whom is our eventual return.
~Vedas include various rituals like havana and information on many gods like surya devata, etc.

My questions:-
i) I find the above two statements contradicting.Why worship others after we know of Brahman(not brahma)?

ii) From where did the trinity come & are they completely false or just 'non profit employees created by Brahman'?

iii) Other religions like Islam also preach about worship of the One True God.Are Allah/Brahman/Paramatma/Parameshwar all the same Formless(nirguna) God?

iv) Jesus of Nazareth was an enlightened prophet of Brahman(not brahma) who loved Brahman/God so much that he called Him his Father.Is not that true?

ANSWER: 1. The infinite, all pervading Brahman who is formless, nameless and unperceivable by the 5 senses and the mind cannot be comprehended by the common man. Only an advanced Yogi who dives deep into Samadhi gets access to such perception. What then should the common man do? How does he get access to connecting with the Supreme?

His ability being limited to sense perception, what is his hope?

To address this problem, the Hindu religion has given names and concepts to the various, apparent manifestations of the one Supreme who exists in all animate and inanimate objects and even beyond. By giving form and shape to such a manifestation of the Supreme, the concpt becomes tangible to the commoner. It becomes comprehensible to his sense limitation.

The great Almighty for example shines a minute part of his immense power through the Sun which results in life on Earth. Without the Sun, life here would perish in no time. So this aspect of the Supreme which helps maintain life is given a name as 'Surya Devata' (Sun God). By referring to this immense source of life energy as a God and by worshipping this God, the worshipper unknowingly aligns his mind and perspective towards that Supreme Lord who gives the Sun his power. He unknowingly connects himself to the Supreme force which shines through each and every being including himself. Such an alignment gradually helps him overcome the false concept of his individual 'I-ness' or Ego and develop the real concept namely universality. This is the general principle behind the concept of Gods and worshp.

2. This entire creation is the Lord's Leela (divine play). He alone is real while all else is a part of his illusion. It is said in the scriptures – "Tad Ekam Sat, Vipraha Bahudha vadanti" (He alone is real, he alone is the truth, the sages call him by various names). Before creation, one force alone existed, it alone exists and it alone shall exist after dissolution. Inbetween, just as the reflection of the Sun appears in various pots of water and makes it appear as though there are may Suns in these different pots (while there is only one Sun), the power of the Parabrahman shines through various beings, be they animals, humans or Gods and makes it appear as though there are that many creatures and entities (while there is only one Lord who shines through all of them as the Atman – which they themselves do not know). The concept of the trinity is no different from this but with a very high manifestation of the Lord's power.

3. Yes

4. It does not matter what name one calls him with. Just as calling water with different names does not change the property of water, HE remains the one and only Supreme, immaterial of what one calls him as or doesn't.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: I read somewhere that God can be worshipped & perceived in 3 ways as follows:-

i) Nirgun-Niraakar or the attributeless & formless God: Worshipping God through devotion or bhakti is not tangible in this case because God is devoid of any gunas(attributes, positive or negative).The only way possible here is Knowledge & Meditation because this God is Impersonal.
QUESTION#1 Is this not true??

ii) Sagun-Saakar or the God with attributes & form:
Worshipping God through devotion & good actions seems appropriate as God is Personal.I have no questions in this case.

iii) Sagun-Niraakar or the formless God with attributes:
My biggest doubts lie here.

QUESTION#2 In this case, can we worship through all the ways, namely, devotion, good actions, knowledge and meditation because this God is Personal too??

QUESTION#3 Is Allah not Sagun Niraakar according to Quran??

QUESTION#4 This approach seems less difficult than worshipping the formless & attributeless God.Is that not true??

Thanks for answering my previous questions.

Answer
1. Bhakti (devotion) is the both the personal & universal medium of communicating with God. It does not matter whether the worship is with form or formless.

2. The Nirguna Brahman (formless Lord) has no attributes. A Yogi who worships this formless Supreme can still have love, devotion and a personal contact with this formless Supreme if such is his perspective.

3. Not being well versed with the contents of the Quran, it may not be apt to answer this query.

4. Different approaches appeal to different people. That which is easy to one might not be so to another. One should choose that approach which appeals the most and stick to it with perseverance. When the intentions are genuine and the efforts sincere, all roads lead to God.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
If done with sincerity, do yogas and meditation open up the chakras?
Do people feel a tingling sensation down the spine while meditating or praying intensely(read it on some website)?
People take that strange sensation as some divine blessing from the ultimate source(God).They strongly feel so.Are they right or misguided?

Answer
1. Yes

2. Tingling sensations along the spinal column occur when Prana (vital energy) rises up during ‘Pranothana’ (linear movement of Prana).

3. Isn’t this life itself a blessing? This life of a human where one can understand things using intelligence, contemplate and decipher the secrets of one’s existence so as to attain liberation and eternal bliss? Such a blessing is not available to animals.

All progress that one makes towards knowing his true self are blessings. Hence the sensations that occur during Yogic practice carried out for self-realization can be assumed as the Lord's blessings if one so wishes.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhananjay,

i have some doubt when reading Bhagavad Gita.

1.In chapter 3 verse 37 it is said that when kama is overly done by a person the person gets the first thought of god is it right and how is it possible?
2.It is also said that if the kama and krodha work for krishna consiousness or to the almighty then they become our friends and they are no more enemies.the example is shown as Lord Hanuman burning the lanka and displayed his anger, considered as parama bhaktha to Lord shri rama.
3.In hinduism it is considered that all living beings are children to goddess and i want to ask this question why do people sacrifice goat or hen before the temple of goddess who are considered as shakti devatas, right from the time i know i was asking everybody but there is no suitable answer from them i got the following answers:
1.some say that they are born to be sacrificed before goddess(so that her anger may converted into shanti), i read that during Adi Shankaracharya period the goddess used to kill humans who come before her during night and for this purpose adi shankaracharya placed sri chakram and they become satvic devatas.
2.my father say that people want to eat so they sacrifice.
3.In Bhagavad Gita also it is mentioned as types of people eating vegetables and some meat(if i am wrong please correct me).

thanks,
Ganapathi.

Answer
1. This verse states that Kama (desire) and Krodha (anger) born out of Rajasic temparment are the cause of all wants and the source of all sin in this world. Desire does not lead to thought of God. The verse shows that these two are to be forsaken for eternal bliss and liberation.

2. This only means that all energy is to be directed towards God and his realization.

3. The people who perform these sacrifices try to convince themselves that they are offering meat to the concerned diety and eating the same which has become holy through worship. They assume that they will get into the good books of the diety through the offering. Such sacrifices are also made out of ignorance, for satisfying one's taste buds in the guise of God worship. No spiritually advanced God or Goddess expect such actions. It is a kind of barter system devised by them where they offer meat and expect favours in return. Nothing can be more devoid of meaning than such a concept. No merit or benefit is accrued from such behavior. Rather, one stoops deeper into 'Agnyana' (ignorance).

Had the diety actually eaten the offered meat and left nothing to the sacrificer, none would venture again!

4. People of Rajasic nature and actions tend to eat meat while Satvic activity and thinking makes one avoid meat. For spiritual advancement and liberation, one should become Satvic and eventually raise above all the three Guna-s (traits) to become 'Gunateeta' (beyond the three traits).

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
hello sir,

i have begun reading the bhagvad gita and i came across people who said sri krishna was not a moral person and did incorrect things like keeping 16000 wives and troubling the gopis , the river incident and many other cases.i tried to search the net but was not satisfied with views of other people and in some places a lot bad things were written about sri krishna. since in bhagvad gita sri krishna speaks and teaches ,these things keep troubling me and is disturbing my study.what are your views on this.should i consider the knowledge of gita as coming from the nirguna brahman and all these immoral things as indicators of dualistic world and forget them as maya. please calm down these waves of ignorance around me.

thank you

Answer
When a spiritually advanced Yogi experiences 'Nirvikalpa Samadhi' (non-dualistic state of superconsciousness with the Supreme), it is termed 'Urdhva Sangama' (upper union occurring at the Sahasra Chakra). It confers supreme bliss, helps one get free from bondage and leads to the greatest strength (unlike the 'Adha Sangama or lower union of the genitals between man & woman which causes depression, bondage and weakness). The union of the Gopi-s with Lord Krishna was such a divine union at the highest level of consciousness. It was not physical in nature. All these Gopi-s were highly spiritually advanced with no other desire but that for 'Samadhi' with the Lord in the highest state of superconsciousness, beyond the body and mind. They were constantly in the thought of the Lord and totally unaware of themselves or their surroundings. Such was their Bhakti (devotion) to the Supreme. Lord Krishna who was an Avatar of the formless Almighty was the object of their meditation. The love described was of the purest nature as that which exists between the Lord and his devotee. There wasn't the least lust or passion.

The intensity of this love for the Lord has been illustrated as 'Krishna Leela' in terms of HIS Leela (divine play) as the common man cannot understand the meaning of Samadhi. Ignorant people whose minds always roam in the sex plane label this in the only language they understand – The language of sex. To the Yogi wishing liberation, the very same concept is an inspiration for the highest state of union with the Lord through Samadhi.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Sir, A few nights ago I dreamed I was watching apples fall from a tree and bounce on the ground. In watching the apples bounce, I felt like I was seeing divine play at work. At the same time, I was reminded of the wonder I felt as a young child. This experience was powerful for me and I began crying in the dream and woke up crying. I am 59 years old with 5 months unbroken brahmacharya. My questions are: Is this dream a reflection of my brahmacharya efforts? Also, can this type of experience in a dream be reasonably expected to manifest in waking life if one continues along the path of brahmacharya?

Answer
As unbroken Brahmacharya with God devotion and meditation progresses, the aspirant experiences various divine occurances both in the waking & dream state. Those experiences which he was oblivious to earlier become discernable with their divine meaning, representing the power and play of the Almighty. One starts to see the beauty of the Almighty in all things & events and feels a unique sense of happiness. Continuing this mode of life for a few years in an unbroken manner takes one spiritually higher, whereupon starts the bliss which is beyond words.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
hi dhananjay,

hope you are doing good. i have some query from Bhagavad Gita. In chapter 4 verse 9 it it said that the sadhakas,dhyanayogis merge into the light of atman after doing sadhana for many births and it is considered as incomplete moksha and there is chance of once again coming into birth-death cycle and it is also said that just by knowing nature of Krishna and believing him with least doubt is enough to get the purna moksha. I am really confused what is said in that verse please can you elaborate it.

Can we do recitation of Bhagavad gita and other spiritual books after sunset.

thanking you
Ganapathi.

Answer
1. To the aspirant who is following a life of Yoga & Brahmacharya with God devotion and meditation for self-realization, there is no cause for worry. As Lord Krishna says in the BG – "Nâsti Yoga samam balam" (there is no strength equal to Yoga). Yoga is the fastest means to liberation and blessed are those who follow this path. Those who do 'Nishkama Karma' (without desire for the fruits of their actions by surrendering all actions to God) do not return. They attain eternal liberation Our's is to strive honestly for self-realization. It is not our business to worry what will happen next. That, the Lord decides based on HIS own will and our karma. Our duty ends at sincere effort.

2. Yes

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

First of all I want to thank you. Your posts have helped me a lot and I'm sure they help others as well.

I've read somewhere else that brahmacharya causes energy (prana, I think) to flow upwards through the chakras, thereby conducting the process called kundalini. I have some questions about this process.

1) Are the 3-7 chakras of one who masturbates frequently empty or simply energy deficient?

2) From what I understand, it takes about 12 years for the kundalini to rise completely (through all chakras). Approximately how long does it take (for a brahmachari) to rise to the 3rd chakra?

3) I read somewhere that prana or chi gets stored somewhere in the belly region; in chinese medicine they call this place the lower dantian. When it gets filled, the energy starts going upwards thanks to brahmacharya. Can you do something else to help the process? Or must the energy go up on its own with bramacharya? In other words, do we have control over the energy?

Two other minor questions that I have:

Have you ever heard of "tummo"? Apparently it's a practice that generates heat. What's its connection with brahmacharya?

As for the Urdhvaretas. Are they immortal?

Thanks in advance.

Answer

1. Prana (vital energy responsible for life) depletes heavily through masturbation. Hence all Chakra-s weaken and become susceptible to toxification.

2. It need not take 12 years for Kundalini to rise to the 7th Sahasrara Chakra. It can occur as early as within 2 years of the right practice (as in the case of advanced souls) or may take many lifetimes as well. The time taken depends on one’s evolutionary level, present efforts and most importantly the grace of God.

3. Based on the kind of activity the Brahmachari indulges, Prana automatically channelizes in that direction. If he is a sportsman, his energy flows to the concerned muscles in abundance. If he is a scientist, towards his mental faculties and if he is Yogi seeking self-realization, he sinks into deep meditation seeking the absolute truth. These processes are automatic.

4. ‘Tummo’ represents the process of channelizing Prana through the 3rd ‘Manipura Chakra’ so as to generate enormous heat both within and without the body. It is nothing but utilizing the Kundalini power to generate heat. Advanced Buddhist Siddhas-s living in high altitudes under snowy conditions such as in caves sometimes use this technique to keep themselves warm. When mastered, the Yogi can sit without clothes in sub-zero freezing conditions day after day in meditation, his body being warm all the time. Due to the difference between his body temperature maintained through ‘Tummo’ @ (say 33 deg celcius) and the atmospheric temperature (say -15 deg celcius), the snow or ice around him starts melting resulting in a small puddle of water.

Every Yogi cannot perform Tummo. Only an advanced Siddha who has mastery over the ‘Pancha Mahabhutas’ (5 elements) becomes capable of the technique. It is the power of Prana which is again used in this practice and Prana gets conserved by no other means than Brahmacharya.

5. When a child reaches puberty, Bindu (seed) stored in the Ajna Chakra starts to flow down & the downward flow of Prana into the sexual organs activates, whereupon they mature. The gates for the downward flow of life energy governed by Bindu are then thrown open forever. With every loss of Bindu (seed) the body degrades and deteriorates. It is very difficult to close these gates again and stop the flow. When through great efforts at a life of Yoga and strict Brahmacharya under the grace of the Lord the Yogi stops this flow and reverses it back to the brain, he is known to have become an Urdhvaretas (Urdhva-Upwards, Rethas-sexual fluid – One who retains his seed in the brain). Bindu (seed) then stops flowing down in such a Yogi; as a result of which Veerya (semen) also stops being produced. It is retained as ‘Soma’ (nectar) in the brain. Ageing slows down drastically thereupon. The Urdhvareta Yogi is then the equivalent of a ‘Deva’ (celestial God) in rank and not a human, though occupying the physical body. This is all is meant by Urdhvaretas.

True immortality comes only when one attains Kaivalya (liberation), for as long as there is no liberation, there is rebirth in the physical body or astral body which one day has to die. This body made of the elements cannot last forever (though it can be maintained for hundreds of years under certain criterions by advanced Yogi-s) as its constituents themselves as ‘Asat’ (unreal). Hence being an Urdhvareta does not confer eternal immortality. For that, one has to revert to his true state of the Atman which is always eternal & immortal, via liberation.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir,

Sometimes when I see beautiful girls (like while traveling), my brain immediately gets attracted to them, it's like my brain SMILES inside when it sees them. It's an automatic and immediate response on which seemingly I've no choice / control.

So how to attain mental celibacy? ..when my brain is automatically becoming happy on seeing these girls.

Can bahya pranayama help in attaining mental celibacy? How much of bahya pranayam is considered excessive?

I was reading your previous answers and you had written something like that in the first 2 years of practicing brahmacharya, diseases are manifested. Sir what's this? I'm surprised that you had to go through the same experience even when you live (and were living) a healthy lifestyle (waking up early, yoga etc.). But still, from your new experience/knowledge can you please tell that how can these diseases be avoided? Currently I'm not interested in brahmacharya, but in celibacy alone.

Answer
1. After a few years of practicing Yoga & Brahmacharya with meditation, the Yogi becomes wise to the ways of 'Maya' and is able to discern the truth behind the false charm & impermanent beauty of the body to a larger extent. This helps him develop immunity to the spells of Maya to a better extent. Till then, one has to constantly remind himself of its falsity and exert. 'Bahya Kumbhaka' (exhaling and not breathing) can be practiced for short periods of within a minute based on one's comfort if one so wishes.

2. Diseases which manifest during the initial years of Brahmacharya are the result of karma which surfaces in the form of toxins. Such toxins have been ingrained in this or previous existences due to one's wrong actions. When the body purifies through the conserved Prana via Pranayama, the Nâdi-s (astral energy channels) which are toxified and partially blocked in the non-Yogi suddenly start getting cleansed. This cleaning results in those toxins surfacing. When a particular toxin surfaces, the disease or illness represented by that toxin briefly manifests and then goes away. This is how one has to undo the impurity embedded. It is inevitable and a part of karmic cleansing.

Karmic diseases or illnesses are not avoidable. They are a part of one's destiny and have to be gone through.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir, I was reading your profile and read the definition of brahmacharya. You've said 3 things: One who has:
1. completely surrendered to Brahman,
2. overcome the ego, and
3. has realized himself to be a tool of the Almighty.
Please explain about 1st and 2nd.
According to Wikipedia, Brahman means "universal Spirit". Now to surrender to the universal spirit, I must know what the universal spirit wants me to do, but how to know that?

Answer
Question: Sir, I was reading your profile and read the definition of brahmacharya. You've said 3 things. One who has:
1. Completely surrendered to Brahman,
2. Overcome the ego, and
3. Has realized himself to be a tool of the Almighty.
Please explain about 1st and 2nd. According to Wikipedia, Brahman means "universal Spirit". Now to surrender to the universal spirit, I must know what the universal spirit wants me to do, but how to know that?

1. One completely surrenders to the Brahman, overcomes the Ego and realizes himself to be a tool of the Almighty after Kaivalya (self-realization leading to liberation). Such an enlightened being is the complete, real Brahmachari, for he does not have the concept of a separate self. All others in the path are aspiring Brahmachari-s who are striving to reach that supreme state.

2. Such an enlightened being constantly lives in the Brahman itself and considers himself no different. This world which is an image akin to that in a dream no longer exists for him, though he sees it just like any of us. Just as a man who has woken up from a dream has realized the falsity of the dream characters and firmly exists in his state of wakeful reality, the enlightened sage rests firm on the bedrock of the absolute truth called Brahman, having irreversably woken up from the dream called 'Samsara' (dualistic world of Maya). Upon reaching this state, his concept of a separate self vanishes. Everything becomes the one and only Brahman (Sarvam Khalvidam Brahman). This is the meaning of overcoming the individual Ego. Just as a chisel in the hands of a sculptor is an extension tool, such a sage has fully realized himself as the extension of the Almighty.

3. Follow a life of Yoga & unbroken Brahmacharya with God meditation for a few years as described. You will then slowly start getting an idea of what that great Lord intends for you.

May that Supreme being grant us knowledge of the absolute truth.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhananjay ,

Thanks a lot for doing this noble service to mankind.I am following path of Brahmacharya to my full might,and i have seen improvement in overall health , including eyesight and other features mentioned by you by Lord's grace.

I am particularly interested in healing my eyes at the earliest.Due to watching television from very close distance in early childhood,i suffered from Myopia wearing spectacles of -11.0 and -12.0 D.
I have gone through lasik laser eye surgery(someone told my father heavy glasses will be removed) when i was in std. Xth.7 years later,I have multile eye problems such as double vision,not able to drive a vehicle in night due to refraction of light and also partial corneal opacity.

Now ,I am software professional.I need to work hard to survive.Though my eye diseases have reduced in strength,still they trouble me a lot.

I cannot see computer from a normal distance.I need to come closer.It looks very awkward when i have to see something on colleague's desk.Sometimes it becomes impossible for me to see things because of it and my productivity hits rock bottom.

I have completed 10 years of lasik laser operation and nearly 4 years in software field.I see my colleague getting onsite good projects etc.Now sometimes i feel myself useless and thinks I am stealing money from the organisation.

Anger , Fear etc. are slowly creeping in from two months..one or two year back,I was very happy.Efforts at Brahmachrya and reading your posts really showed me highest path and i was feeling great joy in it.

But I got married in Jun 2012.Now, I have much responsibility and i fear a lot of things due to my eye condition.

I cannot recognise person's face from normal distance,people think that i just neglect them but fact is i have to behave like this.Thanks you a lot for going though all of this ,i am having troubled relationships with my father , brother ,also.

I wish to be friendly to all but my internal state let me to see everyone selfish now a days.I donot want to fall prey to anger,frustation,etc.Somewhere in my mind , I think for sake of dowry my father got me married.I never wanted to get married.

Now ,bad thoughts about my father ,brother are entering my mind.I push them hard but they come again and again.Due to this I am not inclined to meditation as I was earlier.

I think i have described all my life problems till date in this single post :-).Show me right path to head.

Answer

1. Early morning wake up coupled with a life of Yoga & Brahmacharya as described will gradually improve eye sight over the coming years. Persevere with devotion and honesty.

2. Based on one's Prarabdha (past karma working out in the present), one has to undergo certain relationships such as those with the father, wife etc. in this life. One's health, wealth etc. are also the result of one's own past karma. The correct approach is to stay true to the Yama-Niyama-s of Yoga and wish good to all, knowing this world to be a play with people as its actors.

3. Under the influence of Maya (illusion) and Agnyana (ignorance), people commit various mistakes and behave selfishly, allowing the lower traits to rule though the Atman within is ever pure, divine and no different from the Lord. Knowing it to be such, the wise man ignores other's shortcomings and wishes good to all (including those who wish him bad), himself treading the path of Gnyana (knowledge of the absolute) through Yoga. Through such conduct, he finally overcomes all karma and attains enlightenment.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

DEAR DHANANJAYJI

HELLO SIR,

THE PRACTICE OF BRHAMCHARYA OR ADVANCE MEDIATION MAY IMPACT ON OUR SERVICES OR ON STUDENT CAREER. WHETHER THEY WILL GIVE THEIR FOCUS ON REQUIREMENT OF THE LIVELIHOOD OR ONE HAS TO LEVE SUCH THINGS AND TOTALLY FOCUS ON BRHAMCHARYA.

BECAUSE DUE TO PRACTICE OF BRHAMCHARYA MY MIND CONSTATLY THING ABOUT SUCH STORY AND MEDIATION. I CAN NOT FOCUS ON MY STUDY.

A PERSON SHOULD PERFORM THE COMPLETE SET OF ASANA-S OR MEDITATION HOW TO CONTROL HIS DAY TO DAY ACTIVITIES.

WHETHER THERE IS BALANCE OF SUCH THINS OR WE HAVE TO WHOLLY SURRENDER TO MEDITATION OR DHYAN.

PLEASE FURTHER GIVE YOUR WARM REPLY

विश्वासो फलदायकः |

Answer

1. Setting aside some time for Yogic practices and meditation, the rest of the time is to be utilized in honestly performing one's Dharma (such as that of a student, professional etc.) without attachment.

2. When performing Yogic practice and meditation, the mind should be completely involved in the activity and think of nothing else. The thought should be that of the Lord, seeking Mukti (liberation).

Similarly, when involved in worldly work which is a part of one's Dharma, one should work devotedly towards the activity on hand with the thought – "I shall complete this work to the level of excellence as a service to the Almighty, whose Leela I am a part of. I do this work not for myself but as a token of service to HIM".

When such an approach is followed, it does not matter much whether the work is in the world or without it. Such a Yogi speedily overcomes his worldly obligations and progresses fast in the path of liberation.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir,
In how much time the practice of kevali kumbhaka can be mastered by a person, if done with sincere and punctual efforts from one's side? I read somewhere that if one masters this pranayama, he becomes immune to all illnesses and the 6 flaws of the senses; kama, krodha etc. Are the forementioned qualities a qualification for becoming an urdhvareta?

Answer
The time taken depends on various factors such as the intensity of practice, past karma etc. One should not worry about the time required. Our right ends at honest and correct practice backed with a life of Yoga & unbroken Brahmacharya with the utmost devotion to God. When such efforts are applied with sincerity for liberation, the Lord makes these things happen at the right time. One should focus on the practice of a life of Yoga and forget all other expectations.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
DEAR DHANANJAY
YOU HAVE SAID IN PREVIOUS ANSWER THAT ANGER IS LUST OR LUST IS ANGER AND GIVEN EXAMPLE OF RISHI (VISHAVAMITRA). I WANT TO KNOW THAT SO HOW LAKSHMANJI(LORD RAM BROTHER) HAD MANAGE THE LUST BECAUSE I THING HE WAS VERY ANGRY IN NATURE. I THINK HE HAD BRAHMCHARYA FOR 12 YEARS AND SUCCEED IN KEELING (Meghanaad). SECOND THING IS BOTH RAMJI AND LAKSHMANJI WERE EATING NON-VEG IN THAT TIME ? BECAUSE I HEAR ABOUT THAT.

Answer
1. Both Kama (desire) and Krodha (anger) are the negative manifestations of Prana (vital energy). It is the very same life energy that gets converted into either of these. Hence such indulgence ends in weakness & sorrow. A person who indulges in strong Kama (desire) for anything perceivable by the senses loses that much Pranic energy and eventually ends up irritated and agitated when the senses cannot sate that need (pleasure derieved from the senses itself being Asat [unreal] and imaginary). Such unsated desire then leads to Krodha (anger) which further takes the mind into a state of turmoil and makes man commit serious mistakes.

2. The anger described as regards Lord Lakshman, Lord Ram's brother was more a symbol of his intolerance against injustice, untruth etc. Lord Lakshman, being a complete Brahmachari and very spiritually enlightened was above the lower traits such as Kama or Krodha. In mythology where instances of his anger are described, it is to be known that the word anger is used to denote his fiery power against 'Adharma' and not the ordinary anger Krodha.

3. Both Lord Ram & his brother being Kshatriyas (warrior class), their Dharma allowed them to eat meat, as the Dharma of the protectors is to govern and indulge in warfare when necessary. Such activity supports the aggression produced by meat. Thus their food habit was an incidental representation of that class and nothing more.

However, Lord Ram was an avatar of the Almighty himself. Lord Lakshman was himself very enlightened. When such high levels of advancement are reached where a person is above the body and mind, it does not matter what one eats or doesn't. One takes the 'Sattwa' (essence) of whatever eaten and is not subject to gross effects as in case of the common man. Lord Lakshman had the power to stay without food and water for months at a time. Can the normal man do so?

Such enlightened beings do not worry about this kind of food or the other. They eat whatever is available and take its essence or may sometimes not eat at all. The same cannot be said of the common man who is not beyond the needs of his body and becomes a slave to taste & temptation.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Respected Dhananjay,

Till a few days back there has been intermittent rains in my city causing lot of stagnant water accumulation in puddles, lower lying areas, buckets, containers kept outside etc. As per directive of the local health department we had to either dispose of the stagnant water or put kerosene on the stagnant water as measures to prevent outbreak of malaria/dengue

While doing so in one of the pockets of our house I saw several larvae and pupa of mosquito floating in the standing water and the initial reaction was to eradicate them which I did. I sprayed home insecticides and put kerosene and ensured not a single larvae/pupa remains alive.

1.Now doesn't this go against the principles of Ahimsa - to kill lives of several yet to born mosquitoes which otherwise could have caused a dengue/malaria epidemic, etc?

2.Similar is the case with pests like rodents. Is the act of elimination of these pests/insects also a sin?

3.Please note that the breeding of mosquitoes happens even in clean surroundings, all they need is stagnant fresh water. Yet the larvae/pupa represent life which we can never create. So is it justified to kill/eliminate potentially harmful insects.

Do clarify, though the questions might seem vague in the context of Brahmacharya.

Regards

Answer
The common man takes the step of annulling such pests through whatever means he deems fit. Even though the intention might have been out of self-preservation, there is always a resultant karma which the person has to repay as in the case of all actions.

In case of the beginner Yogi, the matter is a bit different. He is trying his very best to follow the path of harmlessness as regards all beings. Preventive measure does not amount to Himsa (violence). Such preventive action is still better than the actual act of killing. Karma accrued by such unintentional activity will then be much smaller (though it still exists and one has to repay). Using mosquito nets, meshes & trapping-releasing rodents elsewhere is also similar action.

A beginner Yogi tries his best not to interfere in the lives of other beings. Considerable abstinence from Himsa can be achieved this way. As long as one has this physical body, complete abstinence from harm may not be possible (from unknowingly done harm such as trodding on an ant). Such unintentional and incidental/unknowingly done harm however does not generate the feelings of malice, mercilessness or cruelity in the mind (while intentional harm eventually causes sadistic pleasure and such traits to blossom). Rather, the Yogi experiences remorse when he discovers it.

When such an attitude of love, friendliness and well wishing is built towards all creatures harmful or harmless for a few years (as the Atman within all those creatures is no different from one's own true self) with utmost care taken not to harm, a miraculous change slowly starts to occur in the immediate surroundings where the Yogi lives or moves. The power of his amicable and affable nature without wishing the least bad to any creature magically results in all creatures harmful or harmless to align themselves favorably with him to a large extent.

The following is an example from personal experience. A few years back, a colony of red wasps known for their extremely painful sting suddenly started building a nest right atop the front-main door of our residence. My son and wife were alarmed at the development and had half a mind to spray insecticide. Though they had not stung anyone, the sight of that many wasps hovering above the entrance was quite unnerving everytime they had to go out or come in. My wife, though a bit worried however kept quiet and surrendered to God & destiny, knowing the general rule in the house not to even kill a mosquito.

It must have been not that very easy for them, for whenever the topic of the wasps was raised, a smile and silence were my only reactions. Months passed and the hive became bigger with more wasps. Son and wife got used to the reality that these wasps had become permanent guests in our house (just as many other animals come to our home for food and water). Their sense of threat and fear gradually diminished and they did not give much attention to the new guests. We left the wasps to themselves and they left us to ourselves without any harm. The wasps were busy as ever, going in and out of their new residence as they pleased with their buzzing sounds happily!

After more than a year or so, one day, all the wasps suddenly disappeared and the hive got empty. As suddenly as they had arrived, they disappeared. Some karma was due from us to those Jiva-s. We had to repay it by giving them shelter for more than a year or so. As soon as the karma was settled, they left that very minute. Such are the ways of the Lord. Mysterious, strange and undiscernable is HIS Leela. Nothing happens without a reason. HE is managing everything. No creature harms another without a karmic reason. Hence one should not worry but surrender to HIM. Based on the intensity of devotion and surrender, life becomes that much free from worry & fear.

What is required is an earnest and sincere effort at Ahimsa towards all beings to the best extent. As one masters this attitude, knowing all beings as no different from oneself, the incidence of harm gradually negates itself and one feels fearless and confident with love, the same being reciprocated by the other creature.

In advanced Yogi-s who have mastered Ahimsa (non-violence), not a single creature harms or attacks (unless there is some such past karma due for him to suffer). The vibrations of love and harmlessness have been attained to such an extent that the Yogi inspires confidence and friendliness even amongst feared animals such as lions, tigers, serpents etc. in his vicinity. Such creatures do not feel the least threat in his presence and behave in a friendly and harmless manner when around him. They do not feel he is any different from themselves (and no animal fears itself), for he see's the one Atman in all beings.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Respected Dhananjay,

1. I sometimes feel extremely sleepy, either in afternoon or in evenings even though I take only vegetarian diet with very less oil, onions, potatoes etc. Many times this also happens in meetings where my mind yearns strongly to lie down somewhere, stretch my legs and sleep with deep snoring, all in imagination. Somehow I feel sleepiness is associated with something gross and non-brahmharya. What is the probable reason and does sleepiness have something to do with karma?
Also I have been feeling sleepy in classes since I was in class 11(1997) and that time I never had experienced something related to lust/sense pleasures etc.

2. You usually suggest to wake up at 4 am and follow the rituals of yoga, what if I wake up at 6 am since I go to sleep at around 1:00 am?

3. How many hours of sleep is necessary that we feel refreshed and energised?

Regards

Answer
1. It takes many years of honest Yogic practice with Brahmacharya for Tamas (inertia responsible for sleep) to reduce in extent. Right food, Yogic practice and a spiritual attitude reduce its intensity to a large extent. However, freedom to a large extent comes only with time and consistent efforts. Also, extreme exhaustion resulting from anxiety, stress, fatigue from overwork and the like also cause sleepiness. Sleeping during daytime is best avoided and if indulged in after luch should not exceed 15~30 minutes. Excess sleep burns Ojas and Prana.

2. Wake up as early as possible and retire to bed as early as possible. This is the golden rule.

3. 7-8 hours of sleep suffice the normal man. After many years of advancement, sleep requirements reduce further. The amount of sleep also depends on the nature of one's work. Very strenuous work which exhausts the system triggers longer sleep. Hence work should be correct and not over the limit.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Good Morning Sir,

With God's grace, my period for brahmacharya is gradually increasing ... I was able to observe continence for 25 days, then had wet dream which I was able to stop completely through bandha, but a day later had wet dream again and could not stop it.

So are beginners bound to have wet dreams during initial months or something could be done ?
What can be done to help start re-absorption of semen sooner?

Also while work/studying, I have a tendency to shake legs - clearly a sign of mental restlessness ... What to do?

Finally what should be preffered more : physical or mental work or more time towards meditation, which would lead to transmutation more effectively at this stage?

My heartly thanks for showing us path to divine and a way to get away with this world of suffering ...

Answer
11. Sincere and regular efforts at a life of Yoga along with the other methods suggested is as much as the aspirant is supposed to do. When such efforts are applied correctly without any voluntary break, wet dreams gradually taper down and finally stop after one becomes an Urdhvareta in the course of a few years.

2. Shaking legs or drumming fingers is a sign of tension or restlessness. A calm, focused mind produces steadiness. Restless physical movements should be consciously stopped with effort.

3. Initially, the physical and mental activity will be more compared to meditation. After many years of advancement, these two reduce comparitively and meditation becomes longer.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

I read the Bhagavad Gita and the Yoga Sutras recently. They were very interesting and both of them mentioned celibacy.

Apart from those 2, are there any other ancient texts (of any religion) that mention celibacy? I would love to read them.

Thanks in advance.

Answer
The importance & necessity of Brahmacharya is mentioned in all scriptures related to the path of enlightenment & liberation. Some other major works include:

- The 108 Upanishads
- 'Hata Yoga Pradipika' – By Svatmârama Yogin
- 'Siva Samhita'
- 'Yoga Vâsista'
- 'Aparokshânubhuti' – By Shri. Adi Sankarâcharya

Brahmacharya being the very foundation for the growth of the building called liberation, no path to liberation can survive without it.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir,
As one advances through the initial stages of brahmacharya, you said that illnesses manifest. I want to know:
What kind of diseases arise?
How severe are they?
How to keep strong faith during that time?

Answer
1. There are 7 chakra-s (confluence of astral energy challels called Nâdi-s) in the human body. Based on the nature of impurity in each chakra accumulated from past karma, that particular illness manifests when the purification of that chakra starts through the awakened Kundalini.

2. The illness can be of any type from mild to extreme.

3. One should take the Lord's name and keep the mind centered in HIM. This gives strength.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Sir,

You have pointed out that illnesses may arise as part of this purification process. Is it also possible that difficult emotional states arise as a result of this purification process? In my daily life I experience moments of grace, but also frequent anxiousness and insecurity. I believe these difficult states arise from childhood emotional trauma. In the West, various forms of therapy are recommended for these emotional difficulties. Here are my questions: 1) Can difficult emotional states, like physical illnesses, arise from the practice of brahmacharya as chakras are purified? 2) Do you feel that brahmacharya alone can fully uproot issues like anxiety or emotional insecurity or is psychological treatment sometimes recommended? Thank-you very much for your kind assistance.

Answer
1. Physical purification can cause brief, bodily illness. Purification of the 'Sukshma Sharira' (astral body) can manifest in the form of mental stress, anxiety etc. When such cleansing occurs, the person may suddenly feel depressed or unhappy for no reason. Such bouts of mental oscillations are possible during the first few years of practice. They are like tests & hurdles which the aspirant has to overcome. However, all these are passing phases which eventually disappear on unbroken and honest practice.

2. Man's true state is his Atmic state of infinite bliss free from all sorrow & suffering. The cause of all pain is past karma which has wound itself as ignorance around the 'Atman' (pure soul). Considering Brahmacharya with a life of Yoga as the fastest and most efficient way to unwind such ignorance, it may be said that such a life offers the best possibilities of freedom from pain.

3. Western therapies and treatments are superficial in nature further to the fact that they work at rooting out the effect and not the cause. Even in cases where the supposed cause is targeted, such cause is only at surface level and not the basic source of the problem (namely past karma and its effects which western medicine is unaware of). If one wishes to reach the shores of everlasting freedom from pain and suffering, 'Kaivalya' (liberation) is the only answer, all other solutions being temporary.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhananjay

You had mentioned in one of earlier post that the impurities reside in the nadis. Also i have read earlier that the karma is in the karana sharira and manifests as actions
Is the Karana sharira and nadi's the same?
Where does the karma actually reside and is there a way to find how much positive/negative karma left

Thanks for your valuable time in answering our questions

Answer
1. 'Kârana Sharira' (causal body) is the repository of all past karma in subtle seed form.

2. Based on the nature of karma stored in the causal body, corresponding manifestations are seen in the 'Sukshma Sharira' (astral body which houses the Nâdi-s) and the 'Sthula Sharira' (physical body).

3. For ex. A Jiva which has karma that demands the onset of a disease such as cancer, say in middle age will have the seed of such karma in subtle form in the causal body even before birth. At middle age, this seed manifests and the physical body shows signs of cancer.

4. After a few years of unbroken Brahmacharya with much meditation, the Yogi generally gets a vague idea of the future and his own state. When the Yogi masters Nirvikalpa Samadhi and nears self-realizaton, he gets the 'Siddhi' (ability) to discern the extent of his good & bad karma getting knowledge of his future.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi dhananjay,

hope you are doing good. i have some queries.

1.i have been doing hanuman chalisa recitation from past some years, so every year for 40 days i recite and unknowingly yesterday i ate American chocolate which my family friend gave and after eating i saw that it contains egg so did i get any dosha for this, should i start the recitation again of is it ok. plese give me advice.

2.in bhagavad gita 5th chapter in last verses it is said that we should do yoga sadhana with semi opened eyes and pointing our sight on the tip of the nose i tried by my eyes pain, can we do by closing eyes and it is said that we sleep if we do like that.please give your guidance.

thanks,
ganapathi

Answer
1. Accidental deviations from food habits can be ignored as long as the act is not intentional.

2. Closing or opening the eyes does not matter. What matters is unbroken concentration on the Lord during meditation. Those who are sleepy will eventually sleep immaterial of whether the eyes are open or closed! Since closing the eyes helps prevent distraction to a larger extent, the same is preferred.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
hi dhananjay,

i have the following queries.

1.do we lose our prana by constantly thinking on a future issue which is very important in our life, even though we try our best not to think about it. What should a brahmachari do in this condition which he is unable to control his thoughts.

2.In Bhagavad Gita it is said that though we have dhyana yoga,karma yoga in this kali yuga bhakti yoga is suitable and we should chant the name of god which alone can bestow moksha to us. My doubt is the sadhaka who is in Krishna consiousness need not do any yoga is it true as i am confused here.

3.In an article i read that in antar mouna we bring the samskaras from deep inside the mind and we leave them so that they will not come again and in yoga samadhi it is said that the samskaras are burnt. what is the difference between these two. please give your valuable advice.

thanks,
ganapathi.

Answer
1. Excessive planning or thinking of the future is a waste of time. One should strive honestly today in the direction of his Dharma (duty bestowed by the Lord). Tomorrow then takes care of itself. Correct practice of a life of Yoga with meditation as described will help come to terms with the situation.

2. Various methods for liberation are suggested in the Bhagavad Gita. All the methods cannot be followed by all people. The method which appeals and applies the most alone will be followed.

There are many roads to reach another city. Can you travel by all the roads at once and reach it? This is what you are trying to do. Any one road will do; but one cannot travel on all the roads at the same time as you are planning. You are into the practice of 'Raja Yoga' as described here in past answers. This is the method awarded to you by the Lord. Stick to the method honestly. You will reach the destination one day. Donot worry about other methods.

3. You will know the difference when you experience Samadhi. Reading an article cannot lead to understanding. For now, donot worry too much about theory. The purpose of theory is to make one aware of the topic and nothing more. It cannot instill real knowledge. Real knowledge is gained from experience and not in any other way. Stick to the practice of a life of Yoga & Brahmacharya as described in past answers with the utmost sincerity and devotion to God. All knowledge will slowly unravel itself.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Brother,

I hope you are doing good. I have series of questions which I request your valuable advice:

1) It is extremely difficult and painful to wake up at 4am and even more difficult to sit in meditation as I always keep on falling asleep. What advice do you have for this?

2) In my office, some people are adulterous. They club and drink and pick up each other. However, god had made them good looking, well educated and successful in their career. How can we reconcile such unfairness and how to maintain brahmacharya in such a situation?

3) Just for information sake, will the bliss that eventually starts coming be similar to the butterflies and happiness a young man gets when he meets the gal he loves? (apologies if my question is abit amateur but the highest happiness I know personally is whenever I met the gal I liked when I was much younger so I don't know anything higher than this)

4) Can we keep images of deities in our bedroom? This is because my bedroom is the place I used to surf porno and masturbate. To instill certain divinity, can I clean my room and put up deities' images or is it wrong to do so?

5) Who is worst of? A man who visits a prostitute every week once and have sex with her only once a week OR a man who masturbates 5-6 times every day?

Your advice and insights will be hugely appreciated.

Thanks alot.

Answer
1. Gradually advance the waking time by 15 minutes every fortnite. In a few months, one can wake up by 4.00 A.M if the urge for self-realization strong.

2. One's present existence is based on the 'Punyam' (merit) and 'Paapam' (demerit) accrued in previous existences. Some people have some volume of merit which awards them with external things such as looks, wealth etc. As long as such merit lasts, these things last and then disappear. Then, such people like all others become very ordinary to the external eye and have to face the results of their present actions, just as they enjoyed their past merit. This world is an illusory and mysterious place where nothing which appears real is truly real.

Others might lack wealth but have Gnyana (knowledge). All these are the result of past actions. Hence the wise disregard these illusions and set their eyes only for realizing the eternal truth which awards liberation.

3. The bliss of the Atman cannot be described. It increases with spiritual advancement. That bliss of cupid which you describe is no bliss before 'Atmananda' (bliss of the soul), for the apparent bliss of cupid leads to bondage, while the real bliss of the Atman leads to freedom.

4. Yes

5. Both float in the realm of ignorance and delusion that will end in suffering. A poison kills; does it matter which brand or color the poison belongs to? It is like comparing the devil and the deep sea.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Brother,

In addition to my earlier qns, I have a important qns: Quite recently my mind is starting to say porn and masturbation is ok. Years of masturbation has seasoned my mind to say this i guess. This is because the mind is rationalizing in such a way that why miss out on the fun since u r young, and life has to be full of pleasure. This is despite the fact that my body and mind gets tired after masturbating but recovers abt 4 days laters and my mind restarts on the rationalization. This rationalization seems even worst and does not offer any incentive to follow brahmacharya.

Pls advice how to curb this?

Thank you.

Answer
Go through all the past answers which have dealt with how to overcome the false rationalizations of the mind. Many such queries have been addressed before. Then honestly strive towards a life of Yoga & Brahmacharya. With the grace of God, things will slowly fall in place

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Dear dhananjay,
First of all thanks for service you give for people to evolve. I would like to know whats to karma generated if person masturbates by imagining different womens everytime?

Answer

1. Masturbation firstly drains enormous amounts of Prana (vital energy) and eventually makes the body become host to a variety of diseases/illnesses and premature ageing. Such a body degenerates and decays fast causing much ill health and suffering.

2. It enslaves the mind to imaginary fantasy resulting in a weak and unstable mind constantly prone to irritation, agitation, anger and restlessness. Such a person always goes in search of some sense pleasure or the other, for his mind lacks equilibrium and steadiness. He loses touch with the bliss of his Atman (soul) that is the greatest source of joy.

3. Such action strengthens past sexual Samskara-s (impressions) causing further bondage to this artificial mode of sexuality. Unwanted karma thus densifies, leading to a variety of other problems.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Hello Sir,
Many thanks for your great service to human kind. I have couple of questions. Could you please reply?

1. In 'Autobiography of a Yogi', there were few instances where things improved from astrology. Can astrology overcome Karma or it was just guru's blessing.

2. Why are we not aware how much karma's are left to be burned. Why God doesn't want us to let this know.

3. Some of the people are really good looking and successful because of their past karma but are indulged in bad habits. If they had done good karma in past birth, why is it that they are unaware about spiritual advancement.

Answer

1. Astrology is a science that can give some idea of the impending future. However, for correct predictions to ensue, the astrologer has to be selfless, leading a pure and divine life without any selfish motive. He should have no other motive as regards the science than serving people. People who use astrology to gain wealth, name and fame donot come under this category. The Lord does not bestow divine knowledge of the future upon such worldly people. This is why most astrologers of today are nothing short of frauds.

Shri. Yukteshwar was a great Yogi who had much knowledge of the future. He used this knowledge where it could help the deserving and not for any other purpose. He lived a simple life high on 'Vairagya' (dispassion). He had no other quest than that of liberation. Such people eventually develop the knowledge of the future even without learning astrology.

2. Can we close your eyes and complain - "Why can I not see?" To see something, we have to open our eyes and focus on the object. The same applies to one's past karma. With the ignorance surrounding the Atman that has limited the ability of the mind, man is blind to abstract, metaphysical concepts and facts. He can only see and understand that which is physical or within sense perception. As one unwinds this ignorance and gets the mind closer to the Atman, he will slowly start getting an idea of his and even others karma if he so wishes. Why then blame God?

3. When a sportsman excels in the Olympics, he is given a gold medal and felicitated. Does this mean he can draw money from a bank without having an account and some balance? Can he say – "I am a gold medalist, so I should get all things for free when I go shopping?" A gold medal only represents his excellence in the given sport and nothing more. It cannot have bearing on all other aspects of his life beyond the possible extent. Nor can it break rules and regulations that the world employs.

'Punyam' (past merit in karma) is exactly similar. Suppose someone has past karma relating to actions which destine him/her to have good looks/wealth etc. then such qualities manifest in this or next births. It does not mean that the person will also be spiritually inclined. If he/she has also striven to develop spiritually, then spiritual qualities manifest. Else they do not. Each kind of action gives that kind of a result and nothing more. Spirituality and past merit have no connection.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaskar Dear Dhananjay,

I am a keen follower of your posts.Your words instill confidence which a shishya would have got in presence of a sadguru(like sivananda himself).
I have gone through all of your answers & go through them daily.

Brahmacharya began for me as a childish vow i gave to my ishta siva for helping me cross over a small & only failure in my engineering paper.I cleared it via revaluation itself but vow's actual significance & glory dawned on me much later.

My question below:
Precap:During first 6 months of my vow(which i very sincerely adopted at 21 yrs) there were no wet dreams as far as I remember & no conscious leakage of veerya either,at the end of that period one day i failed but was surprised to find that no semen was ejaculated.That period was like a different life altogether.There was a complete transformation in me,i enjoyed spiritual discourses & silence much more than anyone around & had a great urge to run away to himalayas/ashram to find someone to guide me.
Q:Can sublimation occur within 6 months if aspirant is sincere?

Precap:I have noticed whenever after a break i again embark on the path i face constipation problems in begining but after a week or two it becomes normal.Color of my nails change(there is a pinkish curve on all my nails whenever i'm in brahmacharya but if i'm not in it the nails become pale white).In mode of brahmacharya my attention gets fixed at top of my head easily during dhyana but not so otherwise.

Q:Can you pls enumerate on above symptoms & their causes/remedies.

Precap:There are many people(me too in start) who couldn't understand any value/enjoyment other than senses.I believe meditation's value lie's in it's ability to overcome the mind while sensory enjoyments are just a way of forgetting/illusion of mind.This discrimination i think makes the key diff in attitudes of a yogi & bhogi.
Q:Your thoughts.

Precap:My uncontrolled indulgence earlier had ruined my health to a very large extent but since a few years I'm on the path of ideal of brahmacharya.I am more of a mind person..if any doubts persist I can't follow it with any amount of pressure but if my mind is all clear I can't think of nothing else besides that goal.
Q:Is this a god or bad thing as far as brahmacharya is concerned.

Last question:Is there a point beyond which a yogi can't fall?If so why?

Thanks in earnest Dhananjay for going through this lengthy post & your invaluable answers.

Answer
1. Gradual sublimation (conversion of physical semen into Ojas) can start to occur very early itself depending on one’s efforts, state of mind and the grace of God.

2. Retention and transmutation of Veerya (semen) increases the overall health and vitality. This enriches the blood and can add a red, healthy glow to the skin and the rest of the body.

All problems within the human system are directly or indirectly linked to the level of Prana (vital energy). When there is a loss of the same, the tendency towards upraisal of a particular weakness or complication (which the person may be prone to) increases.

More Ojas helps one to take consciousness to higher deminsions faster; while loss of the same pushes consciousness to the lower domains. This is why unbroken Brahmacharya is paramount for the attainment of deep meditation leading to Samadhi (superconsciousness)

3. Sense enjoyments are a temporary tingling of the nerves giving apparent pleasure and nothing else. The more such excitement of the nerves, the more is the pleasure and the more is the weakness leading to sorrow after the end of such tingling. Hence the wise donot go after the senses.

Meditation on the other hand works in the opposite direction, leading to calming the body, mind & the nerves. One first overcomes body consciousness and an advanced Yogi who goes into 'Nirvikalpa Samadhi' overcomes his mind consciousness as well, finally resting as the Atman (soul) itself.

4. Doubts and uncertainity lead to a confused state of mind and weaken resolve. When doubts are broken using ‘Gnyana’ (knowledge of the truth), it becomes easer to maintain the resolve. This is the same with all people.

5. After the Yogi attains final enlightenment through ‘Kaivalya’ (self-realization), he attains to the point of no return and is liberated for ever. Then there is no fall, for he occupies all space and time, endless & infinite.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi dhananjay,

hope you are doing fine.

1.I heard from a elderly person that if we had bad thoughts of past we should not suppress it but make them flow and release from its grip what does it mean as we lose our prana when we unnecessarily think about a thought.

2.while on bed, in sleeping state and as well as in wash room i am automatically reciting the sacred mantras and unable to stop them in the thought, according to you is it a sin because these places are used for personal purposes. please give your advice.

3.I observed strict brahmacharya for nearly 3 months and had a voluntary break ,from 3 months i am not able to cross even 10 days mark and having a voluntary break (can't control my hands while bathing) is this because i cheated god by having a voluntary break then. please give me you guidance as i am not able to hold my brahmacharya.

Ganapathi.

Answer
1. The method is to work towards reducing and overcoming the tendency to indulge in unwanted thoughts (which is caused by past karma). The practice of Yoga & Brahmacharya accomplishes this in the course of a few years. Then, even if an unwanted thought were to arise in the mind, one does not get caught or involved and the thought passes away.

2. The thought of God or mantra-s related to God can be mentally chanted at any place and time. When one himself is a part of he Lord, why should one try to separate? It is neither necessary, nor possible. 'Bhakti' (devotion) alone matters and not the place.

3. Persevere in honest practice as described. Surrender the results to God. Practice then becomes firm and steady in course of time. Effort is our only right and not the outcome.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaskar Dear Dhananjay,

I need your guidance w.r.t the two questions as below:

1)As you have mentioned in earlier answers semen once brought to the gross state of bindu is in an ejaculatory mode.I wan't to know if there is any possibility to sublimate even the bindu to ojas or is it futile & only the excess prana has the potential to be sublimated.I ask this because even when i maintain long periods of strict brahmacharya there are situations where under certain kinds of external & internal frustrations my resolve becomes weak & i seek refuge in lower tendencies though not causing expellation.After the same I feel that what's the use of retaining the bindu within now as it is already converted to a gross state.Pls shed some light on this & advise.

2)Also I realise during long periods of brahmacharya I get incredibly hungry in morning & evenings.Due to my work timings I am usually waking up at around 9-10 am,after that I do sirshasana/anulom-vilom & kapalbhati.After this I have my breakfast.If i feel uncontrollable hunger in morning I have some nuts & raisins before starting exercises.Is my approach right pls advise.I have read you mentioned the jathahar agni devours soma if left unquenched.

Waiting in earnest for your reply.Thanks.

Answer
1. Veerya (semen) is the gross state of Bindu (seed). The subtle state of Bindu is 'Soma' (amrit or nectar). Veerya (semen) can be reverted to Soma (nectar) through the process of transmutation effected by various Yogic practices including meditation. After the Yogi becomes an Urdhvareta, semen is not formed as Bindu remains as Soma, not flowing down. However, even an Urdhvareta will loose vital energy and suffer if his mind or body indulges in 'Abrahmacharya' (incontinence).

When Bindu comes to the gross state of semen further to sexual thought or actions, the chances of expellation (voluntary or involuntary) are high. This does not mean one should further tread the wrong path and voluntarily/willingly loose his seed. Under such cases, one should apply corrective measures, calm the mind and meditate. Indulging in physical activity (sports/exercise) will improve the possibility of reverting at least a part of the gross semen back into physical vitality. He should take steps not to repeat such actions and learn from the mistake. That portion which cannot be reverted will release through a wet dream; but this is much better than a voluntary break and helps faster progress.

2. The stomach should always be fed with appropriate food when hungry. The Yogi should never ignore hunger; else it will devour his body itself leading to weakness and premature oldage. Milk, fruits, nuts etc. can be taken in the morning depending on the hunger. Beakfast in the morning and lunch in the afternoon should be adequate in quantity and never in deficit. Fruits and salads are best suited for the evenings. Details as regards food are available in past posts.

Question
Hi Dhananjay,

I would like to understand better the role of sexual energy in our spiritual development and awakening. I've often wondered why in most practises we are encouraged to be celibate and there must be a good reason for it, but I am unable to find a source that can explain it to me. How does the sexual energy get used in our spritual development and how do we practise to channel this energy for those purposes?

Can you point me to some useful resources to learn more about Brahmacharya and self-realization? I would like to learn more.

Thanking you for your time.

Answer
1. All energy comes from the Atman (soul) which is contained in the Supreme (Almighty), the creator. When this universal energy manifests in the form of cupid between man and woman to bring them together for propagation of the specie, it is termed sexual energy. It is nature’s means to ensure the propagation of Samsâra (trans-migratory existence in this dualistic world of Maya [illusion]).

When man extends its scope beyond the purpose of procreation into recreation, the very same energy binds him firmly to this illusion called the world, thereby taking him further away from his true self, the greatest source of bliss. The more one moves away from his true self, the more one suffers. Sexual enjoyment which is governed by Mâya makes one assume the world illusion as real and increases ignorance, whereupon, the awareness of one’s self which is beyond limitation and beyond dualities dims and disappears.

Since sexual energy comes at the cost of life energy and vitality, drain of energy through this channel leaves very little for the purpose of realizing one’s self, the only way to eternal freedom and bliss. That which is unreal cannot liberate and cannot help. The illusion of sexuality is one such. The wise transmute this energy into something higher to overcome bondage, while the ignorant release it through a less worthy outlet and get caught in the net.

2. Read – “The Science of Yoga” by Dr. Taimni. (http://sun-gazing.com/pdf/misc/Science-of-Yoga.pdf). The translations to the aphorisms of the great sage Pathanjali that deal with the means to self-realization (Yoga) are outlined there.

3. Past answers on this portal deal with the methods to Yoga, the method to move towards the self.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I have dreams triggered by samkaras that bring about nightfall, are they still there even if not triggered by a certain food or overeating a few bites to much?

When the karma unfolds I try to remain as witness and observer and not participate in reacting, will these karmic thoughts and bodily karmas like ejaculation be dis-charged for sure as long as Im not creating new voluntary acts in thought and deeds?
I even repent for these feelings and dreams and thoughts coming up, though they are just old impressions , I cant tell if they are wearing out going away disolving or if they are like a rot that is growing.
I do pray, meditate, study, yoga, and do my spiritual warfare, surrendering all, sacrificing all to The Lord. And i will keep doing this in thanks and praises, serving the lord and may HIS Grace come to us all.

Any advice and answers and reply would be tooken in gratitude, thank you for being here
Dhananjay, s3

Answer
Past Samskara-s (impressions) that surface are sometimes of such strength that they manifest in the form of unwanted thoughts/actions/dreams despite oneself. The way out at such times is to stay calm, sticking to honest and regular practice, requesting the Lord for strength.

What is most important at such times is to never voluntarily give in/give up but stay true to the 'Dharma' (self-realization) via Brahmacharya, regular practice and God devotion.

In course of time, the storm passes and things stabilize.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I wanted to also add to questions, s it like we have a karma storehouse that can be full of darkness because of bad old karma deposits and we need to deposit good karma of light to remove this darkness otherwise the old dark evil karmas will always lurk?

Answer
There is no method higher than a life of Yoga (with its 8-Anga-s) & Brahmacharya to dissolve past impressions (Nâsti Yogât Param Balam). As one strives in this direction, the light of the Atman automatically fills the vacated places, leading to true knowledge.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Hello brother Dhananjay,

I am a person struggling to keep up brahmacharya. Recently I have joined a yoga class. Kindly tell me what all are the asanas most helpful to the practice of brahmacharya, helps in preventing nocturnal emissions and aid in balancing the sexual desire (testosterone - hormone imbalance).

I thank you in advance.

Regards,
Ano

ANSWER: 1. Free the body with a few stretches and warm up exercises.

2. Then perform the following Asana-s in the given order with the correct breathing (movements should be slow and smooth):

- Ardha – Paschimothânasana
- Paschimothânasana
- Bakâsana
- Sivanandâsana
- Halâsana
- Sarvangâsana
- Dhanurâsana
- Pâdahastasana
- Chakrâsana
- Shirshasana

3. Then perform the three Bandha-s.

4. Then perform Nâdi Shodhana as explained in previous answers.

5. Then perform Pranayama as explained in previous answers.

6. Finally sit in Padmasana or Sidhasana and perform meditation with God devotion as explained in previous answers.

This is the Yogic practice that is to be performed once in the early morning and at Sunset for progress in Brahmacharya aimed at self-realization.

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Hi Dhananjay,

Please explain what is Sivanandâsana. I have never heard about it and could not find any information about it. Does it have an another name?

Appreciate your help.

Regards,
Ano

Answer
1. Sit on the floor with both legs stretched out (as while commencing Paschimothânasana)

2. Fold the right leg at the knee & place it under the left thigh, pulling it as much inwards as possible so that the right heel rests just beside the side of the left buttock.

3. Fold the left leg at the knee & place it over the right thigh, pulling it as much inwards as possible so that the left heel rests just beside the side of the right buttock.

4. Pull the left leg tight into the above described position. The genital region gets compressed inbetween the left & right thighs. Place both hands atop the right knee, interlocking the fingers and looking straight ahead, spine erect with eyes closed for a minute or two.

5. Repeat the same procedure with alternate leg position.

6. This is 'Sivanandâsana'. It is a secret and mystical Âsana unknown to the world but used by Urdhvareta Yogi-s. When both the positions (left-right & right-left) are performed daily and mastered, the Yogi succeeds in cutting the flow of sexual energy to theSwadhistana Chakra and redirects it upwards so as to speedup the attainment of Samadhi.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I strive for absolutely nothing less than complete brahmacharya. I do not look at porn, I do not masturbate, I do not date women. The only breaks in my brahmacharya occur, WITHOUT FAIL, because of wet dreams. It is extremely frustrating how often wet dreams occur to me (every weekend), especially because for the duration that a wet dream happens to me I am struggling against the lust.

I remember one dream where I was very aroused, and I recognized that I was dreaming so I tried to wake myself up to avoid semen loss. But I was unable to wake up until the ejaculation was over. I remember another occasion where I was being attacked by lust in a dream and I tried with all my might to use a tantra practice to bring the aroused semen back up my spine, but it didn't work.

So, my question for you is, how can I avoid wet dreams COMPLETELY, so that I might never lose semen again in my life? Are there specific hours where I should not sleep? Foods I should avoid? Things I should do, etc?

Answer
1. Adopt a life of Yogic practice as has been described in past answers. This will help work out past karma (responsible for wet dreams) faster, thereby leading to freedom.

2. Details on sleep hours, foods to be eaten & avoided etc. are available in past answers for those interested.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

So far I have managed to stay celibate for 5 weeks. Recently I started feeling heat in my heart area every now and then, so I did a little research and I found out that our spiritual heart is located there. Then I remembered that Ramana Maharshi recommended self-inquiry to find the self (in the heart).

So I started meditating by concentrating on my heart and I found out that I could amplify the heat a little. It's a pretty good feeling. This is a good sign right?

Can you tell me what is really happening? Is this heat the result of increased prana due to brahmacharya?

Also is this simple meditation that I'm doing (along with brahmacharya) all that is needed to attain liberaion? If not, then what sort of meditation should I be doing?

If I remember correctly Ramana Maharshi recommended concentrating on the heart, but he didn't really say how one should meditate to attain liberation.

Thanks in advance

Answer
1. The Atman (self) is not restricted to the physical heart. It is unlimited and beyond location. The spiritual heart refers to the inner sanctum of nothingness that one experiences when Samadhi meditation begins (while focusing at the 'Bhrumadhya' – the place between the eyebrows with the eyes closed). Shri. Ramana when referring to the physical heart does so referring the heart as a symbolic representation of the source of life functions powered by the Atman and nothing more.

2. One wishing liberation should meditate on the nothingness of the formless Supreme as explained above and not on any part of the body or energy center, for this body itself is unreal and so are the sensations arising in meditation from this body (which are the effect of Pranic movements)

3. Refers past posts for the technique on meditation of the formless Supreme. This is the meditation for liberation.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaskar Dear Dhanjay,

I often wonder why gods(basically the holy trinity) were forced to give boons to whoever invoked them by penance whereas they never seem to do anything for the poor & worst suffering's call for help even after pure cry from heart.Also I have heard 'devatas are mantra aadheen',I want to know why so?
It seems these devatas help only those who do tapas for them,this is like plain business then why should anybody pray to them/respect them at all,better to prod on with our own efforts whatever be the result atleast we'll have satisfaction of making it on our own.If it is business indeed where is place for love/devotion.

I am asking the above question because I am very puzzled as to seek blessings(or help to put it bluntly) of divine beings while walking on path of brahmacharya or would it tantamount to begging & disrespect to one self when shastras also say 'aham brahmasmi' & 'tat tvam asi'.

I hope I was able to express my anguish/confuscion.

Waiting for your reply in earnest.

Indrajit.

Answer
1. Penance is nothing but earnest, one pointed effort with a particular objective. As in any other activity, one begets as much as he or she deserves based on destiny and effort. Suffering or happiness has no connection with the same. Suffering is the result of some past karma that deserves such pain and like all other things follows the law of karma which is just and impartial. Not even the trinity can bypass these laws.

2. Not even the Supreme helps those who require help just because they do so. If such was the case, there wouldn't have been one case of suffering here on Earth. One has to first become eligible to receive help. Such eligibility comes from effort which then transcends into grace. When one has engulfed himself with karma that demands suffering, what can Gods or Goddesses do? Nothing bypasses the laws. Our ignorance is the cause of suffering and none are to blame. Those who receive blessings or favors from such Gods make themselves eligible through ardorous austerity/effort.

3. There is no rule that one has to pray to the Supreme or any God/Goddess. Prayer is a personal action based on trust and belief. Those who rely only on their own efforts sincerely also finally realize the presence of a higher Super-power called the Almighty (who resides within all as the Atman, the true self). One can take the path which appeals the most.

4. That which one deserves comes. It comes immaterial of whether one wants it or doesn’t. The same is the case with blessings. When actions get ripe, the results follow, call it blessings or some thing else.

An occurance is termed bad when it causes pain and good when it gives pleasure. The wise stay internally unaffected by both, knowing both to be the effect of Maya (illusion) and hence unreal. In reality, nothing happens, for who suffered or enjoyed? None. The ignorant Jiva (with its false concept of I-ness), having forgotten its true stainless state oscillates in the apparent waves of pain or pleasure fueled by its own lack of knowledge.

5. 'Aham Brahmasmi'/'Tat tvam Asi' – The Aham (I-sense) referred to here is the higher self, the true self or the Atman and not the little, false self – the Ego. The Atman has no respect or disrespect, being above all duality. It is the Supreme power of powers, the very Lord, without a second. Who then exists to disrespect it?

Hence work towards negating the little, lower self called the Ego, the source of all pain and suffering which posed this query about respect & disrespect. Then this question disappears at once.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Respected sir,
At present i'm 19,since 13 i have been masturbating,lost much of my semen,but now i am maintaining brahmacharya from last 6-7 months.
Sir i want to ask that now i have severe pain in my right upper thigh near private parts,why is it so,is it due to overmasturbation.
Now since i have been following brahmacharya,which i want to follow till the end and want god realisation.
Sir i want to know what to do regarding body weakness due to masturbation ?
Thanks a lot

Answer
1. Brahmacharya must be followed in thought, word & deed with Yogic practices and a supporting lifestyle as outlined in past answers. Mere abstinence at the physical level can lead to semen stagnation and discomfort as you have mentioned.

2. Indulge in regular physical exercise, mental work and God meditation with the Yogic practices described. In course of time, things will normalize and the weakness will subside.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
If the aim of all Yoga is to experience Samadhi, is it possible to experience samadhi while living in the world and getting distracted continuously with things like job,family responsibilities, etc. Is it not like swimming against the tide and also dangerous for health to be pulled in two different directions.
Also is it possible to experience samdhi while living in the world...If not why to aim for the impossible and get dejected?

Answer
1. The aim of Yoga is 'Kaivalya' (self-realization). Samadhi is one of the means to achieve this objective.

2. It is possible to reach Samadhi while living in the world. It becomes possible when one realizes the falsity of his individual Ego & remains detached to the offerings of the world further to attaining 'Gnyana' (knowledge of truth) that this world is illusory. To reach such a state one should lead a life true to 'Dharma' (efforts towards the attainment of self-realization being one's true Dharma)

3. Even if one were to decide to swim WITH the tide and lead a life of senses as per his whims and fancies, he will still have to swim back all the way to where he started from and then again swim AGAINST the so called tide till he reaches enlightenment. This is the law of the Almighty. Which is easier?

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,
It is said that the earth is the only planet from where a conditioned soul, after being born in this physical body as a human, can do his spiritual practices (bhakti, upasana, tapa, samadhi etc.) in hopes of gaining liberation. Then what are these other planets like jana loka, rishi loka and tapo loka for? They also sound like planets of peoples and sages.

Answer
These are non-physical planes (astral & causal) where Jiva-s which have not yet attained complete liberation (but have overcome the need for a physical body) continue their efforts towards final liberation and finally merge into the Supreme. There are many advanced Jiva-s which exist in these planes.

The Earthly plane is the only plane where the physical body is utilized. It has all the favorable conditions for existence of the physical body. Those who achieve final and irreversible liberation while on Earth itself bypass stay in these non-physical planes (they experience the same in higher states of consciousness while on Earth itself) and merge into the 'Parabrahman' (Almighty) directly upon forsaking the physical body.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaskar, thank you for your noble service. Sir i want to know about prarabdha karma and how can one get rid from this karma in current birth? Thanks again from palash

Answer
'Prarabdha Karma' refers to that karma which will bear fruit in this current birth. It cannot be altered, side-stepped or got rid of. It is to be experienced and worked out. Even the self-realized soul who is a 'Jivanmukta' (who has attained to liberation while still in the body with no future births) has to work out his Prarabdha without fail.

Examples of liberated souls who went through suffering due to Prarabdha even after self-realization include Shri. Ramakrishna Paramahansa (suffered throat cancer before forsaking the physical body) and Bhagavan Ramana Maharishi who had to suffer from an incurable and extremely painful cancerous tumor on his upper arm in his last few years before departure.

Prarabdha includes that portion of karma which will bear fruit in this existence further to one's previous good or bad actions. One's misdeeds or merit (if any) committed before self-realization has to be experienced without fail even after 'Kaivalya' (self-realization) as long as such karma remains. Till then, the Jiva cannot forsake even the physical body.

When merit remains, that luxury or enjoyment due from such merit (such as riches and a prosperous kingdom in case of King Janaka) come to the sage. The 'Gnyani' (realized soul) however does not get affected by these impermanent dualities of pleasure or pain but stays fixed to Brahman (Almighty).

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namskar Dhananjayji

i am very happy to inform that i have complete the 92 days of celibacy(with 4 wet dream) and til continue. this is happen due to your guidance and god blessing without it will not possible for me.
My question is that how i recognize the right person or group which are follow celibacy. i feel in last 92 days not even single person i found which practice or follow celibacy, even from family members to closed friends who are very intelligent or far cleaver from me are foal in such maya. so how i can join the such celibacy people. i remember that Vivekananda also said that he never come to even 20 person who follow celibacy in his life or journey.
so how can i found such people in my next life, i am now 25 years old boy. Because such pure or celibacy company it will become very difficult to be remain celibacy or external environment 100% affects my mind. from last 92 days i completely away from media or external revilement, even i not watch the images of luxurious car or house. I think it will fall in to me in maya. if your know such site on internet who follow celibacy plz inform me so i can know and perform my net life with celibacy.

Answer
1. It is not very easy to come across like minded individuals who aim for the practice of Brahmacharya with honesty.

2. It is also impractical to expect others to follow this path just because one follows it. Each Jiva is in its own state of evolutionary progress. It is neither necessary nor correct to discuss/impinge others with thoughts on the practice of Brahmacharya. When a Jiva gets ripe for such practice, the practice begins. It is not for us to advertise or proclaim regarding the matter.

3. The practice of Brahmacharya is purely personal. Trying to take it beyond such boundries causes nothing but impediments and is a waste of time. One should develop Vairagya (dispassion) towards the world, knowing this world to be impermanent and the effect of Maya. The practice should remain a secret.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
There are now over 6 billion souls inhabiting this planet which is more than any time in history. Did they always exist? Are they all sparks of the creator? Were they previously in Animal form? if it was a fall from grace, does the density of ignorance correspond to the level of physical form? Thank you

Answer
| न जायते म्रियते वा कदाचित्
नायं भूत्वा भविता वा न भूयः ||
| अजो नित्यः शाश्वतो अयं पुराणो
न हन्यते हन्यमाने शरीरे ||

"The soul was never born and nor shall it ever die.
Nor having been shall it ever cease to be.
Unborn, eternal, ancient and indestructible,
The soul does not die when the body ceases to be".

This is the nature of the soul as described in the Bhagavad-Gita. It has always existed and will always continue to exist. Depending on the level of ignorance surrounding it, it takes various forms manifest through different physical bodies like that of an insect, animal, human etc.

It is beyond doubt that all these billions of Jiva-s have always existed in some form or the other. They are no different from the Lord himself in the sense of their true identity.

As per the scriptures, the soul has been in its state of ignorance eternally. However, it is moving towards shedding these layers towards enlightenment. This is called evolution. Every creature, be it animal or man is gradually evolving. When this degree of evolution reaches its zenith and meets perfection, the Atman (soul) shines in its true state of splendor called 'Kaivalya' (self-realization). It is then fully enlightened and no longer requires the physical or astral bodies, as a result of which it merges into its true state of union with the creator. Then the 'Leela' (divine play) of the creator as regards that soul completes as regards these lower planes.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Dhananjay ,

I have been following brahmacharya in conjunction with a satwik diet/lifestyle. I have started pranayam recently. But what I find difficult is that I feel really sleepy in the morning during lectures and in the afternoon. For this I have started drinking coffee which works in the morning but doesn't in the afternoon.

Also I'm thinking of taking Protein shakes (With no preservatives) as I work out at the gym. What is your advice on that?

Also what satwik foods are very good in giving an energy boost. I've tried bananas which don't really seem to work.

I take coffee in the morning only now. Is that fine?

Regards

Answer
1. A malted beverage made of wheat, corn, maize, jowar or ragi flour is the best (refer past answers on how to prepare the same)

Do not depend on any external stimulant such as coffee or tea. Gradually taper the habit and give it up. One should free oneself from dependence on such habits if the body and mind are to move towards real strength. With time, further to honest practice of a life of Yoga as described in past answers, things will normalize.

2. Naturally prepared foods which are consumed fresh are always the best as they are high in 'Prana'. Take the protein shakes for now if felt necessary. With progress in Yoga, the need will eventually taper away.

3. Tender coconut water & pulp, fresh fruits/juices, vegetable salads, dry fruits, Dhal & whole grain foods are the ideal food for the Yogi. There is no bigger energy booster than transmuted semen. Its effects become pronounded after a few years of unbroken Brahmacharya, following which the Yogi can sustain with lesser food.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaskar Dear Dhananjay,

I have 2 questions as outlined in subject:

1)What happens after liberation.Are we fully conscious & identified with supreme spirit(knower & observer for eternity as jains refer to).What are we supposed to do then?Or is it that liberated beings' task is to help others' trying for the same.Also even after entire creation is reabsorbed(even when brahma himself is taken back) what is the liberated beings' state.I ask these questions even though it can't be described in words but feel that one should atleast have a little idea of the goal one wants to achieve otherwise it is just sheer blasphemy towards oneself even though it is spoken highly of by every mahatma.

2)Shankara/sukhdeva/gorakh/nityananda/vivekanand/hanuman were all unmarried to name a few.Even among gods those who have married(mahadev being foremost ex,sriram,krishna) have done so not for their personal motives but for the uddhar/kshatriya dharma of society at large.All tirthankars were unmarried.
So it seems people of foremost strength tread the direct path.Only those who can't do so marry & responsibly fulfilling householder's dharma have become liberated which is a long road but comparitively easier one.I am not for/against marriage but just want to know your views on the reason for which one should marry,seems to me if one has burnt up all seeds one'll forego marriage & tread direct path.What should & what is shastra prescribed reason for marriage.I know it's an individual decision in the end just want to know what to base my decision upon.

Namo sat-chit-ananda.

Answer
1. What happened to the people and events in a dream upon waking up? The dreamer becomes the awakened and is said to have come to the real world. He no longer reacts to those events with happiness, sorrow, pain or pleasure as he did while in the dream. Though he knows the emotions he experienced, he is no longer influenced by them. He laughs at his silly reactions (say fear) wondering why he took those events so seriously when they were only imaginations of the mind and not real.

But the very same person would not have understood this reality while in the dream. If someone in the dream told him – "You are dreaming. These people and situations are not real but illusory. Donot be afraid" he would not have believed. He considered all the events to be real and reacted accordingly.

The same is the process further to 'Kaivalya' (self-realization). Just as the dreamer reacts very seriously to the dream events and cannot believe otherwise, the Jiva which is caught up in this dream called 'Samsara' (dualistic world) due to 'Agnyana' (lack of knowledge of the absolute truth) takes this world to be real while it is only an illusion fueled by Maya which makes the unreal appear real. Man cannot believe or understand how this world is unreal if someone says so. Just as such knowledge dawned upon the dreamer only after waking up, man realizes this truth only after 'Kaivalya' (self-realization). Just as a dreamer thinks the dream itself to be reality and cannot understand what it means to be awake, the state of the 'Gnyani' (realized soul) cannot be understood before waking up to that state of enlightenment.

To briefly sum it up, the realized sage identifies himself as no different from that one Supreme force of which he, others and all other things are a part of. The sense of 'I', 'You' & 'Him' does not exist for he sees the one underlying force within all (the Atman) as no different from his own self. He is forever in the state of indescribable bliss, knowledge and existence, beyond the opposites. Further elaborations are futile as the state is to be experienced and beyond description.

2. One comes to know everything including what he should do after reaching that state.

3. Based on the decree of the Supreme, such sages work as HIS extension.

4. Creation itself is unreal and the effect of Maya. The realized soul is unaffected by creation or dissolution and exists in the Parabrahman as before.

5. Like all other things in this creation of HIS, the concept of marriage or bachelorhood is another state of Maya limited to the external level. Neither marriage nor being single has any bearing on the attainment of enlightenment. The path of the householder is as difficult or as easy as the path of the unmarried.

As in the case of all other things, one has no control over any of these things. Based on the Leela (divine play) ordained for each Jiva, it is helplessly thrown in the whirlpool of Maya, be it single or married. Ones right and duty ends at 'Dharma' (efforts towards the attainment of self-realization being man's dharma). The rest is decided by HIM and we comply with folded hands and heads.

6. One cannot decide whether he will marry or not marry. As in the case of all other things, HE decides who does what. If marriage is a part of one's destiny it happens, try how hard one may to stop it. The wise do not try to control destiny but stay true to their Dharma. This is the direct path. One's marital status has nothing to do with the path to enlightenment.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear sir

After a break I maintained brahmacharya for 4 months by God grace and your valuable advice. I learned a lesson that brahmacharya with Pranayama is more effective for reduce lust anger,and fear . My doubt is that by maintaining this life style we can become the king of prana?

Thanking You Sir

Vijith

Sarvam Khalvidam Brahman

Answer
The mind, Prana & Veerya are all connected. Control over the mind is achieved by control over Prana and control over these two automatically leads to control over Veerya. He who lacks control over Prana cannot maintain control over the mind and Veerya & he who lacks control over the mind cannot control Prana or Veerya.

For this reason, Pranayama is very important, for without it, one cannot develop absolute control over the Prana or mind. After many years of such correct and unbroken practice of all the Yogic practices mentioned, the Yogi develops 'Vâyu siddhi or Prana siddhi' which gives other siddhi-s & helps him move further into the realm of progress.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

What to do if one feels mentally hurt if someone is harsh on him? Then it completely spoils the mental peace causing raga-dwesha (Head becomes hot.) / jealousy and fear. This causes disturbs in doing asana, pranayama, japa, meditation & sleeping cycle. (Even one tries his maximum to avoid his company and even any bodies company.) Then even the reminder of that person causes raga-dwesha even if one is consciously working to eliminate anger (raga). Then loss of energy creates displeasure. It is also true that I do get hurt by others very quickly. How can you help me to regain the mental peace in such situations & not feel hurt? How can one learn to IGNORE these feelings?

Hari Om

Answer
Who got hurt? The little 'I-sense' (Ego). It is this 'Ahamkara' which feels elation or depression. The 'Manas' (mind) acts as a medium of communication & representation of what this Ego gets subjected to. It is not the mind itself which goes through happiness or sorrow. It is one's sense of 'Aham' or I-ness.

Man is the Atman (pure soul). The Manas (mind), Buddhi (intellect), Chitta (consciousness) and Ahamkara (I-ness or Ego) are not the real us. These are external to us. They are ultimately unreal and disappear upon death. Just as the clothes one wears are external, these are external to the Atman. It is this false assumption of taking the Ego as real, as the real I-ness that is the cause of all suffering. It is the cause of birth and death. 'Maya' (illusion) makes the Ego appear real. The Atman or the true 'I' is beyond these things and completely out of the picture. It is a part of the infinite Lord. There is no I-ness in reality, HE alone being real.

Do we feel hurt if someone rebukes or insults a piece of rock? We do not because the rock is not us. There is no more difference between a piece of rock and this 'Ahamkara' (Ego) in terms of belonging. Just as the rock is external to us and not a part of us, this I-ness which feels respect or disrespect is external to us and not us. Keeping this in mind, the wise do not beam with happiness at respect or get insulted further to disrespect.

The wise stay fixed to their state of Atman, internally calm and unaffected at the harshness or softness shown by others on this unreal Ego. "Why worry when it is this body, mind or Ego which is being subjected to some kind of treatment, painful or pleasurable? I am the infinite Atman and not the Ego. Let people do what they want out of their ignorance. I will not loose my composure" – This is how one should remind oneself of one's real Atmic state and stay calm with effort.

When such efforts at 'Vairagya' (dispassion) are applied over a period of many years on this body, mind and Ego with a Yogic lifestyle and Brahmacharya, one gradually starts to overcome this false sense of elation or depression that the Ego experiences further to worldly interactions and happenings. Then one internally smiles at praise or ridicule thinking – "It is the Ego which is being praised or insulted and not me the Atman. I, the Atman am beyond such susceptibility, being infinite and above suffering".

This is real 'Vairagya' (dispassion) and not merely desisting from the sense objects. When such dispassion builds, the Yogi slowly loses the urge to lust after the senses as the question –"Sense pleasure concerns the body, mind or the Ego and I am none of these. So why waste energy?" arises. Then he starts losing interest in pampering the senses. On a parallel, when much time is spent in meditation which eventually leads to 'Samadhi' (super-consciousness), one starts to experience the bliss of the Atman or one's true self. This bliss is indescribable and sense pleasure then appears stale and rotten. This produces more detachment from sense experience and to how the world treats oneself. One does not bother about the world or its behavior but stays calm, wishing good to all.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaskar Dear Dhananjay,

Seek your guidance again for some clarity & progress in path of brahmacharya.

I have noticed or maybe it's just my illusion that whenever i have passed through prolonged periods of brahmacharya my emotions get extreme be it anger/depression/joy/lust.Why is it so?Is this due to the build up of energy?Also whenever I am under sway of lust or anger/depression I feel i am in an altered state of consciousness why does this happen?I have studied extensively on how our brain works.It's a triuine model modern biologists hold largely in confirmation(reflex/emotional/rational) but memories are intimately connected to stimuli thereby hormones.

So is it that as there is an upsurge during initial periods of brahmacharya I am feeling these extreme swings?

Answer
Various changes occur at the physical, mental and karmic levels as one advances in the practice. All these are initial reactions of the body, mind and psyche and need not be given importance to. The mind and body which were earlier used to the dissipation of the vital force behave differently when the same is conserved. One should ignore these reactions and stick to honest & unbroken practice.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Hari Om,

Im a 23 year old from a traditional brahmin household who is trying to maintain brahamacharya for the past few months, after almost 8 years of masterbation.
Im feeling ashamed even when Im writing this, but I need guidance about slips especially when one is being tempted as I have gone through till now. The following incidents will probably explain my predicament.
Recently a few months back after I started practicing celibacy, I took leave from work to prepare for my CA exams, when my maid (a very good natured woman) of all the people, started lusting me. Under the grasp of passion I was blinded and we got touchy a few times. After a herculean effort I maintained physical brahmacharya for a month but then recently again I slipped; twice. Till now by the grace of god something always made me stop from going further to the sexual act itself till now.
I do not have the heart to tell my parents about our behavior because for the past 4 years that she has been with us she has always been a very good natured soul and has mouths at home to feed and the sad faces of my parents is something I cannot face. I have told her to stop trying to seduce me and she has tried to control herself.
Now the problem is that after even after telling her to stop tempting me, my mind still hankers after this sinful temporary pleasure every time I see her or any other woman. I am also aware of what Im doing is wrong, but even after reading many spiritual books and doing my daily sandhya pooja I have been unable to control my mind, be it even in the control of the the Indriyas i.e Im finding it hard to even practice the basic tenets of controlling the palate, etc.
Also, every time I start observing celibacy strictly the temptations that arise are stronger then earlier. This really scares me.
I would be very grateful if you could please advise me as to how should I go about to try and control my mind as I want to sincerely devote my life to finding the truth.

Yours truly,
Iyer

ANSWER: The purpose of the sexual act is procreation within marriage. If it is extended beyond the precincts of marriage, it ends in sorrow and suffering. This is the truth and there be no doubt about this.

If a man is centered in Brahmacharya with his mind & senses under control, no woman can succeed in taking him towards downfall. Woman is Mâya and the nature of Mâya is to provide an opportunity and then wait. It is only when man responds and proceeds ignoring 'Viveka' (wisdom) that Mâya reciprocates and entraps him. Ultimately, one alone is responsible for his deeds. Hence the correction in attitude is to be applied immediately and right thought/conduct adhered to at all times.

The human body is a pot of flesh filled with excrement and other foul substances that one would not even dream of consuming. This is what man indirectly feeds on during sexual activity. This pot of flesh is ageing everyday and moving towards its true state of decay. Keep this in mind (read past posts on related matter). Practice a life of Yoga with 4.00 A.M wakeup and all the Yogic kriya-s as described in past answers. Brahmacharya cannot succeed beyond a limit without these practices & meditation.

Go through each and every past answer. Apply the techniques and methods listed. Indulge in regular meditation and pray to God for strength. With the grace of God & persevered effort, things will fall into course and Brahmacharya will stabilize.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Hari Om,

Thank you sir for your kind reply. Cant help notice but you echo Swami Sivanada in many ways in all your posts. Im thankful to God that you are here to help apply and explain Swamiji's teachings to everyone individually.

I am trying to incorporate your advice in my life and would be further grateful if you could throw some light on the following two problems too.

1.)Even though I did not indulge in the sexual act, the feeling of guilt that I tried touching another woman inappropriately is hankering in my mind as I have never done this before. Sometimes I also wonder how I could have been led to the wrong path even though my family is very religious and spiritual.
These self defeating thoughts of continuous failure are really disturbing and do not leave me or allow me to concentrate on the task at hand. I want to get over them but I do not know how to.

2.)Also in previous posts you have mentioned about surrender to God, please give me some practical suggestions as to how I can achieve that.

Thanking you,
Yours truly,
Iyer

Answer
1. Past Samskara-s (impressions) & Vasana-s (tendencies) of various kinds inundate the Karana Sharira (causal body) of an individual. These are the product of various activities indulged in during previous births. Sometimes, one gets to know of a particular tendency only when it surfaces. These layers of past karma are deeply embedded. They can surface when purification of the vehicles starts by the practice of Brahmacharya.

2. 'Saranâgati' (surrender to the Almighty) occurs naturally when one strives with the utmost urge for liberation. It is the by product of a puritanical life of Yoga adhered to properly with the correct practice of Yama – Niyama-s. Some people have genuine surrender to God from a very young age even without the practice of Yoga. This is the result of their previous Samakara-s from past incarnations. Such people have already striven in this direction earlier. For all others, the practice of a life of Yoga & Brahmacharya automatically leads to 'Ishwara Pranidhâna (unconditional devotion to the Supreme)

In the Mahabharata, Lord Krishna says – "पुण्यं च सत् प्रियमत्वं च वर्धते ब्रह्मचर्यया " – "Great merit and devotion to the Supreme result from the practice of Brahmacharya"

One should strive every moment for the realization of Brahman. Every activity, either material or spiritual should be performed with the attitude – "I do this act as an offering to the Lord who is working his Leela (divine play) through this body & mind of mine". This is true Brahmacharya, true 'Saranâgati' and the best form of action. Such a person eventually experiences the bliss of the Lord and see's HIM everywhere, in everything. His mind gets insulated from the senses and stays firm on the Brahman like the unflickering flame of a lamp in a windless room.

Strictly follow the procedure outlined in past answers with the utmost honesty. Within a year, things will come under control and Brahmacharya will become the way of life.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
i had a voluntary break after 2 months of practice.
However depressing it was, I am suddenly encountering ear pain in right ear.

Does voluntary break become even riskier as practice continues ?

Everything seems to be going smoothly until out of unsuspecting turn of events break occurs.

Since breaks during initial period cant be ruled out, how to safeguard against mental,physical,psychic changes that could occur further to break?

On the positive side, such events only strengthen the belief that this is only path to follow if one wishes even slightest welfare ....

Answer
1. The break may not be directly responsible for the ear problem which could be due to some other cause. Sometimes, the sudden loss of Prana (vital energy) that accompanies a break causes different sorts of reactions in different people.

2. The risk of a break becomes strong when there is a voluntary or involuntary relaxation of efforts. If the efforts are correct, the possibilities reduce.

3. Honest and consistent efforts at a life of Yoga with devotion to God reduce the chances of breaks. When efforts are sincere, the possibilities diminish. Once a voluntary break occurs, there is no other way out but to face the consequences.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Namaskar sir, how r u? I have a question. sir, is there any link between geographic tongue or mouth ulcer and brahmacharya?

Answer

Mouth ulcers/boils etc. are some of the ways in which the body expels toxins. When purification of the physical medium starts further to Brahmacharya, such ulcers can manifest. The first few years of practice can involve such phenomenon, depending on the degree of purification the body undergoes (which depends on the quantum of impurity). The pain encountered in the process is another way in which karma works out.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

I am wondering what will happen to a person's karma when he is on the path of serious self-realization.
Suppose he has burnt up all his prarabdha due to his penance. Then does he start to finish off his next birth's karma also in this same birth...or how does it work...
Can we finish off all our future births' karmas also in this very birth?

Answer

1. 'Prarabdha Karma' when completely exhausted along with 'Agama' (that of future births) through a life of Yoga leads to absolute liberation and release, merging into the Brahman irreversibly. The physical body cannot be discarded by the Yogi as long as his 'Prarabdha' remains (even if the Yogi is self-realized). This is why many realized sages are known to live for many years even after becoming 'Jivanmukta-s' (liberated while still alive). They still have 'Prarabdha' remaining, completing which they are released for ever.

2. The Yogi gets the ability to burn his 'Âgama karma' (karma that has the potential to blossom in future incarnations) in Nirvikalpa Samadhi, but he still has to experience 'Prarabdha' in this very birth and get done with it.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Hi Sir - Hope you are doing well..

With God's immense grace, and your motivational words & inspirational life, I have completed more than a year of Brahmacharya. I devote everything to the almighty.

I have a couple of queries on which I would like your guidance :

1) Sir, you have extensively written on Brahmacharya. Could you please also guide us on "How to remove Timidity and Fear". I believe, these are the next big obstacles after Lust for every Sadhaak.

2) Already during past 1 year because of pride, ego & "I know everything" attitude of mine, I have seen the pitfall. From now on, I have started to learn to restrain myself from interferring in any matter. But, this makes me think that I have become more self centered. Sir, could you please let us know how do we lead a balanced life where we can look after our aim of Self Realisation, and also manage family and peers' expectations
3) What are your views on Chanting. I like to chant "Shree Krishna Sarnam Mama". Is Meditation / Samadhi only tool for achieving "Kaivalya" or can chanting also take us to the same destination.

Sir, would also request you to advice us on anything that you deem necessary for me and other fellow travellers.

Thanka a lot.

Warm Regards,
Kalpesh

Answer
1. Adhering to the correct practice of Brahmacharya will eventually root out timidity and fear after a few years. Fear is the effect of Mâya. The Atman is fearless, for it is all powerful, occupies all space and time and is without a second. The more one inches closer to his Atmic state, the lesser becomes his fear.

2. One should detachedly follow the 'Dharma' bestowed on him by the Lord sincerely, with the thought – "I do all this as a service to HIM, who is working out His Leela (divine play) through me. HE alone is the source of all strength and achievement. I as an individual do not exist". Then the Ego comes under control. As one becomes able to subvert the Ego; all other lower traits also kneel down and loose strength to raise their heads. When such an attitude is practiced for many years along with unbroken Brahmacharya and meditation, one evolves notably.

3. Chanting the Lords name mentally can be practiced at all times with HIS thought. If the Bhakti (devotion) is very strong, the time will come when one automatically becomes silent and goes into Samadhi. Meditation is the direct method to commune with God & silence is the nature of the Atman.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhananjay,

hope you are doing fine.

I have some questions,
1.Do we need to control our emotions at time of death of our loved ones. This morning my pet dog was dead after suffering from a disease from past several days, even though after its dead i thought my self only body is dead atman is eternal so i should not cry but why i was weeping afterwards. should we control these kind of emotions.

2.Is prana shakti in every being limited or is there a way to increase prana shakti. I heard that we cannot increase prana shakti and some yogi's say that we can increse prana shakti through mouna and meditation what is you take on it.

3.I read a story of Astavakra and janaka in that story it is said that we can attain liberation in the time taken between placing our one foot and the second foot on horse. it was proved by ashtavakra to janaka, can you please tell us the meaning behind this i was not able to understand.

Thanks,
Ganapathi.

Answer

1. One feels remorse at the death of a loved one due to 'Moha' (attachment) which is the result of 'Agnyana' (ignorance). The truth is that death is a joyous occasion where the Jiva is made to relinquish this body so as to take up another to continue evolution. Does one cry when he discards his old, torn clothes and wears new ones? It is considered a happy occasion and not sad. Death is no different. The Atman has forsaken this body and circumstances and wants to take up new settings. For the Yogi, this is an auspicious occasion where he wishes good for the departed soul so that it soon gets another body to move towards evolution for self-realization. This is the correct approach. When this reality is understood and remembered, one feels happiness and not sadness at death as we want our loved ones to progress further.

People consider the body itself to be the individual and react in ignorance. Most people respect or disrespect a person based on the bodily condition even while the person is alive. A young and apparently beautiful woman is sought after by all while an old, wrinkled lady is cared for by none. This is the effect of ignorance. If one really loves other, the body should not matter. Such love comes only when one looks at all beings as the Atman (pure soul) and wishes the best.

2. In the normal man, Prana (vital energy) is limited as he is isolated from the universal Prana to a large extent (further to not being a part of the infinity called the cosmos in his comprehension). In an advanced Yogi who has attained 'Prana siddhi' (mastery over Prana) and has power over the Bhuta-s (elements), the available Prana and control over it increases manyfold. It is by using this increased Prana that the Yogi gets the ability to manifest various siddhi-s. Prana shakti increases through a life of Yoga & Brahmacharya over a span of many years, following which the Yogi requires lesser food and sleep.

3. At the moment of time between one foot being placed on the stirrup of a horse and the second foot being swung over the saddle, there is a state of mental vacuum or voidness with no thought. For that fraction of a second, all thought vanishes and the mind is in 'Shunya' (voidness). It is this same voidness that manifests in Samadhi, when consciousness is in the Atmic state and not in the body or mind. But in Samadhi, one is not aware of the body or the mind.

This example is used to indicate the true nature of Yoga – "Yogas Chitta Vritti Nirodhah" (cessation of the modifications of the mind is Yoga). When one is able to be alert, awake and fully conscious with no thought in the mind and no awareness of the body, he can immediately transcend into the Atmic (soul) state of Samadhi. The liberated Yogi is always in this state of void, seeing the world as a dream without any thoughts registering as real.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Brother Dhananjay,

I would like to enquire on the rite of firewalking which occurs in my town yearly.

In my town every year, devotees firewalk on a 4metre burning coals for Goddess Mariamman. Many say its a form of thanksgiving, some is for asking boon and some say it is to prove purity.

The festival takes place in memory of goddess draupadi who walked on fire to regain her purity.

1) I would like to seek a better understanding on what is the connecttion between firewalking and spirituality?

2) Some of the firewalkers I know personally lead a life of debauchery and wickedness and near to the festival, they fast and pray to walk on the fire. If firewalking is a test of purity, why do these impure ppl return unscathed by the fire?

3) Do I need to be ashamed of myself if I do not have the guts to firewalk, even though I lead a relatively purer life than some of these firewalkers? I have this nudging thought that says that i am not manly because I am not a firewalker.

4) Is it possible to reach a state in yoga where one can walk on fire without feeling any pain?

Your insight on the firewalking festival would be much appreciated and awaited.

Thank you.

Answer
1. The firewalker uses a ritualistic approach to strengthening the mind, developing/proving devotion in the direction one's surrender to God. It is performed with the intention of giving the common man who is engrossed in Samsara and ignorant to these concepts, an opportunity to set aside some time for God.

2. When the mind is focused with complete belief on the ritual as being the destroyer of sin, it becomes oblivious to the senses of perception for a few moments. This makes the firewalker not take notice of the heat.

3. It is one's efforts towards attaining to purity of the soul that matter. The Yogi accomplishes this most effectively & scientifically through the practice of the Yama-Niyama-s of Yoga. Different methods are available to different people who are in different stages of evolution. One has to choose that which appeals and one that becomes viable through destiny.

4. Yes

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaskar Dear Dhananjay,

I want to understand if there are any affects of one's sadhana on one's karmic fruits/bearings.Are an earnest sadhak's/brahmachari's prarabdha hastened & does the eternal law/dharma aid such a sadhaka.If so how? I am supposing because of intense vairagya the hold of past impressions over the gyana sharira should lessen or annihilated thereby providing the sadhaka freedom from it's effects by not submitting to them.This I am supposing having heard about sadhanas in our yogic lore about burning off of our karmas before they manifest.

Thanks.

Answer
Honest and persistent Sâdhana results dilution of certain kinds of karma and gives the aspirant the strength to bear certain other kinds of karma which are to be experienced. The efforts applied in the practice of the Yama-Niyama-s of Yoga directly target accumulated karma which then starts to break down more rapidly. Also, as such karma works out, the aspirant becomes wiser as regards reality and this in turn makes him approach life with a more practical and correct perspective without fancy expectations (which is high in a life of Bhoga). Meditation leading to Nirvikalpa Samadhi eventually roasts the seeds of Âgama karma (which are yet to blossom in future existences), thereby making them unproductive & ensuring that this becomes one’s last birth on the physical plane.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Sir,

I am a 59-year old man with 7 months unbroken brahmacharya. My question involves repentance and forgiveness. In some Western religions, a person is expected to confess their sins to a priest in order to find forgiveness. On a secular level, individuals may be encouraged to discuss their moral errors with a therapist or counselor to relieve themselves of feelings of guilt. If a person talks about their pain or sins again and again, eventually the deep emotion around the pain will surface, tears will be shed, and the soul cleansed.

In Eastern spiritual writings, I have read that detailed discussion of moral transgressions can more deeply root the unhealthy images and thus karma.

My experience on this matter is unresolved. To a certain degree talking has helped. But I still carry around deep feelings of pain, fear, and guilt.

Is there anything you could share on this matter?

Thank-you for your kind assistance.

Ron

Answer
1. Releiving one’s pent up emotions, feelings or past actions through confession/discussion etc. with a person who is balanced, noble and in the right frame of mind helps the confessor unload the burden in his mind to some extent. The priest or counselor may in turn give some valuable suggestions as regards overcoming/facing the circumstances to aid the confessor get over his state of disturbance. This objective of reaching some solace is the basic principle behind confession at a Church. However, karma once accumulated has to be worked out. One cannot sidestep or negate its effects merely by accepting the mistake.

2. The world consists of various kinds of people, each of whom are in some state of disturbance, unrest and lack of harmony and equilibrium. All this is the result of working out of karma. The Atman (pure soul) which is the real us is ever at peace and in rocky steady equilibrium. Hence it follows that the state of unrest is a deviation from the reality of the Atman and not one's true state. To reach the true state of reality, one has to eventually overcome all the karma that is in the way of such harmony. Spiritual practice consisting of Brahmacharya & Yoga with God devotion helps the Yogi ascend speedily towards this objective in a span of a few decades, while the non-Yogi needs many hundreds of lifetimes.

Simply persist in the described life with the required practices in an unbroken manner with consistency. In a few years, the results start to show and peace starts to envelop the Yogi. He slowly becomes unaffected by the pairs of opposites, realizing the world to be a stage where the drama directed by emotions create illusions which are nothing but unreal.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,
I wanted to ask some doubts related to comparison of the dimension of time in which the earth is currently residing, called Kaliyuga or Iron age with it's predecessors (please correct me if i'm wrong somewhere).

1.Like stated in the scriptures, the were three ages before current known as Satyuga or Golden age, Treta or Silver age and Dvapar or Bronze age. I wanted to know that were these ages really superior to the cureent one in all aspects, i mean people were more cultural, generous, spiritual and everybody swore by their duties implied upon them by their castes (brahman, khstriya etc.) and followed their dharma honestly?

2.Some place it's also said that the colour of the sky was different in former ages. Like the current age has blue sky, the former ages had raktambar, shvetambar, pitambar (white, red etc.) Is it true?!

3.Some sources (both spiritual and archaelogical) say that those beings were much bigger compared to today's human. Was it due to great genetic qualities or because of fresh air, clean enviorment and healthy lifestyle with no pollution?

4. It is also said they had an unbelievably huge lifespan. One instance states that after slaying Lankesh, Lord Ramchandra ruled over the blessed city of Ayodhya for approx 11,000 years. Can this be possible?

5. Did they had to struggle more for completing their spiritual journey? Many aspirants used to spend thousands and millions of years in samadhi just to get glimpse of their diety. Was the path of self realisation really that long compared to the current yuga?

Answer
1. As per scriptures, the earlier ages were successively higher on Dharma (in terms of virtue) and lesser on Adharma.

2. Sorry, I do not have knowledge regarding the color of skies.

3. Yes, the earlier beings (both man & beast) were of larger dimensions comparatively. The state of mind, one's actions and lifestyle all contribute to these parameters. Man today lives in a highly mechanized and gadgetized world which calls for lesser use of the body while the earlier folk toiled harder.

4. That which applies to Lord Rama does not apply to others as he was an 'Avatar' (incarnation) of the Almighty. However, lifespans were longer earlier further to the above mentioned factors.

5. It is said in some schools that one can attain to Kaivalya (self-realization) faster in the Kali Yoga as the prescribed rules are less strict. However, it ultimately boils down to one's past karma, present efforts and the grace of the Lord who is the director of this Leela called Samsara.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhananjay,

I have just about started the path of Brahmacharya although have been facing many pitfalls. I have been reading Raja Yoga by Swami Vivekananda and also have managed to read Kriya Yoga techniques. Other than the variation in names, I was seeking to know which path would lead to the Enlightenment sooner. I understand the relevance of patience and perseverance. Having said that, any techniques that would lead to faster Realisation is certainly better. Please advice.

Answer
Raja Yoga is the technique where the Yogi focuses on bringing his mind under control and finally annulling his mind so as to reside in his Atmic state. The 'Astanga Raja Yoga' propounded by Maharishi Pathanjali covers the techniques required thoroughly and is one of the most comprehensive approaches to Raja Yoga.

The very same technique is referred as Kriya Yoga by Sage Pathanjali himself in 'Yoga Darsana' and also by Lord Krishna in The Mahabharata. The word Kriya denotes the various constituent methods and practices involved in 'Astanga Yoga'. Kriya Yoga is also used to denote a particular method of Yoga devised by Mahavathar Babaji as brought to light by Shri. Lahari Mahasaya.

Control of the mind and winning it forms the basis of any kind of Yoga for self-realization. This can be achieved only by negating the past Samskara-s and Vasana-s. Raja Yoga tackles this directly. Ultimately, one takes up that path which appeals the most as decided by one's individual nature and tendency.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaskar Dear Dhananjay,

I have read mentioned in our upanishads & also in your previous posts 'Falling of semen is death & it's rising is life' also that as & when yogi starts sincere practise of brahmacharya further debilitation of body stops.Is this is so then what is the cause of deaths of great saints like shankara/ramkrishna/vivekanand to name a few.Is it that they have voluntarily given their nod to death to be separated from their bodies?

Also an interesting observation is in case of great Bhishma who had taken a lifelong vow of brahmacharya.It's quite ironic that his father Shantanu gives him boon of ichha mrityu whereas i suppose this would have been anyway accessible to him after accomplishment of this great vow.Your thoughts.

All in all is fall/rise of semen the only cause of debilitation?

Thanks.

Answer
1. The practice of correct Brahmacharya slows ageing to a large extent and also prevents the incidence of bodily illnesses to a greater degree. However, the advent of bodily illness etc. stops completely only after one attains to 'Bhuta Jaya' (mastery of the 5 principle elements of which this body is made of) after much advancement in Samadhi which results in what Sage Pathanjali calls 'Kâya Sampat' (perfection of the body).

This does not however insulate any Yogi from Prarabdha Karma (karma that bears fruit in this existence). If there is some negative past karma that deserves the Yogi to suffer a disease such as say cancer, he will still have to experience the same. Karmic diseases that are the result of karma cannot be side-stepped, only bodily diseases are avoidable.

Also, one's lifespan is already decided by Prarabdha karma. When this body comes into existence and when it expires is divine will. HE alone decides these things. When the work of a Jiva in a particular body and circumstance is over, the Jiva is made to relinquish the same as there is no further purpose residing there. This is why the physical body is cast away at some point of time.

2. Loss of Veerya (semen) results in loss of Bindu (seed) which debilitates the body & mind. The sexual activity that is the cause behind such loss makes related Samskara-s (impressions) & Vasana-s (tendencies) stronger which inturn tend man to indulge in further sexual activity for recreation. When this becomes a repetitive, vicious cycle, all vigor, vitality and well being is eventually lost leading to suffering of both the physical/mental vehicles and formation of strong sexual karma which further pulls down the individual to repitition. The purpose of the human birth namely 'Kaivalya' (self-realization) that frees man from all suffering for ever through liberation becomes impossible. On the other hand, transmutation of the vital force into higher domains takes man towards liberation.

It is not the physical seed itself that is the cause behind decay, life or death. Bindu (seed) is the representation of the divine life force present within all beings. When this divine life force is held within, the being shines with divine attributes, while loss of the same propels the body to take to its true state – One of impermanence and decay.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

In one of your earlier mails you said that the body needs to be freed of its toxicity before we can attain self-realization or remain in such a state.

How can we avoid toxicity in this current modern life where we are ingesting toxicity through various channels?

How do we measure how much are the current levels of toxicity in our body and how do we get rid of them?

Answer

If a life of Yogic practice & lifestyle with unbroken Brahmacharya is correctly adhered to as explained earlier, the body slowly purifies to perfection over a span of many years following which it attains the ability not to retain toxins. Even if some physical toxin enters the body perchance, it is discarded.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Dear Sir

Sri Sri Mahavatar Babaji appeared before many great people like Adi Sanakaracharya, Kabeer Das, V.T Neelakandan, Yogi S Iyyer, Mrs Annibasent etc, He is the immortal yogi in this kaliyuga, By meditating on him we can see the great Yogiraj Mahavatar Babaji?

Sarvam Khalwidham Brahman

Vijith

Answer

1. Any one type of meditation is to be practiced.

2. If the object of meditation is Mahavatar Babaji, then the same is to be adhered to without any change. Frequently changing the object of meditation is not advisable.

3. When the efforts are adequate and carried out for the required time, the meditation bears fruit.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

1. You are answering question here as though you know everything. How do we know you are a true yogee?

2. If Yoga really gives siddhis and you are practicing it for many years, what siddis are you having?

3. What is the first requirement for success in bramacharya? can you tell if you know?

Answer

1. Questions are answered from the knowledge bestowed by the Lord. It is not easy to know whether a person is a true Yogi or not through the internet.

2. The entity within has no concern as regards siddhi-s.

3. True devotion and love for God with genuine surrender, complete belief in the validity of practice, reverence to the Guru, uninterrupted efforts backed by determination and a Yogic lifestyle are some of the requirements for success.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

QUESTION: What kind of past life actions or personality traits make a human being to be born with physical beauty?I have read that it is patience and kindness.Are the personality traits that lead to physical beauty considered as spiritual virtues?

ANSWER: 1. Any attribute is the result of such a requirement for further evolution of that particular Jiva (embodied soul). On a parallel, efforts towards the attainment of such an attribute will have been applied in previous existences.

For example, a person who wishes to excel in a particular sport starts practicing in that direction. He trains himself continuously to attain excellence. Despite his efforts, if the degree of perseverance is say a little deficit as compared to the actual requirement (which comes in the way of achieving perfection), then he carries these Samskara-s (impressions) to his next existence. In the successive birth/births, he very quickly masters the intricacies (as such impressions already exist in bloom within further to his previous efforts) and eventually attains to the goal.

The same formula and process applies to all other things including success in spirituality. When the impressions and tendencies of a particular action (resulting from previous & current efforts) reach their zenith, perfection as regards that action is attained and displayed in that being. Also, it is to be understood that each person being a constituent part of the 'Leela' (divine play) of the Lord, a particular set of actions and the resulting impressions are the prerequisites for further evolution of that soul.

Even in case of physical beauty, the required efforts would be in place from before. The person would have consciously or unconsciously striven in the direction of attaining to such a form at the physical & mental levels. When the impressions generated from such thought and action start to ripen, the corresponding fruits are seen externally.

Patience and kindness are not necessarily factors contributing to the same. The existence of people who are very impatient and unkind, yet possessing external beauty supports this fact. A person who has continuously striven to be patient and kind in previous existences cannot all of a sudden become the opposite in this existence. The practice of patience and kindness eventually generates a similar reaction from others as well. This is the result.

2. Samskara-s (impressions) behind physical beauty need not be spiritual virtues. There are enlightened souls who are not exactly beautiful in the physical sense. They may not possess attributes termed attractive in the normal sense of physically symmetrical features etc. There are innumerable physically attractive and beautiful people who are yet to bloom spiritually. Then, there are those who are both beautiful (physically) and spiritual as well. This world is a mysterious playground of the great Lord where variation is the rule of the game.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Thanks a lot for the answer!I know that my low spirituality can't help me see things in the right way.I just used to think that lack of physical beauty is the result of sins done in past lives.So i wanted to know what are they,to refrain from them.No matter what i know i should only care about acquiring inner beauty.I just happen to think that physical beauty is a real blessing for people who have it, and feel i would be really happy if i possessed more attractive features.

Answer
1. This body is a bag of flesh made of blood, bone, fat etc. Does the blood or flesh of a very beautiful person smell good when they are wounded and these come out? Does one's own blood or raw, bruised skin smell good? Minus the skin, all human bodies appear in their real, common form; raw meat with nerves, blood vessels, bones and fat. It is not any different from the dead carcass of a goat hung at the butchers.

2. External beauty is the work of 'Maya' (cosmic illusion) that makes these filthy things appear beautiful. Maya blinds the Buddhi (intellect) and makes it overlook reality. Minus skin, the body of the most beautiful woman would not be sought after even by the most passionate man. The Atman (pure soul) within surcharges the body with the effects of Maya to continue creation and run the world. As soon as the Atman vacates the body at death, the very same body of the woman becomes a repulsive, smelling corpse which is anything but attractive. Hence the wise strive to stay clear from these tricks of Maya. The wise man does not seek external beauty or worship it, knowing it to be nothing more than an illusion of the mind.

3. It is inner beauty alone that matters. Such beauty comes only when man inches closer to his true Atmic state. One should not worry about his looks or that of others, for physical beauty is illusory. It is impermanent and unreal, for it changes with time and finally disappears. That inner beauty of the Atman alone is beautiful, for it is eternal, timeless and one of substance.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Hello Dhananjay sir, I would like to thank you for sharing valuable information with people like us on the topic of celibacy.
I want to practice strict celibacy but I am suffering from nocturnal emission 2-3 times in a month.It occurs without any type of sexual dream.I guess it may be due to thin semen.There are many ayurvedic medicines available in the market for Nocturnal emission and making semen thicker.so,I want to know whether these medicines work or not.Is there any side effect of these medicines?In your opinion,should I use these medicine or try yoga ,asanas etc.Thanks.

ANSWER: 1. No medicine can control nocturnal emissions. To transmute semen, one needs the grace of the Lord & not medicines. Do not use any medicines. That is not the way for the Yogi. The Yogi should be self-sustained and will eventually become so if he is not.

2. Follow a life of Yoga & Brahmacharya as has been described in past answers. Follow the procedure very correctly and regularly with devotion to God. After six months of honest efforts, things will stabilize.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Thank you very much for your reply.I read in a book of Swami Sivananda that if one practices strict celibacy continuosly for 12 years without losing even a single drop of semen ,he will enter into samadhi without any effort and will have the vision of God.So,Is nocturnal emission occasionally once in a month or once in a year is also a break in this type of celibacy for 12 years mentioned above?Also how much or what amount of food should a brahmachari take per day?

Answer
1. Occasional nocturnal emissions do not constitute a break. If one strives sincerely and honestly in a life of Yoga, he will become an 'Urdhvareta' (after which nocturnal emissions stop).

2. Details concerning food have been addressed in past answers.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay ,

I apologize in advance if this question is moot or irrelevant.

My question pertains to the end result of brahmacharya; although one can maintain it for a very long time, and even become mastered and fixed in it, does it not in one sense just allow one to enjoy the same senses and gross objects on a more subtle plane. Would the practice open up the more subtle vrittis and impressions from previous, subtle existences in our past, where we would fail as they become more accessible to us? Or, do higher entities help us and guide us when we reach such a stage?

Sincerely,
Vikram

Answer
1. There is no other way out but to negate & overcome past vritti-s and impressions if one has to unwind the layers of ignorance around the Atman. If the Yogi deviates to become a Bhogi when such impressions surface, then he disturbs his practice leading to failure.

2. Depending on the intensity of devotion to God/Guru, honesty in practice and efforts applied, one gets help from beyond.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Dear Sir,

By your answers to various questions concerning God, i assumed that the he is only one and impersonal, he's forms in dvaita are but, his different personal manifestations, which you said are part of his divine play. Out of curiosity, i wanted to know that if so, is it possible that in dvaita, out of all his forms, there is any which is supreme to others? The opinions of schools variably diifer on this. For ex; kc schools say Lord Krihna is the supreme being of all whereas Shankara philosophy considers Lord Shiva as he was first personal manifestation who apperared himself (swaymbhu) and through him, various forms of lord manifest.

Answer

What makes us see the reflection of an object in a mirror? It is obviously the presence of light. One cannot see the reflection of an object in a dark room devoid of light. Immaterial of whether the person before the mirror is rich, poor, tall or short, his reflection would not be available unless there was light. So it is light which is bringing all these reflections to life. When this fact is remembered and realized, the subject before the mirror does not matter. It is the light (being the primal cause of reflection) that alone matters. As long as there is light, any object can be placed before the mirror and its reflection seen. The light alone is real while the reflection is false (as it is a product of light and does not have an independent existence)

Just as the reflections of objects placed before the mirror exist because of light and disappear when the light is extinguished, incarnations of the Lord, animate & inanimate objects in the world and everything else follow the same rule. Just as the light brings to life the reflection, the power of that one Supreme being illuminates everything else and gives it life. That Supreme being is alone real, while the visible manifestations are unreal (being the product of Maya). Does it now matter what name or form an incarnation takes (the incarnation being the reflection and the Supreme being the one and only light?)

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

I am a christian in religion.Although i have read many books over spiritual matters, i don't know where to start from.When someone is zero level in spirituality, what is the first thing to do in order to start the path towards enlightment?

Also i am a ''daydreamer''. I very often make various imaginary scenes in my mind(like ''seeing'' a movie in your mind). Is it impossible to make even the smallest step in spirituality while having such a habit?

Answer

1. Read a page of the Bible and its summary with devotion to God every day.

2. Start a life of Yoga & Brahmacharya as has been described in past answers.

3. When these methods are adopted, the day dreaming will gradually subside and the mind will get poised for meditation on the reality.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Respected Dhananjay,

I fell in love with a lady, she didn't reciprocate for certain reasons and has completely severed ties with me. It has shattered my peace of mind. I have read in many of your older posts that being close to women is against the principles of brahmacharya, it is Maya. I fail to understand that :

1. why expression of feelings goes against these principles/ why the heart and mind become so restless in case the feelings are unrequited
2. why such a tender and pure feeling of love transforms into compelling emotion so hard to handle?
3. though I tried my utter best to keep any physical intimacy at bay yet it is causing severe agony.
4. Is it ever possible to have a pure feeling of love like that of Radha-Krishna, I feel all this is so utopian?
5. Why am I feeling that all what you have advised is so impractical, when I expressed my feelings I had just pure emotions and yet it has ruined all?
6. And all this is such an impediment to the productivity when not feelings are trampled under foot and equally provides a thrust to give the best when feelings are reciprocated.
7. Can't brahmacharis ever fall in love? Is it because of this pain and agony that love, feelings are preached to be fallacies of mind.

Please excuse for the outburst in a public forum but I hope any other person having faced a similar situation can benefit from this so kindly do throw light on these aspects which can cause so much sadness and hurt.

Regards.

Answer
1. The basis of 'Maya' (cosmic illusion) is bondage. It stupifies, infatuates and finally binds man to the so called (unreal) beauty of the opposite sex, numbing the Buddhi (intellect) through deactivation. When man reaches this stage, the world terms it as 'Love' or cupid. He is now in remote control of this uncontrollable feeling of surrender, completely vulnerable to the wishes of the other. The entrapment is of such intensity that he becomes unhappy & disoriented if the created bond is shaken or made to break.

The reality is that he is under the strong grip of delusion, an after effect of Maya. The purpose of Maya to bring the man & woman together to make a family and continue creation. Its purview is to be limited to this purpose & not more. The wise man does not let Maya work beyond these precincts. If let uncontrolled and made into a way of life, Maya wreaks havoc, causes suffering and destroys man. Hence the wise forever stay fixed to reality and keep Maya at bay.

2. Estrangement from one's partner (or from someone with whom one is connected karmically) occurs when there is karma that requires such suffering. Sometimes, people come into one’s life to settle such a karmic quotient, due from before. Once this is done, the person leaves forever, leaving the other in pain. All this is the work of one’s own past karma that is working out. The wise man uses this opportunity to wake himself to the reality and stay clear from the bounds of Maya.

3. The feeling of love between Radha & Lord Krishna was of the highest order as that between a devotee and the Lord. It was not based on the body, mind or past karma. Such love becomes possible when a person becomes a Yogi of high caliber, full of unconditioned devotion to the Lord. It is the truest form of love possible only with the Almighty. It cannot exist if the other person is looked at as an individual (for then desires & expectations can arise). Through a life of Yoga, one feels such love which is beyond the body & mind as regards the Lord and finally the whole world.

4. Such are the ways of Maya that the entrapped man shuns the knowledge of reality which then sounds tasteless and impractical. If what has happened is let go, knowing it to be the effect of past karma and a life of Yoga & Brahmacharya taken up seriously with devotion to God, the waves of unrest will gradually subside.

5. There is no rule against falling in love, be the pesron a Brahmachari or not. What is important is to take it to the level of marriage and offspring at the earliest. The longer these objectives are delayed, the greater the chances of breakup leading to pain & suffering; for what is termed ‘Love’ in the layman’s terms soon withers away from one person or the other if not taken to its rightful purpose of making a family. This is the law of creation.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

i chant the name of god i want to experience samadhi the commun with divine i heartly want it help

Answer

Perform all actions with the thought of the Lord, as a service to HIM. Think - "I am the infinite and all pervading Atman who is not different from the Lord. The body, mind, psyche and related emotions are not the real me but only coverings like a garment. I am the infinite and still one, pervading everywhere, full of knowledge and bliss. Everything happens as per HIS wish. This concept called 'I' is false". Meditate on the Lord as much as possible with a life of Yoga & Brahmacharya. When such efforts ripen, you will taste Samadhi.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Dear Sir

I understood the meaning of Sthitha prajna, When I am engaging in all my works I can enjoy myself, My mind is always thinking or attached with me (in a meditation mood), or sometimes mind with the great Gurus like Mahavatar Babji, Adi Sankaracharya etc, With my some month practice I can get this much joy then what is about your state, God must bless you for all help

Regards

Aham Brahma Asmi

Vijith

Answer
1. The technique is to perform one's duties sincerely as a service to the Lord, without attachment for the outcome. Then, one is not worried or anxious, be the result success or failure, for he has put in his sincere efforts. Life becomes joyous and carefree.

2. Such a Yogi considers this life a drama and his actions as the job of an actor who performs on stage and then goes home. Just as the actor does not suffer or enjoy in reality because he played the role of a sufferer or an enjoyer, the Yogi stays fixed to the tranquility of his Atmic state, witnessing the world neutrally, as one would a dream. This is the way of the 'Sthita Prajna' (The Yogi of steady wisdom)

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
pranam dhananjay G !!
thanks for your help
as i practiced celibacy for about 6 months and then i got slipped..was a painful experience...though i am back on track..
i have 2 questions..

1 what is one aavriti of prayanama ..inhale from left then exhale from right and then inhale from right and then exhale from left ..is this is one aavriti ?

2 from past 2 months i am severely suffering from asthma..and i am in pretty bad shape..cannot even breathe properly...but cannot live without yoga..putting all my efforts to continue the practice
.. should i take medicine ? or not ? and also it is my final year for studies...don't know what to do ..if i take the medicine i can study for sometime but that will do no good in my yogic path ..as you always one should never take medicine..but this time i am seriously ill..please suggest me some path...

3 i woke up at 4 AM everyday...want to do yoga ...because i am deeply into it by the grace of almighty.. but neither i can do yoga nor i can study because my health condition and also these days my mind is not cooperating in the task..i want to do yoga .i want to study a lot..but when it comes to do action i fail myself don't know why this is happening even i am trying harder...it is like everything is in thoughts but not in action after trying so much hard..please tell why it is so....

with regards

Answer
1. Details on Pranayama are explained in past answers in the post:http://en.allexperts.com/q/Celibacy-Abstinence-3564/2011/5/Pranayama-Yoga-Brahma

2. Apply a hot water bottle to the chest, back, under the knees and below the soles of the feet when relaxing. Make a syrup consisting of mashed ginger, honey, turmeric, garlic & pepper mixed in a glass of hot water and consume the same thrice a day & before retiring to bed at night. This will give relief. Practice Pranayama with lesser counts initially but regularly with devotion to God, a yogic lifestyle and Brahmacharya. In course of time, the condition will reduce whereupon the counts in Pranayama can be increased. The problem will eventually go away after a few years of regular practice. Unbroken practice of Brahmacharya & Yoga with the utmost sincerity is the key.

3. From now on, you will surrender all your actions as a service to the Lord and persevere in your studies. The practice of Yoga & Brahmacharya will also develop momentum. You will also perform well in your exams when the above methods are honestly applied. This is the truth.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir,
I am the same person who asked you this question:http://en.allexperts.com/q/Celibacy-Abstinence-3564/2012/11/various-questions-1. with arrogance and taunts. Sir..I did not belive in Brahmacharya..also have been spending money with time with a woman for many years for enjoying thinking woman is pleasure. Some days back she cheated me and has left me broken. My health and mind are in a mess also with my finances. Now I understand the value of your advise regarding the purpose of sex & Maya. Please forgive me for my wrong approach and help me sir..

Answer
This life is an opportunity for man to reach his true Atmic state of divinity & infinity and free himself from rebirth forever. This is the purpose of the human birth. The wise do not waste their resources running after the illusion called 'Maya' which takes man to no other place but suffering. Take up a life of Yoga & Brahmacharya as explained in past answers with devotion to God. This will gradually help you overcome what you have lost and will stabilize your life. May God bless you.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Dhananjay,

It's been a long time since i first visited this site - your answers about Brahmacharya.

Thanks a lot for sharing bro.

You know, i am married. And as i remembered, you're also married, right?

I was wondering that maybe you can share with us some tips on how to still practice it eventhough you're with a woman- your wife ofcourse.

Ask for me, i really find it difficult to reach beyond 4 months of non-sexual relationship. My practice is still in an on and off one. That is Brahmacharya-intimate-brahmacharya again.

Hope to read from you next. Assalamu alaykum.

Answer
1. A married couple wishing to adopt Brahmacharya can first practice non-ejaculatory relations with a Yogic lifestyle. This helps them to overcome the slavery to ejaculation/orgasm. As the need to orgasm is gradually overcome, the next step consists of reducing the frequency of the sexual act itself. If a life of Yoga & meditation is carried out with devotion to God parallelly, the urge towards sexual activity for recreation will taper away in a span of a few months, following which abstinence becomes the way of life.

2. The basis for this method lies in viewing the other as a manifestation of God and not merely as husband/wife. When such a divine attitude supported by pure love is developed, the tendency to look at the other person as an object of sexual love tapers and goes away. All this of course requires immense grace of the Lord/Guru without which nothing moves forward. The couple should have also reached a stage where they are ready to take up complete Brahmacharya at the evolutionary/karmic level. Our purview ends at sincere effort and we leave the rest to the Lord who eventually blesses the genuine aspirant.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Dhananjay,

Thanks a lot for your previous answers. I stopped eating eggs and drink milk only in the morning to practice celibacy. However i feel lack of energy during the day. It may be because of Vitamin B12 deficiency as i read in this article.

http://theyogadr.com/vitamin-b12/

Should I start eating eggs? How do Bramhchari get vitamin B12 as they only take vegetarian foods.

Thanks,
Vaibhav

Answer
1. Where has it been said that one should not drink more than a glass of milk for Brahmacharya? Milk & dairy products are the chief sources of B-12 for vegetarians. After a large glass of morning milk, Include a full glass of thick curd (yogurt) in the afternoons after lunch and another glass of milk in the evenings as suggested in past answers. Also include butter/ghee etc. in the diet twice or thrice a week. This will suffice for the requirement of B-12.

2. Do not worry about the article. If the person writing the article had personal knowledge (from direct experience) as regards the effects of unbroken Brahmacharya (in thought, word & deed) with meditation and God devotion for a life of Yoga, such statements would not have been made.

The parameters stated in the article apply to people who lead a life laced with loss of energy from sexual thought/activity. Practicing a few ‘Asana-s' (postures) alone does not make a

'Yogi'. Only complete and honest practice of the 8 Anga-s from Yama-Niyama to Samadhi for self-realization with devotion to God constitutes Yoga. Yoga is a perfect science and the methods suggested are complete, taking all factors into consideration.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
i have been trying to practice celibacy for 6 months of late i am getting lot of sex related thoughts in the early morning once i wake up i recently changed my location (moved from us to india) and seeing it happen after that nothing has changed otherwise. do you see any particular reason why this should happen thanks for your help and guidance

Answer
As long as the 'Agnyana' (ignorance) around the Atman remains, sexual thoughts can arise at any point of time, be it morning, noon or night or at any place. The only way to redeem oneself of these thoughts is to roast the seeds of such thoughts in the fire of Sadhana (practice). Hence simply adhere to correct practice of Yoga & Brahmacharya as described in past answers with devotion to God.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Respected Dhananjay,

I live in a city, and I love my ciry lot for it being my birthplace yet several incidents associated with this city concerning safety of women have always perplexed me. A lot many questions keep arising in my mind thus.

1. My city is considered to be the unsafest in India for women and that definitely is. Is it some sort of collective and predestined phenomena that a city built with its huge populace with their karmic destinies make the city deteriorate in its moral and ethical standards?

2. Most women feel unsafe in my city and the unfortunate ones are assaulted brutally for sexual gratification and lust, are these associated incidents for these women pre-destined?

3. If events of one's life are so pre-destined due to their past karmas, then what is the purpose of laws and punishment for the criminals? Why can't we term such atrocities as a mere matter of destiny for the victims and do these criminals ever pay for otheir crime, how can they be so audacious to carry out such acts of sin?
Why do we see criminals go scotfree?

4. Why other cities are safer than my city or more so, why India is unsafe for women? Why women feel safer in abroad (western nations), though we say that India is a land of high moral and spiritual power.

5. Western countries are considered to be lacking spiritual imprints of the past, and more materialistic then why is it that we see more creativity, innovation, peace, harmony and cleanliness in the West and almost negligible in India even though it is considered spiritually advanced.

6. Do criminals involved in sexual crimes, ever get punished for their actions?

I know the questions are off-topic but somewhere the collective aspect of what you preach can be reason how a community or a city can proceed to a safe future.

Regards

Answer
1. Certain places have certain predominant factors good or bad. Like all other things in the manifest world, this is also a part of Maya (illusion)

2. Yes

3. The nature of karma is to work itself out and teach lessons to the Jiva. The purpose of law is to deter people from indulging in wrong karma & punish those who have not heeded to it. There are some who manage to escape the law of the land despite criminal behavior. They however cannot escape the law of karma which follows & punishes the Jiva even after it gives up this body and takes new births.

4. Good and evil are two sides of the coin called Maya. As long as man is under the influence of Maya, the two co-exist. As soon as one holds to his true state of self knowing the non-self to be unreal, Maya and therefore the world cease to exist.

5. For spirituality to exist, it must be made into a way of life. Spirituality is one's true state of the self. If the mind is constantly directed outwards making it the very way of life beyond permissible limits by forgetting one’s true state, spirituality diminishes. This is rampant in the current scenario.

Orderliness and discipline are the building blocks for both spiritual & material progress. Such discipline has been ingrained in some of the western cultures as regards some domains while the same has largely eroded in present day India. Ancient India was known for its cleanliness, both internal (of the mind) and external (of the body & its surroundings). The present state is the result of degeneration.

People foolishly ape the bad examples set by western cultures and ignore the good (such as discipline, cleanliness etc.) The wise however adopt the best of all humanity, constantly working to progress in the path of true evolution, knowing the right path for development.

6. Yes, without doubt.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
what should i do when porn feelings occurs my mind every night on this ayyappan pooja? I am out of mind
Please do help me.

Answer
To escape from the clutches of recreational sexuality, one should apply the mind & body in constructive thought & activity through the course of the day with a backdrop of spiritual contemplation all the time. A life of Yoga & Brahmacharya as has been explained in past answers to seek the Atman (self) has to be gradually incorporated. Only by seeking the Atman (self) does the non-self consisting of the world and its objects for the senses start to diminish. Take up a life of Yoga & Brahmacharya as has been explained in past answers. Go through all the answers slowly, taking in the meaning. In course of time, you will overcome the slavery to porn.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Dhananjay,

In one of your previous questions I've read that

Sexual activity assumes righteousness when indulged with the following objectives:
1. In producing wanted offspring.
2. In creating a healthy marital bond with newly weds during the initial period of wedded life.

my question is
If a person is going to his wife once a month or once in 2 months or once in 6 months can still he be Self Realized?

Thanks

Answer
1. As long as desire for the body of the opposite sex which constitutes the non-self still remains, one cannot attain to his true self (Atman).

2. A 'Brahmagnyani' (realized soul) constantly resides in & as the Atman (pure self). Where then is the question of indulging in the body of a woman (non-self)?

Hence the need for recreational sexuality should be eventually overcome within marriage and perfect Brahmacharya established for self-realization.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
As per your advice i came to the conclusion that brahmacharya and unattachment will help in attaining the real bliss. my question comes here.

many people including me have strong belief that god has created us. In such case he could have been made us without sexual feeling to attain the real bliss. was he intentionally made us to suffer from these kind of feelings?
Because if one have to get rid of these feelings and other emotions will have to take his full life time. A man below 40 age don't have any chance to control his sexual feelings. so brahmacharya can only be kept after 50. At the time our 75 percentage of our life was already gone.
I think if this lack of control is a fault, it is not ours, it is fault of creator.

Answer
Who experiences sexual feelings? – The Ego & mind. Who undergoes suffering? – The Ego & mind. Who is asking the question – "Was it intentional?" – The Ego & mind. To whom does the 'Lack of control' apply? – The Ego & mind.

You are not the Ego, mind or the body. These are all 'Anatma' (non-self). You are THINKING you are these three. So first do that which is necessary to stop such thinking permanently. As you start overcoming this wrong identification with the 'Anatma (non-self), these questions start weakening and the answer becomes more & more clear. You will then know it was not anybodies fault but misplaced identification. This is the only way to clear the doubt and be in peace.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Dhananjaya,

Thanks a lot for your all previous answers. You are like God to me.
I am trying to practice Bramhacharya in thought, word and deed since last one year. Also,I practice Pranayama and yoga 3-4 times in a week. I had 3-4 breaks in the span of one year as I'm married. I am also trying to educate and convince my wife about Bramhacharya.

I have a problem of stage fear. When i used to eat eggs, i was not having that much problem but now i feel lack of energy and nervousness while speaking. However, i feel that my logic and memory has improved. Is stage fear also a result of past karma because i'm struggling a lot because of this.

Answer
If not eating eggs is causing a feeling of setback, then eat eggs for some time and note the differences. Adhere to the correct practice of Yoga & Brahmacharya as described in past answers. If the practice is right, you will eventually overcome the need for eggs after some time.

Fear is the effect of faith in the negative. It is a mental attitude and nothing more. The best way to combat fear is by using the energy gained from Brahmacharya in doing that which causes fear till fear itself runs away. Fear arises because one gives it a seat. If one mentally forgets this thing called fear and does things with a detached perspective (as one's duty without expecting anything in return), fear vanishes.

To overcome stage fear, practice on the stage by yourself as often as possible with the thought – "There is nothing to fear and I shall calmly do that which is necessary as a service to the Lord. No one can disturb my state of confidence & peace". Keep this thought in the back of your mind & remind this fact every time you experience fear. From now onward, you will gradually succeed in overcoming the problem and will eventually get free.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Can brahmacharya make a person more happy and lively? Can it change attitude of such miserable people who contemplate life and everything else with their negative mentality. Can it really help those who have suffered alot, mostly internally; are then thrown into a complicated situation, as an aftermath of their or others misdeeds?

Answer
What is the cause behind any form of anguish or suffering? It is indulgence in the Ego by taking it to be real and forgetting the self. Identifying oneself with the Ego & body is the problem. Then the world appears real and full of pain. The mind becomes agitated and seeks some form of sense pleasure or the other to insulate itself from this pain. It cannot be satisfied even for a single moment without some external sense stimulus. But the senses can never give lasting happiness, for they themselves are unreal...

Brahmacharya carried out with a Yogic lifestyle for self-realization gradually makes man to identify himself with his Atman (true self) which is the greatest source of bliss, peace, knowledge & being. There is only one real state and that is the state of being the true self, in the true self & as the true self. So it follows that it alone is the refuge for those wishing eternal release from pain & suffering, be it of any sort. One should hold on to his Atman (true self), discount everything else & be at peace. That is Yoga.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
My obeisances,

I want to know for sure that what's the impact of sex and other romantic actions (like kissing, touching). Are they good or bad for me? Please share that:

What impacts of brahmacharya have you experienced? Do you clearly know that the benefits are not because of yoga practice, good diet, meditation etc. alone? If long practice of brahmacharya gives superhuman powers then why don't we see people performing superhuman feats? Have you seen such a person (having superhuman powers), like your guruji or someone else?

Answer
1. Maya (cosmic illusion) causes cupid between man and woman that leads to sexual thought & activity culminating in union for production of offspring. Thus its purpose is to support the formation of a family and continue the race, not more. When sexual activity within marriage is restricted to such an objective (to beget a child or two) and then completely given up (so as to focus energies on attaining self-realization), it leads to happiness and well being. When the purpose of sexual activity is extended beyond for recreation, it leads to wastage of resources impeding the purpose of the human birth and eventually ends in suffering.

2. The most meaningful effect of Brahmacharya that has been personally experienced from my practice is distancing of consciousness with the ‘Anatma’ (non-self) leading to deeper identification with the ‘Atma’ (pure self) in day to day life.

3. Superhuman feats come within the realm of Anatma (non-self), are themselves nothing but an extension of Maya and hence unreal. The sincere Yogi is intent to establish himself in the absolute reality and has no interest in falsity. Hence mature Yogi-s do not bother themselves with purposeful exhibition of the same. What difference does it make to you or others if you fly in the sky like a bird in a dream? That much and not more is the credence of superhuman feats.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I see many smart (mentally) and beautiful looking girls who are lascivious. Doesn't lust / celibacy affect the minds and bodies of girls?

For boys, I do have observed that generally the boys who have clean thoughts are mentally smarter and vice versa. But for girls, it seems that they are unaffected by it.

Answer
1. Women experience a greater magnitude of desire and passion than men; they however also have a greater degree of control and restraint. Their energies are more invards than outwards as in the case of men. Maya which is responsible for this invard orientation plays a stronger role as regards their nature. This is how the feminine energy succeeds in drawing the male towards her.

2. Men tend to loose greater energy further to lack of Brahmacharya than women. In women, energy being inwards, though converted into sexuality stays within a bit longer. However, it is eventually dissipated just as in the case of men in course of time.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I've been masturbating since i was 12 years old. I'm twenty now. I used to do it one to three times a day. When i was 16 years old my addiction got worse and i started having depression, social awkwardness, lack of energy, digestive problems, sweating problems etc.

When i was 19 i started realizing that all these problems were caused by my addiction. I started reading many things about the subject, so i found out the truth about masturbation. Now i'm six months without porn and masturbation, though i still have some problems with fantasizing(I'm trying to overcome it). I had lots of benefits from my celibate, though i still think that i'm not totally recovered. My question is: Will i be able to fully recover from the harms that i caused to my body/mind/soul or my old addiction may have caused perpetual damage to me?

Answer
Sexual energy has to be transmuted into higher domains, whereupon it gets converted into higher forms of benefic energy. It cannot be held stationary. To sublimate the same, one should indulge in adequate physical, mental and spiritual activity on a regular basis. A life of Yoga as described in past answers helps attain Brahmacharya. Go through each and every past answers slowly to get a clear idea of the process. After a few years of such correct practice, you will be able to reclaim the lost state.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
dear sir,jai shri ram,i have a confusion regarding brahmcharya.the four purusarthas of human life describe sex as one of goals of human life.whereas brahmcharya is against sex.plz clear my confusion.why some yogis never marry or never do sex in life.isn't it against the four purusharthas.and can brahmcharya be followed with desire(kaamna) of having sex only with wife.

Answer
1. The purpose of the first three 'Purushartha-s' (worldly objectives) namely Dharma (as in work), Artha (wealth), Kama (desire) is to help man realize their limitation (as the manifestations of Maya) and understand that they cannot give happiness. When he realizes the falsity of these three objectives, he becomes fit to work for the fourth –'Moksha' through' realizing himself as the Atman (self) which is the only source of eternal bliss.

Sexual activity has not been specifically described as a goal in any religion or culture. It is incidental in one's life and not central. Only when man realizes its purpose and limitation does he become fit to bloom in the real sense.

To reside in one's Atman (self), as the self is Brahmacharya. Abstinence from sexual activity for recreation is one of the means to attain this residence and not Brahmacharya itself as wrongly assumed.

2. When a Jiva (embodied soul) needs to experience a 'Purushartha' to evolve further (by experiencing, realizing & convincing itself of the falsity of such an experience), it undergoes a particular experience. Else it does not. This applies to all Jiva-s, Yogi-s or non-Yogi-s.

3. When the urge for self-realization becomes strong, one eventually overcomes the desire for all forms of recreational sexual thought/activity. Then, the wife is looked at as a divine manifestation of the Lord and not as an object of sex. That is true Brahmacharya.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Sir,

I am a 59-year old male with just under 9 months unbroken brahmacharya. Recently I spent part of a day with a female acquaintance. We had dinner at her house and then went to a movie. Following the movie, we had dessert at her house. There was no romantic activity, but I admit I was very tempted. Both the woman and I have no children and have never been married. This woman has a very similar appearance and personality to my sister-in-law (my brother's wife). She also has the exact same somewhat unusual occupation as my sister-in-law.

This leads to my question. Is this fate or a test from the Divine? Many aspects of the situation suggest I am fated to be involved with this woman as my late life partner. On the other hand, I greatly value and recognize the tremendous benefits of brahmacharya and don't want to lose it. At this stage of my brahmacharya, I know I will eventually act on my desire if I continue to spend time alone with this woman.

Any observations will be greatly appreciated. Thank-you. R.

Answer
Involvement with the opposite sex outside the precincts of marriage for recreation as man/woman ends in suffering. The purpose of cupid is to lead to marriage, not more. Hence the association should be looked forward to if marriage (carried out at the earliest) is the genuine objective from both sides, after taking all other factors into consideration.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Namaskar Dear Dhananjay,

I am writing this query to you in the backdrop of the horrific end of a illfated girl brutally assaulted by misguided men under complete sway of animal lust.I feel sorry for the girl & more so ever for the men too who will now have to live under this horrendous sin's purview.

I have myself experienced the way lust affects our health,it is akin to slow death.

1)More than the men I think we need to blame the people/movies/serials/novels which promote objectification of opp sex & sensual pleasures & crucify saints who advocate rsing above them.
Those men just followed these ideas to the hilt,whereas so called civilised folks just suppress their motives in fear.Here I would like to ask what is the way out for people who have a huge reservoir of sexual energy but no guidance of a sage or wisdom.

2)Can you pls guide me on how to meditate on ajna/trikuti.
If i roll my eyes up after a few seconds I'm unable to keep them in such a state.I have heard shambhavi mudra(focussing b/w eyebrows) is very effective in stilling the mind & results are evident within a day.Can you pls elaborate on this mudra.
I believe success in meditation is a must for brahmacharya.
Personally I'm finding it difficult to choose b/w fixing by dhyana on anhata/ajna or kurma(breath).

Waiting in earnest for your expert advise as always.

OM-TAT-SAT.

ANSWER: 1. Every Jiva eventually comes to the path of true knowledge. Since one's real nature is essentially divine, the dross is eventually shaken off after much suffering. This is the purpose of creation.

2. Success in meditation occurs when certain past Samskara-s (impressions) & Vasana-s (tendencies) blocking the same vacate further to an honest Yogic lifestyle (with all the yogic practices described) by the grace of the Lord. Hence one should perform rigorous 'Sadhana' (practice) with unbroken Brahmacharya, keeping self-realization alone as the objective. There is nothing beyond one's Atman (true-self).

'Shambhavi Mudra' refers to looking at the tip of the nose with both eyes focused (with no other thought but that of the Lord) before meditation. It is not a must but optional. Some people find it useful to develop focus while others do not.

Sit in Padmasana or Sidhasana after Asana, Bandha, Nâdi Shodhana & Pranayama with the spine & head erect. Focus at the 'Thrikuti' (between the eyebrows) with the eyes closed. Assume the empty space which results as the infinite universe occupied by the formless & infinite Lord. Tell yourself – "This body, mind, Ego and the world of objects is unreal and false being Anatma (non-self). I am the infinite and all pervading, formless Atman no different from the formless & blissful Lord who occupies all space and time." Remind yourself of this true Atmic state every time thoughts arise or the mind wanders. Bring the mind back to this state free from other thoughts.

When such efforts are performed daily with a life of Yoga & unbroken Brahmacharya for a few years, the thought – "I am meditating" alone remains in this empty reality. All other thoughts disappear and one takes flight into this expanse. One is not conscious of his body here but thinks himself to be the mind (or pure Ego) in meditation. This is 'Savikalpa Samadhi'.

When even the 'I-awareness' (I-thought) disappears and consciousness completely merges into the Atman with no awareness of even the mind it is 'Nirvikalpa Samadhi' (absolute super-consciousness). This state of void cannot be described, for there is no mind there. It has to be experienced. It is pure Sat-Chit-Ananda. The mind merges into the Atman and consciousness withdraws completely from the Anatma (non-self) to merge into the Atman (pure-self). He will then neither be aware of his body, nor his mind or the surroundings. He cannot hear any sound or feel touch. His breathing itself stops followed by stoppage of the internal organs in course of time (though he does not know any of this). Then the Yogi occupies the entire universe and beyond in union with the Lord. He is in his state of true self, as the true self. The Yogi who reaches Nirvikalpa Samadhi is not reborn on the physical plane.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Dear Dhananjay,
Thank you for your prompt reply.

-->You have mentioned when yogi's consciousness completely merges into atman he becomes unaware of his body/mid/surroundings then what is he aware of or is this unconsciousness .
-->This seems to point to the fact that he just exists as a observer/knower without a choice/will.Seems like a restricted state to be in but at same time your words inspire me to get to it as it is free from wordly troubles.

Can you pls elaborate the nature of that state so that ordinary minds can get an idea & strive for it.I am aware that experience can't be put into words but still can you give a reply w.r.t the above points.

Answer
1. That infinite substratum on which are reflected the imaginary body, mind and the world is the Atman (reality). The Yogi is then the Atman alone in a complete state of awareness of the reality, as the reality. He is in the state of the self as the pure self. This concept cannot be understood without direct experience.

2. Where is the question of restriction in the state of liberation? It is the body, mind and the Ego which are the restrictions. The concept of free will exists only for these three images and not to the Atman who is beyond action & inaction, one with the endless ocean of Brahman

(Almighty). There is no restriction or limitation once these three are transcended. He is then the infinite Atman alone in that state free from blemish.

3. It is neither possible nor does it make any sense to try and describe that state, the Supreme state of states. One should taste it through direct experience that comes after much effort to the sincere Yogi by the grace of the Great Lord, that Supreme infinite being without a second who pervades all space, time & beyond.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I am practicing brahmacharya from a month. night pollution occur once a weak and also i feel the smell of semen during the nature call. how can i eradicate this problem. please suggest me.

Answer
Frequent wet dreams are an indication that transmutation is not being carried out properly. Indulge in adequate physical, mental activities and spiritual (meditation) on a daily basis. Wake up early and adhere to the correct Yogic practice as described in past answers. Go through each and every past answer here to get clear with the methods required.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear sir,

I am 18 year old male from Kolkata.
i was misguided from my childhood about masterbating & i continued this evil habit till i realized the truth.

I have started celibacy life from last 3 months influenced by practise of bramhacharia written by swami sivananda but i faced wet dream many times in this period.
i am also suffering from eye pain and brain fog, my wriste & knee bone is also thin.

now please help me.....please..... can recover my health if practise celibacy from now.....?

thank you.....

Answer
Go through each and every past answer and get clear with the methods required to succeed in correct practice. The methods to overcome wet dreams have been discussed. After a few years of correct practice, the body will restore itself to normalcy.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
My dear Dhananjay Sir

I am very happy about the God's play by introduce me with this site and You. By some month practice I noticed my prana become steady in all situations of my life. I'm in Kerala and I took Ayyappa vrata, One day at the time of having my food , one swami told me to avoid drum stick and ladies finger(vegetables) from food bz it effect brahmacharya, is it true? if so what is its reason

Sarwam Khalvidham Brahman

Vijith

Answer
1. Till the completion of a few years of unbroken practice, certain very strong base Vasana-s and Samskara-s remain active. These are powerful enough to break the practice and make the aspirant deviate. Certain kinds of vegetables (such as onion & garlic - predominant in Rajasic & Tamasic vibrations) have the possibility of stimulating such karmic impressions. For this reason, the beginner is advised to try & avoid the same.

However, it might sometimes not be possible to strictly follow this rule (due to the nature of work, non-availability outside etc.) At such times, the way out is to continue adhering to correct Yogic practice and consume whatever is available with the thought – "I consume this food for sustenance to carry out the Dharma bestowed on me by the Lord. OM".

2. Occasional consumption of drumstick or ladies finger for health will not cause any problem.

3. Once the aspirant becomes advanced and develops 'Rtambhara Prajna' (truth bearing wisdom) further to mastering 'Sabija samadhi' he will himself know what to eat and what to avoid through the power of divine intuition.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear sir

Recent days we heard several sexual cruelties against Women for 5 min sexual satisfaction, My doubt is that all pain to body is the reaction of our own karma, If so the girls who suffered the painful rape is the result of mistakes done in their past life or birth? what is real sexual education?

Sarvam khalvidham Brahman

Vijith

Answer
1. Every event that occurs in one's life is the result of karma. Without karma, a Jiva cannot get a physical body, be it of an animal or man. Both those who inflict violence and those who suffer, do so because of karma which is the result of 'Agnyana' (ignorance).

2. Making one realize the correct purpose of sexual thought/activity is sex education.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello!!!
I am a brahmachari now since 12mths. I always have wanted to practice Patanjali Yoga Sutras. Can you please give me an approach on how to apply them in practical life??
I have read it a hundred times but not getting that energy which is mentioned therein.
Thanks

Answer
1. Correct implementation of the 8-Anga-s (limbs of Yoga) starting from Yama-Niyama to Samadhi constitutes Patanjali Yoga. It is the most scientific approach to Yoga.

2. Go through each and every past answer slowly, absorbing the essence. Follow the suggested methods correctly without fail. With time, effort and devotion the implementation will occur automatically. Yoga is attained through experience and not merely by study.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir,
I am desperately in need of advice.
Sometimes I lose faith in myself and thus meet failure.
How can I develop strong self-belief?
Please help me.

Answer
1. One's right ends at effort; not more. Perform honest effort and leave the rest to God. Success or failure is not our concern. Even if one were to worry, it does not change the outcome of an action by the least. The best way is to strive & relax. That which is destined to happen alone happens. Let it happen. This is the correct approach

2. Take up the practice of a life of Yoga & Brahmacharya with devotion to God as described in past answers. Gradually, the fear & anxiety will reduce, leading to peace and confidence.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
If i don't believe in God, how can i motivate myself to do his Will?

i don't know where to believe.Monks of my religion (christianity) who have done miracles and became saints (like Monks Paisios) don't believe in past lives and say that it is the biggest trap of the Devil to make us relax and not strive for our salvation.If past lives are true how can a saint who has the Holy Spirit not believe?Therefore i don't know what to believe anymore....Or better how to believe,so that i am motivated to follow your advice and generally any spiritual advice.

Answer
If there is a lack of belief in God, then simply base your efforts upon belief of your own self which you certainly believe. You asked this query, you are now reading the reply, you will do various things in the course of the day and you will finally enjoy sound sleep at night. So there is an entity which is present as the prime mover in all these activities. That entity is called as the Atman (pure self or soul). It is the real you. It is not the body, mind or your sense of Ego, for all these wear out when that prime moving force leaves the body on death. So it is something beyond these. Focus your efforts on finding out who this 'pure-self' or your true self is.

Do not worry about past births or future births. Let them exist or not exist. Do not worry about what a saint has to say or not say. Simply strive to realize your true-self, eliminating all that which cannot be the self, knowing that the self is beyond any need, suffering or limitation. It is infinite and in a state of eternal bliss, without the least blemish or defect. It is beyond pain or pleasure and rock steady.

To achieve this, one has to gradually develop dispassion over everything non-self which includes the Ego, mind, body and the world comprised of objects. The self alone should be sought after by discounting everything else, knowing these to be fluctuating and hence not the self, for the self is unwavering, completely steady and in perfect equilibrium. Anything which changes or wavers cannot be the self. Hence the mind, its emotions and the Ego which constantly waver are not the self. Simply strive to find that Supreme self within you which is free from all limitation or change. As you progress this way, the doubts will gradually taper away and the self alone remains. You can then call it God, self or something else. The names do not matter.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Does abstinence from masturbation for a long time result in transmutation of sexual energy? Is this energy wasted when wet dreams occur?
I have read that preserving this energy for longer than a year makes the man able to bear biting colds, and ever observe incredible improvements in his health. Since you are yourself a practitioner of Brahmacharya, can you vouch for these facts?
Also, can you please tell me how to make sure wet dreams do not occur at all? I do not practice asana and pranayama. Is there any way to prevent total loss of semen without practicing the above two?

Answer
1. Loss of Veerya results in energy loss. Lack of such activity prevents that energy loss. Practice of Brahmacharya (and not mere abstinence) through transmutation results in energy gain. Wet dreams drain some percent of this energy.

2. Yes.

3. One completely gets free from wet dreams after becoming an Urdhvareta Yogi.

4. If a Jiva is advanced enough to directly take up the practice of 'Gnyana Yoga' (Yoga of self-enquiry) and succeed in attaining Samadhi (thereby eventually becoming an Urdhvareta), he can forego Asana & Pranayama. Else he cannot.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,
In one of your previous posts you have mentioned that vajroli kriya is an automatic reaction of body upon continous brahmacharya & that actual drawing up of ejaulated semen is a trick to keep unworthy at bay.But in the tantric texts siva states that he is giving this technique out of love for his devotees & that even if he enjoys a hundred women he can retain the bindu by absorbing it even from females' yoni after it mixes with feminine red energy.

Such is vivid description that it seems almost a valid & genuine technique.Also some other texts mention how tantra/hatha yogic studenta practise this by absorbing milk/honey & other things before being adept at it's purpose.

If retaining semen is only purpose why ot enjoy world & retain it too.All this sounds very fanciful.Couls you pls explain why such descriptions are given if it is a false technique.True advise would have saved lakhs of genuine souls who have otherwise taken this to heart.

Answer
1. Brahmacharya has been stated as the first pre-requisite for Yoga Sadhana by Lord Siva. Where then is the question of liaison with a hundred women? Just as one absorbs the essence of food consumed and excretes the rest, one should absorb the essence of scriptures and discard the rest. The wise do this much wisely, while the fools do much more foolishly.

2. It is the law of creation that the absolute truth is hidden under the cloak of Maya. Scriptures are no different. These truths become evident only to those who see & understand from their 'Gnyana Chakshu' (eyes of Gnyana) and not to others who are not yet ripe & deserving for such knowledge. It is a mysterious and illusive world, this creation of the great Lord called Samsara. Hence once should attain 'Atma-Gnyana' (knowledge of the reality or self), whereupon disappears this illusive world. For this, one must perform rigorous 'Sadhana' (practice) with devotion to the Lord.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Dear Dhananjay,

I have heard & read in scriptures that a living entity's life can be measured exactly by the no. of his heartbeAts or his cycles of breath & that it is predetermined at birth.If it is so then how can practising brahmacharya strengthen a body debilitated by loss of veerya if it is anyways going to be ravaged by time & lead to death.

Although there are cases of yogis living for hundreds & thousands of years,I know that they have achieved this through suspension of their breath/heart-beat while in samadhi.

Dhanvantari says "Brhmacharya can UNDO all inauspiciousness"

Also you have mentioned in many posts that an urdhvareta acquires a divine & perfected body free from decay & death.If this is true then that body can't be brought to death by any disease or decay but only by some other accidents right?

ANSWER: 1. You want to travel to another city. There is a road leading to this city. There are a few other roads that lead elsewhere. Which road will you choose? You will choose the road that leads to the destination. Suppose you say – "What happens is destiny and hence pre-determined. I will choose any road I like" and take the wrong road that does not lead to the destination; what happens then? You do not reach the place you want to but find youself somewhere else. You will then have to take the trouble of coming all the way back and restart your journey from the start point.

The purpose of the human birth is to know one's self. Till this objective is not attained, one has to strive rightly and alertly on the right road. He cannot say –"I will take any road". If he does, he alone suffers, for that is what is pre-destined as per destiny. Brahmacharya is the road that leads to the self. Hence the wise take to this path and practice sincerely.

2. The 'Divya Sharira' (divine body) attained from Yoga is immune to bodily illnesses and not karmic illnesses, for none can side-step karma. It only means that such a person does not suffer debility, disease or death from the effects of ageing of the body, unlike others. It does not mean that his body will not show the normal signs of age such as grey hair or hairfall. It only implies that he will be free from the debility or degeneration that comes further to degradation of the physical medium as in case of the non-Yogi.

That which is born has to die. The body has a beginning and hence also an end. When the karma that the Jiva has to work through the physical medium out gets over, the body is discarded. It is the Atman (self) alone that is beyond birth and death. It alone is the truth, the self and the absolute reality. The body is only a temporary covering which gets free from debility further to attaining the 'Divya Sharira' which rests on the foundation of Brahmacharya.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Dear Dhananjay,

Thanks for prompt reply.

But I still don't seem to get the difference your'e trying to point out between a yogi & a non yogi's body.Is the difference only a matter of time.If a yogi's body also will show normal signs of age that is debilitation only right?

Also in point 2 you have said body becomes immune to bodily illness but not karmic illness.Aren't all illness' source karmic only?

Surely there would be a fundamental difference brought about in an urdhvareta's body as is energy is flowing upwards & a neophytes downwards.

An urdhvareta should be at peak of strength & power??

Answer
1. In one who has attained the 'Divya Sharira', degeneration stops. When all the internal, external organs and senses are in perfect order, it might be said that there is no debility. Graying of hair or hair fall is a sign of age and not debility as these do not affect the health or strength of the person (as is seen in some bald, grey haired people who are extremely strong and in perfect health). Hence the signs of age are not necessarily the signs of debility, just as the signs of debility need not be due to age (as in young people who are weak and lack vitality).

2. Every occurring that the bodily undergoes is finally the result of one's own karma. Hence any illness is the effect of karma. The term 'Karmic illness' here refers that those illnesses that are the result of surfacing of past karma that might date back to actions committed in the past or in previous births. The term 'Bodily illness' refers to the effect of some recent activity (ex. say consumption of unclean food which leads to a stomach upset) which is showing immediate result. Bodily illnesses are generally milder and last for a short time; while Karmic illnesses can be more severe.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Dear Dhananjay,

I sincerely feel that for any person wishing to dedicate his/her life for ideal of Brahmacharya all his/her doubts about creation ,dissolution & purpose of existence should be vanished.I don't think many people understand the sunconscious impact it has on everyone's resolve.

"As everyone views sex act as natural & therefore harmless or worth indulging in"

For simplistic minds faith/naive answers will suffice for time being but if they were ever to be questioned deeply their faith can falter taking their Brahmacharya with them.

1)Let me add first that our scriptures & all our saints say that naistik brahmachrya should be taken up if one is able & worthy of it.Only in case that is not possible the aspirant may pass through grihastashrama understand the nature of desire & carnal pleasures & eventually overcome them.If this is ideal advise then a)how are we as a species supposed to perpetuate?Are their any better methods available than through physical means?

or
b)Do they imply that perpetuation isn't at all necessary(many saints & seers have been naistik brahmacharis).

Pls note I am talking about idea/suggestion here & don't expect a reply like this won't ever happen as everyone can't adhere to strict celibacy.

2)Having heard the argument that purpose of sex act is only to bring forth heavenly offsprings I would like to ask if this is so a)Then why is it that we stop at 2 or 3 we may continue this good work exponentially.As it is happening now.

b)The loss is even experienced under honorable intentions for a child,if it were a divine act nature would have strengthened it not weakened both he parents.In animal kingdom many species die in sexual act.

All in all the above questions just boil down to these:

-->Shuld we be essaying a part in perpetuation of this samsara or is it not required?

Pardon me for this lengthy questionairre but I seriously feel that with most intelligent humnans not able to follow Brahmacharya it is a question of inability to reconcile their views on it rather than required will.

ANSWER: 1. Divine will, past karma and present tendencies decide all things including the practice or non-practice of Brahmacharya. What is required is to follow one's Dharma and leave the rest to God. Marriage has nothing to do with Brahmacharya. One takes up that mode of life which is in line with his tendencies.

2. If divine will deems it necessary for a Jiva to produce offspring, then it occurs. Else it does not.

3. You do not decide anything. HE decides and you THINK you decided and acted, whereupon you have to bear the fruits or lack thereof. Hence relax and adhere to your Dharma without worrying about the fruits. This is Yoga.

4. There is a reaction to every action that the physical body undergoes and hence the weakness further to the act which draws life energy. This is the law of creation which we accept without questions.

5. You do not have a choice as to whether you will take part in the experiences of Samsara or not. What you will do and what you won't is governed by a Supreme power which is running the show. Hence limit yourself to correct practice of your Dharma (attainment of the self) and be at peace.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Dear Dhananjay,

In points 1,2,3 & 5 you have repeatedly said that " Divine will, past karma and present tendencies decide all things" & " You do not decide anything. HE decides and you THINK you decided and acted" & similar ideas.

Does this also mean all the rapes/massacres/inhuman acts happening are also divine will?

What I still don't get is if divine will/cause & effect is decidng everything then what is the role of my effort or to say "adhere to my Dharma ".I don't understand where to draw the line here.

Basically pls help me understand where does the jurisdiction of my effort cease & divine's begin?

Answer
1. Action and reaction governing any two people is the result of their individual karma. The purpose of working out of karma in Samsara is to help the Jiva overcome its false sense of individuality (Ego). Divine will acts as the ordainer behind every such occurance for evolution of the individual and society at large. Nothing happens without a reason.

2. Your efforts exist as long as the 'You' (in terms of the individual ego exists). In the Yogi who has gone beyond this sense of Ego or I-ness, no Dharma or Karma exists. Till such a state is not reached, one should adhere to Dharma. You will know where to draw the line after a few years of genuine and honest practice of your Dharma coupled with a life of Yoga & Brahmacharya based on God devotion. Till then, perform honest and sincere action in the right direction as suggested, without worrying about the fruits.

The meaning behind these facts cannot be properly understood by theoretical study or lectures. Even if the matter was to be debated and discussed throughout life, it will not be of any use. It is only in the classroom called Life that the reality is understood through the lessons of experience taught by the invisible teacher called God. A life of Yoga & Brahmacharya aimed at self-realization helps one pass this exam in flying colors.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi, thankyou for all of your time and answers, I have spent a good deal of time reading what you have written (and other sources) and it's been tremendously inspiring to me. Your description of the path and Brahmacharya is one of the truest and clearest I have read.

I have only recently begun my practice of total Brahmacharya just recently and I am already feeling the amazing effects. I have a yoga practice recently established (and I am practicing www.dadabhagwan.org), but only recently got out of a relationship and decided to practice celibacy.

I have tried some fasting, but I have found that it has only made me irregular in energy levels, motivation, digestion, and I feel as if it indeed burns up the Ojas (forgive me if this is not the correct term). I'd like to establish regularity in my diet, as you prescribe. With fasting, I will fast and eat healthy for a while, then eat something bad. It becomes a yo-yo effect. I would like to progress towards a moderate sattvic diet.

I live in the U.S. and do not have an Indian background, so I am not terribly familiar with the items you recommend for the sattvic diet. I have eaten rotlis, daal, and vegetable curries at the satsangs I attend locally, but I do not know the best approach to integrating these into my own diet. Can you send links to recipes? A lot of the recipes for daal I find have onion,garlic, etc. I'd like to make sure I am making the right thing. I am also not terribly familiar with some of the dairy items you suggest (buttermilk, curd, etc.) I guess some more info on the diet for someone unfamiliar would be very helpful! I get a strong impression that the dietary regime is very satisfying and complete without being overly stimulating.

Also I go to school everyday and generally am out a lot of the day, is it okay to cook double for breakfast and pack for lunch? Then dinner I can eat at home, Or pack vegetable/fruit smoothies or salads in my bag with some ice packs.

My other question, is my career is such that there is a large chance mess up this schedule in the coming years. My karma thus far is to be a musician. This requires late hours, erratic schedule, etc. I do not desire this schedule at all, but it may be inevitable. What to do? I will keep the regulated schedule now while I can (school is not erratic, so I can keep regular hours) but upon graduating it may become difficult. Will the energy of brahmacharya eventually allow me to sculpt a career that has hours to my liking if I stay strong? I am flexbile, and I am much more invested in my spiritual success than artistic success.. but I am worried that my karma may control me and send me into bad company, irregular practice, eating late, etc.

Thankyou

Answer
1. If an Indian menu is not accessible, take to an available diet that includes wheat products, dairy, pulses, legumes, lentils, green raw veggies and fruits with the schedule described in past answers. Try avoiding onion, garlic, eggs & meat in the initial years as the beginner is vulnerable to their stimulating nature. The advanced Yogi is not much affected by the type of food, while the same cannot be said of the beginner.

2. Yes.

3. Simply adhere to honest and uninterrupted 'Sadhana' (practice) to the best extent possible as described in past answers with complete surrender and devotion to God. This is as much as one is required to do. HE will take care of the rest.

If you do this much, both spiritual success and artistic success will spring forth in course of time.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: sir,i am following brahmacharya for 1.5 months but facing night falls,please suggest some method.
secondly sir please tell me want i will achieve after 3 months.

ANSWER: 1. If the complete Yogic practices mentioned in past answers are adhered to correctly, nightfall's will gradually reduce and disappear when the Yogi becomes an Urdhvareta. Go through all the past answers to get a clear idea of the methods.

2. After three months of unbroken Brahmacharya, the aspirant slowly starts to realize the value of continence and wishes to stay there longer.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: thanku for d reply but sir in YOGA I only know kapalbhati,anulom vilom,shirshasana(upto 75 °),hip bath(as read in swamisivananda book) sir please tell me are the things sufficient to stop night fall and sublimate energy into ojas.. also sir please tell me if push ups will b helpful to stop falls and sir i tried mula bandha but it caused constipation because i was underinstructed on internet about this(mulabandha)

please help
ॐ तत् सत

Answer
1. Haven't all the methods required not explained in past answers? Every technique required has been described. Apply these methods correctly with devotion to God. It is evident that the essence of past answers has not been absorbed. You will know the right approach when this is done.

2. Mula Bandha is not the cause behind constipation.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Im not alcoholic but since I started to practice bramacharya and started some concentration or meditation practice, then after the meditation time I feel very alive with the need to drink something, I started the need of the taste of beer, and alcohol. Before I didnt feel the need. Is alcohol worse than lack of bramacharya control? Do you get benefits oto practice bramacharya and drinking or better to stop totally the drinking? Some religious or spiritual systems like Catholics or some Buddhists permit this.

Answer
Various past impressions and tendencies surface in the course of Brahmacharya. Some may even appear totally new. None are new. All are a part of the hidden karma based on Samskara-s (impressions) & Vasana-s (tendencies). One should ignore these and strict to correct practice as described in past answers. Then, after a few years of such honest & unbroken effort, the practice becomes inseparable and a part of life.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Dhananjay,

I hope you are doing well. I wished to know about the energy lost in one ejaculation. How much mental/physical work could be done with the energy one squanders in one ejaculation? Also, does fasting also result in energy loss?

Thank you,
Amit

Answer
1. Where is the need to quantify the energy loss? Is it not evident further to experience? Of what use is it to use numbers, figures or units of energy? All this is nothing but a waste of time. Let go of these fancy theoretical questions and invest your energy in Sadhana (practice) with devotion to God. All doubts will then start to disappear in course of time.

2. Information on the effects of fasting has been described in detail in past answers. It is evident that those answers have not been carefully gone through and the essence not absorbed. Yoga Sadhana is not a dish that is available in a fast food restaurant. One should seriously apply his heart & soul and strive to realize the truth using the required means.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I am approaching only day 25 of Brahmacharya. Up until this point it has been smooth sailing, now I remember why past attempts have been hard (I tried about a year ago). I feel irritable, weak, borderline sick, stressed, the body feels tense and unbalanced, lack of appetite etc. Last night I had the first nocturnal discharge but I managed to prevent all but a few drops, which was a success.

Could you explain the nature of this karmic sickness, why it happens, and what the best course of action to take? Should I rest? Or continue practicing/practice more?

Also, I was a vegetarian for a year, and everyone kept commenting on how weak, small, pale I looked. Then I started eating some meat again, adn I felt stronger, and people said I looked better. Now a vegetarian again and I feel this weakness returning. Is this a result of past abrahmacharya? Why is my karma making it hard for me to be vegetarian? Why do I feel stronger with some meat? I definitely eat enough food, hunger is not an issue and the diet is balanced and has a lot of nutrients... plenty of protein,e tc.

THankyou for your time

Answer
1. Karma eventually surfaces . When it does, that reaction which befits the action that caused the karma occurs; be it illness or something else. The only way to vacate accrued karma is to continue uninterrupted practice till Enlightenment.

2. Meat is conducive to physical strength but not to mental control in case of the beginner Brahmachari who is trying to get a foot hold into practice in his vulnerable state. Hence the food restrictions in the earlier years. Past tendencies always try to revert every now and then till the substratum of such karma is not burnt out through Sadhana (practice)

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

1-Just thinking of sex brings lost of energy right? I feel I lose flexibility even with thinking of sex. 2- Ive read from a book of Swami Sivananda that if you can have complete chastity you can obtain litle by little the siddhis after months and years of unbroken chastity. Is this true? But at the same time there is not one who could levitate or bilocate like many saints from Hinduism or Catholic orders.

Answer
As mentioned earlier, purposeful and unwarranted application of Siddhi-s for show is a waste of resources and can even lead to unwanted karma. Hence mature Yogi-s do not take recourse to the same.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Dear Sir,
I am a 35 year old married male.My wife is 2 mnths pregnant and the gyneac has advised us to refrain from having sex for at least next 1 and half year.I am totally ok with thz bcoz its in the interest of my wife and my future kid.
My query sir is what can i do during thz phase to remove the thoughts from my mind,while i sleep with my wife,is any special meditation/clothing required.
Kindly advice Sir.
Thanks With Regards
Akshay Sharma

Answer

Go through each and every past answer on the techniques of adopting Brahmacharya and apply the same. If one's efforts are honest and sincere with devotion to God, the new lifestyle will gradually stabilize.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Dear Dhananjay,

Read your post 'Travelling, importance of facial and body hair'
Dated:'12/10/2011'

Would also like you to provide your views on below obsevations & questions as you have mentioned in detail importance of hair for human spiritual efforts.But ways to protect them & regrow them wasn't discussed much.I also understood from above post why especially it was forbidden for women to cut their hair.

-->It has been scientifically proven but largely ignored that the byproduct of tesosterone DHT is mainly responsible for male baldness.Toady hair replacement & restoration is a multi billion dollar industry.But still knowledge isn't widespready as to how sexual indulgence & subsequent hormonal discharges verily burn this body.Could you shed some more light on this topic for benefit of ignorant souls.

-->Also can you provide any tips for balding & bald folks to regain their crowning glory so that it may add to their self cofidence as well as aid their sadhana by effectively absorbing & trapping energy inside.Can absolute & perfect brahmacharya regrow hair?

I understand this isn't a hairloss forum,but atleast if folks are given some sort of motivation & knowledge about harmful effects & signs of sensory indulgence it may strengthen their resolve.

Thanks.

Answer

1. Brahmacharya & Yoga lead to excellence in health and well being. Hence hair fall that might occur due to poor health is avoided. Most hair fall leading to baldness is however genetic and generally unavoidable. It is natural for the body to shed hair based on genetic and certain other factors. When these genes kick in, the related hormones also activate causing hair loss.

2. One should perform Sadhana and leave the rest to God. If nature decides that hair is no longer required for the individual, shedding starts. It is neither possible nor necessary to take extra measures to retain hair if nature has decided otherwise. A yogi should first learn to accept reality knowing that the body is impermanent and will eventually fall apart. Efforts should target overcoming attachment to the body and not the reverse. The aim should be to reach the Atman (self) and not worry about hair (non-self).

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Hello,

Is it too late to start a practice of strict bramacharya combined with zen meditation when you are 28 years old? Can you still renew your body to a younger state and obtain some benefits with those practice combined after 28 year old? What is the limit of age to obtain benefit.

Thanks

ANSWER: Age 28 is conducive to obtain the full merits of unbroken practice. While there is no age limit to practice Brahmacharya, unbroken practice is best started before 32~34.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Thanks, then it is not to late at all.

Then ive read a book some time ago about mental communication or telepsychismor mesmerism. It gave an example of a person who is in front of you in the street, bus or whatver place, but not looking at your direction. Is says if you could concentrate on his neck and say mentally: turn around turn around..etc, the specific person will turn around and look at you. It is like a thought implant in another person from distance. This can come with bramacharya with time?

Answer
Of what use is it to make a person turn around without communication when he can as well be addressed by speech or a gesture? Why take all that effort for an action which can be performed even by a dull witted person with a few words or a pat on the back?

Does such a power help you in any way to realize your self and know who you are? Does the power reduce your karma & suffering even by a single bit? Does it help you overcome slavery to the senses? The answer is in the negative. Who displays Siddhi-s and who see's them being displayed? It is the Ego which wants to display it, the Ego in another which see's it and the same Ego which derives some pleasure out of it. All through, the Atman who is empowering the Siddhi is forgotten. The false Ego alone is the center of attraction. So it is another game of Maya and not of any use. A man with Siddhi-s but unaware of the knowledge of the self is no different than another without the Siddhi in terms of evolution.

Siddhi-s cause trouble and burden the aspirant with more unwanted karma if used injudiciously for display. They strengthen the Ego and push man deeper into ignorance. One should first learn to check his thoughts, get his mind under control and eventually overcome the mind itself to reside as the Atman (pure self). When one doesn't know who he himself is, of what use is it to influence others?

The saints who were known to have Siddhi-s did not show them for display or fame. It was incidental that these powers were noticed in the course of some beneficial action performed by them for humanity at large.

An incident in the life of Gautama Buddha:
The Buddha was about to cross a river when he saw a Yogi sitting on the bank of the river in meditation. Upon seeing the Buddha, the Yogi came to him and told him that he had been practicing austere penance from the past 25 years and had many miraculous powers.

The Buddha asked - "What have you accomplished by such practice?" to which the Yogi said - "I can walk on this deep river without sinking. I have the power to walk on water". And so saying, he crossed the river, reached the other bank and walked back to the Buddha full of pride.

The Buddha said - "Is this your accomplishment from many years of practice"? Why, anyone can cross the river if he paid a coin or two to the boatman who takes people across. All these 25 years of your practice are not worth more than a coin or two".

In case of the honest Yogi, whatever Siddhi-s are destined will dawn by themselves at the right time, based on one's Prarabdha (destiny) that unravels in this life. They come and cling by themselves and not the other way round. The wise do not run after these mirages called Siddhi-s but ever keep their minds at bay to overcome the Ego that is blocking the Atman (self).

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
1. I do 6 pranayams holding breath for 32 seconds. Can I increase the number of pranayams to say 10 or should I try and increase the number of seconds to 40?

2. I do the buddhist method of meditation of concentrating on the breath (tip of the nose), as I find it easier rather than concentrating on the point between the eyebrows. Your thoughts please.

Many thanks for your guidance,
Ganesh

Answer
1. 40

2. Any meditation is fine as long as it eventually leads to withdrawal of the consciousness from the Anatma (non-self) to the Atman (self). Any practice which does not lead to this objective is not meditation for self-realization.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

Thank you very much for giving the public knowledge on brahmacharya.

With God's grace only, I have not voluntarily spilt my seed for almost 9 months. Positive effects have included a slightly clearer mind and a significant decrease in anger.

However, my tiredness levels have stayed the same (if not increased slightly) and I feel less motivated to carry out my duties (i.e studying). I am 19 yeras old.

My question is are these negative effects normal for brahmacharya and will they be going anytime soon or get worse.

Om Namah Shivaya :)

Answer
Adhere to the practice for a few years till it becomes a way of life. One will eventually reach the stage where Brahmacharya is no longer an effort but natural and effortless. Till then, ignore the reactions which eventually subside.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi,

Some yogis use to drink their own urine. They say it gives extra energy to their meditation. is this true?

Thanks

Answer
1. 'Amaroli' (the practice that bestows immortality - used to denote the health giving benefits of the Yogi's urine when consumed)

2. It is preferable to drink one's own urine after a few months of Yoga & Brahmacharya as this would have purified the body to some extent.

3. When consumed, it is best between 3~4 A.M early in the morning. The beginning and ending of the stream should be discarded and the mid-stream urine collected in a glass vessel and drunk.

4. First start with a few spoons and gradually take larger quantities with each passing day.

5. Those who practice this technique should avoid excessively salty & spicy foods, meat, liquor and fatty substances, just as in the case of Yoga & Brahmacharya.

6. The mid-stream urine is called 'Sivambu' (The divine water of Lord Siva).

7. It will gradually root out many diseases & problematic conditions in the body and bestows excellent health and well being. It is also conducive to meditation. Rubbing the urine on the face and body before meditation makes the skin healthy. Some people experience better concentration.

8. After the Yogi becomes an Urdhvareta, he no longer requires the practice.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjaya,

I have been following your advice (bhramacharya, chanting, asanas, meditation etc…) for a few months now and see a positive change in myself (better concentration, high energy levels, better stamina, good sleep, significantly reduced anger…).

I had a few questions:

1. One of the effects on the body is that I feel more cold now. Else, I am in sound health. Is this normal?

2. Like me there must be many people who have a job and a high pressure career. How to handle political pressure in these environments? Many a times to survive or retain ones position (which ensures material safety in terms of earning capacity) in an organization we need to also indulge in counter politics. Knowing that this is not right, we still have to do it to ensure that you survive and that the people reporting to you also get what they rightly deserve. How to solve this dilemma of what is right/wrong and what needs to be done to survive and prosper for the sake of the family? Do we not have a duty to them to provide all the reasonable comforts possible? This pressure often can be quite debilitating. How do we manage this?

Thanks for your guidance.
Ganesh

Answer
1. Ignore the initial bodily changes. All these settle down after a few years of practice.

2. If one stays true to his expected duty and turns a blind eye to everything else at work with a calm and peaceful attitude, he is not affected by his surroundings. Neither is it possible for others, however they may be, to affect his well being.

To honestly carry out that which is expected of one's position on the career front is duty. Actions carried out to attain this objective are right. If this much is done with honesty and integrity as a service to God, everything eventually gets taken care of.

Why do YOU worry about prosperity or what YOU should do for the family. YOU cannot do anything. There is a higher power that is working within YOU that is the source. This YOU

(Ego) is however mistaking itself to be the doer, while that is not the case in terms of reality. This is the cause of stress and strain. So learn the art giving up the sense of doership and hold on to detached performance of your duty without worrying about the fruits. The more one gets established in this technique, the easier life becomes.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Dhananjay,
My name is Sahil and I'm 18 years old. I've read through most of your responses and have become pretty self-assured regarding my aspiration toward celibacy. However a few questions linger within my mind and these questions are the only hindrance towards strict Brahmacharya.

1. I have wasted my seed throughout my entire adolescent life. Ever since childhood I have been inexplicably addicted to sex. My fantasies started as early as 6 years old. I'm aware that this is a rare case and my past karma are the cause of this. Masturbation became a daily habit throughout adolescent years. I am now 18 years old and have started practicing celibacy for the past month, although there were three physical breaks within this period of time. I'm just wondering if I have exhausted my "vital prana" which is said to be released around 18-25 years of age. Since I have released excessively, is it possible to exhaust this prana before the time it is due? It may be a stupid question but i couldn't find the answer anywhere.

2. I strongly believe in the power of love between a man and a woman and I intend to marry a woman that I love. Naturally, my mind will begin to desire the expression of this love through sex. I've read some tantric yoga techniques such as "root lock" which is the obstruction of semen release via tensing of the various PC muscles. Will this help preserve sexual energy? Perhaps not as much as strict celibacy but I would just like your opinion on the matter.

3. I've read that when love is shared during sex, energy/prana is actually increased between the couple. Is this true?

Thanks for taking the time to read my questions. An answer would be much appreciated!
God bless.

Answer
1. Simply take up the practice of correct Brahmacharya with devotion to the Lord. Everything else will eventually fall in place. Our right ends at effort and not the fruits. Those will be given by HIM at the right time.

2. This is the time for you to get established in Brahmacharya. It is not the time for thoughts on marriage and related issues. So adhere to the correct practice with devotion to the Almighty. That bridge will then get crossed by HIS grace when you come to it.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
If the effects of sexual downfall are more severe after one attains some level of celibacy, then why is celibacy encouraged for a while before one gets married? as after marraige one will naturally fall into the indulgence state most often.

Answer
A person who has tasted the benefits of Brahmacharya will eventually realize the limitation of the sexual act and hence does not get the mind to squander away his resources, unlike the non-Brahmachari.

Learning to limit sexual activity for its rightful purpose of procreation is also one of the purposes of the results/aftermath that one experiences after the sexual act. Experience is the lesson that is learnt in this classroom called Samsara to help man realize the true nature of his self and the falsity of the non-self.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
My dear Sir

I heard from Great master Swami Nirmalananda Giri Maharaj while He speaking about Kenopanishad " Our old scriptures are not adviced to decorate only our stoola sharira like wearing of Rudraksha, kashaya etc etc , Scripures are pointing out that sannyasa must be done by our swapna sharira or Sushma shariara by feeding the mind good thoughts, brahmacharya etc, It is not good for a Swami doing all Godly karma only when he is in Jagrat at the same time he have bad thouths or things when He is in swapna, "

At the end of His speech He said that ," Swapna / Sushma sharira is most powerful than Sthoola/ Jagrat. An incident in swapna can make more impact than if same thing happens in jagrat"

My question is that if swapna have power than jagrat, Karana Sharira have more powerful than Sushma/Jagrat ?

Saewam Khalvidham Brahman

Vijith

Answer
The Atman which is the source of all power (being an integral part of the Almighty) is the only reality and the only truth. It alone is one's true self. All the other Sharira-s (bodies) are only coverings of Maya around this truth and hence false. So getting caught up with the Sharira-s is like taking the images which appear on the cinema screen to be real. How does it matter what image appears or disappears when all these are after all images and not real? It is the screen alone which is real and it alone remains unchanged, how much ever the images change.

So why worry about this or the other Sharira? Simply work at realizing yourself to be the Atman and not anything else, following which everything else falls in place and the human objective gets fulfilled.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjaya,

Further to the link below:

http://en.allexperts.com/q/Celibacy-Abstinence-3564/2011/5/Pranayama-Yoga-Brahma

What yoga practice do you advise for children (say pre-teenagers/early teenagers) so that they excel in studies and other co-curricular areas and become more focused and determined?

Many Thanks,
Ganesh

Answer
All the Yogic practices (including chanting of 'OMKAR' in Padmasana) can be gradually applied on children above 5 years of age. Pranayama can be practiced once they cross 8 years of age. Children established in Yogic practices find it easier to take up Brahmacharya on reaching adolescence.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I started bramacharya practice for the first time since around 4 weeks ago. I practice at night third eye concentration too for 45 minutes or an hour. But since I practice those methods, the first week I felt very depressed and with the thinking that everybody was against me, really. After two week until this present day, I feel restless and act as if I have family or personnal problems and very irritable for small things. Some people I know even asked me if I started using some type of drugs because im (Jumped). If bramacharya brings you respect and harmony then why to me it brings like tense situations? Even I dont sleep many hours and feel my mind heavy even when im not thinking anything. Why this happens? In the case of sex desires, they are almost non-existent until now. I need your help since you are experimented in this, not me. Thanks

Answer
1. Who asked you to indulge in third eye meditation all of a sudden? Meditation is the last limb of Yoga and not the first. Is it possible to jump onto the top of a high rise instantly? One has to gradually climb the stairs one at a time. This is what can happen when the correct procedure is not followed. It can lead to dangerous consequences.

2. Follow the methods suggested in previous answers properly. Do not simply jump to third eye meditation. You will not succeed. Meditation occurs gradually and naturally over a period of time when all the other 7 limbs of Yoga are practiced and made into a way of life. The body and mind react to every action and need to be directed into Yoga in stages. One should follow the prescribed methods meticulously. Go through each and every past answer slowly and get clear with the methods required to succeed in Brahmacharya.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

For example if something go wrong in your life can you pray, invoke or make offering, so spiritual entities comes and change other people's mind to help you receive some benefits? I mean by practicing virtue or trance you connect with spiritual entities whoever they are. This is how mediums connect to them.

Thanks

Answer
1. When your own mind is not under control and you lack the knowledge of who you yourself are, of what use is it in trying to influence other's minds? Such actions will only harm your well being and push you deeper into ignorance. Hence first know yourself.

2. There is only one, infinite, all powerful being of which your own Atman (self) is an inseparable part. Nothing else exists. All other so called, divine beings are powered by this infinite Superpower, which alone is worthy of worship. One's Atman is no different from this Supreme entity. Realize this truth, following which all that has to come shall come.

Question
Hi Sir.Greetings !!.I have stopped masturbating completely past 7 months.I felt very good as swami vivekananda (whom i believe very much) graced me to stop it all of a sudden. My frequency of masturbation in the past was was 5-6times/week but i could stop this suddenly and past 7 months I dont even get sexually attracted by any erotic image.I have been able to completely control lust even in my dreams!.Even in dreams I somehow remember swami vivekananda and all the lust is gone,so wet dreams very rarely. I know this is all because of god's grace. But I have horrible withdrawal symptoms to the extent that I was becoming a completely psycho. But somehow by praying God i did not succumb to my old evil habit. Ofcourse God has been gracing me.But recently its been happening that I feel God is turning away from me. Some unexpected things started happening in my life. I initiallly thought its because of my past Karma. I was an athiest earlier but past 3 years I do believe in God. So in all these 3 years God has been giving help but not completely.I somehow controlled my emotions thinking that one day God will completely lift me up from all my problems and sufferings. So i took this path of celibacy to be closer to God and also to stop damaging my health because of masturbation. But now past few days I feel that God is keeping silent and some of those sufferings are coming back in my life.I am getting frustrated.But to be honest I am not blaming God.I still Trust him a lot.But feels like my life is never gonna change.My karma will never leave me even though i keep praying God.So i became restless, agonised insomniac and all and today i felt anyhow i m going to end up with this suffering so why not masturbate atleast to relieve tension temporarily.I know it is wrong and will apologise God but I am going mad sir.I stumbled upon ur website n read that one has to gradually increase periods of celibacy.But what i did was I instantly stopped masturbating (wich prevailed in my life for 11 years).So is this extreme step causing me terrible mood swings ??. what exactly do u mean by gradually increasing period of brahmacharya?? .Do u mean one can cut down masturbation frequency gradually and then stop it or stop it altogether at once ?. what u meant was to keep prolonging the target periods ? in that case I know i have complete control.I do not need to prolong periods.but then y god is silent ?? I am thinking of masturbation only for this reason. is it okay if i masturbate today(aft 7 months)?? but will it bring any big curse ? i am already in depression.please help

Answer
1. Apply the correct methods of transmutation as suggested in past answers with the required Yogic practices & lifestyle. Vital energy that is conserved should be applied on constructive activity and cannot be let to stagnate. Correct methods aimed at sublimation will have to be eventually applied in course of time for unbroken success.

2. Where is God being silent? He has prodded you to adopt the correct Yogic practices through these warning signals. Take up the correct practice of Brahmacharya henceforth with devotion to HIM. All things will gradually stabilize.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello, how many opportunities do life or God gives you after you failed in your bramacharya vow?

Answer
One cannot predict the future, neither is it our business to worry about the same. Our right ends at honest and sincere effort at our Dharma (attaining self-realization through the work given by HIM). Hence simply continue with the practice, till it becomes a way of life and effortless. This alone leads to overall well-being.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
dear sir

Our semen contains so many sperms (jivatma), After many years of brahmacharya what happens to these jivatmas in our semen?

regards

Vijith

Sarvam khalwidam Brahman

Answer
Semen does not contain Jivatma-s. One particular Jiva enters a particular sperm (among the millions of sperm in semen) when conception is destined and carries out the process of reproduction.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Naman sweekar kare dear dhananjay,i have read from a relatively knowledgeable source that even kaivalya mukti isn't permanent but equals a period of 12 samvatsaras which literally runs into millions of years after which prakriti(which contains rarified energies of liberated beings also) dissolves into purusha & cosmic game starts also.I want to know your opinion on this.This sounds to me against sri krishna's vachana in geeta.

Answer
One should first reach that high state of 'Kaivalya' (self-realization), following which all these doubts get cleared by themselves. It is neither of any use nor productive to waste one's resources debating about things beyond 'Kaivalya', when the objective itself is far away and yet to be attained.

Those who rest in their self, as the self help others reach the same and do not indulge in fanciful talk about what lies beyond.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Some time ago I meditated in supine position for about an hour before sleeping, at night. I felt some pulsation in my knees and neck, at first. Remaining with my eyes closed during meditation, I saw suddenly like a light white in colour at the sam time I felt aspired upward, but I felt scared and stopped that. After that I put myself on my feets and when I touched my skin for about 5 minutes or little more the skin of my arms and was like the contexture of a snake (or smooth rubber) and I dont felt it was my skin, I could move fast. From what I experienced I think the best way to achive that is to let thoughts go for some time and just see without awaiting anything. Was this a trance or samadhi state? Did you have the experience of such states? Thanks

Answer
Such experiences are one among the many results of upward movement Prana (vital energy) during the initial stages. These differ from person to person and can vary from visions of light to feeling weightless etc. None of these is however Samadhi.

When the Yogi loses awareness of his body and surroundings and feels himself in the formless expanse of the absolute, that is Savikalpa or Sabija Samadhi (limited super-consciousness). The mind (I-ness) however exists here.

When even the 'I-thought' (I am experiencing this expanse of reality) gets dissolved into its source namely the Atman (pure self) or the Almighty, the real, non-dual Samadhi called 'Nirvikalpa Samadhi' occurs. Then there is no I, you or the world but only the infinite as the infinite. The Ego is dissolved into the Atman as salt dissolves in water. The Yogi who reaches this stage gets the first hand experience of his Atman (true self). He then knows who he is. This when practiced long burns the Samskara-s & Vasana-s which are blocking flight into permanent residence in the self as the self and leads to 'Mukti' (liberation). He is then a 'Jivanmukta' (liberated & fully enlightened while still alive) and has no rebirth after forsaking his body.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Sir,

I have been going through your column since a month and i am extremely satisfied with your answers for many queries. I don't know if this is the right way to present this Question- Is it advisable to practice yoga at home with out a Guru? how many hours do I need to practice in a day? I work in night shifts, please suggest a best time to practice yoga. Your quick response will be much appreciated.

I regret for any mistakes or inconvenience caused.

Regards,
Ravi

Answer
Take up the practice of Brahmacharya with the Yogic methods & lifestyle suggested in past answers during any two Sandhi kala-s of the day which are convenient to your work timings. Practicing all the said methods correctly is what matters & not the no. of hours. Within a few months of such efforts, the practice will become a way of life.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

What are the visions of ball lights in the air after or during meditation?

Thanks

Answer
As stated earlier, one should not invest much thought on visions and related phenomenon, for none of these are of any value. Overcoming the ignorance surrounding the Atman (self) alone matters and is the only thing to be sought after.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaste Prabhu,
1. I live in a large, cluttered, empty house with broken windows with my father. Although, I cannot declutter or renovate, we have servants and my father doesn't tell them what to do so the duty of task delegation fell on me. Although they wash clothes and utensils without prompting, cleaning seems too specialised for them. They just sit if not shown where to clean. The servants hate working and hate it when I correct their inefficiencies. This causes me anger sometimes but since I started making them work, I became progressively lazier and now Im in a slump. I have so much work to do but cant do anything. This inertia and anger (usually giving birth to pride and ego) make me have wet dreams. What can I do?
2. I cant sleep without a.c and share a room with my father to save costs. He drinks and has a mobile nearby. Is this is an impediment or..?
I am also fat. I wake up at 4, go to shiv temple, do puja, stay for aarti, chant savitri as prescribed and am familiar with a lot of your answers. Please treat this as urgent; my life is slipping away day by day (Im 20).
Thank you Prabhu.

Answer
Take up a life of regulated Yoga & Brahmacharya as suggested in past answers. Inculcate an active lifestyle with exercise/sports on a daily basis. Keep you mind pleasant with constructive intellectual activity. This will help set things right.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
should we use social networking sites like facebook and twitter while practising celibacy?

Answer
1. It does not matter whether one uses or avoids a social networking site, as long as the purpose does not supersede the tenets of Brahmacharya.

As long as such use does not trigger 'Abrahmacharya' in thought, word or deed, there is no problem. The beginner however may find this beyond possibility as he might have indulged in the use of social networking for purposes transgressing the tenets of Brahmacharya in the past. In such cases, it is advisable to avoid the same for a few years, till there is the dawn of enough 'Gnyana' (knowledge of the self) to provide immunity against the onslaught that the senses may face whilst using such sites.

2. The advanced Yogi who has come very close to realizing his self or has realized his self see's the one self everywhere and is unperturbed by anything else he may see or hear, knowing these to be nothing but illusory images reflected off his true self. Till the beginner reaches this stage, he should stay clear of activities that cause him to associate with 'Anatma' (non-self). Till such a stage is not reached, one should not rest but should be ever vigilant against anything that comes in the way of this goal, whatever the source may be.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaste Dear Dhananjay,

I have 3 questions as below troubling me.I'm not sure if these have been covered before & would please request you to enumerate on same if done in past again.

1)If a member of opposite sex is of righteous conduct/spiritual/dharmic & mumukshu along with being beautiful isn't attracion towards them justifiable?If not then how are we supposed to overcome same.I try to develop the motherly bhava towards them but it doesn't work all time.

2)I manage now with 2 to 4 weeks of strict brahmacharya without even an iota of slippage in word & deed with minimal transgressions in thought.But after say 2 weeks I start getting attracted to every beautiful face(not exactly lust but romantic love sorts) & frustration & dejection break my will.Please help on this I'm fed up of going in circles.

3)Also Swami sivananda says that practise of brahmacharya should begin before 32 yrs of age.But medical opinion says that semen production is continous in men till death.If this is so then why the age barrier,shouldn't some time later say around 50 if a man is relatively healthy can't he try to be an urdhvareta,maybe time required will be more than when young.

Thanks & waiting in earnest for your reply.

May all be atmanishta.

Answer
1. The purpose of attraction is to bring man and woman together for matrimony that leads to progeny. Those wishing welfare, happiness and eventually liberation limit its validity to this purpose within marriage and not more. Hence the appearance or nature of a woman is not a reason to let attraction develop into something more serious.

What is the source of the seen beauty? It is the Atman or the Lord and not the body/mind. Hence those wishing enjoyment of such beauty should strive to know their Atman (self), following which endless beauty and bliss become one's residual state. Strive to know your self which is the greatest and most ecstatic source of bliss. The beauty of the most beautiful woman or the pleasure of sex cannot equal even a fraction of this bliss.

2. If your Sadhana (practice) is honest, consistent and full of devotion as described in past answers, you will eventually overcome this vicious circle by HIS grace.

3. What is your objective? Is it correlation of modern medicine with Yoga Sadhana or is it gaining knowledge of who you are? Do not waste your time & resources on theoretical queries which are of no avail. Focus only on that which is required to realize the self, setting aside all other hypothetical discussions. All these queries will get answered by themselves at the right time if your Sadhana is correct and consistent.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir

I want your blessings bz I will start my matrimony life as soon as possible if God wishes, I have some doubts regards the following:-
1) How we can express our wants to have spiritual life to newly wedded wife?

2)Which type of food we have to consume for reduce the heat occured from Moolabanda?

Om Tat Sat

Vijith

Answer
1. Continue with the honest practice of Yoga Sadhana as described in past answers with devotion to God. Do not plan anything but simply leave the responsibility on God. That which has to happen naturally will happen by HIS grace. If this much is done with devotion and surrender, all the right things will happen at the right time and your future wife will understand things in course of time.

2. A balanced satwic diet as has been explained in past answers should suffice. Soak the scalp with warm coconut oil before retiring to bed (twice a week) at night. Cover the pillow with an old towel and let the oil soak into the scalp overnight. Wash the hair in the morning through a head bath. This will drain excess heat.

May the Lord bless you & your future wife with a happy and peaceful married life which supports the attainment of the self.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello sir,
I haven't yet properly practised celibacy before. Only recently did I get to know it in detail. Even though when I look at my past self, I see that I've actually been close to have had practiced celibacy. That so cause of my disinterests towards sexuality. However very recently have I met a boy whom I dearly have fallen in love with. With him in mind for the first time I actually felt a desire to truly be with, in my 23 years of life. I've had fantasized about him sexually as well however that was not related to a voice from within but a wish to love him in every sense whether spiritual or physical. Now that I know the concept of celibacy clearly and in better detail...even though I wish to practice it (have been meditating previously as well) and don't feel it as a necessity to love him on a sexual front, I wanted to know if having the feeling to love (pure and unconditional as how I think I have for him and without mentioning sexuality as a part of love .. or would that be untrue?)+ gratitude that I met him and feel connections with him (past or spiritual). Would it be wrong or a distraction for me into the celibate life that I wish to follow?
PS: so far he has just been my best friend and doesn't feel anything for me in return but i still can't help feel that my souls follows his soul and feels unconditional love or at least learns a lot from his soul that I see so clearly. Which unfortunately even he fails to see perfectly so far but his actions radiate his soul energy clearly :)

Also, I wish to adopt children in future. Such decisions are not restrained from a bramhacharini life, or are they ?

Answer
1. That which is termed as love in layman's terms is essentially the result of past karmic interactions or attachment. True love is universal and is experienced only upon self-realization when one see's one's self in all beings and all beings within one's own self.

2. Interaction with the opposite gender on a man-woman basis outside marriage is not advisable either for the Brahmachari or others. Unless marriage carried out at the earliest is the genuine objective from both sides, it is best avoided to prevent further unwanted karma and suffering.

3. If adoption is destined, it happens. There is no restraint as long as one shoulders the responsibility in a mature manner.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
sir, wet dreams can be as dangerous as sex because after 7 months of braham charya during that time i had wet dreams for almost 10 or 12 times but it is not that harmful but 2 days earlier i get onther wet dream and i lost my all power and i’m hating my self and i’m filling that i have nothing left in my life.how can this loss be recovered. i thought i will not get married because for vow of brahamcharya but now i'm totaly lifeless.i got so much respect from other peoples because of my brhamchrya.everyone admired me because they could see some greatness out of me but now they are joking on me on my back. wet dream happened because i sliped after eating on afternoon..so gopal sir i want to tell you there is huge chance that anyone can loose there all power on wet dreams also.i will again take brahamchrya and this time i'm sure that i will never let wet dreams come.please give me some advice about wet dreams i have no doubt that wet dreams can be as dangerous as se

Answer

1. Honest Sadhana with devotion to God is the only way. If such efforts are applied, wet dreams stop when the Yogi becomes an Urdhvareta by the Lord's grace.

2. It is not for us to decide for or against anything including marriage. Let go of the Ego which takes such decisions assuming doership and surrender to the Lord. This is the only way.

3. Wet dreams like all other things will stop not merely by one's efforts but by HIS grace. You cannot decide anything. Hence apply the right efforts, surrender to HIM and work without attachment.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Dear Brother,

After somehow stumbling upon your site a year ago, I have been trying to follow the life of brahmachari, atleast a life of not watching porn and not masturbating.

1) Everytime I maintain brahmacharya for close to 2 weeks, the urge becomes stronger and I start my porn habit again and masturbate, only to regret and feel ashamed. I feel that it is not me who is masturbating, but rather I am forced to masturbate from within. I have been involved with porn and masturbation for close to 16 years. I feel I am in deep shit now. I am unable to even genuinely call for God from within. Life is a pain. I experience the freshness of being lust free for a week or 2 but i go back to my old habits. Who and what can save me? I am very suicidal.

2) If karmic debts has been incurred, is there any use for prayachitta (atonement)? I have fantasized close to thousand womans who could have been sisters and mothers of others. With them in mind I have released my semen thousands of time. Is there any atonement for it?

3) With my situation, could it be such that God will not let me follow the path of brahamacharya because I have sinned sexually so much that I have to pay for my debts with a weak body, depressed mind and a hopeless future?

I can say that I am more or less a sexual addict (though I am still a virgin, I have not been sexually involved with a physical person) but my mind is a garbage.

I am in the verge of just dying sometimes. I feel hopeless and I can't feel the love of God.

People around me are so happy. I feel like shit.

I am going to turn 30 but I already feel like 60 years old man.

Is there any hope for me?

Answer
1. Past Samskara-s (impressions) & Vasana-s (tendencies) from past lives force the Jiva in a particular direction. The Atman (self) within is forever pure, being a part of the Lord. There is no way out but to burn and banish these past impressions through Sadhana. Every person has to forge ahead and get done with the same. Then, the bliss of the Atman shines, full of peace, contentment and joy. Hence strive diligently as suggested in past answers and apply the methods correctly. Do not get deterred by failure. Gradually increase the periods of Brahmacharya. From now on you will persevere this way, following which the grace of the Lord shines.

Suicide is not the solution, as the Jiva gets further burdened by the immense negative karma that comes from taking one's own life and will be placed in a much worse condition in the next incarnation. Are you looking for much more karma? Face the situation bravely through Yoga Sadhana and surrender to God, you will accrue immense merit and improve by leaps and bounds.

2. Striving to realize your 'self' as the Atman through Yoga Sadhana is the only atonement.

3. It is not God who is coming in the way but your own karma and ignorance. God is forever with you, waiting when you will persevere to know who you are. Hence commence the same at the earliest.

Placing complete belief in these words, surrender to God asking him to show the way and persist tirelessly in Yoga Sadhana. This will help you overcome the problem. This is the truth.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

Is there difference between let say an Indian or Africans or Europeans or man and women if you cultivate spirituality? I mean why some countries produced spiritual beings and teachings and others no? Like Africa do not have a tradition of masters at least they are not known. Some say Yoga is for hindus and not fit for others. Can you explain the differences by cultural development or races?

Have a nice day

Answer
1. People occupying different evolutionary states exist in all races. Some races are known for people of a particular kind of temperament while other races have another set of traits. All these however are only the coverings of Maya around the Atman (pure self) which is beyond caste, creed, color, race, gender and specie. The pure self within all is the infinite soul which is beyond these ramifications of Maya and no different from the Lord.

Even in the Bible, the very same truth has been dealt with. The biblical statement "I AM THAT I AM" - EXODUS (Chap. 3) exacerbates this truth. It means that the self itself is the Lord and no different. All religions directly or indirectly lead to the same objective. There is one God and the self is no different from HIM.

2. Yoga is for all those who want to realize the non-duality of their self with God. It is for all those who aspire to know their self and attain to their true state of being. Those who work diligently in this direction to know who they are are Yogi-s, be they of any race.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

I really need your help

That which has to happen happens ...

what then is the purpose of free will (if it even exists! ...)

because sometimes we are faced with huge dilemma regarding the righteous thing to do in many facets of life we encounter ...

We are faced with situations in which moral convictions seem to come in way of our practice ...

What is to be done then ?

continue practice regardless ?

Is not causing harm/suffering to others the supreme duty ?

or just following the seemingly righteous thing to do ...

What really is our dharma or duty ?

Especially regarding the decisions on the path the divine will wants us to follow ?

Answer
1. As long as the individual Ego (which itself is false) exists, free will (also false) exists as regards that Ego. In a 'Gnyani' (realized being) the Ego having merged into the Atman, is gone forever along with the imaginary free-will. Hence all his actions are the actions of God.

2. An aspirant striving to negate the Ego finds it tough to decide on the course of action as regards a particular life situation as he does not know what is God's will. At such times, the way out is to try perform that action which seems the most right and required within the tenets of one's Dharma with detachment. Then let us silently watch whether it is possible to proceed. The path in which the action proceeds will eventually be known which we accept without contest.

3. Our only Dharma is to know who we are. All other activities are incidental. When this is clearly understood, the aspirant applies conscious efforts to attain to his self and handles other situations deciding what is right action to the extent of his knowledge. If this much is done without desire for the outcome and with surrender to God, HE shows the right way.

Ultimately, what HE wishes alone transpires, try how much one may to do otherwise.

4. The correct approach is to neither apply effort, nor remain idle but to remain neutral as a puppet does in the hands of the puppeteer. The puppet remains beyond action and inaction in a state of complete surrender to the puppeteer. It is completely ready to move in any way the strings pull it. It does not have an individual will of its own. Such activity when practiced for long helps one get free from bondage and become receptive to the will of the Lord.

Such a man is the happiest man, for he has gone beyond desire and functions only under the will of the Almighty. He watches the world as a game, playing his part under the commands of the higher power. The actions of such a man are those of God and hence always right.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

While I have embraced the path of brahmacharya and fully believe it is the correct path for myself, I do not believe it is necessary for everyone. Without question, there are countless individuals who have fully awakened while being sexually active both within and without the married state. How can this be explained?

Answer
1. Through what means did you get to know about their state of liberation? How did you come to the conclusion? It is obvious that these statements are not from direct experience. When you reach that state called self-realization, you will know if those people were liberated or not. You will also know the need for cent percent Brahmacharya in thought, word & deed.

Freedom from the need for indulgence in recreational sexuality is one of the primary requirements to progress in the path towards knowing the self.

Realizing the self means being the self, as the self, in the self without the concepts of external & internal. Nothing but the self exists for such a person. Where then is the need for recreational sex which constitutes an external indulgence in the non-self which itself is non-existent in terms of the absolute truth?

3. An enlightened/liberated being does not have a need for recreational sex which constitutes the non-self. If such a need exists, it is not enlightenment.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
sir i am practicing brahmacharya,but i have some doubts please answer ..
1.you said that body of a brahamachari is like wirey(there is no fat) but swami vivekananda was not having fatless(wirey) body although he observed life long celibacy.
2.which among the trinity(brahma,vishnu,mahesh)is bigger or who is the supreme god.if we are meditating on a single power then who is that power among trinity.
pardon me,if i asked something wrong.

Answer
1. The term wiry has been used to refer to tautness and strength. It does not mean that the very constitution of the body changes.

2. All three are manifestations of the one Supreme power which has no name or form. It is by the virtue of that Supreme Almighty that the trinity function.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Brahman,
1) I am wondering why I should strive to realise the Self when the attainment of that state is merely absorption into the Reservoir Of All Bliss. Since material existence cannot taint the sage that has attained that Supreme State, what is the point of being empty, endless, ecstatic but without qualities (after liberation)? Doesn't the liberated being get involved in transcendental activities and selfless service that is not contaminated by the illusion of free will and false ego? Why should one strive to become 'unconscious' or even super conscious when there is nothing but Supreme Bliss to percieve? Isn't work cessation kind of boring?
2. Do we 'have the choice' to experience life on the innumerable planets and stars in the material universe?
3. Is Gayatri Mantra and vedic stotras beneficial for a Brahmin in search of Brahman?
4. Are the Gods real individuals that reprent Brahman?
I apologise for asking so many questions but please don't tell me to 'wait out the storm'. However, my respectful obeisances unto you and my kudos to your answer, even if it is not what I expected. I understand entirely how my perception is conditioned.

Answer
1. If you attain to your self, this query will not arise. Who is asking this query? It is the non-self, for the self does not have any questions. Who thinks -" Why should I attain to the self?" It is again the Ego (non-self). So it is a state of mistaken identity. You do not know who you are. Despite being the eternal, all knowing, omnipresent and infinite being, you are identifying yourself with who you are not and have fallen into the illusory trap of the finite. Is this not reason enough to know yourself?

It is like a man who has memorized the map to a particular destination and makes statements of what exists and what doesn't along the way without actually having tread the road. The reality is that knowledge of the paper map does not even come close to a fraction of the experience of actually travelling the road and experiencing the sights in person.

First realize your self, following which you will come to correct conclusions as regards the state of the realized sage from direct experience. Do not fall prey to reading descriptions about that state from written material and fool yourself with more ignorance in the hands of Maya. What exactly that state is and what such a sage does after reaching that state are to be known from direct experience. Indulging in random discussions about what one will do or not do after reaching that state before reaching it is like a 1 year old tiny tot making statements about what a person should do or not do after completing his masters and earning a doctorate.

2. Let us say the choice exists; who exercises the choice? It is not the real you but the false Ego. So this is another case of a king deluded to beggary and running after the pennies, not knowing that the whole kingdom with its innumerable treasures are his. Do you want to remain in beggary or attain to your true state of sovereignty by realizing who you are?

3. All mantra-s in scriptures are only meant to eventually lead man to realize the fallacy of the Ego. This is the only objective behind any spiritual or religious practice. Those who get caught up in these means itself and forget the end (of knowing the self) are only fooling themselves further.

4. Are you real? the gods are as real or as false as you. What is real about you? Is it the body, mind, Ego or something else which is empowering all these as electricity empowers the electric bulb? Your body, mind and Ego did not exist in your perception while fast asleep. So they cannot be real. Yet you existed, for you woke up and said - "I had sound sleep". That which existed even when all these were out of the picture is the real you.

That single Supreme force which empowers every being, animal, man or the gods just as electricity empowers various electrical and electronic gadgets is the self or the Almighty. The gods are those manifestations on a higher plane without a physical body but with a mind. You have a body, while they don't need one. One should keep his focus only on the Supreme power and not get deluded with forms which that power manifests itself with.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

I have a few questions related to the subject of ojas.

1) What is the role of ojas in third eye meditation or surat shabad yoga?

2) Is it true that by activating our third eye, we(as a soul) can travel to higher planes and ultimately reach god or God-realization to get out of the cycle of rebirths?

3)As you have mentioned in many of your answers that a person who practice celibacy for 12 years becomes Urdhvaretha and does not produce semen. But if semen is not produced than from where will he get ojas?

Answer
1. It is only by conserved 'Ojas' that consciousness rises to the 'Ajna' (6th chakra) resulting in successful meditation. When 'Bindu' (seed) gets steady here further to purification of the other Chakra-s after many years of unbroken Brahmacharya & meditation, the Yogi becomes an Urdhvareta.

2. The Atman (soul) is infinite and universal and no different from the Lord. He who travels to other planes is not the soul but the Ego which is false, being the effect of 'Avidya' (ignorance). Hence such travel is not of any value. Why should you travel somewhere when you yourself are an integral part of the Lord? Where can you travel when you occupy all space and time? You are in reality that one without a second. It is enough for you to know who you are. That is self-realization and your self itself is God. The Ego (lower self) with which you mistakenly identify is false.

3. It is evident that you have not gone through all the answers meticulously and have not absorbed the essence. Go through all of them slowly once more. Let it take a few months. Practice Yoga Sadhana honestly with all the suggested methods, following which this query will get cleared by itself.

First get established in unbroken Brahmacharya in reality for a few years. It then makes sense to discuss about the advanced state called 'Urdhvareta'. This should not become a forum for mere theoretical suppositions or useless debates about this state or the other. It is meant to guide people in the direction of 'Brahma vidya' (knowledge of the self) which is to be gained from experience and practice alone by the grace of God and not through intellectual debates.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
NAMASTE SIR,
1.How to take formal vow of BRAHMACHARYA?
I am 19.I am scared and i don't trust myself,I had many breaks previously,every time I break,I apologize (BUT THE APOLOGY IS NOT GENUINE) and i promise GOD that i won't break again,but same thing happens and I don't feel guilty anymore...
Has my appetite to meet GOD over?I have lost,lost and lost and perhaps,forever.I am not committed anymore.But I don't want to quit.
I have lost all faith in myself.
2. Is anger,greed,depression,over-talking,tension,stress,fear,crying,gossips a break in brahmacharya?sometimes anger,random erotic thought,greed arises randomly.
3.How should my attitude towards others be?Can i develop the attitude of being reserved,not talking to anyone unless necessary,can I? HOW ACTUALLY SHOULD I DEVELOP MY ATTITUDE?
4.Sometimes erotic thoughts arises after having lunch or dinner,so can't practice mula bandha after lunch,what should i do then?
5.How many months of serious practice is necessary to make this practice very strong?
6.Should a Brahmachari have the heart of stone(not being affected by anything)? does sometimes feeling pity for someone(girl) lead to lust?
7.what is prana?how is it related to pranayama?
8. please also suggest something else(if necessary)...

thank you sir...you mean a lot to people like me who have LOST their IDENTITY and are seeking for help.

Answer
1. Are you implementing correct Sadhana as described in past answers with 4.00 A.M wake-up and all the Yogic practices twice a day? You know the answer. First let go of the Ego which apologizes and then again decides this and that and learn to stay in the self which is the source of your life. Do not take any vows for now but simply indulge in correct practice as described with devotion to God.

Who has lost faith in whom? It is your Ego-mind that has lost faith in its own self. Let it loose the faith, for faith in the Ego is the root cause of suffering. You now know that the I-Ego is useless and cannot do anything; that a higher power which is the true self is the source of life and all other things. So surrender the Ego to the self/Lord and simply carry on with your practice.

2. All these arise and are indulged in by the Ego. If you mentally practice to remain still in the self, all these will vanish by themselves.

3. Let go of the 'I' which has attitude. Do not make any effort to develop this or some other attitude. Hold on to the self and perform your Dharma (duty) honestly with detachment. You will then be natural and comfortable.

4. If these techniques are correctly implemented, erotic thoughts will gradually subside and eventually not cause any harm. They pass without much effort to the one who has learnt to hold on to his self and reminds himself of the falsity of the Ego. When all the source Vasana-s and Samskara-s have been burnt, they will not arise at all. So indulge in correct Sadhana

5. It is not for us to worry about how long. We practice till we remain permanently in the self, as the self without any distracting thoughts.

6. Who has a heart of stone? The real you does not have a body or mind. Hold on to that self and stay there. It is this wrong feeling that you are the body & mind that is the trouble. Let go of it. Then the act of helping does not cause any trouble, be it a boy or a girl.

7. It is again evident that you have not gone through each and every past answer and absorbed the essence. You will find information on Prana & Pranayama if you do so.

SUGGESTION: The general misconception among people reading these answers is treating this forum as a ready-reckoner where they get instant answers to their queries as one gets food in a fast food restaurant upon buying a token.

While most of the queries that a beginner faces have already been dealt with in past answers over the past few years, most of the aspirants do not want to take the effort of going through the same and absorbing the inner meaning. No wonder that people return with the same queries again & again. Brahmacharya for the attainment of 'Brahma vidya' cannot be had as one does other things using an instruction manual. All instructions, technical definitions and guidelines are only meant to familiarize the aspirant with the concept concerning the means and do not lead to Gnyana by themselves.

For that, one has to persevere for many years or even lifetimes in Sadhana as the case may be with devotion to God, constantly trying to negate the Ego. Patience is a very important virtue here. People practice two weeks of abstinence and want to know why wet dreams still occur, why they have not become Urdhvaretas or why the self has not been realized. They indulge in debates about how an Urdhvareta should function, why he should do this or why he does not do that. Let go of these theoretical and useless debates and stay true to honest Sadhana with devotion to God. If you absorb the essence of past answers and implement accordingly with much PATIENCE, it will be possible to gradually progress. Else, no amount of answering the queries will be of any use.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Hi Sir - I have a few queries as well as a personal request to make.

Today, after 18 months of Brahmacharya, I slipped. I masturbated.
While i have indulged in abstinence in thoughts, words and deeds during this period but i never practiced pranayams / asanas / bandhas. Also, i have never woken-up at the time that you have always suggested. I think that i was not firm in my conviction and as a result i slipped. During this 18 months period, my thought process underwent the huge change and i would like your help in understanding that :
(1) I have stopped believing in fasts, in deities, in astrology, in Gem stones, in various religious rituals & traditions. I don't know if this is the natural progression of thoughts because of Brahmacharya or was I turning into more "rationalist" kind of guy or was it the ugly ego
(2) Also, many a times i think, sin / good deeds / evil deeds are man-made phenomenon and this has nothing to do with "enlightenment" or "kaivalya". I think, it is more about taming of mind, letting off of desires,greed & lust. But i don't understand why do every religion of the world make it more complex, and we the people end up in religious dogmas. Also, most of the time, when you don't follow it, it gives the sense of guilt as well as a feeling that "my ego is getting higher and I have now stopped following the tradition / religion as well. I would be doomed". Is this the normal churning process that all of us needs to be go through.
(3)I have almost severed the contact with my friends, have stopped watching movies, TV, and for a better period of time I had also stopped reading papers. Recently I moderated my-self with reading news paper, watching TV (only new & sports), and surfing on net. But,today surfing on net, trapped me and i slipped. Sir, do you think that I over did it, and then got bored, and ultimately failed.
(4) Also, Sir, more i read about enlightened masters, their work, spirituality and other related stuff, the more i get confused. Did i over-stretched myself here as well
(5) Could you please also tell me how do I get away with my fear of lizard / mouse. This fear doesn't allow me to meditate / pray. Every time, I try my best to concentrate, this fear gets developed in my sub-conscious mind. Doing away with fear and timidity is the biggest concern for me.
(6) Sir, also please pardon me for being too naive, but sometimes I feel, the concept of "Kaivalya gyan" is "myth". And I feel, this is probably the reason that I am not VERY firm in my resolve, and precisely this small element of doubt is keeping me away from giving 100 %.

Apologies for asking too many questions but this time I would like to make more valiant efforts.

Could you please also "bless" me and give me some courage / motivation to come back even more strongly.

Thanks.

Regards,
Kalpesh

Answer

Indulge in the complete set of Yogic practices with the required lifestyle as described in past answers. This will help overcome the past Vasana-s and Samskara-s that block residence in Brahmacharya.

1. The Atman (self) alone is real, being not different from the Lord. Everything else is the non-self and hence unreal, as is the reflection of an object seen in a mirror. Hence one should not dwell in anything but the self. Except for belief in the self which is no different from the Lord, nothing else is necessary.

2. Religion is a rung in the ladder to evolution. As one climbs higher, things with form, name and attributes gradually disappear and the one and only self which has no name, form, gender, caste, religion or definition alone remains, for it alone is the truth.

By whom is the guilt felt? Find it out and remove that entity, following which both the guilt and the activity which led to it disappear.

3. Till all the past Samskara-s and Vasana-s that make one deviate from the Atman (self) are not fully deactivated, the chance for downfall ever exists. Hence one should indulge in one pointed Sadhana (practice) till the goal is attained.

4. Reading material on Enlightened masters does not not cause any impediment. The culprit is the Ego (that assumes various forms) which is to be killed.

5. Answer No.1 when correctly implemented will gradually help overcome the problem. It is lack of such Sadhana which has still kept the fear alive.

6. Do not worry about what 'Kaivalya' is or is not. One should take one step at a time and experience things in person. This is what happens when one does not indulge in practice but goes on imagining what a particular state is without direct experience just through bookish knowledge. When the time comes, you will know what that state is through first hand experience. For now, let go of these fancy thoughts and indulge in Sadhana.

You are walking on a railway track and you suddenly realize your life is in danger when you see an oncoming train approaching you at great speed, blasting its horns. What will you do? You will run out of the path of the moving train with enormous speed and force.

You should apply efforts to know the self with that same intensity to come out of the mire of 'Agnyana' (ignorance). Such should be the burning desire for liberation with no desire being higher. Then one eventually becomes the pure self by the grace of the Lord and goes beyond all desire.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello there, I've noticed that after sexual indulgence I have lots of pimples developing, that later on turn into scars, will being celibate heal my skin tissue? I know semen has tremendous benefits and heals every cell in the body, I just need clarification. Thanks.

Answer
When unbroken Brahmacharya (not mere abstinence) is carried out with all the Yogic practices described over a span of many years, the body and skin glow with pristine health and Tejas (luster). This will remove most such scars.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Pranam Dhananjayji

I am 22 years old and I am suffering from nightfall from last 4.5 years.
Please read my following short story...

I was very much engaged in masturbation from very small age but at age of 18 yrs I have been over masturbated. Thenafter at age of 19 yrs I felt of guity of my habbit and hence I stopped masurbating immediately. But after 2-3 months for not mastubating I started getting headache and thenafter nightfalls. For a continuous of 2 yrs I got nightfall 2-3 times a week. I had left all bad habbits and was diversed onto reading good books. I started reading bhagwat gita and many other such religious books and by that the duration of nightfall decreased to 2-3 times a month. But still lust has not been totally eradicated from my mind. Now from last month I am feeling impotent.
I had tried the practice of yogasana a very little bit in between because due to constipation(which arrived due to nightfall) I also can't practice yogasanas.

Can you please help me out.
Also please let me know can brahmacharya will cure impotency?

Answer
1. Why should you worry about sexual potency if Brahmacharya is your aim? Establishment in Brahmacharya leads to the best virility & potency for procreation after marriage. The Brahmachari need not worry about the same.

2. Apply all the Yogic practices as suggested in past answers with devotion to God for a few years. The problem will get resolved.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Sir,
Please accept my obeisance. What is brahmakar vritti? Is it kind of special bliss or feeling when one nears self realization? Does it go with the course of brahmacharya? What is the criteria for achieving it.

Answer
'Brahmakara Vritti' refers to that last and penultimate state of the mind before eternal and irreversible dissolution into the 'Parabrahman' (Almighty). Here the mind has lost all its 'Chitta vritti-s' (modifications) and has taken form of the absolute as a limitless expanse: 'Brahman'- Lord, 'Akara'- Form -- Meaning it has taken the infinite form of the Almighty who is beyond form, being limitless.

When even this state of the mind dissolves completely into the truth and there is no mind at all for ever, then the self rests as the self in its irreversible state of eternal liberation. When the Yoga for liberation is carried out correctly with unbroken Brahmacharya, this state is eventually attained.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhananjay Sir,

Hope you are doing great!

A small request- I want to practice Yoga and i am looking for a best Yoga Guru. I have read from your past answers that you are from India. I stay in Hyderabad- Andhra Pradesh. With your permission, I want to join as your student if you belong to the same place.If not please suggest some best yoga ashrams in Hyderabad with their contact details? Your quick response will be much appreciated.

Answer
Apply the methods suggested in past answers after going through all of them very slowly and carefully. Get clear with the methods of applying Asana-s & Bandha-s from a competent Yoga tutor if in doubt. Then apply unbroken Brahmacharya with all the Yogic practices. At the right time, the Guru will become known.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
sir,i want to know that whether chronic masturbation reduces acetylcholine,serotonin,dopamine and other neurotransmitters in brain which are highly recommended for concentration,memory,mental fortitude.

i have been traumatized by masturbation since age of 12,now i am

18, previously i used to feel that it made by body full of fatigue and made by spinal weak,but when i left it completely for 6 months,i begin to notice changes which are-improved memory less lethargy weight loss slowed hair loss

i want to know whether i am on right path and also about neurotransmitters.

Answer
Yes, masturbation leads to copious loss of such transmitters and many more without doubt. Brahmacharya increases their abundance thereby leading to overall well being and excellent mental & physical health.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi,

Please read this completely as I am really confused and badly need a solution.

The very day I started to masturbate, I also started to face the consequences. I started when I was 13 and soon I got a dark patch on my face that made me unattractive leading to rejection and loneliness. I resorted to the filthy habit and also drugs just to went out my frustration. Soon my face and my body was completely ruined and I became a weird looking guy. My back bone isn't erect and makes my upper body very slump. My eyes lost its brightness and my face lack luster.

Whenever I control myself(cant say control because I always try to control, but only at some times I succeed) I regain a bit of myself (luster and vitality) and the change is evident. This change starts to surface within a few days or weeks. But soon I turn back to the same old routine and lose all the progress. Its really very confusing how just a leak of semen made me lose everything. This has been my life so far and I have been longing for a love life ever since I was a child.

Once a very old women saw me and told me to visit Durga temple. I ignored it at that time. But nearly after 5 years I started to visit the temple and now I'm completely surrendered to Durga. Soon there were some remarkable changes in my life as my parents arranged for my marriage and the girl also started talking to me. Now, I'm completely taken down by her sweetness and her affection and I dont think about any other women.

Question 1: Since I had restrained from the filthy habit because of this girl in my life, I started regaining myself(my beauty and vitality). What bothers me is that once I'm married to this girl which would be in the next six months, I will have to engage myself in sex atleast to satisfy her needs. I'm afraid if this might lead to energy loss and make me the same old weird looking guy that I was all my younger days. Your opinion on this.

Question 2: Why is that when practically every one masturbates, I happened to face the immediate effect of my deeds. If it was after a prolonged time of energy loss thats understandable. But I happened to face the effects right when I started it.

Question 3: If surrendering to Durga completely made a girl walk into my life, does that mean my trauma is over.

Please answer these questions as you would for a layman or a normal grihasta and not a person seeking enlightment. Because I had longed for a love life for a long time and now I actually got one. I just want to make this permanent and live life happily. If i'm not wrong thats what Durga devi has blessed me with after I surrendered to her.

Your personalized answer would be really helpful.

Thanks

Answer

1. Practice honest Brahmacharya with all the practices as suggested in past answers with devotion to God. If your resolve is sincere, marriage will not prove an impediment. Let go of planning & worrying and surrender to Goddess Durga who will take care of these things. It is not for us to let the Ego worry about the future. If one holds on to the self with Sadhana, things take care of themselves by divine grace.

2. Masturbation eventually destroys. It is sooner with some and later with others based on various factors. Destruction is however guaranteed.

3. It means you should continue a life of virtue with sustained Bhakti (devotion) & Sadhana.

Your wish will come true if you apply these suggestions.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Hello Dhananjay,

I am on the path of celibacy. i am doing yoga regularly twice a day and i meditate for few minutes. Sometimes meditation is good and at other times mind stays distracted. My addiction to masturbate is decreasing considerably. Though i am not able to fully eradicate it.

So, i have 2 questions related to masturbation.

1) What shall i do when i get urge to masturbate, is there any kind of activity which one can do to take the mind away from it?

2) How to stop yourself in the middle of masturbation i.e the time between beginning and ejaculation.

My third question is related to Pineal gland(Third eye)

3) I have read on many websites that pineal gland plays major role in our spiritual progress. But it is highly calcified and becomes hard which is a very big obstacle in your spiritual journey. Is it true, and if it is, then please suggest ways to activate/decalcify the Pineal gland.

Answer

1. Continue with correct and uninterrupted Sadhana. Be patient and sincere. Keep the mind occupied with constructive work. Exercise daily without fail. The urge will eventually go away.

2. This query is invalid. You should not masturbate. You should reach that stage with effort and devotion to the Lord.

3. Do not worry about this gland or that gland. Your purview ends at the suggested Sadhana (practice). That will take care of all the glands by HIS grace.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

sir, i'm facing a problem which appeared in my life 4-5 yrs ago. there was an aunt of mine who i used to visit often, because she's been very nice to me from my childhood and her son, more than just a cousin, used to be my best friend. she always saw great potential in me and used to say that one day, i'll get a great job, as mostly everyone in family thought i was a bright person. then these years came, we moved to our hometown, despite aunt's pleas, from a metro city in which i spent first 14 yrs of my life. when we did, my life became a nightmare. i never failed a class before, but here i failed three times! i lost all friends, class teacher thought my failure can be a bad influence on other students, so she made me sit 2-3 rows behind all students, alone. seeing this nightmare had come to a standstill, i became paranoid and insane. my parents started to hate me and had put me on heavy medication. one night my father became so angry, he tried to throw me out of house. i learnt from some people that there's a sage who lives in a temple at the outskirts of town, i visited him. after looking at me for a short time, he told that i've been hit by black magic. everything started to become clear, as she was the only one who was against our shifting to hometown. Also, that same aunt used to talk about these kind of people(tantriks), plus whenever i came from her home, i felt more angry and irritated and she has some of my pictures, which she could be using. sir, now that i know its her who disrupted my life, what can i do to return her favour?

Answer

1. All events which occur in one's life are only different forms of unwinding karma. Karma is the result of one's own past actions. It is your own karma that is the cause behind the events that will unfold in your life. Hence it is not of any use to blame anybody. What is required is to indulge in correct Sadhana so as to wash out the remnant karma and be the Atman (self) which is beyond pain and suffering.

2. Strive to realize the self and do not think on the lines you are thinking. You should surrender to God and perform your Dharma which is to attain to the self. Let that which happens to the body or mind happen; such should be the belief and surrender in God. Then things fall in line.

Hence let go of these Egoistic tendencies and simply perform honest Sadhana with devotion to the Lord.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Dhananjay,
Hope you are doing well,
I got a query while reading your past answers.In one of the answers you said that "The best way to overcome fear, anxiety and mental weakness is to remind ourselves that we are not the doers of any action but God is. This body, mind, its faculties and the world are only the instruments through which the Lord works out his Leela (divine play)."

so my question is if God is the doer of all activities then why there is pain,sorrow ,fear in one's life,is this mean we are also responsible due to our bad karma and if we are culprit how can god be the doer.
Pardon me if my question seems irrelevant to you.
Thanks

Answer
Do you remain neutral without desire & attachment realizing that the Lord works through you while doing an activity? No. The Ego within you which is propelled by various desires assumes doership and performs actions to satisfy itself. So when you assume doership, you also have to face the resultant karma which might bring unfavorable reactions based on the nature of the action committed. Such doership assumed by the Ego to satisfy its desires is the cause behind misery and suffering

The correct approach is to remain neutral and let the Lord work out HIS Leela. Such a man does not commence any action for himself but does so only as a medium of the Lord. That which has to happen happens through his body & mind under the dictates of God. He does not do it for himself with any personal motive. Since the actions displayed by such a body & mind are those of God, there is no karma, for he is then not the doer, just as it is not the chisel which is responsible for the art but the sculptor.

In such a Yogi, his past karma (which he accrued with doership before the attainment of Gnyana) works out while no new karma is formed. Once the store of past karma is exhausted, he is liberated for ever.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
sir my age is 21 years and i was addicted to masturburation for past for 3 years and i m practicing brahmacharya but have high blood pressure(140/90) .

1.sir previously i used to perform sarvangasana but on internet it was given that people with high blood pressure should not do sarvangasana please tell me that can i do sarvangasana or upto what limit of blood pressure a person can practice sarvangasana.
2.can practicing brahmacharya brings blood pressure to normal?

Answer

1. The correct practice of Yoga & Brahmacharya always brings blood pressure back to normal limits in the course of time. If practicing Sarvangasana is causing any discomfort, omit the Asana and perform the others.

2. Meditation will also reduce the BP and help maintain a calm and relaxed mind.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Hare krishna Dhanajay sir, how is your sadhana?Hope very good.

Sir, my name is nabin and age 25years and 3 months old. Sir due to bad samskara I was addicted to daily musterbation from the age of 15 to 21. I always wanted be free from Abrhmacharya. Because from my teen age i knew very well Brhmachrya is essence for matrial and spiritual success. Sir, after completeing 10 months of Brhmacrya, I broke my vow knowingly and musterbated due to frustration. The reason was inspite of practising Brhmacarya for ten monts I don't have confidence to pass CA exam(IPCC) and failed exam 5 times. Sir you know CA exam requirs a lot of confidense,memory and concentration because it contains huge syllabus. Second reason is my friends,classmates and others who was scoring less mark than me achieved some successes in CA exam with out practicing brhmacharya.

And third reason is during this 10 months brhmacharya I gained memory and concentration less than my expectation. No doubt wet dreams reduced a lot.Before my break was 1 or 2 a month.

Sir now what to do? Above 3 or 4 prime reasons of my break after long practice. Sir please excuse me if you find mistake in my above presentation because i am not highly educated in english.

Sir kindly give me advice in which direction i'll spend my life. I can only try my best to follow your suggested direction. Because I cann't get success overnight. One last question that did i loose all my gained concentration and memory of 10 months of brahmacrya after this musterbation? One thing let me tell you you doing very nice job and helping us. May krishna bless you alot. Again please forgive me if you find any mistake in my presentation.

Answer

1. When you have spent many lifetimes accruing your present nature, how can you expect to change the same in a few months? It takes many years to annul past tendencies which stand in the way of achieving a goal.

2. First let go of your expectations. Expectations are the greatest impediments to any objective. One should perform his Sadhana as his duty without expectations. Be patient and continue with the honest practice without worrying about success or failure. Our right ends at effort. The results are not our concern. That is determined by a higher power which is running the show. In the course of time, you will progress in the right direction.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,
First let me thank you for the excellent service you're doing.

I'd like to know if continence has any effect on the male sexual organ (such as shrinkage) since it's being unused for a longer time? And I read Gandhiji's writeup in which he says sexual organ will start to look "differently" owing to brahmacharya.

And if so, does it cause any complications if one needs to break the continence and enter the householders life in future?

Please clear my doubts. Thanks

Answer
The sexual organ will be in a state of complete health and well being further to Brahmacharya and any complications which existed earlier get resolved leading to excellent health of the sexual system for reproduction.

Some changes in the nature of the sexual system occur after one becomes an Urdhvarethas and not before. This does not concern the aspirant Brahmachari who is beginning.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Sir,

I am a 59-year old male with 11 months unbroken brahmacharya. I work in social services in a very demanding position. In many ways I know the position is too much for me, too much stress, pressure, and overwhelming duties. On the other hand, the job gives me an opportunity to bring my weaknesses (insecurity, lack of confidence) out into the open.

A couple of days ago, I lost my temper with a client. I was so angry I was panting and trembling as I yelled at him. I also kicked a bag which held his belongings. Of course, I feel terrible about this. I immediately apologized but it was too late. The damage had been done. I feel almost unbearable remorse about this incident, as I am a professional and am supposed to set a good example for my clients. I am so ashamed.

I am aware that I have deep, unprocessed emotions, fear, and anger and I know brahmacharya is helping. But this incident has been a crushing blow. Any response would be appreciated. I really just needed to express what happened and how sorry I am.

Answer
Count to ten and walk at least 20 feet away from the place of anger when under the influence of uncontrollable emotion. A Brahmachari should always strive not to lose his temper. Anger leads to loss of Ojas & Prana and makes the person weak and prone to a break. It also shatters the nervous system and degenerates the entire body-mind complex. Various foolish and unpardonable acts are committed even by civil men & women under the grip of anger. This will in turn form irreversible negative karma that one alone has to suffer.

Adhere to the correct practice of Brahmacharya and continue the job with a detached perspective. One should play his part in the life-drama with temporary internal involvement as an actor does but with complete Vairagya (detachment). Then one slowly overcomes the weakness to succumb to anger under tough conditions.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

QUESTION: Hare krishna Dhanjaya sir,

Tanks a lot you answered me. Again if you find any stupidity in my question and presentaion please forgive me and rectify me.

Sir pious activity is only source for material opulence, hapiness and success.One in life time does practice brhmachrya or not, if he is destined for wealth,fame,beauty he will get with out brhmacharya. For example heros like salman khan, amir khan. They don't practice brhmacharya still they are enjoying material opilence. Brhmacharya accrues immense merit activity. Bollyhood and hollyhood star are indulging in so much in taking wine and illicit sex, How they were able to accrue merit karms in their past lives ?

In my mind a lot of change has been occured from my childhood. At present i don't have wealth,fame etc and facing difficulties with out progress. It means I don't have much corresponding pious activity. Because I am going through Rahu dasa which does n't give prosperous life. In kaliyuga results of activity accrues very soon. Sir I can tell I lost my vigour, character and spirituality in musterbation after 10 months of brhmacharya but I must have accrued merit karma during those 10 months. Sir my age 25 now. From this age if I practice brhmacharya for 3 or 4 years, in 5th year can I dream of those wealth,fame in my life Sir ?

2. Definately it is decided by higher authority appointed by god. Since result follows very soon in kaliyug.According to this can you please tell in 4th year of brhmacharya my dream will be fullfilled or not?

Because let me know Sir, my mind has undergone a lot of change during this ten months of brhmscharya. God knows How I spend my 10 months. 24 hours we have to fight to keep mentl purity in brhmachrys. It was very difficult in wrong environment like classes,street and station where todays girls not wearing traditional dresses.

I will try my best to continue my sadhna patiently along my CA exam from now. I don't know when my drems come true keeping in mind that musterbation and wstching porn is not a solution to any problem in the world.

Sir pllease ignore my stupidity in asking questions.

Have a good day.

ANSWER: 1. There are different kinds of merit. The merit accrued by spiritual effort to know the self leads to liberation while the karmic seeds accrued by other kinds of efforts to earn wealth, fame etc. lead to those kinds of results. Suppose a person works day and night with much effort and honesty to become a successful actor, he eventually becomes that in course of time. The direction in which one will strive is however predestined.

Whatever be the nature of one's work in Samsara, one eventually has to attain liberation if eternal happiness is desired. It is the purpose of this birth. Hence Brahmacharya is the foundation for any activity, be it material or spiritual. If these same people apply the tenets of Brahmacharya to their lifestyle, they will be more successful, happier, healthier and in peace.

2. It is not pious activity alone that leads to wealth and fame but hard work in that direction. Adhere to the correct practice of unbroken Brahmacharya to know the self and persevere in your field of work. All that has to come will eventually come.

3. There is no 'Kali Yuga' and no 'Rahu dasa'. All these concern the non-self which itself is false. Learn to let go of your association with the non-self and simply hold on to the self which is beyond form and time. To do this, you must put much effort for liberation with Yoga & Brahmacharya with attention on the Lord alone for years together with patience.

It is not woman who is the cause of trouble for the Brahmachari but his own Agnyana (ignorance) which makes him look at a woman with lust. The challenge of Brahmacharya is to be faced by all aspirants. That is how the Lord has made HIS Leela. It is only after much struggle that one reaches the state where he realizes that the entity which struggled itself was false and that he was the pure self all the time. That is the reason why the Lord has made these things so difficult; so that you realize the non-existence of that which goes through the difficulty.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Hare krishna Danjaya sir,

Thanks a lot , you clarified my doubts putting your valuable time. Sir I have some more doubts and confusion and presenting in the following manner keep in mind the extreme importance and glory of brhmacharya.

1st question-

Your sentence 'It is not pious activity alone that leads to wealth and fame but hardwork in that direction.' Sir does it mean both pious activity and hardwork together required to be successful in a particular direction OR in the absence of pious activity , hardwork with much effort and honesty is enough to be successful in a particular direction? I am asking this because you know at present I have only in my hand hardwork because I don't know how much pious activity I have done in my past lives.

In short to be successful in any field, both combination of pious activity and hardwork require OR only hardwork with much effort and honesty require ?

2nd question-

Sir does hardwork matter a lot or brhmacharya ? Because I have seen around me a lot sharp minded and intelligent student not following brhmacharya, still they keep superior brain.

Here what I can say hard work matters a lot. Definately they are putting most of their time in study with high level concentration and they remain very attentive in classrooms. But when recretion times come they using their time talking, joking and making party with girls. This is enviornment of Mumbai where I'm living.

Here I'm confuse . Sir veerya is directly connected with intelligence, sharp mind, concentration and memory. I'm surprising how those intelligent student are able to keep their superior brain spending time in abrhmacharya at the cost of veerya ?

Good afternoon Sir. Hare Krishna.

Ignoring my stupidity please answer me Sir.

Answer

1. Each give their own kind of merit. Performing one's Dharma without expectation is the correct path.

2. First stop looking at others. Look at your mistakes and correct them. What others do is not our business.

Finally, let go of theoretical queries and perform the suggested Sadhana honestly for a few years. Till one attains 'Gnyana' (knowledge of the truth), the ignorant Ego comes up with thousands of useless queries every minute. What is required is uninterrupted Sadhana and Sadhana alone. Nothing else makes any difference.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir, You say that whatever happens to a person is a part of his destiny. However if somehow we know before that something big and unpleasant(anhoni) going to come and we try hard to stop it from happening, can trying to stop something which is predetermined possible?

Answer
To whom do these questions apply? To the Ego & the body which are unreal. Nothing happens in terms of the absolute reality. Hence it is not necessary to try and stop anything willfully as long as one has surrendered to God. Neither is it possible to change the outcome of that which will happen. What is required is to follow one's Dharma and leave the rest to HIM who takes care of everything.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Hi Dhananjay Sir,

In one of your older posts, you have mentioned that Women too lose equal amount of energy as men do when indulged in sexual activity or through sexual fantasies. Now my question is- In general menstruation is normal phenomena in every women that occurs every month. How far it is true that they lose their energy when it is a normal cycle in their body? If so, What about a child when menstruating for the first time? Does it mean she fantasized someone or has indulged in sexual activity? How about a young widow who lost her husband is in a state of depression but still menstruate every month? How about Nuns who are dedicated to God for their entire life but still menstruate?

Yes..I do agree they face severe irritation, pain in abdomen during that period.But,I have also seen some cases where women visit doctors complaining about irregular periods which resulted in health complications and doctor prescribing medicines for regular cycles? How about health complications after Menopause stage? Please forgive if I asked you a stupid/Irrelevant question but your answer is very important to me or maybe many. Thanks much..

Regards,
Ravi

ANSWER: 1. Ageing is also a 'normal' occurance. Does one not become weak and degenerate by the process? The nature of the body is degradation. This is slowed down by Brahmacharya when Bindu (seed) is retained up in the higher region and menstruation/wet dreams stop after attaining to Urdhvarethas.

2. Menstruation starts upon attaining to puberty for procreation. It stops when the Yogi after much efforts becomes an Urdhvarethas and not before. Marital status etc. have no connection with the same.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Thank you!

My wife and me we both are thinking to practice Brahmacharya so thought of getting rid of these doubts from our minds.Please advice.

Little confused- Here man is conserving his Semen/Energy by strict practice of brahmacharya in thoughts, words and deeds on a daily basis. So, how would energy is conserved in women during such practice on a daily basis when there is no Rajaveerya released within their body cuz it is only released after sexual activity or fantasizing?

It means it is common that women tend to lose energy during menstruation until they attain the stage of Urdhvaretha? Can you please enlighten us little more on this? Thanks again!

Regards,
Ravi

Answer

1. Simply practice the suggested Sadhana for a few years without expectation and with much patience and devotion to God. It is not necessary to know any of these theoretical details. If the practice is correct, real knowledge eventually comes from within.

2. A part of the 'Raja Veerya' is lost in the monthly menstrual cycle which is the result of the downward flow of 'Bindu' that starts upon puberty. Even in the absence of lustful thoughts, wet dreams in men/menstruation in women does not stop as long as the downward flow of Bindu is not stopped & reversed permanently. That occurs only upon reaching Urdhvarethas.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Om
I am 21 yrs old. I have masturbated nearly 300 times in the past. I have been practicing celibacy for some months and I am facing night falls. Sir, my question to you is when I sit for dhyaan my body does not support me because it has become very weak. What can I do to help my body to become strong again and sit peacefully for dhyan. (2). My second question to u is can I actually follow celibacy?? I am having self doubts whenever I sit for meditation. Write now in depression.

Answer

1. Indulge in regular physical exercise along with the practice of Brahmacharya. Perform the Asana-s suggested in past answers daily without fail. In a few years, the body will regain its strength.

2. Yes, you can and you will.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Hello,

Do the practice of amaroli increase your sexual desires and if yes, is the practice dangerous for practionners and bramacharis? Is there any advantages to start it if you are able to restrain the desires?

Thanks

Answer
1. No

2. 'Amaroli' aids Brahmacharya & meditation. It helps increase 'Ojas'.The body recoups soon from weakness and debility and regains strength further to a few years of practice of 'Amaroli' which is full of nutrients. It is extremely beneficial till the Yogi becomes an Urdhvaretas. After becoming an Urdhvaretas, the Yogi no longer requires the practice.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Namaskar Dhananjay,
I'm a follower of you for many months now & have read almost all your answers on this forum.You have truly been my staring guiding light.But still I had several questions-

1.I'm now entering my 6th month of brahmcharya.In the beginning it was quite easy but as now I'm progressing it is increasingly becoming difficult for me to counter my inner urges.Also,in the beginning I did not practice yoga,pranayama etc. but after starting the practice,I think some situations are becoming more tempting for me as if I'm inviting them.Is this normal?What is happening?

2.In one of your answers you advised to read upnishads.I've bought a copy of a collection of upnishads but it is only in sanskrit & has no translation in hindi so I understand it very little but I like reading it.Is this reading also going to help me?

3.Is the 'Hare Krishna' mantra a modern mantra founded by ISKCON or is it also on par with 'Om Namah Shivaye' etc.?

4.If we do good deeds(punya karma) then can we negate(cancel out) our bad deeds(paap karma) or we have to bear the fruit of both the deeds?

Kindly spare me for my ignorance if I've asked it if it was already answered previously.

Dhanyawad
Sameer

ANSWER: 1. Practice the said methods honestly without fail. The efforts should be regular. In a few years, things will stabilize. The challenge of Brahmacharya is faced and won only through patience, diligent practice & with surrender to God.

2. Translations of the Upanishads are available at: http://yousigma.com/upanishad.html

3. Any mantra whose objective is to connect to the Supreme can be chanted. The Hare Krishna mantra is on par with any other mantra of this type and has existed from time immemorial.

4. You have to bear the fruits of both. Those who perform Punyam (meritorious acts) without the sense of 'I-ness' by surrendering all their actions to the Lord do not accrue merit. Such complete loss of I-ness or Ego comes only after self-realization. Till then, it is best to perform actions without the thought -"I am doing it" but simply realize -"HE works through me; I do nothing".

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Namaskaar Dhananjay,
Thank you very much for your help through the answers.I had this doubt still.The upnishad link sent was very very helpful.Still,if I read through the Sanskrit text of the upnishads,is it also going to help me in some form?

Dhanyawad
Sameer

Answer
Whether you read them in Samskrut, English or some other language is of no consequence. Applying the essence of the Upanishads in real life alone matters. It is practice of the said principles and practice alone which makes a difference. Mere theoretical scholarship is not of any use.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

As you know a lot about spirituality and virtue, can you tell what is the diference in effect between a physical bramacharya and physical+mental bramacharya? I tried physical bramacharya but still thinked of sex thoughts and I felt it was not very complete and if you think about sex too much it is like losing energy even without ejaculation of seed. But this is my opinion.

There are some yogis who practiced dual cultivation or tantric sex, so we can say they were physical bramachari without the loss of seed but not mental one. Is even thinking of sex divert your prana or chi energy to the genital organs and then you lose the energy even if you dont ejaculate? At what point is the energy lost?

Answer
1. Mere physical abstinence is not Brahmacharya. Mere physical abstinence without mental control also leads to loss of energy. Only when abstinence is practiced in thought, word and deed by diverting one's energy away from the sex center into the higher domains to know one's self does it become Brahmacharya.

2. Energy is lost from the very moment a sexual thought develops into desire & lust.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

QUESTION: Hello Dhananjay sir,I am 22 year old student.I have some queries regarding wet dreams and baldness.
1.I am following the path of celibacy,but i have wet dreams as one or two per week regardless of doing yoga and pranayama.Is it natural?How to avoid it?
2.Is frequent wet dreams cause baldness?
3.Do you know any yoga or pranayama to reduce baldness and improve hair growth?

ANSWER: 1. If the practice of Yoga with adequate physical, mental and spiritual activity is honest and regular, wet dreams will eventually subside. Hence continue with the correct practice.

2. Baldness is generally genetic and not due to wet dreams.

3. Genetic baldness is not preventable.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: My baldness is not genetic,so can you suggest any yoga or pranayama to reduce it,and hence improves hair growth.
Thanks.

Answer

Balding which is not genetic will correct itself further to the life of Yoga & Brahmacharya as suggested in past answers. Applying the methods of Asana, Bandha, Nadi Shodhana, Pranayama and meditation as suggested in past answers should suffice.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Hello Sir,

I am a 59-year old male who is today celebrating one year of unbroken brahmacharya. My most sincere gratitude for the support and inspiration your words have provided me. In this first year, I have noted a deeper capacity to surrender to my present moment experience which thus leads to increased emotional stability. What might I expect, God-willing, in my second year of brahmacharya?

Answer

1. Calmness of mind, emotional stability and overall mental control better after a year of Brahmacharya.

2. The body continues being cleansed of its toxins from Chakra to Chakra.

On the whole, one becomes more attuned and starts coming to terms with Brahmacharya as the natural way of life.

May God bless you with true Brahmacharya to know the self.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Is it because it is very hard to attain?

ANSWER: Because it is the most potent medicine on the disease called ignorance in which revels the Ego. Brahmacharya chills the spine of the Ego and makes it tremble. Once the Ego is killed though the required medication, that entity which found Brahmacharya terrible disappears and the Atman (self) prevails in the nature of peace, knowledge & bliss .

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Thanks, very good answer, I liked the sentence "that entity which found Brahmacharya terrible disappears". I remarked that when someone meditate but still think about lust during that day, there is not much concentration but if not think then there is real concentration. Ive read also that a real brahmachari or someone with no desire at all (very rare) do not fear anything even spirits are not able to effect him, is that true?

Answer
Fear is the effect of Agnyana (ignorance). It is a mental creation/imagination and not more. Since Brahmacharya gradually dissolves ignorance, thereby resulting in the blossoming of the truth, the established Brahmachari fears very little. Once complete knowledge of the self is attained through self-realization, nothing but the self exists everywhere; extending to infinity. The dream-image like world then disappears, though he physically sees it. What then remains to be feared?

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhananjay ,

I tried my best to be celibate from past 4 years.Apart from wet dreams,there were no voluntary falls.Last December ,Due to some bad sanskaras ingrained in me ,I watched porn & fell voluntary twice within 2 hours period.I didn't masturbated , but suffered heavy loss of semen.

After 1 or 2 weeks,I suffered from jaundice.3 weeks later when I recovered,I discovered sudden loss of vision in my left eye.After I consulted ophthalmologist ,He told me that I am suffering from retinal Detachment & need to underwent surgery to prevent complete loss of vision in left eye.

I underwent scleral buckling surgery for that.1 month later,Doctor told me it was unsuccessful.I immediately rushed to chennai & Sankara Netralaya treated it with type 2 (silicon oil is inserted in oil) surgery.

Almost 2 months have passed ,I can see blurred images through my left eye but cannot read from it.I didnot get any illness in past 4 years.

My question is:
1) Do break in Brahmacharya has anything to do with this very tough time considering the fact that doctors told me I have stretched retina from childhood & I was myopic child with 11.0D D lenses in both eye.To reduce lens power I also went laser lasik surgery in 2002.I am 28 now.

2)Please suggest me some exercises which I can follow to restore my vision or at-lest prevent any complications in right eye Doctors say I have high risk of developing cataract,Glaucoma & other eye disorders in future.Please help me in saving my eyes.

Awaiting for your response

Answer
1. Past karma works itself out through illness and disorders. These can be of any type and can affect any part of the body. Such effect of Prarabdha karma is unavoidable. The eye problem is the result of such past action.

2. Adhering to correct Brahmacharya will increase the chances of containing & reducing the problem. Conserved Veerya that is transmuted always improves eyesight. Perform the Yogic practices described in past answers. Do not exert to the point of discomfort. Meditate as often as possible. This will gradually improve eyesight in the course of time.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir, i'm trying to practice brahmacharya and yoga from 2 years. Now i'm suffering from insomnia, frustration and loneliness frequently. Please give me your valuable suggestion.

Answer
Keeping the body & mind occupied in constructive activity prevents loneliness & frustration which are the signs of an idle mind. Brahmacharya by itself has no connection with these.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Sir,

Yesterday I was riding in a train similar to a subway. The train stopped for a few minutes in a tunnel between stations. During this stop I was gripped with a terrible fear related to being locked in a closed compartment with no escape. I have experienced this fear many times on buses, trains, elevators, and airplanes. Not while riding in them but when they have stopped but have not opened the doors. It takes all of my strength not to go into a full panic. In this situation, I feel like I am about to go insane. Any suggestions on how to get through this situation?

Answer
1. 'Claustrophobia' (fear of being trapped in closed spaces), is common among many people and nothing to be worried about. It is an animal instinct carried over from previous births.

2. To the spiritually advanced man who has come very close to knowing the self, the problem vanishes, for he then does not identify himself with his body (which has been locked in) but has realized the infinity of his self as all-pervading and limitless.

At times like this, take a few deep breaths & simply go into meditation, realizing that you are the formless Atman (self) occupying the infinite universe, the one who cannot be contained and is ever free. That you are not the body which is insentient & limited. As such knowledge gets established and the Ego subsides, you will be calm and composed even if locked inside a box without the least fear.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Dhananjay,

Today I was reading a webpage in which Gandhiji told the importance of fruit diet in observance of brahmacharya...but many others were saying that only fruit diet is harmful so do you think that a person who is observing fruit diet with brahmacharya can live a healthy life while working hard in his daily routine work.

Answer
1. Gandhiji has NOT said anywhere that one should ONLY eat fruits and nothing else. What he advocated was eating fruits in some quantity on a daily basis ALONG with other staple food.

2. Day to day worldly activity requires a balanced diet that contains all the required nutrients. Merely subsisting on fruits is not possible for the common man. A diet as has been explained in past answers should suffice.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Brother Dhananjay,

I would like to seek clarification on certain points after reading through your article:

a) You mentioned brahmacharya is followed to preserve energy, which is needed for enlightenment. However, I have noticed that you mentioned that the energy we accumulate from brahmacharya must be expended through exercise. I do not understand this contradiction.
- On one hand, we are striving to accumulate energy for enlightenment, but on the other hand you are saying we should exercise to expend it. If we are going to waste energy by exercising, then how can we attain enlightenment?

b) You mentioned if energy from brahmacharya is developed in the body, it will become tamasic if not expended in productive things. How can energy become tamasic? Energy itself is meant to energize isnt it? How can energy that is not applied correctly make someone lethargic and weak?

c) What does yoga/hinduism says about lending money or materials to people? Is it a sin if we do not lend money to friends if they are in need, or is it just wisdom not to lend money to friend since its known the money will not come back?

d) I have heard the saying that God does everything. If we sin, doesn't it mean God is also doing it? If Ego does something thinking that it is the doer, then God can't be doing everything isnt it?

e) Why does God remain silent when we are committing a sin, like masturbation? If he is all powerful, why doesn't he stops the very action on the spot and save the person from committing a sin? Why let the poor being commit the sin, let him go through the consequences and bring him further to sin and extend samsara. Is God a saddist?

Pls excuse me if my questions are crude. But I believe they are valid questions which have been bothering me for a long time. Hope you could grant us with an insight.

Thank you.

Muthu

Answer

1. A beginner cannot apply all the conserved energy on meditation for Enlightenment alone. His Samskara-s will not permit it. Hence the energy conserved is used for various constructive activities which help strengthen the mind & body.

2. It is not the energy which becomes tamasic but one's ignorance which tends the body & mind towards tamas (inertia). Under such circumstances, the same energy works negatively.

3. If you do your Dharma correctly, you know when to give and when not to give. Help can be given to those who deserve the same and are hence eligible to receive it. Help, when given should be with a selfless attitude, not assuming doership, only to those who deserve.

4. The Sun is the source of light. Suppose you pass Sunlight through a piece of red colored glass, is the Sun responsible for the resulting red light or the glass? It is obviously the glass, for the Sun does not give out red light. It is the nature of the red glass to produce red light. Yet it is the light of the Sun which is passing through the glass. However, it is the red glass which is responsible for the red light, and not the Sun who is the source.

The same holds good as regards the Lord (source) and the Jiva (individual). The Lord forever gives out his power that passes through the glass called the individual. As the individual loses his Ego & becomes that much purer, more of the divine power shines through him in its true form. When the individual attains to his self and is fully enlightened, he is like a clear glass which transmits clear Sunlight.

Thus it is the individual who is responsible for all his actions till he loses his Ego completely and becomes the clear glass, though God alone is the doer.

5. It is for the glass to change its color and not the Sun. Why blame the Sun when the glass is red? Hence it is for us to persevere in killing the Ego. That is the only Dharma. The all merciful Lord however goes a step further and creates situations where we are made to realize our mistakes and given a chance to correct them.

Who now is the Sadist? The individual who ignores the great Lord and repeats the same mistakes or the Lord who is forever helping you realize the self and thereby ensure your welfare?

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

It is said that accumulating merit is very important if you want to achieve hish stage of samadhi.

But for example if someone is not rich himself how can he give much to others? Can you accumulate merit only by purity of mind (bramacharya) and mindfulness or yoga meditation? Its hard to give when you are poor yourself... What produce more merit, giving or bramacharya? Bramacharya is hard but everyone have the necessary to do it.

Answer
1. One should not aspire to intentionally gain merit. To whom does merit or demerit apply? To the body & the Ego and not to your self which is ever pure and taint free. Such intentional actions to gain merit cause bondage and impede Samadhi as well as liberation.

2. What is required is to surrender all actions to God and work with a Ego free perspective, neither caring for merit nor demerit. When one follows one's Dharma with this attitude, striving for liberation, Samadhi dawns by itself.

You need not give money (which itself is impermanent) to others. Your only duty is to know your self. If that much is sought after through Dharma (duty) and Sadhana (practice), everything takes care of itself. So simply adhere to honest Brahmacharya to know the self and let go of useless things such as merit or demerit.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir,I have some query about wet dreams.
In night i didn't understand of any wet dream but when i awake i see the crystal like substance,i cant understand why these wet dreams are happening although i am strictly following the yoga techniques and don't allow any bad thoughts in mind.
Wet dreams occurs average of 2 per week from 3 to 4 years.
Please give me some instructions,i am very tense and can not concentrate on my study.

Answer
Perform the complete set of Yogic practices & lifestyle with unbroken Brahmacharya for a few years. Nocturnal discharges will go away by themselves.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhananjay garu,

In one of your older posts, you have mentioned that "Inevitable perseverance in Brahmacharya is an indication that there are countable numbers of births remaining for the Jiva in this ocean and that the process of working for the release which is not very far away has begun". Are you referring the above statement to only one birth? Suppose, if we are unable to succeed in brahmacharya in this birth because of our bad karma, will this help us achieve in next birth or Is it still be achieved in the same birth in spite of these hurdles? My confusion here is if one want to practice brahmacharya, will his past bad karmas affect his practice and prevent him from Self Realisation? Will this continue in the coming births? how can one know whether he would born again as human being? Can you please enlighten us more on this Topic? I have only found you to be the best to answer these questions and I don't think anyone i knew would answer them. Kindly, forgive this layman for any mistakes. Thanks a ton!

Answer
1. 'Countable births' might be this very birth or a few more.

2. If your are unable to realize your self in this existence, then the efforts applied will continue from the level attained. Efforts applied in the path of self-realization are carried over to successive births until liberation is finally attained. When the Jiva is ripe for eternal release, liberation occurs.

3. Do not worry about past karma. That is not of any concern to you. What is important is to perform the right 'Nishkamakarma' now (efforts applied for liberation without desire as a service to the Lord) without attachment for the fruits. Then the past karma gets worked out in the course of time.

4. When you come close to realizing your self, you will know the past, present and future which are illusory images on the eternal Atman. Hence first work to realize your self.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaste
Even when we come to know that we are atman,ever free,ever pure,why do we lust after material things?
I am asking this because I have tried everything to keep up my brahmacharya but have always failed...please tell me why don't we identify ourselves with pure atman even after getting to know?

Answer
Someone tells you that fire burns and you know the same. However, until you are burnt by fire, there is no realization. There is no direct experience. Similarly, you know you are the Atman after having read some material. But you have not realized it and hence the ignorance. There is not yet direct experience. So you continue in the realm of ignorance. This is why one should apply honest Sadhana and persevere till the self is irreversibly realized.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Hi Dhananjaya
i am 44 and have recently for the past year followed a path of abstinence. Its sad to say that spent most of my youth wasting away my vital reserves. However in the past one year since i have started abstinence i have been beset with health problems such as unusual weight gain that i cant seem to get rid,of even after working out. Also haveswelling in ankles and feet, hurting knees. Before i started abstinence i was of relatively good health with minor health problems. I do not question the importance of abstinence or its connection to my poor health. I am attributing my poor health to the aging process, However i wondered if i was suffering from some kind of hormonal imbalance as i experience sudden changes in body temperatures.I do not meditate as much as i should but hopefully i can take up meditation assiduously in the future. Please advise if i could be this could be a result of some kind of hormone imbalance associated with abstinence?

ANSWER: The first few years of Brahmacharya involve various reactions and changes at the physical & mental levels. The body which has degenerated further to seminal wastage slowly starts throwing out toxins and recuperates. Various changes that never occurred earlier kick in. Simply ignore all these and adhere to honest Brahmacharya with the suggested methods correctly. In a few years time, everything will stabilize.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Hi Dhananjaya
I have been an initiate on the path of Surat Shabad yoga for over 20 years. Needless to say i did not devote any time to my spiritual pursuit choosing worldly life over spiritual matters. However i have always known deep in my heart that the road to salvation began with true bhramacharya. Despite my attempts over the years to practise bhramacharya i have miserably failed . Last year the almighty bestowed on me the grace to be able to practise bhramacharya for a year so far. At about he same time i also stumbled upon khechari through some intervention as well. I am not an adept at either pranayam, kriya nor meditation however i am familiar with the different yoga systems. In any case after i practised khechari briefly before I forgot all about it . Now after a year i have remembered it again on some whim and made decent progress where i can touch my uvula but am unable to breakthrough past the uvula. i have not cut my frenulum to achieve it . However my question is that whenever i extend my tongue backward i feel a faint tug at my heart. Sometimes on my right and sometimes on my left side of my chest depending upon the left or right area of my uvula that i am probing? i have also been discharging phlegm. Should i discontinue this practice because i have read that the vidya is more important than the practice itself as the practise is the physical form of true knowledge of khechari. Is is fairly common to have these tugs in the chest?.
thanking you

ANSWER: To merge your mind in the self so that nothing but the self exists, devoid of all thought is what is important and not more. Your physical and astral bodies are not at the level of purity required for 'Khechari'. Cleanse these through the tenets of Yoga & unbroken Brahmacharya for a few years, following which the benefits of Khechari will come by themselves.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Hi Dhananjay
Thank you for your earlier responses. I appreciate your replies as they help direct the course of my life. I have one more question in regards to khechari. In your earlier response you had asked me to immerse my mind in my self. Due to constant khechari, i have been doing it without conscious thought. As earlier said i have not cut my tongue frenulum However my tongue frenulum has developed a blister (which is not painful) and the frenulum has started to fray allowing the tongue to reach further inwards. Should i consciously refrain from khechari and allow it to heal up as its not ripped all the way as yet. Please counsel. And i also wanted to thank you for your enlightened advices which light the way ahead for fellow travellers on the royal road of the pranas

Answer
Efforts for 'Khechari' should be gradual and never hurried by those who aspire for the practice. If success in the practice is destined, the Lord himself helps the aspirant advance. Hence remain neutral and let the Lord show the way.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaste Sir
what happens when the stomach is overloaded occasionally?Does overloading of stomach occasionally increase the chances of break in brahmacharya?
last time same thing happened,i just overloaded and had a break.
In previous answers you have suggested "moderation in diet",but what actually does moderation means?does it mean filling half stomach with food,quarter with water and another quarter empty for air?
for example if one consumes 3 chapaties,should he consume only one and half chapaties? or does it have any implied meaning?
won't consuming less decrease physical and mental strength? by the way i am 19.(my mom says one has to eat well in his youth to stay fit(both physically and mentally) all his life)
I am not opposing the idea of observing moderation in diet,but just had few doubts regarding this...
Thank you.

Answer
1. Overloading the stomach can cause discomfort and inertia, thereby leading to uprising of Tamasic tendencies. These are not conducive to general well being including Brahmacharya.

2. Yes

3. Make it a point to eat many small meals rather than one large meal that overloads the stomach. Let the diet be balanced as described in past answers. When a life of Brahmacharya and Yoga are applied, one does not require very large quantities of food as was earlier further to prevention of loss of vital energy.

Go through all the past answers on diet and what quality & quantity to consume.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

dear sir
how r u? Sir i have doubts regarding bagavan sayings and His play in Bagavat Gita , chapter Baktiyoga Bagavan said as, "adveshta sarva bootanam mytra: karuna eva cha, nirmamo nirahangara: samaduka suga: kshami.
Santhushta: sathatham yogi yatatma dridanishchaya: mayarpita manobudhiryo matbakta: sa me priya:(bg chpt 12 , sl 13 and 14) in this sloka bagavan gives us the clear defenition of devotion .The first line stated that the devotee have no any angry or krodha to living creatures(bhuta), Karna and Jayadratha are also a living creatures .Then why God helped Arjuna to kill them? This a question about non self thing , asked only for gather its spiritual meaning thanking you
Vijith
SARWAM KALVIDAM BRAHMAN

Answer

There is no action greater than performing one's Dharma sincerely. Arjuna being a Kshatriya warrior, had to follow his Dharma of fighting for justice. Hence the killing was validated and justified, being an inevitable part of his duty.

The action was carried out in the course of his Dharma and not with an intention of 'Himsa' (needless harm). Karna and Jayadrata were in the path of 'Adharma' (non-righteousness), having taken to the wrong path. Thus Arjuna became the tool of the Lord to instill justice.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

hari om
sir iam 18 and masturbating from the past 1 year and 10 months. i got into this act without knowing about the importance of brahmacharya. i was brilliant in my studies but after 6 months of practicing masturbation i saw myself loose my mental and physical strenght .my grades decline so i decided to quit. now after many failures i have put my full potential into yoga and meditation and iam sure that i will remove it permanently but the problem is there are some doubts and confusion that i want to clear so here it is:
1. i get irritated whenever i think of past failures so i want to correct my mistakes.i want success in my life. i want to gain every drop of my lost veerya is that possible?
2. can a person make ojas out of virya without meditation and yoga
3. what is important ojas or virya ?
4. at what age virya production stops.

Answer

1. If the efforts at Yoga & Brahmacharya are honest and sincere with surrender to God, Brahmacharya will eventually become the way of life.

2. Not in the long run.

3. From conserved and transmuted Veerya comes Ojas. Both are one and the same as are water & steam.

Persevere correctly and get established.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello, in one ancient post:
-He casts a great impression wherever he goes and thus wins over people with his nobility and virtue. A true Brahmachari needs not the aid of cunning, guile, manipulation or dominance to succeed in the world. Presence of enormous divine energy within him makes even wicked people treat him with respect and consideration. No one can remain oblivious to the radiance and nobility of a true Urdhvareta.-

With all due respect, does this mean the brahmachari is always good? When Hitler, Stalin or Mao were alive, didnt they get respect? Was not Hitler a disciplined person with some knowledge of the occult? Brahmacharya alone doesnt make someone a saint for sure.

Answer
1. One who surrenders his Ego and works as a tool of the Supreme is the Brahmachari. His actions are those of God and hence always right. He is the real saint. As long as a man stays in this state, his actions are those of the universal.

2. People such as those mentioned by you were noticed for their actions, name, fame, title and power which they commanded in their respective positions. The presence or lack of these traits including occult powers is of no consequence or value in terms of the absolute truth, considering this world itself is a dream.

None of these attributes succeed in giving man eternal bliss free from the bounds of sorrow for ever, for they are nothing but the tentacles of 'Maya' (illusion). Rather, they only pushed these very same people deeper into the realms of sorrow as is seen in history. Liberation, that accrues further to knowing the self alone leads to that objective of eternal existence in peace, beyond action & inaction.

Resting in the self, as the self the liberated sage eternally abides in the state of the infinite beyond description.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Greetings Sir,

I am a 59-year old man with just over a year unbroken brahmacharya. At my job, I supervise a young woman. We work closely together and get along very well. I am quite attracted to her, but have always conducted myself appropriately and professionally in our interactions. This woman is very affectionate with another man at the office. She hugs him often and has told me she is attracted to him.

This other man is very popular with many women at work. He acts so happy to see them and often massages their shoulders and puts his arm around them. Sometimes he kisses my work partner on the head. He is married to a woman who also works for the same company. I do not get the feeling he is looking for sexual relationships.

I have become painfully jealous and hurt over my work partner's interactions with this man. I do my best to hide it and not let it affect my behavior. Here are my questions:

1) I am considering leaving this job for other reasons, is it best for my spiritual development to stay and work through these feelings through spiritual practices and brahmacharya?

3) What would you say about the behavior of this other man? He seems so happy in his interactions with women. I must admit, I have always had an uncomfortable feeling about him. I feel a deep distrust as if there is a dark side to him that others don't seem to see. Thank-you.

Answer

1. That entity which feels the jealousy is not the real you. It is the Ego. One wishing Enlightenment should work at annihilating the Ego and get free of the same. That is Brahmacharya.

2. What others do is not our concern. The only thing on our minds is to know the self and reside in the self, as the self, following which all queries get answered.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

1-Can bramachaarya help your longevity?
2-Are you able to renew your physical body with that sexual energy continously?
3-Why there is legends of yogis in the Himalayas who are still alive in their physical body after centuries like Babaji or the Biblical patriarchs like Mathusalem, is that true?
4-Do you practice this?

Being able to do this is the highest wisdow and practice in my opinion.

Answer

1. Brahmacharya is the foundation for health, strength, vitality and overall well being. These are factors that support longevity.

2. Sexual energy eventually ends in loss of vitality & debilitates the body. It is only when the same energy is converted into health & strength that the body recuperates.

3. Yes

4. The aim of the true Yogi is to make use of longevity to achieve liberation here and now in this very birth. That is the purpose of the physical body; to aid the Jiva attain liberation as a medium of working out karma. Beyond this, the physical body has no value. Hence the true Yogi never gets attached to his body but uses it as a tool to move towards Enlightenment.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

hari om
sir i request you to clear some of doubts
1. at night my penis get erected many times, is this a nightfall?
whenever penis get erected is their also loss of semen.
2. most of the time whenever i see my penis erected at night, i also find that i have stopped my urine for a long time. is this also a cause of my nightfall or i was seeing erotic dreams?

Answer

1. Natural erections occur every few hours during sound sleep and early in the morning. These are not sexual in nature but the result of blood flow to the penis which is a normal and healthy physiological phenomenon. Neither is there any loss of semen.

2. Do not worry about the same. Simply relax and enjoy sound sleep at night.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

sir,i'm 23 year old guy. my qustions
1.i was successful during 8 months of my brahamchrya during that period i have wet dream every 15 days but it was not harmful but one day i got wet dream at day time in which i loose my all previous power.and i again taken celibacy for one month and again i got failure because of day wet dreams which is not watery wet dreams but true wet dreams.my qustion is because i do lot's of aerobic exercise like walking daily for 2 hours is this the cause of failure.exercise also can cause failure! i have heard that hard exercise may cause failure but i do it exercise like walking so how can i fail.
2.when i have taken celibacy at that stage i was 22 but now i'm 23 so sir i want to ask you that what difference it will make.when i was 22 i was get wet dream at every 15 days so how much time it will take may 18 days.can i can reach that stage of 8 months celibacy power now on if i do 8 months celibacy again or it will be low powerfull.what one year gap can do difference.
my english is litle weak so sorry sir but if you understand than please give suggestion

Answer

Are you applying the correct Yogic practices as described earlier with meditation? Practice 4.00 A.M wake up daily followed by the practices of Asana, Bandha, Nadi Shodhana & Pranayama with meditation as described earlier. After a few years of such honest practice, Brahmacharya becomes stabilized. Do not worry about the past.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Hi Dhananjay Sir,

Trust you are doing great!

First of all kindly, forgive me for You only deal with questions related to Brahmacharya and my questions are outside that context. These are general doubts which we often encounter in our daily life, i don't know how to present them but i am doing my best. I have some doubts pertaining to old believes, Cultures & Traditions which we are asked to follow and I don't think they are advisable when we purely believe in that ALMIGHTY.(Ex- Pooja's (Festivals etc), Rituals when someone expires, Astrology as such.

Questions-

1)Why are we asked to perform pooja's only this particular way. Not to eat anything before pooja, not to touch anything without bathing? Perform a special pooja to overcome this hurdle, Do this Vrat to get rid of this obstacle. Do they really work out? Please let me know your inputs.

2)What is Astrology and Vaastu's role in Man's life? Are they real or same man made? Do they have any influence on man?

3)Our elders say that when GOD Exists, Evil too exists (Evil here refers to Devils, Blackmagic as such)Is this real or a Mental Trauma?

4)Did God create these rules or Man?

I request you to kindly clarify every doubt/question as they mean a lot to me. Thanks for your precious time.

Answer

1. The general state of the common man is that of Agnyana (ignorance) as regards the nature of his self. He considers himself separate from the Almighty; considering the Ego real. There is a tendency to objectify everything and consider himself as the subject in terms of separation. This makes it not very easy to accept the reality called oneness.

Hence various rituals & practices are advised to gradually bring him on the track of God. The purpose of these activities is to bring his sense driven & indulged mind on God at least for some time every day/on certain days etc. When the Jiva spends many births in such activity, Gnyana unfolds enough to then take up worship of the formless Supreme through Yoga.

For those following an honest life of Yoga & Brahmacharya for self-realization through 'Nishkamakarma' (surrender of all actions to God without desire for the fruits), no separate religion is required. Such a mode of life to know the Atman (self) is itself the greatest religion and Dharma.

2. Astrology is the science of predicting certain future events based on the birth factors. For a correct prediction, the astrologer should be selfless and possess divine attributes. He should be a person who practices the same for the welfare of mankind as per his Dharma and not for money, name, fame etc. He should be content with what comes through destiny with his mind on the Lord all the time. He then gets the intuitive ability to decipher the future to some extent. Only then do the words of such a man bear fruit. The same applies to Vaastu.

To those who surrender to God and are ever intent on their Dharma (to realize the self), astrology or Vaastu will hold no interest; for these concern the world, body & the Ego which the Yogi considers unreal.

3. God alone exists with the real you being inseparable. There is no you (Ego), no good and no evil. When you think you exist, then good and evil also exist.

4. Everything is the Lord's creation. If you take the position of the created, then you are affected by creation. If you rest in your real state of oneness with HIM, you watch the creation as a cinema goer watches the movie on the screen without being affected. It is to make you realize your true nature of unaffected viewership, that the Lord has created this image called Samsara.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

When you practice bramacharya but then you break it conciously you get a bad change in your face and countenance very rapidly, why is it? When you dont practice bramacharya, it doesnt happen, why? Can someone who break bramacharya after having know it become worse than someone who never practiced it?

Thanks

Answer
1. The practice of Brahmacharya takes you that much closer to your true self. A break takes you that much farther. The Atman (self) is your very self, being the source of your life. Hence it follows that distancing oneself from this source takes life energy out of the body & mind (which have no independent existence) to that extent.

2. It happens immaterial of whether your practice or don't. The change is more perceptible in the former and less in the latter.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
One of the issues faced by professionals like me is the lack of time to devote towards the practices that you have advised.

Although, I have been following the said practices for many months with the grace of god, I still feel that if I can get a 1-2 hours extra in a 24 hour day much more effort can be put into the practice.

Would you be able to help out with a solution (with due practice) by which one can reduce the number of hours of sleep (without any health impact) that is required by an individual?

Many Thanks,
Ganesh

Answer
Carry out all the said practices to the extent possible with devotion to God to realize the self. When such efforts are applied over a period of many years, Yoga gets established and the need for excessive sleep & food tapers away.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Dear Dhananjay,

Is it true unless masculine & feminine are balanced there can be no brahmacharya.What exactly does this mean practically?

My queries as below:

1)Our world today is mostly men centric,better to say the masculine has gone overboard.I want to know what advantage/power the feminine energy/females stands for & what if any role it has in brahmacharya sadhana.

2)Can souls in female bodies become urdhvaretas as they don't seem to have(if any not as much as males) voluntary control over their basic energy(that being sex energy).This seems to me an advantage(monthly cycles cause less debilitation than males uncontrolled) & disadvantage(can't take reins unto own hands).

3)What karma causes soul to be born male or female.I have heard occultists say ''A man is a woman's karma & a woman man's''.Can you point me to any scriptural validations on this.I believe this knowledge can benefit in attitude towards opposite sex.

ANSWER: 1. It is not necessary to worry about male or female energies. Correct practice of the Yogic techniques suggested will automatically harmonize the same leading to meditation which stabilizes the entire energy system.

2. When a woman becomes an Urdhvaretas, the menstrual cycle stops as there is no descent of Bindu (seed)

3. Such knowledge is not of any use. Let go of this concept of male and female and first realize your self which has no gender.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Dear Dhananjay,

Further to your reply in point 2
--does this mean presence of menses in women indicate that mind is still not purifies & vasanas exist?

Also I have one more question
--why has it not happened that descent/incarnation of god has still not happened in human realm in female form?Why are their less female ascetics or self realized beings?

I have heard spirituality comes easy to women.But I beg to differ.
--What are things(of spiritual worth) one can learn from women which comes easily to them & what spiritual strengths do men have naturally?

I'm just trying to reconcile my views so that I may not have a lower judgement of any of sexes on path of sadhana.

Answer
1. Menstruation in women & wet dreams in men is an indication that the 'Bindu' (seed) which flows downwards from the onset of puberty (for reproduction) is not yet reversed. Such reversal occurs only upon reaching the state of 'Urdhvaretas' (further to mastering Sabija Samadhi).

Urdhvaretas is a state in the path to self-realization and not realization itself. Vasana-s & Samskara-s are not exhausted just because the Yogi becomes an Urdhvaretas. The descent of Bindu is arrested which acts as the foundation to acquire the 'Divya Sharira' (Divine body).

2. Purusa represents consciousness while Prakriti represents creation. Creation is an offshoot of the universal consciousness which is the source. Thus creative energy does not have an independent existence by itself as it sources from the Purusa.

Creation is the manifestation of the Supreme which is beyond gender. There are numerous advanced souls among women as well. However, it is tougher for women to develop 'Vairagya' (dispassion) as their nature is largely influenced by 'Maya' (illusion). The purpose of the feminine energy in creation is to help consciousness revert to the Purusa (self) from its current identification with the Ego.

3. Bhakti (devotion) comes easily to women while Vairagya (dispassion) is difficult.

The Yogi does not require to learn anything except the methods to ward away 'Agnyana' (ignorance) through Sadhana and surrender. When this is accomplished, the Atman (pure self) alone remains which is complete knowledge and bliss by itself.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
In my case it did work but I would like to ask something. Why the stereotype of the sage is someone who looks very old, haggard and weak. Take the example of such enlightned philosophers like Laozi, Socrates, Ramana Maharshi, many Zen and Taoist masters, rabbis and magicians. WHy to me it renewed the body but to them who were far more advandced no. Can you tell the diference about who is bramhmachari and who is not by mere physical appearance? Socrates didnt look like a brahmachari but we can be sure he practiced it according to his own teaching.

Answer
1. The stereotype is a mental concept devised by people as wisdom is mostly recognized among those with age & experience. The very same sages looked like any normal person of their age during their youth & middle age. They experienced the benefits of Brahmacharya just as any other person does further to correct practice.

2. Enlightened sages have no further need of their body after self-realization. Hence they generally do not take efforts for its upkeep. Also, a realized soul has very little and at most times no body consciousness, consciousness having withdrawn into the self. Hence they can easily appear wayward, mad, retarded or stone like in the common man's perspective.

This being their last existence on the physical plane, Enlightened sages experience unhindered workout of all their remnant karma which is to be fully settled and cleared. If such karma involves serious diseases etc. the body goes through the same while the soul remains untouched.

Under certain circumstances, such sages take on the karma of others to help those people move faster towards liberation. The body of the sage then suffers from such added karma.

The presence of a realized soul is felt in the peace, tranquility, calmness and absolute peace one experiences in his/her company. The mind becomes quiet and full of bliss.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

Some paths but not the yoga one say that when you engage in spiritual cultivation, you have the responsability to utopically affect the world and politics for good. Even some schools like in Eastern Asia say if you do not do good you dont advandce spiritually, same with Plato. But this could be easily countered with many arguments since many great spirituals adepts were hermits or monks and others ones in history has been killed for that same reason because those with political power in general just follow their own interest and not spiritual paths. The irony is that those philosophers who had that utopy in mind like Plato and eastern sages were themselves without political power and their countries were the ones with experienced the worse ies in the history of humankind... The eastern Asian mentality is strange becuase it is deep philosophy but at the same time is not very realistic, and creative. Now in the yogic tradition which is practical, yogis were not interested in politics and there was no such merit philosophy and the society was peaceful generally. I hope you understand what I mean by this, its a doubt I have.

Since you going to die one day, the best choice isnt it to cultivate yourself to surrender of the ego to the inner silence anonimously and give spiritual teachings to others when possible, and letting the world follow his own? You gain knowledge and the merit to advance with such practice. After all, all comes to mind state. Do you agree?

Thanks

Answer
1. Is the world different from you? The world is only a reflection of your own mind. As long as the mind exists, the world exists. Where was the world to you in deep sleep? So it is an illusion of mind & matter. If you realize what you truly are (the self), then the world will clearly be seen in its true illusory form as nothing more than a superimposition. Hence the best help to both yourself and others is to know your self first. You may then decide if any further help is to be rendered. But first know your self.

Trying to reform the world without knowing the self is like one blind man trying to show the way to another.

2. There is no reality in the illusion in terms of the absolute. Hence to get in touch with the reality is alone the greatest service to oneself and 'others'.

3. If this much is done to realize the self, then that which is to be done by you to the 'world' as you term it automatically occurs through your body & mind by a higher power that runs the show.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

Is meditation like watching thoughts enough to see the real self or you have necesarly to add pranayama and asanas? SOme says that watching thoughts without attachment wake up your kundalini without any need of additional techniques and some others say you should add other techniques. Let say you are a person who naturally dont think too much or cling to things, what is the best option? Can you go directly to samatha techniques without passing from asanas and pranayama if you are proeficient with it?

Thank you

Answer
What is required is to still the mind and stop thoughts completely (including the thought - "I am meditating"). Such an objective is accomplished through the tenets of Yoga. In very rare cases where advancement has already occurred in previous existences, the practices of Asana & Pranayama are not required and the person directly goes into deep meditation.

The indication of such an advanced person is the absence of sexual impulses and desires with the mind naturally on the self even without Yoga. For all others, the process cannot be eliminated.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
"My mind was frozen, my body in dissolution, my flesh and bones all melted together. I was wholly unconscious of what my body was resting on, or what was under my feet. I was borne this way and that on the wind, like dry chaff or leaves falling from a tree. In fact, I knew not whether the wind was riding on me or I on the wind. Now, you have not spent one whole season in your teacher's house, and yet you have lost patience two or three times already. {p. 40} Why, at this rate, the atmosphere will never support an atom of your body, and even the earth will be unequal to the weight of one of your limbs! The only way to etherealize the body being to purge the mind of its passions."

What does the last sentence means by passion? Does it means all thoughts or sexual thoughts? Thank you

Answer
'Passions' here refer to the emotions of desire, anger, greed, attachment, arrogance & jealousy. These are the foundations of the Ego which are to be destroyed through direct experience of the absolute truth. This is accomplished only when the mind is dissolved into the self devoid of all thoughts.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
sir if i do daily 3 hours of walking if that is bad for my celibacy.i asked it in other brahamchgarya side and they said that more than one hour of exercise is bad for celibacy.

Answer
Moderate exercise on a daily basis is a necessity for successful Brahmacharya & healthy living. Three hours of exercise is however not necessary.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Om
sir,
I am following brahmacharya. I listen to bhajans and meditate.
I am facing a grave problem. I dont have much bad thoughts during the day or at night. My food is also very less. I am rite now staying in hospital taking care of my mother. It has been 4 days now and every night i am having wet dreams. I am scared of sleeping now. This is a very major break in my Brahmacharya. A blow to my concentration and confidence. Please help me as to what I can do to stop this deadly act. In this hospital I am unable to get up at 4am. Please help. (In deep trouble... Om

Answer
Apply the correct Yogic lifestyle and make it a regular life feature as soon as time permits. Mere meditation without purification of the body & mind through Yogic practices such as Asana, Bandha, Nadi Shodhana & Pranayama very rarely bears fruit.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Sir My Question is regarding first level experience of Brahmacharya. I hav been practising it for about two weeks and I felt several Improvements. I practised mudhras, Yogas and Pranayama everyday. I am able to practice physical brahmacharya, but a slight wavering mental brahmacharya. But i often had great control of my senses, thoughts and desires. Today morning around 4 AM, i just had the same experience which you have mentioned in one of your responses "When the aspirant maintains this state of Brahmacharya for a considerable period of time from when the 'Vajroli kriya' starts to function, the passage of flow of semen within his body (from the sex glands to the Urethra) starts to become narrow and constricted. Under such circumstances if he indulges in ejaculation of semen (even in a copious wet dream), instead of pleasure he experiences pain. This further aids in developing distaste and dispassion towards the sex act.This is one of the most important of changes which occurs in the body of the Brahmachari at the physiological level." link:http://en.allexperts.com/q/Celibacy-Abstinence-3564/2010/7/Changes-Urdhvareta.ht . I just had the same experience. But I am sure about one thing I didn't have a dirty dream. And most days at sleep my lingam becomes errect, but didnt ejaculate. but today it did. Sir please help me and bring me light. Does that spoil my practise of brahmacharya? I have a burning desire to practice brahmacharya. What should i do to avoid this in future.

ANSWER: 1. The experience is a wet dream and not the Vajroli kriya. Erections during sleep without sexual thoughts are normal, healthy and not sexual.

2. Adhere to correct practice of the said Yogic lifestyle with devotion to God. Things will stabilize in course of time.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Sir What is Vajroli Kriya? How am I supposed to know when does that occur? BTW I am very confident that it is not a wet dream . The reason is that i have had wet dreams before and this time it was totally and entirely different i felt pain just this once, not in my previous experience. And at sleep i feel erect only when i have the urge to urinate. Thank you so much for your answer sir.. i am very happy and glad.

Answer
1. Physiological wet dreams (minor loss from excess food, heat etc.) are not sexual in nature. They differ from sexual wet dreams.

2. The complete meaning of the Vajroli Kriya will be known through direct experience only after the Yogi becomes an Urdhvareta.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear sir
I watched an evil drama(Raktarakshas(blood monsture)) with dts sound on last saturday. At that time I had no fear at all. But after watching the show I cant sleep well, my mind is doubting me like someone following me or near the door etc, I relaxed my mind with spiritual thoughts like only God is real and any monsture cant touch me bz I am pure soul etc, Sir my doubt is that why the negative feelings like fear have more power

Vijith
SARWAM KALVIDAM BRAHMAN

Answer
1. Where is the need to watch such fancy content? What is the benefit? Stay with activities that are constructive, reminding yourself of your true Atmic state all the time. Fear which is the result of Agnyana (ignorance) reduces and finally goes away as one progresses towards his Atman (self). Sometimes, subconscious fears which are dormant within surface, triggered by related external activity. At other times, unknown fears emerge when the mind is being purified.

2. There is not the least need to fear anything. Be calm and let go of such false imaginations, continuing with the correct practice of Yoga. The fear will eventually go away.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Many people want to considers Western mediumnistic and African practices such as trance and spirit-channeling (anciently called possesion) where the Ego is dissolved and a spirit is active to be the equivalent of spirituality as practiced in the Eastern World. And my other doubt is this: If you are dissolving your ego in meditation, is there some danger of possesion? In both cases the ego is to be dissolved to attain a particular state.

Answer
1. The Ego is not dissolved in any of these practices. Hence it is not of any use in knowing the Atman (self)

2. What is the Ego? Who is dissolving the Ego? Who possesses whom? Who are you in reality? realize that first, keeping all things aside. Then every query gets answered. Till then, such questions are like trying to find the footprints of a fish swimming in water.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
During the day, I have some few sexual thought that I let go and they dissapear by themselves. NOW during the morning when I wake up but im still in bed, the sexual desires are strong and the temptation to break bramacharya too, but for now I still kept the promise to practice bramacharya. Why are sexual desires stronger in the morning when you are still in bed and dont put yourself in your feet and walk? Is that moment when your sexual desires are strong opportune to practice meditation? If I ever break the practice it will be in the morning never during the normal day...

Answer
1. Those subconscious thoughts that are the foremost resurge when out of sleep. These are in turn dependent of past & recent activity. Hence one should always strive to keep the body & mind pure & wake up very early to carry out Yogic practices to realize his self.

2. The body will have rested and is full of energy in the morning. This energy should not be let to turn into sexual energy but should be harnessed for Yoga & meditation with surrender to the Lord. After many years of such unbroken practice, one gradually overcomes such tendencies and gets closer to realizing his self.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,
I've read your previous post about Vajroli Kriya and the physical changes in the body, and would like to learn more about the same. Is there any reference book/article on the same where you can guide me to?

I presume that when Vajroli Kriya starts, the real sublimation starts happening. Do hormonal changes also take place when this phenomenon occurs?

Thanks!

Answer
1. The effects of 'Vajroli Kriya' have been outlined in previous answers. These should be experienced through direct experience and theoretical reading is not of much use.

2. Various changes occur to the three 'Sharira-s' (bodies) in the course of Yoga. These include hormonal as well. Information regarding these internal changes are however not of any use and what is required is to persevere in attaining to Yoga which is to still the mind and merge it into the Atman (self).

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
First of all, I would want apologize about my poor English.
I started sexual abstinence, nearly 2 or 3 weeks ago. After this time, I felt a pain in center of my head , I believe that this pain is near pineal gland or pituitary gland .I Know this pain may have causes unrelated to celibacy, but I would want to know how a celibacy can cause headache, and how to relieve the kind of headache caused by celibacy .I stopped sex because I did not feel me well after having sex. I'm not being guided by a guru, it is difficult find one where I am located.

Note:This is the third time, I tried sex abstinence, all these times I felt headache nearly after 2 or 3 weeks.
I study meditation, yoga, mudras, banda, chakras, mantras, i buy books about these subjects. Hence you can give me specific information, I am aware of these subjects a little.

Answer
1. Brahmacharya does not cause headaches which is the result of other factors.

2. Adequate physical & mental activity coupled with spiritual activity/meditation is a pre-requisite for sustained Brahmacharya. The headache is a sign of need for purification of the physical and astral bodies. Apply the Yogic techniques suggested in past answers on a daily basis without fail. Mere bookish study is not of any use. In the course of time, things will stabilize.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I would like to express my gratitude towards your intensely profound and true answers here on brahmacharya. Supreme manifested as your answers to myself as I was being troubled to sustain a virtue of purity, which is troublesome mostly for the fact I've been a hedonistic sexoholic for most of my short incarnaction here on Earth having sex with hundreds of women in the past. I'm a 28 year old devotee of Ramana Maharshi currently planning a trip to India to further my relation with him and offer him and Arunachala Shiva gratitude for guiding me.

My question to you would be - should there be any way to cut through astral tubes I have dishonorably "collected" through my former life of lust and manipulation? Some might say it lasts for a minimum of 12 years pretty much sabotaging much of our life's efforts to cleanse spiritually and with no conscious effort for eradication further imprint themselves in our subconscious as vasanas or so say my master.

I've been visualizing cutting through them with a sword in meditation as I find this intuitively helpful, but perhaps you could offer me some insight I could integrate into my practice.

Huge gratitude to your work here and may the grace of supreme never cease to fall on you. I greet you from Poland.

Answer
As the Yogi practices a life of Yoga & austerity to know his self with honest & unbroken Brahmacharya, astral tubes that have developed through sexual relations gradually weaken. By the time the Yogi masters 'Sabija Samadhi' and becomes an Urdhvareta, most of these connections would have ceased to be and a few strong ones remain.

When the Yogi attains to the 'Divya Sharira' and enters 'Nirbija Samadhi', rapid de-materialization of these remaining tubes occurs in that state of non-dual union with the Lord. Eventually, all these connections are burnt in totem in that state of union, one's true state of being.

Hence simply persevere with sincere effort to know the self, adhering to the practices involved with complete devotion and surrender to HIM. The rest, HE takes care.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
hi dhananjay
nice to read your view and excellent answers but often doubts allures me in practice i have read many celibacy book many a time but eventually i got limited success within 2-3 days my senses overpowers me consequently i fail and feel terribly guilty about myself often I feel low in motivation and questionable at myself the paramount importance of celibacy is there but how to practice it if I restrain it makes me irritated and sometimes I feel so unhappy about the way of my life I cant follow what I know is undoubtedly essential for my spiritual n moral well being I don't have any girlfriend or have any sexual intercourse with someone butt has a habit of masturbating frequently it has grown as a compulsive behavior I m trying to quit it since 15 long years but eventually has bitter failures left at conclusion Often I has success in practice for 3mts 5yrs ago but sex impulses are overpowering me im a bachelor it seems my life is been wasting im low and often under confident fearful and also sense guilt in myself I feel like if someone guide me correctly but often now day people think sex is natural n celibacy is obliteration of natural impulse and against self nature I didnt commit adultery in practical but thousands a time in my mind when i watch porn I m very unhappy with myself how could I bring overall change in my life live a confident pure moral life i dont eat meat nor smoke nor drink only bad quality in me is I m in clutches of masturbation my friends sys this is normal but it has eaten my soul from inside ques can you suggest simple ways and means to get rid of this hideous habit my past and present is ruined upto now i want to see a hope for future please help and give me guidance in this field so that I m out of it please help

Answer
Apply the complete set of Yogic practices & lifestyle with devotion and surrender to the Lord as suggested in past answers. The efforts should be very honest and unbroken. Success in Brahmacharya comes only by the Lord's grace. To avail HIS grace, one should strive through one's heart & soul single pointedly. After such consistent efforts, the grace comes.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Respected Sir. Please shed some light on my doubts. We seprated ourselves from almighty to taste sense pleasures. Later the almighty generated a system the whole universe & all its laws to rectify us. The almighty created maya that keeps us illusioned. Under effect of maya we commits henious sins. We are not body but soul, but why couldn't the almighty just remove the veil instead of making us work for it. Would there be a difference in attaining illumination direcly by the help of God & by working hard for it. Afterall either way we would be aware of our SatChitAnanda nature.

Answer
1. 'Agnyana' (ignorance)as regards the Jiva is without beginning.

2. 'Samsara' is the classroom where the Jiva is taught lessons of 'Gnyana' (truth) through the syllabus called life experiences by the invisible teacher called 'Brahman'.

3. Why is it that the professors in the university don't give you the answers to the question paper in the examination hall? Why do they make you work for it?

The professors teach you the subject, yet you are supposed to prove yourself in the exam where the very same professors behave strict and do not help you answer.

4. Illumination comes only by HIS grace AFTER you work hard to the extreme and realize the falsity of the entity which thought it worked hard.

Yes, you are Sat-Chit-Ananda (Knowledge-Existence-Bliss). It is to make you realize the same that the show is being staged.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir,

1. Your offering answers to questions here is done for what purpose since it is a free service without any payment to you? Even the comments and ratings sections are not activated here I see... No profile photo also to identify you for popularity and no contact address or email?

2. Yoga is today a multimillion dollar industry. Why not show your knowledge through a attractive website with paid service,books,ashram,courses on a global level as done by many modern gurus? That can make you very famous with your knowledge?

I can offer my service to help you achieve these things sir..

Answer
1. As in the case of all other actions which transpire through the countless Jiva-s (beings) appearing as though indulging in countless deeds ever moment, the Lord works through the entity that answers these queries also. Since it is HIS will and HIS actions, the question of purpose, payment, ratings, identity, popularity etc. do not apply.

2. Answer 1. covers Question 2.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,
In the above post You can show your true divotion to God. In my case any negative feelings irritates me, I can save mind by thinking of your name "DHANANJAY" and your great works, only after I thinks my responsibity to God. I can see your unconditional love and efforts to make each Jiva in a great level from all of your answers. You have great value in my life than any other relation although I cant see you, You are really great sir

Thanking You
vijith
sarvam kalvidam brahman

Answer
HE is the light and from HIM has come everything as do images from a source of light. All these vanish and HE alone remains, without a second. Where then is 'I'? It is nothing but imagination, false and non-existent.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
greeting
i dont know how to put this but the thing is that I know brahmacharya is important for a sound moral and peaceful life but I m trying for years to bring this to practise but im capable to do so I dont know im in urge of sexual intoxication yet i do realize it is not good for me but I masturbate many a time due to which im totally wrecked from my soul I feel that more i compress my desire they tend to flare up what should i do then im 24 .please do refer a technique efficiently practise it im most needful for guidance im discouraged since I have lot of theoretical knowledge on brahmacharya aspect but practical essence is far off missing I dont know will i lead this life peacefully Im morally bankrupt fact is that i know i should not do this its incorrect but at trial n testing i fail miserably i tend seem to be addicted to masturbation and lives a wretched exsistence If onlyy your words will spark hope within me ill be grateful please give me some cues to how to quit porn how to quit excessive indulgences ill obey your words as command help me get rid out of dis an leave a peaceful life i had very limited success in dis path and want to quench my thirst on this experiencing true nature of brahmacharya im tainted can i heal and again experience blissfull life please give a comprehensive reply on this matter i have read ur previous question but my question n doubt to endless im pure vegetarian non smoker n drink practice im need of help of someone who can enlighten my path im obsessed for leading brahmacharya in reality I want to lead a moral and stable life thats all every time I take a vow eventually mara the tempter out throw me with discouragement n guilt Im really serious about practising it because not that i want benefits out of it but living a sound life n experiencing bliss and communion with vibes of all saintly and brahmic being thank u for reading till the end please enlighten my path

Answer
You say you have gone through the past answers; why then is the technique & path still unknown? The correct technique of a Yogic life for success in Brahmacharya has been described in detail. Go through the answers which have outlined the procedure and apply these methods honestly. You should persevere as though your life is in danger and as though application of these methods will alone save you. Such should be the commitment. Then comes HIS grace...

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Naman Sweekar Kare Dhananjay,

My question is this:Can effort at brahmacharya bear complete fruit if celibacy is practised in thought , word & deed but there is slackness even to smallest degree in other aspects like speaking truth/charity/helping needy when seen & help asked for/ahimsa/seva & other noble virtues.

Brahmani Charyathi ithi is the definition & have also heard other virtues follow self mastery.So my precise doubt would be if there is a failure in any of other virtues(except total celibacy) would that still enable one to reach goal of self realization or a correction would be required.

Even if we succeed in celibacy excelling at all virtues seems quite lofty & unreachable in this day & age.

Answer
1. The more honest one's efforts at are at leading a life of virtue, the better is the residence in Brahmacharya.

2. Are Brahmacharya and virtue different? They are both one and the same. Mere abstinence without virtue is not Brahmacharya. He who practices real Brahmacharya (which is relinquishment of the Ego & nothing else) does not get the mind to deviate from virtue.

3. Let go of the Ego and be the Atman (self). Everything then becomes easy and surprisingly reachable.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaste Prabhu!
What is the difference between EGO and SELF RESPECT?
Are they one and the same?

thank you!

Answer
Yes. Self respect is another name for the Ego. When someone says - "I do not want to lose my self-respect", it is the Ahamkara (Ego) which is talking and not the self. The Atman (true self) is not affected by anything or anyone, for there exists nothing other than the Atman everywhere. It is without a second. Who then can respect or disrespect it?

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Respected Sir, i tend to be more inclined towards attributefull God. Idol worship, reading Ramayan,Mahabharat & ancient stories of rishis & righteous King, practice of virtues makes me more devoted ,.keep the real purpose of life alive & away from materialism.
Please advice on the other activities that I can include to tread this path more effectively.
Thank you

Answer

It does not matter whether one worships the Almighty as 'Saguna' (Lord manifest with form) or 'Nirguna' (formless Supreme). What is required is to be absorbed in HIS thought alone, following which the mind eventually becomes still and goes into Samadhi.

What is most important however is never to mistake the form worshiped itself to be God but to be devout to that Supreme power which works through the idol or photo. It is not the idol or a photo of God which is of value but the power of THAT Supreme being which works through these that alone matters.

To achieve the same one should perform Sadhana (practice) to annul the 'Ahamkara' (Ego) which stands between the 'Manas' (mind) and the Atman (self or Lord). This much is the purpose behind the Yogic practices & lifestyle. Nothing more.

Continue with your path of devotion with honest and unbroken Brahmacharya. Without Brahmacharya, no path towards Enlightenment can succeed. It is an absolute must. With time and consistent practice, the mind will eventually absorb itself in the Lord through meditation.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

dear sir

1 what are the differance between divya sharira, ordinary body and bodies of Maha yogis like Sri Mahavatar Babaji?
2 What is mean by Mantra yoga/ Kundalini awakening with Bijaksher of each chakra?
3 What oil can use instead of coconut oil in the head bz by coconut oil cause cold problems please accept my apology for asking like questions have no connection with "SELF"
Thanking You Sir
Sarvam khalvidam brahman

Vijith

Answer

1. 'Divya Sharira' represents the body purified by 'Yogagni' (the fire of Yoga), following which the 'Pancha Mahabhuta-s (5 constituent elements of which the body is made of namely Akasa-space, Vayu-air, Agni-fire, Aapaha-water & Pruthvi-earth) rest in perfect equilibrium and the Yogi becomes free of all diseases and debilities. Such a body is full of beauty (lustre), grace, strength and very tough.

In the ordinary body of a non-yogi, these elements are imbalanced and the body is laden with toxins, making him prone to various illnesses and debility. Mahavatar Babaji is a divine manifestation with a body of light.

2. 'Kundalini Awakening' is the symbolic representation of the rise of consciousness. It occurs automatically without any effort in case of the Yogi who practices Brahmacharya & meditation for self-realization. Different mantra-s and the corresponding letters that representing each 'Chakra' (confluence of energy channels) are used to awaken each particular chakra by those who specifically practice 'Kundalini Yoga'.

3. It is not the oil which is to be changed but a reduction in the frequency of use. Colds occur in the ordinary body and disappear when the 'Divya Sharira' is attained.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

I am 23 years old and have been practising for around a year and a half with a lot of learning mistakes of course, I came across Brahmacharya when I was searching for ways to end my porn addiction this site has helped me a lot and I thank you. I am having trouble sleeping lately (could not sleep once during a whole night) and I want to know is this due to the energy built up from conserving semen? Also I slip up very rarely and look at porn out of boredom but I refrain from touching myself maybe this cause lack of sleep?
I am a boxer and I find I have way more energy practising semen retention which is positive but I was wondering if boxing could be negative to brahmacharya as I read violence and sex are linked?

Hope to hear from you.
Thanks

Joe

Answer
1. Such occurrences are normal during the first few years of Brahmacharya when purification is in progress. Lack of sleep, fear, illnesses etc. may sometimes manifest. When the body becomes perfect after many years of practice, these disappear.

2. You should never look at porn. It will eventually cause a break and lead to much suffering.

3. Boxing, if carried out as a sport in a limited manner does not cause any problems. Continue with the practice.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Hello,

Is physical bramacharya (which means you dont lose your semen but still think of sex like everyone else and have erection without leakage) brings you the benefits and merit-making of total bramacharya? And is bramacharya necessary to helps one to open the third eye by combining it with yoga techniques?

ANSWER: 1. Mere physical celibacy without mental abstinence will eventually cause a break. One should practice Brahmacharya in thought, word & deed with surrender to God. That alone is Brahmacharya.

2. Yes. Without Brahmacharya, there is no Yoga and no spiritual development.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Thanks,

Last question if you dont mind. In the Yoga Sutra, it says when someone practice samyama on a particular object or quality like lightness or youthfulness one acquire that quality. Do the samayama means one think in a subtle way in a state of meditation and then let go that thought in inner silence? I never really understood that concept of samyama.

Answer
1. Samyama means complete concentration on one particular entity with no other thought. It is achieved by the process of Dharana, Dhyana and Samadhi.

2. When this entity alone occupies the mind for a considerable period of time with unbroken intensity, then the meaning of the concerned seed of meditation becomes known. That state is Samadhi, where, the mind loses its own awareness and is only aware of the concerned seed.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaskar
I am 22 years old. Have started practicing Brahmacharya after coming to know of its advantages. Though till now must have masturbated around 300 times due to ignorance. You spoke about the benefits of wearing a langot in your previous posts. There are certain problems m facing while wearing it. Even other beginners like me might be facing similar problems. So would be really grateful if u can reply elaborately. These are -

1. The video u posted shows langot being worn over underwear and vest. Is it necessary ? couldn't it be worn directly ? Which is a better way ? The only problem wearing it directly is that my genitals get constantly rubbed against the cloth and even hands, so sometimes i get an erection. While wearing it over an underwear never causes this problem ? What to do ?
2. U mentioned that genitals should be held upwards while tieing it. What about penis. Should penis also be held upwards or just kept between the 2 testis. I have tried both ways while holding penis upwards, I constantly feel it, while this doesn't happen when penis is held between testis and langot worn.
3. Should langot be worn during bathing. If yes, then how do we clean our private areas ?
4. While sleeping u mentioned it should be removed to supply free flow of blood to penis. So does it mean no undergarment be worn while sleeping ? or langot be only loosened or a tight brief be worn instead ?
5. Is it true that if langot is worn properly, whatever the stimulus be, there can never be an erection. So even seeing a nude girl or porn if one wears a longot properly he'd we saved from an erection ? only to inquire if langot is worn properly.

6. is there any negative impact of wearing langot improperly ?
7. While doing some asanas wearing langot - the asanas where u lie on stomach and pull legs over hips one by one, i feel rubbing of my genitals, and it excites my genitals though erection doesn't result. But if i keep doing it sometimes half erection occurs.
8. while driving a 2-wheeler or even generally while sitting, if i m wearing a langot, i fell more comfortable to spread legs/ keep them at a distance from each other rather than keeping them joined or closer. Is this natural or i wear langot improperly ?
9. While sitting legs folded, the tightness of langot over genitals is reduced little bit. Is this natural or something wrong with my wearing ?

Thank You very much. I hope the answers to these questions would be helpful to beginners of langot wearers.

Answer

1. The video is only for demonstration purposes. The Langot is NOT worn on any brief or underwear. It is to be worn directly on skin. It generally takes a month or so to get used to the Kaupin as it is firm and gripping unlike the normal brief. With time, one enjoys the priceless benefits which are impossible in the normal brief.

2. The penis rests in its normal position, hanging down.

3. No. It is to be removed while bathing.

4. No undergarment should be worn while sleeping.

5. The Kaupin reduces the possibility of a physical erection. The cause of an erection is however mental thought and unless thoughts are pure, one cannot practice Brahmacharya. Hence the Kaupin alone cannot prevent an erection.

6. Doing anything improperly might give a negative impact, wearing the Kaupin included. This is why the video has been included.

7. This shows that the Kaupin has not been worn properly. A properly worn Kaupin never rubs against the genitals. It integrates the genitals within, cupping them tight, offering no movement and thereby no excitement.

8. It is most natural to experience greater flexibility by wearing the Kaupin.

9. The main cloth & the waist band of the Kaupin are to be pulled tighter while wearing. This will prevent the loose condition.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

QUESTION: i m 21 years old. Must have masturbated over over 300 times. Me and my friends had this doubt since the advent of our adolescent but never answered or either answered incorrectly. This doubt was in relation to masturbation and the impact of its loss.

Once we asked our tuition teacher who used to teach science to us in 8th standard. She said it is fine to masturbated once or twice a week and not more than that provided one takes optimum amount of food and fruits regularly. Even our school teachers, our parents - none ever answered what the impact of loss of semen was. Maybe they themselves never knew.

Thanks to your answers, finally i have realized the importance of it.

My doubts now are -
1. In this era of kalyug - where the laws of brahmacharya are unknown, how does one protect oneself. I mean i will protect my laptop putting K9. What to do for outside world - u walk on streets and those lustful thoughts erupt. If i go to markets, even one look at any young girl, causes lust to erupt. Even young girls are to blame. They wear such raunchy clothes that even one look incites our lower instincts. u go to any shop and u'll find semi-nude girls wallpapers, stickers all over. even male undergarments have semi-nude pictures of girls. So how do i purchase my essential stuff like underwear while practicing Brahmacharya ?

2. TV - any programme whether dance competition, movie even news nowadays are all loaded with nudity. What to do then ? how to help myself.

3. i am an admirer of sports. but have a problem with women in any sports. I would share the same with u and hope to get ur view on it. Nowadays, be it lawn-tennis, table-tennis, badminton, swimming - any sport - in which women participate -they are required to wear short, tight fitting clothes. now according to brahmacharya laws this should be avoided. So does this mean that it is wrong for women to wear shorts and tight fitting clothes for sports. The reply from their side would be it provides space to move, is comfortable. What other alternate clothing could women wear to facilitate their playing ? We can't expect a woman to wear kurta pyjamas in swimming, she's got to wear bikini. But then as per laws of brahmacharya nudity should be totally shunned whereas as per laws of this kalyugi world - women swimming is an international prestigious event. So who is correct here ? What to do ?

Personlly speaking, i love my sisters and their doing doing exercise to remain healthy, but it is also true that if they wear a short, it causes an erection on constant look. Now my sister who is of 21 years wants to join swimming. Seeing her swim causes erection. But i have to daily drop and take her . What to do then ? Is swimming altogether wrong as a sport just as badminton, lawn-tennis. Should women wear full clothes in these sporting events ?
what is the TRUTH ?

I have taken a vow of Akandha Brahmacharya but since m a karmayogi i can't restrain from m duties. But performing these duties which are intermingled with lust, i lose my brahmacharya state - what to do then ?
Having masturbated over 300 times, watched all sorts of porn though never had real sex, i realize that there is no happiness in these. It is only momentary joy. Later a feeling of guilt, physical and mental weakness result. So, i want to remain a Brahmachari now - but given above problems how to fully achieve it in this kalyugi world ?

Kindly Help me. You have shown me the light. Be kind enough to show the way to it.

Om Shanti

ANSWER: 1. When the mind is held within the Atman (self), nothing bothers the Brahmachari. This is achieved through the tenets of Yoga and meditation. Hence meditate on the self with surrender to God. Wear a 'Langot' as explained in previous answers. It is very beneficial for those aspiring cent percent Brahmacharya.

2. One should cut down on watching material which excites the mind during the initial few years. Then, after much advancement one never feels the need for television and is not affected even if viewed.

3. The laws of Brahmacharya only ask you to merge your mind into your self. What women wear or do is not your concern. Be true to your objective and let go of other things. This is the only way to succeed. Such problems arise only when the aspirant thinks more about women and their wardrobe instead of being centered to his own Atman (self) and Sadhana (practice).

4. It is not swimming which is wrong but one's perspective which needs correction. Hence persevere in the said methods of Yoga with surrender to the Lord. Things will stabilize after a few years of stringent practice.

5. You cannot forsake any of your duties. This world is HIS show and he will not allow anyone to deviate from the script. Hence carry on in the path shown by destiny, playing your part as an actor does on stage, internally calm, yet externally displaying various emotions, all the time centered in the self.

The way has already been shown. Go through the past answers thoroughly. Each and every answer should be slowly read and the essence absorbed and applied in practice. This is the first help you should do for yourself.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Thank you very much sir for your replies. I was a bit unconvinced about 3rd question. To rephrase it, what i meant was -
You have mentioned during initial years of Brahmacharya, one should maintain complete aloofness from things which excite one's lower instincts. So, in these initial years i should shun all activities which incites lust in me - whether it is women swimming or women lawn-tennis or young girls wearing raunchy clothes on streets, or semi-nude pics of girls on posters, etc. And once kundalini rises i can relax a bit and then enjoy women sports. Is this what you are trying to put across ?

Thank You

Answer
Sometimes, life circumstances are such that they may not appear conducive to the practice of Brahmacharya. While the Brahmachari tries his best to avoid such situations, there could be those which are unavoidable.

At times like that, one has to take this as a test from destiny and win through the situation by keeping the mind centered in the self and reminding himself of the unreal nature of the world and the human body which appears beautiful at youth but is always nothing more than a pot of flesh prone to decay.

When this concept is kept alive, the formless Lord whose power shines as beauty alone will be seen and the body of a woman discounted.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Namaste Prabhu...
1.How would you define "BOREDOM"?
And why is it that our body always wants itself to be absorbed in some or the other thing? Can't it remain happy by having access to food,clothing and shelter alone?Why does it always wander after something that keeps it completely absorbed?
2.In your previous answers,you have stressed on "SINCERITY"?I used to overlook this word.What actually does it mean by being SINCERE in Brahmacharya?(Just for my clarification).

Thank You Prabhu!Hare Krsna!

Answer

1. One's real nature of the Atman (pure self) is that of Ananda (bliss). Since this is obscured through false association with the Ahamkara (Ego), the individual is forever in search of happiness, not knowing how and where to find it. Thus every man's search for happiness is his unconscious quest to know the self. When the Jiva finally realizes that such bliss cannot be found anywhere else on the outside, it finally withdraws into its own Atman (self) which had all along been the greatest and only source of infinite happiness. It then finds the greatest peace and joy.

2. Suppose you are crossing the street when a truck suddenly comes towards you at great speed... How will you react? You will run out of the path of the truck with such force and speed that you yourself never thought existed. It may now be said that you were 'sincere' in your efforts while escaping the truck. There was complete honesty in your actions with no other thought. You were completely 'sincere' in the act of escaping. Such sincerity when applied by the Brahmachari in overcoming the 'Ahamkara'(Ego) is what is required.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Hello,

In an ancient post it says: 2. 'Kundalini Awakening' is the symbolic representation of the rise of consciousness. It occurs automatically without any effort in case of the Yogi who practices Brahmacharya & meditation for self-realization. Different mantra-s and the corresponding letters that representing each 'Chakra' (confluence of energy channels) are used to awaken each particular chakra by those who specifically practice 'Kundalini Yoga'.

-I would like to ask if you can awaken kundalini without the use of the specific kundalini yoga? I mean can you awaken it by repetitive prayer or just concentrating in emptiness like zazen?

2-In other religions like christian mysticism which possess no tantric teachings, many medieval monks acquired many superpowers but at the same time they didnt know anything about kundalini energy or yoga, how can it be?

Thanks

Answer
1. What matters is the rise of consciousness into higher domains and finally into the Atman (self). The means are many. Prayer with Bhakti (devotion) can also be one of the means.

2. How do you know they didn't? One always becomes aware of the truth as one progresses towards the self. Not proclaiming the same with similar names does not mean ignorance. 'Consciousness' is only ONE, call it by what name you may. If you read the 'Bible' and digest its essence, this query will not arise.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

I was very low and nerdy person and now too. I decided to practice full bramacharuya for some 3 months now. Before practicing this I was very afraid of what others say of me, wanted to be appreciate by others and was always bullied for years...

Now I started to practice bramacharya and trying to concentrate my gaze and mind during night hours. Im happy to be in the few really to know this big secret and now when other people talk to me I dont feel naturally any need to look at them when talking, and im not interested in their conversations anymore. Its like I lost interest in things but at the same time very confident. It gives advantages.

Thank you, your teachings change life very much.

Answer
Those who practice unbroken Brahmacharya with devotion & surrender to God overcome all fears and attain success in their respective fields without doubt. They eventually attain to great bliss and peace, followed by Enlightenment, completing the purpose of the human birth.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Welcome again from Poland Dhananjay, namaste. For quite some time I have been battling a recurring problem of irregular sleep patterns and oversleeping, which was a way to "escape" reality back in the old consciousness when it was unbearable and fearful. Due to many years of that escapism it's extremely hard for me now to regulate my sleep and I tend to lack energy and focus. As a matter of fact I am writing this to you in the middle of the night (3 am) and last night I slept 14 hours straight. No alarm clocks can wake up me as I'm simply.. oversleeping them. Please let me know if you know ways to improve my concentration and sleeping habits since they play a vital role in spiritual practice. I've been trying to give it all to my guru and simply trust, but it feels like i need more of a tool, something more practical and i want to use no more time on sleep no matter how tempting it seems to me.

Answer
This problems solves in the course of time only after applying the tenets of a Yogic lifestyle with a moderate qty of vegetarian food & the Yogic practices described in past answers.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,
I have below questions:

1)Can ingesting expelled semen be useful as a method of re-utilising lost vitality .If no then why as have read supporting arguments re. same as body digests it in same way as other minerals/vitamins & proteins.Is any essence lost.I would like you to clarify in details as there are lots of theories floating around about this & we may get distracted with scientific publishes.

2)With what aim should one marry & bring progeny into this world.Unwanted progeny is at root of all evil.

Answer
1. Ingesting expelled semen will not reverse the loss of 'Bindu' & Prana that have been lost. Debility caused by the loss of 'Bindu'(seed) is irreversible.

2. It is not for us to accept or reject marriage or progeny as wanted or unwanted. The only aim one should be serious about is to know one's self. If this is carried out, all other things including marriage or progeny will occur by their own accord, if in one's destiny, as willed by HIM. Life events or non-events do not trouble the Yogi who is fixed in his Atman (self) with surrender to the Supreme.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Is it true that long celibacy leads to testicular atrophy and low testosterone?

It is said that when we live celibate life in time we start losing our sexual desire. Isn't that because of the atrophy and consequently less activity of the testicles or is it due to change in mind?

Answer
1. Reduction in sexual desire as regards the advanced Brahmachari occurs further to dissolution of 'Agnyana' (ignorance) surrounding the Atman (soul) and not due to any other reason. Such a reduction of desire cannot be compared to loss of sexual desire which occurs in ordinary people due to health problems concerning the body or mind.

2. All hormones are regulated to the right levels from a life of Yoga & Brahmacharya. There is never an imbalance.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

Pls guide me in predicament below.

Suppose a dear friend's health is in a very bad situation & he needs an organ donor badly.In such a situation what am I supposed to do.If I donate to him my body wion't be in a condition to follow tenets of yoga for self realization.If I don't I feel guilt of selfishness.

I have heard self realization if foremost duty of a human.Then in such cases why do I feel selfish or think yogi's too are selfish prioritizing their self realization first.

At other times I feel people are suffering their karma why to intercede in their life lessons.

Kindly help this guilt isn't allowing me to continue my sadhana in full vigour.

Answer
Your Dharma (duty) is to realize your self first. Wrong concepts flower in one's mind due to lack of awareness of his own identity. Hence first know who you are.

That which is in the course of destiny transpires whether one wants it or doesn't. Everything occurs only by the will of the higher power that runs the show. Hence perform your Dharma and leave other things to the Supreme. If donating a part of one's body to another is in the course of his/her destiny, then that too will occur. It is not in your purview to decide for or against.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi

When there is a legend that tells about siddhas in south India or taoists alchemists who had extreme longevity, does it means they can live centuries in a physical body if they choose so? WHat was the main secret?

Thanks

Answer
Preventing the descent of Bindu (seed of life) into becoming semen is the secret of health and longevity. After the Yogi becomes an Urdhvareta, his seed does not come down from the 'Ajna Chakra' in the region of the brain but remains there as 'Amrita' (nectar). The body then becomes immune to decay and disease, staying fresh and healthy.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaste Prabhu!
In your previous answers,you have recommended seven to eight hours of sleep, what if one gets only five hours of sleep?
Does it have any negative effects on Brahmacharya,Intelligence and Memory?

Answer
Seven hours of sleep is the normal requirement for a layman. As one progresses in a life of Yoga, the need for sleep reduces. Sleep also depends on the nature of work done through the day. Those who indulge in continuous & strenuous work physically or mentally need more sleep as compared to those who perform moderate work.

If one feels fresh and healthy through five hours of sleep, it is not an issue.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

Is that true for example that if you practice TOTAL bramacharya for a long period the body itself could be moved easily and become more flexible? Thats why I Feel and never have fatigue in the neck even in an uncorfotable position.

What about if you add concentration on a single point, is that the cause of the yogis levitating? When I practice meditation like that I feel the body after meditation is even lighter when walking and flexible, but never been able to levitate...

Thanks

Answer
1. Brahmacharya when carried out with a life of Yoga & meditation improves the body in every front and makes it as it was during childhood. Transmuted semen charges the body with life and vitality in a way which nothing else can. Different people experience different degrees of benefits, based on their individual constitution.

2. First know your self. Meditate on the self. You may then decide about levitation.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I mean like to influence minds or project thoughts to others as a kind of spiritual communication or telepathy. Some master of yoga and other occult traditions teach how to project thoughts from a distance, even without talking. I would like to try this to see if it's humanly possible. Is it a good idea to try this?

Thanks

Answer
It is possible after a few years of unbroken/honest Brahmacharya and meditation. The quest for any 'Siddhi' (super-normal power) is however not recommendable, keeping in mind the fact that all these powers become an impediment to realize the self.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaste Prabhuji!
What is the difference between consuming 'onions and garlic raw' and 'cooked with food'? Does it make any difference?
In your previous answers,you have recommended it to consume them raw once a week and in medicinal doses.
Won't it be an impediment to the practice of Brahmacharya?
Thank You Prabhuji!

Answer
1. Onion and garlic lose their medicinal properties further to cooking. Hence they are best consumed raw.

2. Eating them raw, in the dosage mentioned once a week helps purify the circulatory & digestive system along with many other benefits and poses no problem.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello sir,

I would like to ask a question. Is that true that good deeds are more appreciated by God than contemplation or meditation itself? Ive read this is a way of acquiring merit to be closer to God. But since India is the country which had the oldest spirituality which has produced the higher numbers of saints or holy person with siddhis powers in history can you tell me if with yoga you acquire merit too? Other religions say good deeds is more important than training the mind in concentration. If this was true how is it that many hermit attained Nirvana and possessed siddhis in large numbers? Training the mind depends on you and good deeds if you are a beggar is almost impossible... I hope you understand what I mean.

Answer
1. To whom does merit concern? To the Ego. You, the Atman (pure self) are beyond merit & demerit, being a part of the matchless Supreme. Hence one should never perform good deeds with the thought -"I will acquire merit by doing so". Doing it only strengthens the Ego and Agnyana (ignorance).

The attitude should be to perform a particular activity by surrendering the fruits of such actions to God and never to oneself. The attitude should be -"God performs these good deeds through my mind and body which are only mediums. I do not do anything, being the mere witness. Hence the question of merit or demerit does not concern me".

2. Good deeds done without the 'I-ness' (i.e by not taking credit) alone are appreciated by God and not those done for merit or some other benefit.

3. There is no activity higher or greater than contemplation/meditation on one's Atman (self), carried out to realize the self. Merit, which is due comes by itself to such a true Yogi who however does not care for it, knowing it to be a matter concerning the Ego and not his true self.

One should let go of the Ego which is concerned with these impermanent benefits and strive to realize one's self. This is the purpose of the human birth.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Hare krishna Dhananjaya sir,
Sir to be happy in this world our desire should be satisfied legaly. If one tries to satisfy in illicit way it accrues bad activities which will put in suffering in future. It is true that satisfaction to senses is ignorance.One should strive for self realisation. But at present I'm unable to rule over my mind. My mind is being agitated more in these days. I want a kind of life which is full of material opulence and definately bramhacharya. Because a person having samskara of brhmacharya always accrues good activity which is the source of both material opulence and Salvation according to one's desire. Sir destiny can not be side stepped. But what can I do? In these days I am reaping more of my bad activity of past. Sir those who were studing less than me are well settled now. Definately it is all being happened by superior authority. But at last I beg only one answer sir that how can I be destined for wealth in near future? Can you please give some mantra to satisfy superior authority and thereby my pain will be reduced. Sir last year I practiced 10 months brhmacharya and put an end to it due to frustration. Till now I have already spent 3 months in musterbation. Day by day I am not improving. Once again I need your help that how can I be destined for wealth in near future . Sir please forgive me if my question has no value.

ANSWER: Strive to realize the self with surrender and Bhakti (devotion) to the Lord. Apply the Yama - Niyama-s of Yoga honestly till they become the natural way of life.

After the Yogi becomes an Urdhvareta through such practice of unbroken Brahmacharya with surrender to the Lord and much meditation, he comes by wealth and is well respected. When you succeed in making such austerity and virtue into the default way of life unconditionally, your wish will transpire. There is no other way.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Hare krishna sir,
Sir it is sure that I'm in ignorance. The symptom of ignorance is Attachment to this body and mind. If attach ment is not present , I'll be happy. The more attachment to this body and mind, the more our wants. Sir there are different process to diminish attachment, but I believe as a vishnu devotee regular practice of brahmachrya and chanting lord krishna name will reduce our attachment from this body and increase attachment to krishna. Sir let me know you that if one person practice brhmachrya from age of 10 when sexual idea comes in our mind, he will be stronger mentally and physically. But unfortunately I was not able to make it happen. I addicted to musterbation daily definately bad activity of past lives. Everybody isn't caught by addiction. The person like me may be many who has done bad activity in past. I got rid of addiction at the age almost 22. Due to mercy of god a feeling came in my heart that I'm a soul which can never be desroyed by any means. And it worked. But in every two months I wasn't able to control my hands due to strong daily habit. A year latter I became very confident that I can maintain physical brhmacharya 100% by applying same principle that I'm a soul and can never be destroyed. But what happend next I was thinking only phyisical brhmacharya is sufficient to restore our mental and physical strength. And beliving this I spent one year more in wathing porn with out musterbation. But I came to know that there is no meaning with out mental brhmacharya. And I experinced the same. I didn't improve mentally and physically, rather I lost my eyesight and I'm wearing -1.25 glass. And I was caught by urine infection due weakness of bladder. Then I decided to practice brhmacharya mentally. In 2012 month of june I started mental brhmacrya cent percent physical brhmacharya expecting that it'll give me physical strength and tremendous mental strength. But one part happened and other part did n't happen. Starting from one month of brhmachrya till 10months I felt a heat in the body 24 hours and incresing physical strength day by day. But I completly disatisfied with mental power. I gained some concentration but not one genious mind. Actually i can tell from my experience that brhmacharya restores more physical streng th and mental strength.That is why now I believe more on mental exercise to develop concentraion along with brhmacharya. Brhmacharya can do everything but it takes years together mental brhmacharya to gain one pointed concentration like Aurvedic medicine. Due to strong attachment I am feeling pain due to balding. Like this I am suffering a lot of problems. I know that it cann't avoided. That is why I trying to bear this. Please God bless me to be healthy and wealthy. I also require your blessings because you have immense merit of brhmacharya. If you don't mind can I ask question once again that if I practice brhmachrya for 4 to 5 years, will I be definately destined for health, wealth , rich and other opulence and fortune. If yes I'll practice full heartdly. Let me know you practicing brhmacharya is a huge task, my mind is very impure and I require to do hard work to keep my mind pure by not letting to impulse or thought to lust or willful indulgence. Due to impurity I have to practice once again putting a lot of restriction like no casting to woman , walking down head in the street, watchin only good programme in TV, talking woman in case of necessity and Most requirement is blessings of god. Sir please don't forget to answer my question that can I be destined for wealth and fortune after 4 or 5 years of brhmacharya. Definately it'll be decided by superior authority but can you give some idea to encourage me more. At last I'll say practicing brhmacharya is felt like taking deadly poison because brhmacharya has not become my natural character and it gives me each and every second pain. But for betterment I have to. I cann't put all my demerits and merits in words. Please ignore my stupidity and forgive me due to impure thoughts about other woman in my heart. One day I'll be a perfect brhmacharya and sound character. All auspious reqires will and blessings of krishna. May god make me a perfect devotee and pure krishna devotee.

Answer
Your desire for wealth is more than your desire for Brahmacharya. How then can you expect to succeed? Let go of the 'I' which is going through all these experiences and practice without expectations as a service to the Lord. That which is to come will come by HIS grace at the right time, for there isn't anyone kinder than HIM.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

I would like to know your opinion. When someone has prostate cancer sometimes the doctor give him periodic anti-hormonal treatment which means that after the injection the body stops producing semen for some months (4 or 6). Technically its like a castration.

Do you think such a person if they practice yoga can have benefits even if the person stopped producing semen because of the chemical treatment?

Thank you

Answer
The practice of Yoga with Brahmacharya in thought, word & deed is beneficial to the entire body & mind in course of time without doubt, the above condition included.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Sir,

If its not too much asking, I would like to know your interpretation about this practice about yoga fromhttp://www.sacred-texts.com/tao/ttx/ttx04.htm.

"He who understands the Spirit and the Breath may live for ever; he who rigorously maintains the Empty and Non-existent may thereby nourish the Spirit and the Breath. Spirit and Breath are One; they come from Emptiness and Non-existence. From the disruption of Chaos until now they have never either diminished or increased. Wherefore it is said that the Spirit of the Deep is immortal. When a man is able to discard his senses of sight and hearing, and to abstain from understanding and knowing, this amounts to a rigorous maintenance [of the Empty and Non-existent], by means of which he nourishes [the Spirit and the Breath]. But if he recognises the Actual and the Existent he will be deceived, and he himself the means of shortening his own life."

Thanks

Answer
You are the Atman (pure consciousness) who is infinite, formless and unseen. The Ego (through the senses) considers you non-existent & empty, with its limited understanding and non-understanding; while you really are without a beginning or an end, full of the full without place for the empty in what people call emptiness...

Being full in such emptiness, unseen to the senses & the world, you are the void within the void and without the void, for there is nothing but the void. Is there anything deeper than such?

Spirit and breath are offshoots of this void, as is a beam of light from a lamp. Just as the beam of light never exists as compared to the lamp which projects or withdraws it, spirit and breath appear and disappear by the will of that power that exists without a beginning or an end.

Be the self, in the self, as the self, void within, void without, for there is neither he, nor she; neither life nor death there & everywhere.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

I have had drug problems (weed and steroids) since the age of 17 on and off to the present age of 23 I have also had porn addiction which I have been fighting for over a year and has gotten a lot better with the help of this website and other sources. I stop smoking weed 3 years ago however I replaced this drug with steroids which I am now currently in the recovery stage as I recently went to hospital due to leg infection. I am a good person with a conscience who suffers from inferiority complex who feels the need to use drugs as an escape but I have realised one must be natural to feel love and happiness. I am grateful to have the love of my family who have helped me realise the error of my ways. The steroids made celibacy 10x harder for me as the thoughts of sex were magnified along with psychosis. I also found that when I did not ejaculate for around 7 days whilst on steroids when I finally did all these bad emotions all released at once leading to suicidal thoughts and tears. I just want to ask you how brahmacharya should be used, how does it relate to light power and also I wanted to know is this the source of good power people have who are highly gifted wether that being extremely smart or extremely atheletic? Can bad people have this such as hitler?

Hope to hear from you
Would much appreciate it

Joseph

Answer
1. To experience your true self is Brahmacharya. Sexual abstinence and transmutation of the energy so retained is the means. To completely identify consciousness with the Atman (pure self) forever is the objective, achieving which one rests in his true state of being.

To practice Brahmacharya, one should transmute energy towards it, else the energy finds a less worthy outlet. The tenets of Yoga which have been discussed in past answers are one of the effective means for the same. With such practice, you will eventually identify with your true self which is of the nature of bliss, peace, knowledge, love & purity.

2. All power comes from the Atman (pure self) alone which is an indivisible part of the Supreme power called God. There is no other source of power or energy. Hence all good has nothing but the Atman as its source. The very same energy when colored through 'Agnyana' (ignorance) manifests as what people call 'bad'. In reality, there is neither good, nor bad but only pure consciousness, beyond both these. Good and bad are the illusions experienced by the Ego and do not exist in reality. To get over this illusion and reside in that state of one's true being is the objective of your birth.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Whn you start practcing bramacharya at young age let say 20-25 years old, you dont have many initial or big reaction because desintoxification right? I mean I feel good but at the same time i didnt have many symptoms.

Answer
Reactions or their absence depends on various factors governed by one's past & present Karma. Some people experience these immediately upon start of the practice while others experience them later. What is required is to focus on honest Sadhana (practice) to merge the mind into the Atman (pure self).

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaste Prabhuji!
In your previous answers,you have suggested physical activity,intellectual activity and God meditation to channelize the excess energy conserved through Brahmacharya,otherwise it gets converted into tamasic energy.
I am experiencing the same thing,Tamasic enegy(feeling lazy,inerita,etc..)
So,my question is that
1.Can Surya Namaskar replace sports for physical activity?I don't find enough time to play sports and have no one to play with,...so can I practice Surya Namaskar instead of cricket badminton,etc...
2.If one sits in Padmasana,concentrating on his breath and repeating some mantra mentally, what actually is it?would it be right to call it meditation or is it japa?I do not have enough time to do mediation and japa both...so i will have to sacrifice either of these,which one should i give up?Meditation or japa?
Thank You prabhuji!

Answer
1. Perform a few warm up exercises (such as jogging etc.) and include a few more Asana-s along with Suryanamaskar.

2. Perform meditation as suggested in past answers.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I am a beginner in japa(meditation), though i have been practicing yoga for a long time now.

Whenever i do meditation i feel a lot of stress in the head. Its like someone is pressing my head from all sides.

My way of doing meditation is: following a mantra in my mind and concentrate at the center of eyebrows or little bit above.

Q1)- What's the reason for the pain?

Q2)- When will i be able to see the divine light which will guide me(soul) to the almighty? i mean how much time does it take?

Answer
1. This is an indication that purification of the physical body has not been properly attended to. Apply all the Yogic practices as suggested in past answers. Perform meditation as described in earlier. This will solve the issue.

2. Some people see light at the start while others don't. Seeing any kind of light is not necessary. It is only a distraction. What is required is to develop perfect control of the mind in day to day activity and eventually merge it into the Atman. He who achieves this is alone the Brahmachari and not one who see's some light or vision.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

Years ago I received treatment from a woman who referred to herself as a "light healer." I believe she was a sincere, well-meaning person. She told me that she could see "cracks" in my aura along the back of my neck. She said these cracks were the result of my earlier use of hallucinogenic drugs. She seemed to suggest these cracks could cause emotional problems (of which I've had many) but that certain aura healers could repair these cracks. It is true I had extensive drug use in my youth and had several terrifying experiences. I never got these cracks repaired. Should I be concerned with this or will spiritual practice along with brahmacharya take care of it?

Answer
Simply ignore the past and adhere to the correct and honest practice of Brahmacharya to merge the mind into the self. Everything else will be taken care of.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Prabhuji,

I used to smoke weed for 7 years. I am 20 years old and obese. My mind has lost its lustre due to this bad habit and I am performing at low power despite having quit.
1) Will I ever recover my brain power?
2) Will I be able to learn the vedas and become a priest as my birth duty dictates despite having this problem? Plus I will soon have to marry mid-education - can I still continue as a grihasti brahmacharya? What can I do?
3) Is kapalbhati, anulom vilom, walking/jogging and a few yogic stretches enough to lose weight?
4) Is sharing a room (with joint beds) with some family member okay to save power consumption (to use the a.c) or is it detrimental to brahmacharya?
5) Is a cluttered house detrimental to brahmacharya? I heard clutter holds Rahu's energy and he encourages abrahmacharya and pleasures.
Kindly guide my personal situation. I am not interested in moksha but want to do wordly work without doership and enjoy spiritual bliss.

Answer
1. Practice honest Brahmacharya with devotion & surrender to God. This will give the best possible outcome.

2. Your birth duty is to know your Atman (self). Nothing more. One's profession has no connection with realizing the self & neither does marriage. Just persevere in your Dharma of striving in the path shown by God through Yoga & Brahmacharya. HE will do that which is destined.

3. Yes, if these are coupled with a yogic lifestyle & Brahmacharya as suggested in past answers.

4. Nothing matters as long as the mind is intent on its rightful objective. Changes are necessary if this intensity fluctuates or wanes.

5. 'Cleanliness (both external & internal-mind) is Godliness'. To the extent possible, being neat & tidy always helps oneself & others.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

There are some stories about prophets such as Elijah, who even if he attained the "Self" were not really transformed by it since he killed many people including youngsters who call him bald man... In India too there was a yogi who called fire from the sky on am entire village. The entire old Bible is full of examples like that (Moses, Joshua. Loth). Why is because the times were hard and violent?

Answer
The enlightened sage does not have a mind of his own but is a direct tool of the Almighty. Hence the actions of such a sage are the actions of God. The Enlightened being also does not do anything with his own will, as no such will exists. Neither does such a being react to praise or censure internally.

One who has 'siddhi-s' (supernormal powers) is not necessarily enlightened and can be far from it while the enlightened sage has all such powers within his realm.

Time itself does not exist for the enlightened sage. However, the sage continues to play his 'part' in the drama called life under the will of the Almighty. The difference between such a sage and the layman is that the sage is fully aware of his true self and rests there permanently, looking at the world as a dream, completely unaffected internally with what happens or does not happen, though displaying various apparent emotions as an actor does while playing his role.

Getting angry at being rebuked or beaming with happiness at praise is not the sign of enlightenment.

Completely free from the shackles of desire, anger, greed, attachment, arrogance and jealousy under any circumstance, the sage is pure consciousness manifest, the very representation of the 'Brahman' (Almighty) in flesh & blood. He is always in his state of supreme bliss, completely content in the self by the self. He is as innocent as a little child, yet there is nothing which he does not know.

The same cannot be said of the layman who perceives the world & its situations as real and goes through the dualities of pain & pleasure.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
i am happy by meditation.i have few question..
1.what should be duration of meditation?
2.i have my mouth,throat filled by cough after 5 minutes of meditation?
and i m not able to exceed meditation by 5 -6 min. ..please suggest me something to increase my meditatiom time.
i m doing meditation as per your teqnique.

Answer
1. As long as possible and whenever possible. Eventually, one is always in meditation on the self, whatever be the external activity.

2. This is an indication that the body is yet to be purified. Apply the Yogic techniques described in past answers to purify the body. Things will improve in course of time.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaste Sir,
i have started wearing langot and it has been almost 20 days. i m 22 years old and a student. I have several problems which i would like to put up -

1. After removing langot before sleeping i get little itching on sides and marks have come up on my hips because of the tight grip, is this ok ?

2. while sitting i can feel my testis slightly touching the place on which i m sitting. resultantly i have to keep my legs somewhat wide open to be comfortable. If i bring my legs close to each other so as to touch knee to knee, i can't do so. this exerts good pressure on my genitals. Is this fine ?

3. is excessive sleep bad for brahmacharya ? how many hours is adequate ?

Thank You

Answer
1. Yes. This is harmless.

2. When the Langot is worn firm and tight, the testicles are held firm, integral to the body and not away from it. The condition you describe is an indication that the cloth has not been pulled tight enough. Wrapping it tight will solve the problem. There is no harm done while pressing the knees together.

3. Seven hours.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaste Prabhu!
Is there anything called as 'mental laziness' where one does not like to give any work to his brain?
I am experiencing same thing I don't know why...
And my academics are going to start and I am worried about this..

Or is it just agnana,ignorance that is making me feel so and there is no such thing?
The above is silly and that is why I have posted it as a 'private one'.

Answer
1. Tamas (inertia) is the cause of physical as well as mental laziness. It is eradicated by subjecting the body & mind to adequate constructive activity. If all the tenets of Yoga described in past answers are applied, inertia gradually reduces and disappears.

2. This very body & mind are the results of 'Agnyana' (ignorance). Those who attain complete 'Gnyana' (knowledge of the Atman) become free from birth & death.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dhananjaya,
I have been following the practices as advised in your responses for the last 10 months.
Of late I have been getting a lot of dreams, and when I have tried to understand the same from many "dream interpretation" websites, one of the common meanings that comes up is that there could be some kind of a spiritual growth; I seem to be getting insights into many issues that I face in my daily life especially at work.
Is this normal as one continues one's practices? How should one react to such dreams, if at all? Thanks.
Regards,
Ganesh

Answer
1. Positive feelings which may arise as a result of dreams are to be used as a morale boost in the practice to realize the self.

2. Negative feelings are to be discarded.

Dreams concern the unreal Ego and not the self. The self alone is real, while everything else is an illusion.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi,
Can you pls advise any mid stilling (calming) exercises especially when one is in the office or a public place?
Regards,
Ganesh

Answer
Take a few deep breaths, relax the body & mind, close the eyes if possible and realize yourself to be the Atman (self), infinite, an indivisible part of the all powerful cosmic being (Lord). This is your true state of being, formless, in the void, full of bliss, peace and eternal existence. It is of the nature of silence. Nothing touches or affects you, the Atman who is limitless and without attributes.

The world, thoughts and circumstances are all illusions on this eternal self which is always distinct from the illusion itself as is a piece of gold, pure as ever, despite covered by dust.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

1-Can concentration of your mind in one thoughts or what is called one-pointed meditation for long periods of time helps your health or help you achieve longevity?

2-And if yes what is the cause of that, is it because your prana enter your body in more quantity when your thoughts stops?

I would like to practice this and achieve just 4 or 5 hours of sleeping.

Thanks

Answer
1. The single pointed focus should be on the formless self and not on other objects. Such meditation contributes to health and longevity.

2. The Atman (self) is the source of all energy and power. It is the source which is powering the mind as well, just as a battery powers a bulb. When the mind which acts as the barrier between consciousness and the self is overcome through merger into its source, it merges into this void while the physical body gets recharged with Prana (vital energy) from the infinite self.

Those who achieve such thought-free meditation on the self require lesser sleep.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

-->I wish to get clarity from you on the seemingly contradictory aspects of keeping up lineage as a way of paying off 'pitra rin' & strict celibacy leading to state of urdhvareta wherein the procreative fluids dry up & are redirected in both males & females.

-->When this is so how is a strict urdhvareta(male/female) supposed to bring forth offsprings into this world or such a practise/tapas is to be let gone of for time period.

I'm asking this in lieu of comman man who succeeds in redirecting his fluids but isn't capable/knowledgeable in any other way to produce children.Have heard there are many other yogic methods other than sexual intercourse to bring forth children into this world.

Answer
1. One becomes an 'Urdhvareta' only after getting done with procreation in marriage (if having a child is destined). It is an advanced stage. That is how the Lord arranges for things. These are divine events that occur by HIS will and not by that of the aspirant.

2. The common man should adhere to the right practice of Brahmacharya to the best of his ability with devotion to God to know his self. He should not worry about the status of the Urdhvareta or another. When such a Dharma is rightly followed, all things are taken care of by HIM at the right time in the order required.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir

] What are the benefits of Chanting Gayatri mantra in daily life?

] Why chanting of each mantra for 108 times? or what denotes 108?

] Sir please watch this video http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=JxKRHkEw-a8 in this video the Yogi flies like a rocket, in which samadi state is it possible?

regards

SARWAM KHALVIDHAM BRAHMAN

Answer
1. It helps overcome "Agnyana' (ignorance) and connect to the Supreme.

2. The 'Jiva' (individual consciousness) goes through 108 stages in the process of evolution and finally attains liberation. Chanting of a mantra 108 times is the symbolic representation of transgressing these stages with the final aim of liberation.

3. He who flies up or comes down does not exist in Samadhi. Let go of this useless penchant for Siddhi-s and first realize your true self which occupies all space and time and has nowhere to fly or move. The infinite universe itself is within you who has no boundaries.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Namaskar
I am 22 years old. After reading this website I resolved to follow brahmacharya throughout my life. Would like to state certain facts to assist you appreciate my doubts. Before taking Brahmacharya Vow:
-physical masturbation around 300 times
-mental masturbation around 1000 times or even more (could recall)

1. Though it has been 1 month now and i have not at all masturbated. I took care of all essentials of brahmacharya and my been successful in it. I didn't suppress but sublimated libidinous urges. I have been extremely careful in avoiding all sensual stuff whether at net (by installing K9 software as u suggested) or TV or public spaces. However, i think there was a mental fall a couple of times. Actually the problem is that there are almost 50 percent girls in my college. They wear all sorts of raunchy clothes. I treat them as mothers and try to keep away. But the problem comes when i go for food - at breakfast, lunch and dinner, as the mess is common for both boys and girls. Some girls wear so short clothes that even a look causes sexual excitement. I just look my food and do not see else-wear to avoid this. However, at times while am eating some or the other girl comes and sits next to me while eating. If she wears decent clothes it doesn't matter. But sometimes the clothes are so short (i mean their cleavage can be clearly seen, and shorts lay bare their entire leg region barring only hip area). In such situations what shall i do ? If I get up and sit elsewear, they will feel bad and generally would not be a sign of good etiquette. but if i sit there, it takes great exertion to eat food and talk to them avoiding their semi-nudity.

what shall i do ?

2. Initially while starting Brahmacharya vow took me great deal to avoid any sensuous object. however, in 1 month i feel more comfortable and confident. I feel more self-restraint in myself. So shall i now sit with girls while eating or no this is the just the tip of iceberg ?

3. on net as well as on tv i avoided any sort of sensual stuff - be it woman sports or vulgar films or songs. I even restrained speaking vulgar words. Now i feel more confident. Shall i still continue with same restraint or can a little flexibility be given ?

Thank You
Om Tat Sat

ANSWER: 1. Such challenges are faced by all Brahmachari-s. These are hurdles which one should overcome through diligent Sadhana and much meditation on the self. In the course of a few years of unbroken practice, one gets access to 'Gnyana' (knowledge of the truth) which results in non-reaction under such circumstances by hinging on to the Atman (self).

2. Till the Atman (self) is not realized, one is always at the tip of the iceberg. Every aspirant has to do whatever is required to maintain cent percent Brahmacharya in thought, word & deed.

3. Answer 2. covers Query 3.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: namaskar
though this may sound rude but i cannot but stop asking you. Sir, are you a urdhreta, have you achieved perfect brahmacharya, have you realized your atman ?

I have reposed great trust on you and therefore am forced to ask this. For how do i trust someone's methods who himself is trying the same, how can i trust someone who himself is not the perfect one ?

This is not to impugn your incredible service but clear a genuine doubt

thank you

Answer
To know if someone is the 'Perfect One', one himself has to first become perfect. A 'Gnyani' can be identified only by another Gnyani, for residence in the self is wholly internal without any external characteristics. This query will get answered all by itself then.

If the Lord wills, HE might make you follow these methods for the development of Brahmacharya. Else, HE might not. Hence leave the matter to HIM.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
hello sir
1. I have been practicing brahmacharya for almost a month. You mentioned that waking up early at brahmamuhurata and doing yog asanas is beneficially for brahamacharya. as of now i don't have any time of sleeping and waking. it keeps on changing with time. So how shall i follow it generally i sleep at 11 and wake at 6 so shall i straight away sleep at 10 and start waking up at 5 is there any harm in all of a sudden starting something ?

2. i am suffering from ama (weak digestion as a result of which sticky material comes out of anus - sometimes). i wear a langot. if i tie langot tightly i feel like defecating, feel movt. of bowels. so is this because of ama production or wrong wearing of langot ?

3. in Irritable Bowel Syndrome (IBS) should langot be worn less tight comparatively ?

4. is loss of semen a cause of weak digestion ? i must have masturbated over 200 times.

thank you

Answer
1. Gradually retard the sleeping time by 15 minutes & advance the waking time by 15 minutes everyday. Ultimately, sleeping at 9.00 and waking by 4.00 A.M should be achieved.

2. All these problems are the result of ill health caused by past karma and nothing else. Indulge in the regular practice of a life of Yoga & Brahmacharya as described in past answers. Go through each and every answer very slowly, absorb the essence and apply it in practice. In a few years, all health issues will gradually go away.

3. The Langot is not the issue. If unbroken Brahmacharya is practiced with devotion & surrender to realize the Supreme, all these troubles will get weeded out.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Should a brahmachari conserve milk and ghee.
If not then why they are included in satvic diet.

Answer
Adequate amounts of milk and ghee are a rich supply of nutrients and also Satwic. They promote good health. Hence their inclusion in diet.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
It is possible to practice brahmacharya if you eat meat and is that the reason why meat is prohibited for yogis, its a brahmacharya related reason?

At the same time some religious saints from diverse religions ate meat even in Buddhism or Jesus.

Thanks

Answer
1. Meat being highly Rajasic in nature has the tendency to irritate the mind and cause aggression. It can easily stimulate the senses, awakening sexual urges. It needs much physical activity to be properly digested & assimilated. Hence it is suitable for those indulging in strenuous physical work. Under lack of such activity, it becomes toxic within the system causing mental and physical ill health. It is hence not preferred by the Yogi.

2. The mind of a saint cab be known only after becoming one. A realized saint eats whatever is available without being affected by its taste, smell or composition. He absorbs the Prana (essence) within food, all the time being completely detached from taste or lack of it. He can live eating the bark of a tree, the root of a plant, leaves, grass or meat. None of these matter as he see's the one Brahman (cosmic being) underlining everything, himself having merged into it. This is not the case with the aspirant Brahmachari who is in the realm of ignorance and who hence has to follow certain rules till he goes beyond them.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi,

In the book of Swami Sivananda it says that brahmacharya brings longevity, strenght and eight great siddhis. But the results are not always there when you see real life facts. For example it says it brings strenght but then the book give examples of mythological figures like Krishna or Hanuman to support claims. This isnt serious, if you talk of Hanuman you can also talk about Hulk or the Titans. So those stories are of no use for real life. WHen you see real life human beings who practiced brahmacharya like for example Ramakrishna Or Ramana Maharshi, they are like everyone else and they still age like human beings.

WHy do they age and suffer illness of old age if they are supposed to have practiced brahmacharya which brings immortality and siddhis?

Answer
1. To whom is birth and death? It is to your Ego and body. When these two are eternally dissolved through attainment of the knowledge of the self, there is nobody to take birth or death and the self alone remains. This is the meaning of immortality.

2. That karma which has been accrued before the attainment of 'Gnyana' (knowledge of the self) has to be mandatorily worked out. It is like settling your dues in a bank. You cannot close the account without clearing your loan. This body & the mind are the mediums that bear the brunt of such karma which is called 'Prarabdha'. Even after realization, one cannot relinquish the body till final settlement of such karma is not yet over. Hence the realized sage lives for some time even after enlightenment working out that which remains. The body goes through that which is necessary for such settlement. The laws of karma are the same for all.

He however remains completely detached from any kind of suffering, having realized himself to be the Atman (pure consciousness) and not the body.

3. Siddhi-s are of no use as regards annulling karma. They are of no use as regards gaining knowledge of the self. They are another illusion, as is this world and the body. Hence they are an impediment on the path to gain knowledge of the self.

Through the practice of Brahmacharya, you conserve vital power which you direct towards freeing consciousness from identification with the body & the Ego. Health and strength are byproducts which come to the extent of what you deserve governed by your past karma and not more.

If there is unsatisfactory health despite Brahmacharya, it is your own doing from deeds of the past. It is what you deserve. None are to blame. If you were to let go of Brahmacharya and indulge in 'Abrahmacharya' wantonly, you will add more karma to the existing stock and things get worse. Till you let go of the 'I' and rest in the self, karma follows you like your shadow. Thereafter, it still follows you as long as the last unit of settlement is not done with. The laws of karma care a tuppence as regards your Ego or your so called might. They work with a force, tenacity and power that chills and breaks your Ego into nothing.

If you want to free yourself from all this suffering once and for all, you should practice Brahmacharya with the sole objective of realizing the self. That is what HE expects of you.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Namaste sir,
My life is immensely changed since I found this website . The knowledge you offered is so profound that it totally changed the way I think and understand this world. I started practicing celibacy 2 years ago and now I am 23 years old.

But something changed inside me with this all knowledge. I lost my desire for everything in life like all my dreams and ambition is lost. I hope sir that you understand what I am trying to say.

I have two options of career in my life that are either to pass civil service exam (MPSC / UPSC) and work as officer or work as farmer since by HIS grace my family own very large farm. Now sir you said to consider this world as drama stage and act here as actor without any attachment and I understand it but as I said before I lost my desire,dream,ambition and competitive edge which are required for working in private or public sector jobs.

I just wish to go to village and work as farmer and live peaceful and serene life away from city and all its distractions. On the other hand I have ability to pass civil service exams and work as honest officer.

I am the only child to my parents and they left this decision upto me but I am very confused. Its like standing on the crossroad wondering where to go. Before understanding this eternal truth and knowledge I was full of ambition and enthusiasm for working as officer but now that desire is vanished.

I am sorry about writing too much. Whatever I will do,I will do it keeping in mind the teaching you have taught here but your guidance will help me to make perfect choice. This is the only question that confuses me a lot so please sir provide me with your invaluable guidance.

Also I wonder if there is anything there that I am not understanding from what you have taught here because sometimes I feel that this confusion should not be in my mind if I truly understood what you told in here.

Answer

1. What is required is to be neutral and free from desire but completely ready to accept and work in the direction shown by HIM (but without attachment for either the work or its outcome). One should apply honest and sincere effort in the direction which one feels is right at the given moment and then watch silently. The effort applied might bear fruit or it might not. This is not our concern as long as the effort has been honest. One should accept whatever the Lord gives, be it success or failure, not being affected by either to the least extent.

Such a detached perspective can be compared to the mental state of an actor acting in a drama. He appears to be the very character, laughing, crying and doing various other things that the role demands. His actions appear as though he is really going through all these emotions. However, he is just doing that which the role demands as instructed by the director without really going through these emotions in reality. The minute the drama is over, the actor comes out of the 'character' and is smiling and relaxed, completely unaffected by the events in the drama.

2. When such a train of action is applied by the Yogi in the drama called 'life' directed by the unseen director called 'God', he performs as a tool in the hands of the Almighty. He is ready to play any role offered by the Lord, knowing it just to be a role and nothing more (though he appears completely involved while playing it). Just as it does not matter to an actor whether the role he plays is that of a king or a beggar, the Yogi stays as the Atman (pure self) all the time, completely unaffected by whether his 'character' in the 'life-drama' is made to go through success or failure.

When a life of Yoga & Brahmacharya are practiced on a regular basis with such an attitude in life, one goes beyond all desire and starts to reside in his pure self in the course of time. Then one feels content in the self by the self, all the time residing as the infinite self, no different from the Lord, as a drop of sea water feels when having merged back into the ocean.

Desire concerns the Ego which is the result of 'Agnyana' (ignorance). The Atman (pure self) is free from all desire, completely content in its infinity of the highest bliss. Hence there is no cause for worry.

3. For now, persevere in the direction you feel is right at the given moment with complete surrender to the Almighty. Then watch silently how it proceeds without any desire or expectation, being completely unaffected with success or failure. When such neutral efforts are applied, ready to accept any outcome, the will of the Lord will gradually become known. One need not even worry what direction to take, for that too is taken care of by HIM. This is real 'Saranagati' (complete surrender to the Brahman).

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Dear sir,

after reading ur answers i started practicing brahmcharya and failed after 19 days and then again started practicing and failed after 17 days which lead to further faults...i feel that when my stomach is not empty temptaitions occurs...is this a reason?? i knw the benifits of celibacy and doing yoga and pranayam from past 6-7 years....but not able to control myself....plz motivate and guide me sir....plz give detailed solution

Answer

Honestly apply the procedures suggested in past answers with surrender to the Almighty. Till the strong chunks of karma that block Brahmacharya are not removed through these methods, unbroken Brahmacharya does not become a reality. One should not think of failure but should ever be intent on practice to know the self, however hard it may be & however long it might take. Then shines the grace of the Lord, by which alone does Brahmacharya get established.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Jai sri krishna,

Sir in my life I was addicted to musterbation due to my bad luck. I don't know but it may be over 2700 times I must have musterbated in 7 years addiction. Sir some of my friends have musterbated very few times which is very less in comparison to me but still they are less intelligent in study than me. Why is it so ? Sir what I believe concentration is key to success in study. I believe practicing concentration like reading books and doing sums increase our intelligence like physical exercises increase our physical strength. Hardwork is key to success. Body builder increases strength by physical exercises. In the same way mental exercise increases mental strength. Why is it so in this world heros like saharukh and Salman khan indulging in illicit sex day and night in shooting, still they are more focused and young. These heros are almost over 45years age but still they look like 30s. One of the football superstar C.Ronaldo who is full of physical and mental strength inspite indulging in sex and wine. I have seen teachers in my school and professor in colleges who are very expert in subjects like math, science inspite of sex. They used to tell us moderate musterbation is ok. Execess is harmful. Regular hard work matters a lot. I've read so many Newspaper about interview of IAS toppers. They have said hardwork, determination or sincerty are key to success. They have never suggested to practice brhmacharyas. And some of IAS toppers have said they used to watch movies in lieasure times. At last I will tell Urdhreta cann't be deafeted and he is one in a million. But in this world after study of life of successful person we can say hardwork is more important for success . Sir can you please tell why is it so taking above in to consideration?

Answer

1. The primal power is the same for one and all. It is the representation of the power of life generated from universal consciousness. The wise realize its importance early and conserve it, while others ignore the same to later face the repercussions. A brief stint in limelight is no yardstick of well being, as always proven in history.

2. My dear friend, when a student sets aside all other things and indulges in one pointed hard work to master his subject, is that itself not unconscious use of the power of Brahmacharya applied on academic study? He has unknowingly converted his vital power, directing it towards his studies for that period of time, setting aside all distractions, whereupon that energy manifests as mastery in the subject.

If the very same student were to follow cent percent Brahmacharya consciously, his prowess would acquire the possibility to become more multidimensional. The same holds good as regards all other walks of life.

Whether one realizes it or doesn't, all power comes from that ONE source (Lord) which is represented by 'Bindu' (seed) in gross form within the body. The effects of transmutation or wastage of this power is seen early in some and later in others, based on individual factors.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

Heartiest greetings.Hope my words find you in the best of ways.

I have my questions as below:

1)Can brahmacharya pursued to it's conclusion lead me to complete independence & I mean 100% complete independence i.e I don't even have to depend on anything else for my nourishment even.Such a goal is indeed worthy of staking on'e life even.Is this nature of purusha that vedas so glorify or is there still a dependence on something i.e just a substitution of dependency occurs from material to spiritual.

2)Patanjali says
"When one has succeeded in making this Samyama, all powers come under his control. This is the great instrument of the Yogi. The objects of knowledge are infinite, and they are divided into the gross, grosser, grossest and the fine, finer, finest and so on. This Samyama should be first applied to gross things, and when you begin to get knowledge of this gross, slowly, by stages, it should be brought to finer things. "
Can you explain what does he mean here.What is this instrument/technique which leads to all powerfulness.

I'm tired of this material slave like life we have been taught to lead.Pls guide/motivate me with your words to complete independence & strength so that I can put my whole & soul into being estableshed in the Purusha.

Thanks.

Answer
1. Through such Brahmacharya, 'Prakriti' (the manifest nature) itself takes the responsibility of nourishing the manifest body to the extent required. Such a 'Perfect One' who resides in his self does not depend on anything to the least extent. Having reverted to his primal state of 'Purusa' (pure consciousness), he resides as the Brahman itself, on which things are dependent and not the reverse.

2. 'Samyama' refers to the complete union of consciousness with the desired object. Based on the nature of the object, mastery over it is acquired. Suppose one does such Samyama on fire, then he can make himself invincible against fire, having gained mastery over the fire element. The 'Mumukshu' (one whose sole objective is to realize the self) however does not waste his resources on these illusory objects but performs Samyama only on the Atman (eternal self or Lord) till such a state becomes natural and permanent, whereupon he becomes a 'Brahmaswarupi' (the very Brahman itself). He is then a 'Jivanmukta' (liberated while still alive).

Practice all that which ha been advocated in past answers. That state of residence in the self will come by itself.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

sir,
i m 22 years old. must have masturbated over 300 times. On reading your posts i pledged to follow brahmacharya. Though initially i was able to control the lust both mentally and physically for around a month, after that i lost mental control and slowly in a week i physically masturbated.

In the initial stages mental abstain is very difficult. So does a one break in mental brahmacharya reduces the entire cycle to zero as in you mentioned that 12 years of brahmacharya is sine qua non. So suppose i in the initial stages indulge in mental break in say a month without any physical break and again continue my vow.

Answer

1. Forceful repression of the sexual urge is neither possible nor beneficial. It has to be transmuted through a life of Yoga & Brahmacharya using the methods suggested in past answers. Are you applying them correctly?

2. Mental breaks eventually culminate into physical loss of the vital fluid. Mere abstinence without mental purity does not serve the purpose. It is the mind which is to be brought under control, following which the body follows. Hence one should strive for mental purity at all times.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

hello sir,
i had this query - whether mental dwelling in sex is equivalent to performing it ? For instance take the following -

1. Mentally thinking of being in company of a beautiful girl v. actually being so.
2. mentally thinking of kissing v. actually doing so.
3. mentally masturbating v. actually doing so.
4. mentally having vaginal intercourse v. actually doing so.

etc....etc....

do all these instances whether at mental level or real level have the same negative impact on a person. And same detrimental to an aspirant of Brahmacharya ?

Thank YOo

Answer
Sexual thoughts when dwelt upon ultimately culminate into physical deeds leading to added desire, added Samakara-s (impressions) & ultimately loss of vital energy that always ends in suffering. Hence the same should be prevented from developing and flowering.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

1-Can someone meditate on the self even if he doesnt do good deeds to others or society? I cant give much to others since i dont have much myself.

2-By your own knowledge of Yoga and meditation, do practicing total bramacharya and meditation on the self increase your spirit without adding charity? I mean by that if your spirit becomes stronger and siddhis.

3-If I abstain from bad deeds and avoiding that way bad merit and practice both total brahmacharya and mediate on the self, can I still progress and achieve Moksha or Nirvana?

Thanks

Answer
1. Your first duty is to realize your self. When this is achieved, you will realize there are no 'others' and that all are a part of your own self which is infinite. You will then be in a better position as regards service.

2. Striving to realize one's self is the greatest charity. No gift of money or any other consideration equals such effort. Hence it follows that such action gives the best outcome from all aspects.

3. Yes.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Respected Sir,
I am highly impress with your work and your guidance.I am 23 year old student.I am following your all instructions and practicing celibacy.But I have following questions in my mind,please clarify.

1.I am following the yoga and meditation from 1 year now.But I am suffering from frequent wet dreams (5 to 6 per month)from 4 years now.Is this natural?
Due to this wet dreams i feel very shameful and i not able to do my studies properly.After doing lots of hard work,i cant score well in my exams.How to avoid this wet dreams completely?

2.Does frequent wet dreams (in my case 5-6/month)affects brain functioning(i.e performing best in exam) and memory?Is complete recovery is possible at mental and physical level?

3.Does this frequent wet dreams causes baldness?If yes, will i recover my hair completely with the help of yoga and pranayama.

4.If two persons following perfect celibacy,but one of them follows celibacy with yoga and pranayama and another is not. In this case does the person following yoga and pranayama will get more physical and spiritual benefits?

sorry for long questioning.But please understand my situation.

Answer
1. If the practice of all the suggested methods with a Yogic lifestyle is carried out regularly without interruption with devotion to the Lord, wet dreams will reduce and disappear after a few years.

2. One has no other way out but to go through past karma. The only way to dissolve such karma is through Yoga & Brahmacharya carried out to realize the self. Hence persevere without worrying about other things.

3. Balding is genetic and not avoidable.

4. Yes

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
In your old answer you said that the self is the Lord and that the realized yogi has become one with the Lord without difference. Does this mean you can create or do anything with your will as the God does after selfrealization?

Answer
Where is the question of your 'will' after self-realization? Such will exists only until the false 'I' or Ego exists. After this false concept is completely overcome through irreversible realization of the truth, who exists to will or not will something?

The will of the Lord alone works through the body of such a sage and the body performs accordingly as per divine order. Then there is no 'I' or 'non-I'.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Greetings Dhananjay ji,

I have been practising Brahmacharya from past one month. Everything was fine until last night. I sleep at 9 pm to wake up during Brahmamuhurtha at 4 am but i had to wake up in the middle of the night because of nocturnal emission. I tried to stop it but it was too late.

I felt very bad after this. Is the loss of semen from nocturnal emission same as it is done consciously?

I noticed few things which i feel led to the emission.

- I drank 2 glass of water just before going to sleep.

- When i woke up due to wet dream, i was not at my left side. i was sleeping on my back. But at the time i slept i was on my left side.

Does these thinhs could have played any role in Nocturnal emission?

ANSWER: 1. Avoid drinking water before retiring to bed. It is advisable to get done with the same before Sunset.

2. Nocturnal emissions gradually become infrequent the course of a few years of unbroken Brahmacharya (if the practice is correct) and disappear completely after the Yogi becomes an Urdhvareta. What is important from the aspirant's side is to strive for honest Brahmacharya while awake and leave the rest to HIM.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Does the amount of vital fluid we lose through Wet dreams same as masturbation?

I mean have i lost all the semen preserved for 30 days because of this wet dream?

Other thing i want to know is what is the alternative of White sugar we use regularly as it is tamasic, yogis may be using something else?

Answer
1. The energy lost through an involuntary nocturnal emission is much lesser as compared to a voluntary loss (which is most harmful and equals a break).

2. Jaggery ('Gud'- in Hindi) is the alternative.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
How do I transmute sexual energy that I might receive during my recent celibacy of about 7 days? I'm wanting to keep up with my celibacy for the rest of my life if my life heads in the direction that I think that it will.

I exercise with daily running and meditate with awareness on the location of my third eye, always returning when thoughts arise..

What else can I do besides restrain from sexual thoughts on a daily basis and change the subject of thought when they do arise?

In case my previous knowledge will help you answer what I'm looking for.. I have done a ton of research, mostly information-based, on Ojas, meditation, benefits of bramacharya, etc.

How long does it take for Ojas to fill the cerebro-spinal fluid in my spine and brain to actually work with this substance in continuing in my Raja Yoga or enlightenment path?

and last question, are there any techniques or visualization exercises that will come in handy once I can work with this Ojas?

I am led to believe that simply meditating on Krishna, emptying the mind of thoughts, and/or keeping awareness on my third eye is all that is needed to become a Yogi which comes along with the practice with celibacy.

Answer
1. The techniques have been described in past answers. Go through each and every answer slowly and apply the same in practice.

2. 'Ojas' does not fill any fluid. It is the vital fluid which gets sublimated into Ojas.

3. Follow the meditation techniques described in past answers.

4. Merging the mind into the Atman (pure self) is what is required. The self is no different from Lord Krishna.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dhananjayji,

Thanks for your motivation and guidance through your answers here.

I am 35 yrs old and have not practiced Brahmacharya since i hit puberty , infact I have wasted away a lot of energy.

Is it too late to start practice and is it possible to develop discipline after so many years of wastage and indiscipline.

Also please kindly give advice suitable for late starters like me.

Answer
Take up the practice with honest application of the methods suggested in past answers. Go through each and every answer slowly and absorb the essence, to apply it in practice. Brahmacharya will get established.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello I was just wondering if turing to celibacy would cure my acne problem? Like did wasting my semen cause my acne ? Can you please explain in further detial to me what celibacy is ? I'm only 14 years old so sorry if I sound stupid

Answer
Acne will eventually reduce and go away depending on how honest the practice of Brahmacharya is. Celibacy and Brahmacharya are not the same. Go through each and every past answer to get clear with the methods of practicing correct Brahmacharya.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Dhananjay.
i'm reading you quite regularly since 2 years now and like many people, i would like to say that the information and knowledge you share has been of great value to me.I think i was very much ready to hear it, but still,reading you was pleasant and helpful. I have incorporated the knowledge about food and i progressively became a vegetarian. Most importantly , i am practicing chastity with some success as i now follow what you call brahmacharya for months without much difficulty. i dont think i will ever come back to the lifestyle i used to live 6 years ago. So before coming to the question, i would like to thank you and say that i hope you will keep doing your on-line job on brahmacharya and yoga for a long time.

This being said, i have a few question:
In my practice, the biggest obstacle are some negative tendencies that find in my mind. I wont go into the details, but when i am under a negative state of mind, i often experience nightfalls while sleeping. So i noticed that"stress", "negativity", to be general, caused me to expell semen during the night even though i had no sexual desire or thoughts.
Can you tell me more about the relationship between negativity and nightfalls. Also, can you explain to me why nightfalls are less destructive and tiring than a regular sexual act. It is true that i feel less affected by a nightfall than by a regular drop of semen, but the semen look just the same.

Secondly, i have read that it takes 12 years to experiment great spiritual results of Brahmacharya. But i feel like this is a childish way of thinking, because in my experience, your energy can get destroyed by negativity, stress, or other life events distinct from expelling semen. Also, brahmacharya is important,but doesn't it requires much mind and spiritual mastery, as well as deep and strong understanding of life mechanisms to achieve a higher state of being.

Thirdly, i have developped during my life a certain understanding of how we do create our life according to our vibration / energy / state of mind and how we find ourselves always reflected in our surroundings, influencing very strongly events and people according to what we are,want,and feel. This is no provocation here but why dont you mention this fact and aspect of reality.We are part of a whole and always interacting with the rest of everything,according to what our energy/karma is.
Are you unaware of this?

Fourthly, i do meditate a little and when i do i noticed i often get some insights on life or on subtle subjects, mechanisms. Can you tell me more about this phenomenon?

You have to know that i am very interested and serious in these matters and i hope you will answer me clearly, and not be blocked by the fact that i do object some of the things you say(and i did tell you only a part of it, because i have a feeling you might not like too much contesting)
Thanks

Answer
1. 'Prana' focused destructively is negativity. Negative thoughts lead to loss of Prana and eventually loss of semen, for both are one and the same.

2. Nightfall's are somewhat less destructive as they occur under the lack of complete awareness and will. Will is the switch which controls Prana. Therefore, the actual essence is lost to a lesser extent.

3. What is lost is 'Prana' (vital power), be the loss via emotional upsurge or semen. The loss is felt more in the case of semen as it is the gross most representation of this vital power. Maintaining Brahmacharya comprises of not merely desisting from activity which causes seminal loss but also staying clear of emotional outbursts, for that also amounts to energy loss and thereby debility as explained in past answers.

When the same energy is conserved and directed towards meditation on the Atman (self), everything which is to be know will eventually be known and spiritual mastery comes all by itself.

One is after all the Atman (self) and what is hence required is only to work at removing the ignorance blocking such identity. When this is achieved, the Atman, which is of the nature of complete knowledge alone remains. Therefore, real knowledge is within and not outside.

Enquire - "Who is it that wants 'spiritual mastery?". Then let go of that entity. What remains is the self which is ever complete.

4. The world is a reflection of one's own Ego which is the product of past & present karma. When the Ego is dispelled through 'Gnyana' (knowledge of the truth), the world disappears as explained in past answers.

5. Meditation takes consciousness closer to the truth. Hence it follows that the truth concerning the topics which one meditates on become more comprehensible. The degree of this comprehension depends on the intensity with which one meditates.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: hi dhananjay
i have a problem in pranayama.in both ascending & descending of the breath when the breath comes to solar plexus & stomach i feel pressure & discomfort so that i have to quit pranayama sooner or later.several years ago when i began pranayama till one or two years i didn't have such a problem & able to do it smoothly. but after that i confronted with this difficulty little or much.
why this happened to me & how to solve it? please help me.

ANSWER: Perform only Yama-Niyama, Asana and Nadi Shodhana for 6 months with a Yogic lifestyle and Brahmacharya. Then try Pranayama.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: when i talk about pranayama i mean yogic breath consist of lower abdominal, upper abdominal, chest & upper chest.i don't mean nadi shodhana with kombahaka. regardless of retention of breath or not retention i have this problem.i apologize repeating the question.

Answer
The condition depicts the need for purification of the Nadi-s. When the same is achieved, there does not occur any discomfort. One does not experience any uneasiness or pain during the application of the breath techniques when the Nadi-s have been completely purified. Apply the procedure suggested above for 6 months regularly. The problem will get sorted out without doubt.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello, I am a 36 yr old female who is single, I used to live in Europe where I dated many men in my 20s but, I wanted to fall in love and start a family. By the first or second date men were already touching me where I was not ready to be touched. When I came back to my birth city here in the US I find that getting a date and even having someone interested is hard because men (of any race)don't seem to like women in my race here. There are men who look at me but I refuse to settle for anybody because my sister who is much older than me drags men into her life and her life is getting worse. I am a well educated woman and I do not want to let my guard down. I stopped searching for a marriage mate since I went back to school to become a nurse (RN).
Now I am preparing for state boards. I am the only person in my house (with my lovely dog)and I keep thinking about sex. Porn is so easy to get on the internet and my religion is strict about sex before marriage. Studying for maternity is hell cause it gets me horny and I can't focus on the questions. I want to lose weight and feel better about my body before I start dating. Sexual tension drives me crazy because even in my religion men favor women of other races and they can be very rude and assume a 30-something yr old woman is too old to have a baby. They even have chaperones on dates to avoid premarital sex. There is no one I am interested in right now. And when I have a celebrity crush, I think about them too much and develop feelings of jealousy. Please help. I dream about being happy in a relationship and having great sexx ALOT! Also, finding someone who will wait until marriage has been difficult.

Answer
You seem to have a lot of issues keeping you from sex and couplehood. Here are my thoughts:

1) Put all of this off until you have finished your nursing boards. It will only be a few months and then you will be more free to work on sex and relationships.

2) Stop fretting about your race. You can't change that. Just get out there and meet men for whom race isn't an important criterion or for which your race is right one for them.

3) I would suggest getting involved in a different religious organization if the one you are in is holding you back. Most churches have single groups and are eager to help people your age find a mate.

4) Once you meet someone you're attracted to, and the attraction is mutual, these questions about sex get easier to answer.

Feel free to ask me more questions!

Question
I am turning 18 and I feel like it's time I started having sex. I have never had sex or done anything sexual with a boy until now. Will it hurt me to have sex for the first time? Is there anything I can do between now and then to make it easier?

Expert: Dhananjay - 7/25/2013

Question
Disregarding the fact that I do meditate and clear my mind with the methods you've prescribed, I am wondering what the difference is in the rewards of celibacy/brahmacharya with and without a transmutation method.

Also, how would occasional (say, once a month) indulgence in alcohol and/or marijuana affect my accrued energy reserves (keerya, prana, ojas, tejas)? Including my practice altogether, if there are extended negative effects of marijuana.

I run 2 miles daily. I'm working up to 3-4 miles daily if I can achieve the goal. Is this too much exercise? Or is there a such thing? Also, is this as effective of a transmutation method as meditation?

In advance, thank you very much for helping us all out with such a great resource!!

Answer
1. Without effective transmutation of the vital power into higher domains, so as to remove the ignorance surrounding the soul, Brahmacharya fails in due course.

What is Brahmacharya? To eventually reside as the pure self without least identification with the body or mind is Brahmacharya and nothing else.

2. If you practice Brahmacharya honestly to realize your self, there will eventually be no urge or slavery towards anything external to appease your mind or body. One becomes content in the self by the self without the least need for anything external. Such independence leads to the greatest strength, peace and eventually liberation.

3. Any indulgence in drugs or alchohol will cause an impediment to well being. Brahmacharya dissolves into nothing. Hence it should be completely avoided.

4. Adequate physical and mental activity coupled with meditation on the self are the prerequisites during the initial years. There is no need for excessive physical strain, which rather becomes detrimental in the long run. Exercise should be moderate and enjoyable and never a torture. There isn't much gained by pushing oneself to the limits on the physical plane. Instead, the same energy should be channelized towards Yogic practices, self control and meditation.

Physical activity cannot substitute meditation. In meditation, you overcome consciousness of the body & the mind and try to be the pure self, the only truth.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

About how we influence events and persons with the practice of brahmacharya and specifically one pointed concentration. From my little experience in this, I think its an evil practice. For example some books about magnetism or such psychic practice ask oneself to concentrate on someone who is not even looking at you and tell in your mind that that specific person to bend over and look at you, all mentally as if thought can be projected.

Before when I was a bit ignorant reading Osho and Durville books about etheric influence, I tried to practice it but after some three years I felt like the world has lost all its beauty, as if the world and humans even familiars didnt have any value, I had like a demonic and cold way of thinking. For example when I didnt practice it, nobody approached me to talk in school or work, after it it changed. This in a course of first 3 weeks. Then I said to myself, "those persons talk to me because of this practice even if my personality didnt change a bit", they ignored me and more I practice this more their attitude change. I said to myself if the world works that way, then this world is rubbish, love and friendship between beings is rubbish and miracles small or great could be impressive but are of no importance.

If one continue to pratice this mind-control technique for long time it creates lot of hate and no compassion for the world right? I felt it was evil and I stopped to be interested in those type of teachings about "mind control and etheric magnetism".

Answer
Who influences and who gets influenced? The Ego with its vested interests tries to influence another Ego/body for some selfish gain which eventually causes harm to both. Misusing the energy gained through Brahmacharya for such purposes will undoubtedly bring suffering and much unwanted karma. The practice itself breaks in due course. It is not the way of the virtuous.

The purpose of Brahmacharya is to know one's self. Let go that which wants to influence and that which is to be influenced, following which the Atman (pure self) alone remains. It is of the nature of knowledge, peace and unexplained bliss.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I am a 16yr old boy.By gods grace I have been celibate for the past 2 months.yesterday i had to go to a dentist.by mistake her breast touched me while cleaning my teeth .Now I am tormented by lust.

please suggest some measures

Answer
Remind yourself of the body of the same woman in old age, wrinkled and debilitated by age, fully bereft of luster, prone to decay. Where is the beauty? Had the body really been beautiful, it would not change, for the truth never changes. Hence physical beauty is a false illusion.

The body is an impermanent bag of flesh which shines for a few years by the power of the Atman which does so to aid creation. The wise do not lust after this bag of flesh, but ever direct their energies to realize the self which is permanent bliss and liberation.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

Hope you are doing well.

I have repeatedly read you asserting that self realization is your primary goal/duty.Rest all we should leave in hands of god.But I don't think this suggestion helps much either due to it's purport being lost in translation or due to short number of words used.

-->Some people view yogis as selfish beings cos they are giving priority to themselves first instead of utilising their resources/powers to help poor/sick/needy which they are aware of.

-->There are millions sufferring like the living dead in India itself,where are so called self realized beings help for them.

-->If goal of yogi is to merge with god then isn't that a very selfish objective as well?He should stay back & help countless achieve same which he has ,also probably with some help.

-->Is it possible to achieve liberation just on the basis of selfless service like Mother Theresa did or is experience of nirvikalpa samadhi/realization of oneness a must?

Answer
1. Helping people to the extent possible as regards money or food, without expecting anything in return is noble but not the permanent solution to the problem.

Gift of food or money does not make the need for these go away. The taker again becomes hungry and penniless in the course of time and the process becomes unending.

The permanent solution is to remove the cause of suffering -'Agnyana' (ignorance) - The reason behind birth in the physical body, prone to suffering, when one's default state is that of the formless Atman which is ever at bliss. This is possible only by realizing the self. Upon achieving the same, one can help others take up this path. This is real help and true charity

2. What is the 'self'? Who are the 'others'? Who is God and who suffers? One should first get the answer to these questions by realizing one's self first. Then one understands what realized sages do and don't. Then alone is it realized that it is not the 'self' which is selfish but the Ego which is mistaken for the self. Till then, one cannot understand the help rendered by realized beings.

3. How do you know that the realized ones are not helping others? They work silently in a manner not perceived by people at large.

4. The paths to liberation are many. Depending on the temperament and nature of individuals, the great Lord makes each Jiva take a suitable path. Dissolution of the individual ego is itself 'Nirvikalpa Samadhi' and eternal residence in that state even while awake to the external world is alone 'Mukti' (liberation), achieve it by what means you may.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhananjay ,

I was working in Mumbai till december last year.I was observing celibacy and apart from nightfall everything looked in control.I was also naturally inclined towards meditation and was feeling great.

Suddenly I suffered from jaundice,went to hometown ,somehow recovered ,came back to Mumbai.In between I discovered I have retina detachment in left eye.Without wasting time,I went for surgery at Mumbai private clinic and again went home town for 3 weeks.Came back to Mumbai only to know operation failed and I was virtually blind in left eye.

Rushed immediately to Chennai renowned eye hospital,got operated ,followed doc instructions till 7 weeks and followed again and again and 1.6 months ago Silicon oil has been removed from my eye.

My vision is very blurred and eyerything looks like waves of ocean.With glasses vision is 6/24.I am software professional.

My question is what should I do now? Doc says I can continue to work on computer for long duratios.Even my right eye has only 6/15 vision.Can I do so only with my right eye? Please help me.

Now I took transfer to Delhi just to save job.I am not able to meditate.NightFall has become common.In short ,Whatever strengh ,confidence etc. I have gained are running out.I have become abusive.Doing cheap things.Whenever I travel in metro or on road,My glance is on breast or hips of girls.This is a vicious cycle.I remind every now and then myself of all good things from your posts,but practically fails every time.

Why God ahs put me in this condition? what is all these past karmas?My family members initially supported me but now slowly they are absorbed in their own world.Some even donot want to talk to me who were just praising my abilities few days back.

Why God puts forth such a challenge?Can I get mey vision back?doc says I have now high pressure in left eye..may be glucoma?Right Eye is at high risk for detachment too.Got married 2 years back?how to feed her also if lost job,becomes blind?

I am totally confused and feeling worthless now. A lot of negative emotions.I believe every words of you but somehow practically not able to follow.Please answer me win detail.Save my life.Give me direction.May God bless u!

Answer
1. Continue the honest practice of Brahmacharya with the attitude - "Let that which happens happen. The Lord does not hurt anyone unnecessarily in the least. Past karma which is my own doing is making the body & Ego go through what these deserve. Let karma take its lawful course. Henceforth, the 'I-Ego' which is suffering will be discarded and the future will be fully taken care of by HIM whose dictates shall be followed honestly by this body & mind. The responsibility as regards this body & its future from now on will be fully transferred to HIM, who alone is the mover of all things. HIS decision will be accepted, whatever it be. 'I' will only be the neutral witness whose sole intention is to realize the self."

2. The possibility for the return of well being will depend on the intensity of surrender to HIM & the honesty of Brahmacharya. Certain things are to be realized and implemented from your side. You will get to know what these are in the course of time.

Now that you have completely surrendered, there need be no worry. Let the body go through that which HE deems necessary for further progress. All responsibility has been transferred to HIM whose decisions will be respected and accepted, immaterial of their nature. The family is also HIS responsibility. The doctor will advice as regards the physical condition when necessary.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello dhananjay,

I have two questions,

1. I am into 3rd week of brahmacharya with clear thoughts but I am finding it hard as sometimes I just want to give in to be like everyone else in their lustful ways as I feel like Maya is trying to bring me down but I see them as little tests, does maya do this?

2. When I used my penis more it was larger but now I don't use it in a sexual way I find that it is smaller than it was before during the day, why is this?

Hope to hear from you soon,

Joe

Answer
1. Till a few years of unbroken practice with God devotion are not achieved, there is always a strong tug of war. It is a challenge which everyone has to face and bear with.

2. Simply ignore the physical parameters. They are not of any consequence.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Ancient yugas are full of stories where people use to perform TAPAS, invoke Gods & fulfill their desires. Is it true? If true, how is that the desire still remains even performing tapas for so long period, like 1000 of years & so on....please if possible tell in detail about Tapasaya, austerities..

Answer
1. One pointed effort at the physical & mental levels, setting aside all other things for the attainment of an objective is 'Tapas' or austerity.

2. When the same is applied as regards a material object or power, the performer becomes one with that object and gains mastery over the same. This does not confer any other result other than such attainment. Such effort for anything material or some psychic power is itself the product of 'Agnyana' (ignorance) when one in reality is the infinite Atman. Therefore, the performer becomes more attached to that illusion and strays that much farther from his self. None of his desires recede; rather, they accede. He remains as ignorant as ever as regards his identity.

Taking the help of astral beings for such accomplishment also has the same effect. It is like taking the help of someone superior to you in day to day life by pleasing them for some material benefit. None of these things are of any value. Rather, they are a complete waste of time.

3. When the same effort or austerity is applied as regards knowing one's Atman (pure self) as done by the Yogi, the ignorance blocking one's identity with the self starts to recede and one eventually realizes the self to become the pure self. It confers liberation which is true freedom.

Hence the wise do not waste their resources in seeking anything other than the self.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
To improve your health and obtain some longevity, the method is of doing long breathing naturally and at the same time focusing the mind while doing so. Offcourse you practice at the same time total brahmacharya.

1- But what is the reason that if you breath with a focused mind it gives you energy and when you breath with a restless mind it doesnt givr you so much?

2- There is two schools in breathing practice. One is the energy (prana) you get, is the energy that comes to the spirit (internal) from the external (in this case through breathing air) or
- this energy which revitalize the body and mind comes from the mind or spirit itself (from the internal it passes to the external) as a sort of implosion. SOrry for my english, I dont know if you understand what I mean. The air you inspire is what I mean by external energy you absorb and that helps the internal (body and spirit in this case). The focusing of the mind itself gives energy to the external (body and spirit) in this case) is what I mean by internal to external. What is the correct opinion?

Thanks

Answer
1. Breath is the fuel that runs the mind. Without breath, there is no mind. A restless mind wanders from object to object, thereby causing loss of Prana (vital energy) and equilibrium. Such a state gradually reduces longevity, as there is constant loss of Prana. A wandering mind also acquires more Samskara-s (impressions) further to developing desire and attachment to the objects it roves on.

If the breath is stilled, the mind is stilled. The Yogi accomplishes this through Pranayama.

The stilled mind automatically merges into its source - The Atman. Then there is silence and absolute being; completely still and infinite. That is the soul state.

2. There is only one Prana. It is neither external nor internal but universal. It comes from universal consciousness of which the Atman (self) is an integral part.

The mind and body are considered separate from the cosmos (by virtue of the Ego - The product of ignorance) and these require external breath (for the mind) and food (for the body) to sustain. Though the Atman (self) itself is the source of all energy, man in this state is not able to sustain without external breath and food due to the subject-object perspective. When the Ego is destroyed completely as in 'Nirvikalpa Samadhi', then the body remains suspended, yet alive, without the need for food or breath.

The mind is not the source of energy. The Atman (self) is. The mind is only flow of thoughts arising from the Ego, and another unreal illusion. When this illusion is overcome by irreversible realization, then one resides as the self in the self without any other awareness. That is Yoga.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay Gosvami,

How are you? Hope all is well with you and your family. Please explain the bandhas in their individual and combined format with explicit information on steps, breathing, duration, repetitions and the rate at which gradual increase should be practiced. Also please avoid jargons. Although you have already graced us with an answer to the above question, I find the three bandhas difficult to comprehend, let alone master. Mula bandha is especially a problem. Thank you for your time, patience, persistence, perseverance and service.

Answer
Go through this description: http://en.allexperts.com/q/Celibacy-Abstinence-3564/2011/12/thribandha-khechari-

If the method is still not clear, revert. Further elaboration will be provided.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I've been reading along the lines of Immortality and Spirit body. Somewhere I had also read that in the Srutis state that a man's full life span is a hundred years.

I'm wondering if Brahmacharya and Yoga have anything in common with the teachings of Immortality, birthing a Spirit body, or obtaining a Rainbow Body, according to the Tibetans and how the Yoga explains this phenomena. I'm also interested in talk of the fourth dimension and leaving/entering material world at will.

I've heard of many people living past a hundred years old, although it is a rare and honorable occurrence. What is a long and what is a maximum lifespan of someone that truly accomplishes the ultimate goal of Yoga and Brahmacharya? I have heard that one leaves life at will in order to complete the ultimate goal, but my particular interest is wondering at the possible lifespan.

For my final question, are there any particularly AWESOME places that you know of that I could delve into the Yoga tradition? I can download sacred books onto my iPhone but not all of them. Nor can I find a place abundant with incredible stories about the stuff I'm asking. AND MORE!!

Answer
1. Real immortality is to the Atman (soul) and not the body, for that which has a beginning also has an end. The Atman alone is without a beginning and therefore without an end.

2. Such true immortality (of residing permanently as the Atman without rebirth in any kind of a body) cannot be achieved without irreversible realization of the self, for which Brahmacharya is one of the most important means.

3. Whether rebirth occurs in a physical body or the 'Sukshma Sharira' (astral or subtle body), it is still not of any use as long as one cannot reside in and as the self.

3. Who leaves which world and who enters? That which goes and comes is the Ego which is to be destroyed. When this is achieved, there is nowhere to go or return. The endless self alone remains.

4. My dear friend, what will you achieve by living a hundred or a thousand years with desire? Does it reduce your suffering? Does it give you absolute freedom from the mind and the body and their limitations? Rather, such a long life without attaining the knowledge of the self becomes a bane.

As long as one lives, one should direct his mind towards realizing his self and accept that which is in the course of his destiny. Who is it who wishes for a thousand years? It is again the ignorant Ego. As long as this thief is not got rid of for ever, one can never be at complete peace.

The purpose of Yoga & Brahmacharya is to realize oneself. The purpose is not to extend the life of this physical body to figures of one's fancy. Rather, such a desire if existent is to be overcome through the attainment of 'Gnyana' (knowledge of the truth). Such a desire of clinging to the body is itself an obstacle to realize the self. It is to be got rid of.

The true 'Bhakta' (devotee of the Lord) does not wish for anything but knowledge of the self. He surrenders completely to the Lord, accepting that which comes by HIS grace. Finally, even this desire to know the self goes away (for that is also a desire of the Ego). That is the point just before realization, following which the desire-free self, full of infinite bliss alone remains.

The only place beyond description worth visiting is the ocean of the self. First reach it, following which there will be no more queries.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Respected Sir ,

i wanted to ask which commentary on the bhagavad gita should i read or which is in most accordance of the interpretation held by you.

In my college bhaktivedanta club professor is organising a lecture on introduction to bhagvad gita and there we have been given a copy of bhagavad gita as it is written by hdg ac bhaktivedanta swami srila prabhupada . I may also check the libraray to search a commentry by paramhamsa yoganada.

Also i wanted to know whether reading books by swami vivekanada , paramhamsa yoganada and bhativedanta swami simulataneously or one after the other may lead to confusion if so then whom should i read first.

Answer
Go through the books authored by Swami Vivekananda & Paramahansa Yogananda in that order. Absorb the essence (not the literal meaning) by in-depth contemplation on the read matter and apply such knowledge in real life situations.

The Bhagavad-Gita is one of the most practical books on Yoga. He who understands it rightly and applies the same is assured of progress.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Most of the previous topics covered the male practice of celibacy and its challenges, etc.
What about a woman?
How does it apply to them? And what are its associated challenges?
For example: For a man, to get rid of the attraction towards the physical form of a woman is the greatest challenge .. Similarly what are the challenges/traps a woman should be aware of in order to live an ideal life.

Answer
1. Sadhana (practice) of a life of Yoga, along with the study of the scriptures to realize the self is the remedy, be it man or woman. 'Moha' (attachment) is the issue to be overcome by women aspirants in particular.

2. The details as regards Brahmacharya for women are available in past answers

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

I know from reading your past answers to other users questions that you say prolonging life isnt really important to the Self. But after reading stories from the yoguic tradition, some yogis were able to live 200+ years in their physical body. For example some masters like Swami Vivekananda (died young) but others lived long like Babaji.

Is this because they practiced meditation for that specific purpose and when you cling to that thought of prolonging life it works and if not it doesnt? It cant be only brahmacharya, you have to practice some unknown technique, maybe pranayama or embryonic breathing, i dont know really.

Thank

Answer
Your efforts should be to realize the self. Do this much and all other things fall into place. The higher power that runs the show will automatically make the body and mind go through those actions required for well being to the extent of what is due in one's destiny.

1. One's life span is already fixed at birth, like all other things, by factors beyond one's control.

2. If a life of Yoga & Brahmacharya are followed with the Yogic methods prescribed, they become conducive to a healthy and long life. This is as much as one can do and needs to do from one's side. Nothing more is necessary.

Finally, that which HE wills alone transpires, try however hard you desist. Hence the wise do not waste their resources getting caught with the illusory fancy for a long life. Such a desire is itself the greatest impediment to realize the self.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
respected sir,
i stay in a residential college and am a fresher there , so many a times seniors shout and command us to go to various functions and in competitions and sometimes have ragging sessions which is though verbal but very much on derogatory topics, sometimes it might also mean to keep awake until late night and hearing and seeing them do unworthy acts on topics which we are trying to get rid of through practice of yoga and brahmacharya.
my question is what should be my stand in such situation, should i refuse to go or go where they say . In situations should i inform them that i am leaving or not going or should i silently move away without hearing a word what they say according to what i may think to be right.please give some yardstick to know what is right and what will lead towards self realization .

my second question is that here the only good company that i find is in the bhaktivedanta club, but their philosophy is quite different from the advaita philosophy,like they say that soul has a form according to which it gets a body and man gets next birth according to what he thinks at the end of his life and a lot of talk on consciousness, conscious space etc.also the bhagavad gita by bhaktivedanta swami is completely focused on krishna consciousness and it does not give any other path even little importance(my view is based on the overview of the book).should i keep attending their lectures only to find some good company and ignore the differences in opinions, keeping hold of the philosophy followed here.
thank you

Answer
1. Stay calm with a smile and do not react. People behave in their own way, based on their individual nature and temperament. Let them say or do what they want. What is important is to be firm regarding one's stand and outlook. One need not participate in those situations which cause discomfort. If people still don't understand, silence is the best answer. Just as a Brahmachari does not object or come in the way of other's actions, he does not let others dictate him what should be done or not done.

When such a firm yet polite approach is practiced, people eventually realize the fallacy of their actions and leave him alone. These are tests in real life where one should remain calm and unruffled, despite trying situations. One who does so always emerges victorious.

2. There is only one force which is the power behind everything. That force comes from the formless Lord who can take a form as well. HE is one, while HIS manifestations are many. It does not matter what one calls HIM, as long as the calling is with love and devotion. HE is the life force behind every living being (while they themselves do not know this) and is present in things non-living as well. There is not such a place anywhere where HE does not exist. Your true self is this very Lord, while the 'I-ness' people relate to is the ignorant Ego.

When this much is kept in mind and related with, nothing which happens in the dream world matters. One is forever immersed in the beauty of the Lord, which is the self itself. One then experiences silence and peace even in the most crowded and noisy place.

Simply practice a life of Yoga & Brahmacharya as described earlier to know the self with devotion to HIM. As you persevere and progress, you will slowly go beyond susceptibility to external factors and savor the beauty of the Atman (self) at all times. Silence and contemplation on the truth alone matter. For that, one should keep the mind still on the formless Lord, the self. That itself is meditation. For such a Yogi, there is naught the need to spend time with groups of people indulging in noisy discussions about who the Lord is or is not.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Respected Sir,I am 23 year old student following celibacy with the practice of yoga and pranayama(but not regular). In past i masturbated my frequency is once in three month for 3 year and also i am facing wet dreams from 3 year(1-2 per week).
I have following questions:-
1.Is semen can be flow out without any erection in waking state?
2.I notice some sticky fluid in my first drop of urine(2 to 3 times in morning)is this can be veerya.how to stop this semen lekage with urine.
3.During my daily activities some times i found that some liquid is flowing out and my innerwear becomes wet .But i cant identify whether this is urine or veerya.What is this according to you?What should i do to avoid this?
4.Is it possible to flow semen with urine?If yes the what is remedy for this?Will it affect my celibacy practice,memory,brain or physical.
5.How to stop involuntary erection(i.e even i dont have any lust in mind,i got automatic erection)?
kindly show me the path and help me to live perfect celibacy life.Thank you.

Answer
1. Semen can flow out under the presence of lustful thoughts even without an erection. The fluid may be semen or lubricating liquid. None of these will flow out if Brahmacharya is established.

2. Involuntary erections without lust are harmless. They occur naturally due to increased blood flow periodically, which is healthy. This need not be worried about.

Practice the Yogic techniques suggested with regular Pranayama. Develop devotion to the Almighty and meditate often. Without Pranayama, Brahmacharya cannot become perfect. One should strive hard for perfect Brahmacharya. Such a Brahmachari does not secrete any fluid, at any point of time involuntarily. If your efforts are honest, you will achieve this in a few years.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Dhananjay bhaiya. Hope you are doing well.
I am explaining my whole situation so that after analysing it you can provide me with best answer.
I am a 19 year old boy from delhi in 2nd year of my graduation. At the age of 17 I got my hands at a book explaining benefits of brahmacharya and disastrous results of masturbation. So I started following brahmacharya(actually it was more of a celibacy than brahmacharya) at that age but couldn't succeed due to lack of knowledge and night falls as I thought that they are breaks and are not going to stop, unaware of the fact that they will diminish and eventually will stop with lapse of time with adherence to perfect brahmacharya life.
Two months ago without adherence to brahmacharya rules I elapsed 15 days without wet dreams(while 2 years ago I was practicing brahmacharya, it was only 18 days without wetdreams). It was a big achievement for me. Then I somehow reached to your answers reading about brahmacharya. Then I got to know so much about brahmacharya. And now it's been two months with only one wet dream which was without any sexual thought and two prostatic juice wet dreams which is very inspiring for me. And now I am getting enormous benefits with the practice of brahmcharya like I have spectacles and I can feel my eyes getting healed from inside, much more physical strength and a slightly clear mind as earlier it used to be very confused.
But I have some querries which are as follows :-
1. Every time lust encounters me(however the force is not as it used to be before 2 months ago. I am not saying I have eradicated lust but its impact is low), I either do mahabandha or read to your answers. In both cases I can feel something is moving upwards from my sex centre to my chest just like steam rises slowly upwards and it feels very good. Is it transmutation of sexual energy?

2. As you have told in your answers that first year is the most important in the practice of brahmacharya but living in this passionate world becomes very difficult to follow all the rules of a brahmacharya life as I think the practice will become much smooth if one goes into forest or himalayas. Like I live with my family, they possess many problems in my practice. Like they cook food at 9 p.m. and watch
T.V. till 11 or 11:30 p.m. So it becomes a problem for me to wake up at 4:00 a.m. as we all sleep in single room as in other rooms there are no coolers. Also they use onions and garlics in almost all vegetables which is not good for my celibacy practice. Also I cann't tell them as it should be kept secret.
Also some greedy worldly men which are my friends keep aanoying me in money related matters. This keeps my mood off sometimes and I think they also take up energy below chakras. However, I have surrendered myself and my all matters to god but still sometimes they keep arising in my mind.Please guide me how to deal with these situations.
3. As you have told in your previuos answers that an aspirant should indulge in physical exercises to use up excess energy accumulated due to brahmacharya. So I do gyming and weight trainning. Is it good for my brahmacharya practice or not ? Also is there a need to do physical exercise after doing yoga asanas prescribed by you?

4. Please tell me that whether one should do warm up or not before doing yoga asanas ?
5. As I go in a co-ed college, many girls come in dresses which are passionate. My question is that, is it a break or not as I many a times gets a glimpse of them(not by staring but as I look here and there gets a glimpse of them) ? My fear is that in such atmosphere past sexual samskaras will not finish.
6. Sometimes(like 1 or 2 times in a month) in the morning while defacating, 2-3 drops comes up in the urine. It comes only when I put too much pressure while defacating. Is it a break in celibacy? Please tell me how to cure it?
Thank you
May god bless you with enlightenment soon.
Thanks once again

Answer
1. It is the upward movement of Prana (vital energy). When the same moves into the sex center, it becomes sexual energy.

2. One has to face the challenges posed by one's 'Prarabdha karma' (karma that dictates this existence) and emerge victorious. There is no escape. If the techniques suggested are applied to the best extent with devotion to God, the task becomes easier.

It is not that the practice becomes easier if one retires to a forest, for it is not the environment which is the chief obstacle but one's past Vasana-s (tendencies) & Samskara-s (impressions) which follow one even into the forest. Therefore, eradication of these is alone the permanent solution. Then, one is ever at peace, residing in the self as the self, be the location a forest or a shopping center.

If you have surrendered fully to God, why worry? Do you worry about how the bus carries you to your destination after having boarded it? Do you worry whether it feels tired, or whether it has enough fuel? You simply relax and wait till your destination arrives. The same should be the degree of 'Saranagati' (surrender) as regards God. One has to do his Dharma (duty) and then relax without the least worry. Let go of the Ego whose worries and desires are endless.

3. Continue exercising in the gym. Warm up exercises are to be performed before the yogic practice and not later.

4. As mentioned earlier, one's past karma sometimes places him in situations which cannot be escaped from. The way out is to hold on to the Atman (self), which becomes possible only through diligent practice of the methods suggested over many years with God surrender. Hence one should hold on to 'Gnyana' (knowledge of the truth) with 'Bhakti' (devotion to God) at all times.

5. Simply ignore the condition and cling to correct practice. It will go away if the practice is correct.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaste Sir,

I had previously asked question regarding career and your guidance proved very very valuable to me as I do not think about the outcome of my action and try to be at my best in studies.

As I have already lost much desire about worldly pleasures I also tell my mind that I had took so many births here on earth, enjoyed all sensual pleasures had many parents,wife, children,property,achievements and what not but in this birth its time to go to real home.When I tell this to mind I feel very peaceful and at-least for sometime desire-less.

I want to know Sir if this is right technique?

Another question on my mind is should we plan about our life(e.g. finance) in general or live life on day-to-day basis without caring about future and performing duty.

Answer

1. There is no harm in the technique. But what should be the correct attitude behind such a train of thought? The correct attitude should be to maintain a detached perspective as regards all those things. It does not mean that one tries to run away from the world, detests people, relationships or material objects. That is not the correct approach, for that amounts to 'Dvesa' (hatred or revulsion) towards people, the world and its objects which is contrary to Yoga.

The true Yogi neither hates nor loves the world. He see's it as a changing, unreal dream upon his Atman (eternal self), all the time being detached from it in reality. This eventually helps him reside as the Atman, whatever be the external conditions dictated by his 'Prarabdha' (such as marriage, children, career etc.)

He does not run away from these, as he knows he has to perform the duty assigned to him by the Lord, be it as a husband, father, son or an employee at work. He performs these with a calm, relaxed and detached perspective. This is the best approach.

2. If one surrenders to God and carries out his 'Dharma' (actions to know the self) correctly, the higher power automatically makes the body & mind go through that which is required for an assured future. The planning will also be taken care of by HIM, and HIS plans are always perfect. Hence perform your Dharma honestly and relax with a smile, all the time enjoying the bliss of the self.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

1-I heard from Indian stories that tapas can bring divine help. Is it true that practicing tapas (brahmacharya, an important one) and yoga or meditation can bring you divine sympathy or help in realizing the self and everyday life?

2-Second, for example some modern gurus say that someone who gets siddhis is always good and you can rank his status by that. But the Indian stories of the asuras Hiranyaksha and Hiranyakashipu tell they got siddhis by practicing penances. Why siddhis come to such beings or is this only allegory?

Answer
1. You are the Atman (pure self) yourself. You are not anything else. You assume yourself to be the limited Ego due to ignorance. Thereupon starts all suffering.

The Atman is an integral, indivisible part of the divine Lord and no different from HIM. 'Tapas' (austerity) to know the self, of which Brahmacharya is the greatest brings your identity closer to your true self. So what is divine help? It is nothing but the help of the infinite Atman which is nothing but your own true self.

2. Who is it who experiences the presence or the lack of a 'Siddhi' (super-normal power)? It is the Ego. Where is such power coming from? It is coming from the Atman, the source of all power. Who is claiming the Siddhi? Again the Ego. So it is like flying in borrowed feathers. The useless Ego is claiming something which it does not possess and becoming more ignorant. Is this necessary? Will it do any good? Where is the need to try or acquire a siddhi when you yourself are the Atman, from whom come all powers? Hence first know your self.

The true Yogi does not run after Siddhi-s. They themselves might come after him or they may not. He does not worry about these the least, for they are another illusion. He forever strives to be the self, in the self as the self. Period.

All those stories only depict that the quest for siddhi-s by itself does not offer well being. It does not solve any problem. Rather, it becomes a waste of time. If the same Asura-s had done penance to know the self, they would have identified themselves with the Atman, rather than continue their identity with the limited Ego prone to suffering with the desire for siddhi-s.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

I would like to ask a question about the methods of spiritual practice. Some yoguis and masters of Hatha Yoga say to get enlightnement you should adopt a gradual way. You begin with asanas, pranayamas and then go to the 3 last levels of samyama. Others like Ramana Maharshi wanted to practice enquiry and you have the sudden enlightment schools like Zen that ask just to sit with awareness. So one school begins with the body (like stretching and asanas), goes to breath (pranayama) and only then it goes to mind practice. The other say to begin immediately cultivating the mind to make it still with zazen or concentrative practices. In my own preference, I prefer cultivating the mind only. Even the practice of brahmacharya or morality depends on controling the mind.

If your mind is somewhat quiet because you are dispassionate, is it not a good idea to begin with mind only?

Answer
1. Since there are innumerable Jiva-s at equally innumerable and varied levels of evolution, there are innumerable paths to the final goal.

2. Each individual gravitates to the path that is most suitable to him/her based on individual Samskara-s (impressions) & Vasana-s (tendencies).

3. In the case of those who are able to make quick progress from the mental levels directly, it is to be known that the physical levels have been transcended in earlier existences.

4. You may try to begin with the mind. There is no harm in the approach. If your body & mind have already been purified in the past as mentioned above, it becomes possible to progress. Else, it will be necessary to get done with karmic purification through the other Anga-s of Yoga to proceed.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir, I have read you before saying that wanting Siddhi-s is a waste of time and the workings of the Ego, but what if I desire some kind of Siddhi but not for personal gain but for something higher than myself? For example my country is being "raped" by corrupts and criminals that got themselves all the powers and all the military and "justice" institutions, they intimidate us and want to cling to that power no matter the cost, my people suffer and I can hear my country cry in desperation. I pray every day and do some penances in the name of my country, and I wish I had some kind of "power" so that my praying gets at leat heard and all these criminals pay soon for all what they have done... or should I not worry and not try to interfere with all this karma my country is facing?

Answer
That 'I' which you refer to is itself the distorted Ego, the embodiment of falsity. The pure soul being a part of the Lord is all knowing and does not 'wish' for anything. It moves in tandem with divine will. The state of a country or the world is a part of the Lord's Leela (divine play) as is everything else. Every occurrence has a purpose and is not accidental. HE who plans these things has done so with a reason. It is through suffering that people realize their errors and make amends.

Know this much and strive to realize your self first. For now, focus on this prerequisite. He who wishes to serve 'others' should first be a master of himself. Without knowing who you are, without perfect self-control and without awareness of the will of the higher power you will not succeed in serving the country or its people.

Real service to humanity or the world can be rightly performed after the individual Ego is gone and the self irreversibly realized. A mind not connected to Divine will cannot understand what is right and wrong, let alone service. It looks at things objectively, as separate from itself. Hence one should first overcome the Ego.

Every individual is answerable to Divine law. The laws of karma apply to all. No wrong doer is let to escape. Knowing this much, one should persevere in one's Dharma as willed by HIM. Then one will reach the stage where he is fully capable of 'Real service' to humanity. Even if you do not want it, the higher power will make you the tool to impart such service.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello.

I would like to thank you for your words of wisdom which has helped me achive a better life.

I've been practicing Brahmacharya for 1 year, its was long and hard but all worthwhile.
I understand the benefit, the peaceful ness that it brings, Life is good in all walks of Life I finally feel I'm letting go of the retraints of society.
The question I would like to put to you is, because I'm practicing celebacy how can a have a loving relationship with women.
I practice yoga and excercise out doors and the feeling it brings has made me want to commit to soul to Brahmacharya, If i commit myself, can I connect with someone in a relationship
I've recently ended a relationship after a year with a Women
I never told her I was practicing Brahmacharya, because I feel people need to find Brahmacharya themselfs.
She had Cancer, before we got into a relationship and was constantly unwell at times, over the past 8 month she is never unwell and when she got a check up a lot of the cancer and gone, and all that was required was a small operation.
I belive I gave her my Energy when we had intercourse, which i belive helped cure the Cancer.
Once she was better, I belive my time with her was done.
I leave some guilt, reason being I enjoyed having a Female companion,
Can you practice Brahmacharya and be in a relationship, with someone who doesn't practice Brahmacharya.

Thank you

Answer
1. Who gave whom energy? Let go of the 'I' and 'her' and know it is the Lord who is the doer of all things. Without HIS power, one cannot even move a fallen leaf.

2. Any relationship with the opposite sex as 'man-woman' outside the precincts of marriage ends in suffering. The purpose of 'cupid' (attraction) is to bring together man and woman into matrimony, to form a family. Not more. Extending the power of cupid for 'enjoyment' is the gateway to sorrow. Hence a man or woman wishing the companionship of the other should do so only within holy wedlock which is taken to its rightful purpose of producing offspring immediately. the purpose of sexual activity is procreation and not recreation.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello.

Are there specific stages that I pass in my Brahmacharya practice? If so, could we have a detailed overview?

Answer
The states one passes through in the long practice of Brahmacharya (which can extend to many births until final liberation) are depicted in the states that the Jiva (individual) undergoes at the evolutionary level. Briefly described below are the seven stages to liberation in conformity with the Upanishads:

I. With proper thought, actions and speech, one waits upon the virtuous. From every conceivable source, he tries to gather the 'Shâstrâ-s'(scriptures) and studies them with dedication. Whoever has thus developed an urge from within to cross this trans-migratory life of 'Samsâra' (dualistic world) and achieve self-realization has reached this first stage denoting the start of Yoga. The rest are only Arya (noble) and not Yogis. The first stage is sweet and ambrosial further to the satisfaction and joy that attend to it. Just having stepped into the path of Yoga, there is much happiness. This stage is the internal, cleansed birth place of the following stages.

II. Coming to the second stage of Yoga called 'Vichara' (inquiry & analysis), the sadhaka (aspirant) resorts to the views of the finest saints or yogis, well known for their interpretations of the 'Smriti' (knowledge gained from read material) and 'Sruti' (knowledge gained from heard material) with good conduct, rapt attention, contemplation and analysis on what has been learnt. Having perceived the truth from the different categories of scriptures and having taken in their essence, the sadhaka becomes clear of what is to be done and what is to be avoided. As a snake sheds its skin, he sheds even the slightest attachment to material objects when assailed by pride, conceit, intolerance, greed and delusion.

III. The third stage is the mental disposition of 'Vairagya' (non-attachment). Fixing his mind on the essence absorbed from the scriptures with devotion and reverence to his teachers, he makes his mind placid with contemplation and meditation on their essence. As a result of his meritorious actions, the pious sadhaka spends his time on the delights of detachment, reverting back to the essence of the scriptures often. The sadhaka realizes for himself that one's perception of reality becomes clear only in due course.

Vairagya (non-attachment) is of two kinds -- Aparâ vairagya (ordinary) and Parâ-vairagya (superior). Ordinary vairagya is non-involvement in the objects with the thought -" All pleasure or pain is the result of past karma. I do nothing as regards to it. Enjoyments and non-enjoyments are dreaded diseases. Possessions are great disasters. All contact ends in separation. Sufferings are diseases of the thoughts." This is the general perception of the sadhaka who has ordinary vairagya. It consists of abstaining from contact with objects and related thoughts and not mentally associating himself with these. This occurs in the beginning of 'Savikalpa Samadhi'.

IV. The fourth stage is the destruction of nescience (ignorance) through dwindling of belief in the Asat (unreal) further to correct practice of the first three stages. It is of the nature of dissolution of mental impressions. One who has reached this stage sees everything with an equal eye without attraction or revulsion. As non-duality gets established and duality dissolved, those who have reached the fourth stage look upon the phenomenal world as a dream which is unreal [‘pasyanti svapnâva lokam’]. The first three stages are akin to the waking stage and the fourth stage is called the dream stage. Here the mind starts to dissolve into fragments like a cloud beginning to rain. It corresponds to 'Sasmita-Sabija Samdhi' - the final stage of Sabija or Savikalpa Samadhi. 'Rtambhara Prajna' or the truth-discriminating intellect is established.

V. The fifth stage is called as 'deep sleep'. The yogi in this stage even though awake and seeing the goings on in the outside, has his awareness internalized and is as good as sleeping as regards to the outer world. Since the mind has practically dissolved, the world concept doesn't present itself before him at all and he is in pure consciousness and bliss. He may be considered as being purely non-dual. He is joyful and inwardly awake with all dual appearances gone. Looking inward even when attending to external work, he appears constantly in-drawn, like a disinterested and exhausted man to others. This is the 'Virama-Pratyaya’ or Asampragnata state between Sabija and Nirbija. It is said to consist of silence, repose and quiescence (quietness); for speech and argument have been thrown far away in the light of the truth -"I am not the cause. The cause is the Lord or my past actions". Here, the sadhaka has outgrown the tendency to imagine and get ensnared in the fanciful thoughts resulting from imagination. Free from all innate impulses with surrender to God, he reaches the next stage.

VI. The sixth stage is called as ‘Turiya’ (fourth) as in succession to the normal waking, dream and sleeping states. It corresponds to 'Nirbija Samadhi'. It is of the nature of perception of one's own self. This is a state of pure object-less awareness and uninterrupted bliss. Here there is neither the existent, nor the non-existent. No 'I' and no 'non-I'. With all former analytic thinking as regards oneself gone, one stays alone, completely fearless in non-duality. 'Para-Vairagya' (highest vairagya) earlier mentioned now blossoms. This state is similar to deep sleep but with full consciousness.

It completes Nirbija samadhi and now begins the entrance to Dharma-Megha Samadhi. Upon getting established in the Dharma-Megha, he is liberated in life through this state here and now. Beyond knots, with all doubts vanished, fully devoid of imaginations as regards the Asath (unreal), he is like a painted flame -- extinguished yet not extinguished. Having dwelt here for some time, he reaches the next and final stage.

VII. The seventh stage is the state of 'Kaivalya' (liberation). It is the acme of all stages, beyond words or description and consists of immense quiescence. The Yogi is established in the 'Shunyata' (void) forever. Avoiding conformity with the ways of the world and the ways of the body, avoiding conformity with the ways of the scriptures, all super impositions on the self are got rid of. There is complete and irreversible identification with the Supreme spirit and this is a state of absolute purity and auspiciousness. This is beyond Turiya, hence called 'Turiyateeta' and is the highest & final state. It is Nirvana. The Yogi is in the Nirbija state of complete union with the Almighty even while awake and carrying on worldly activities. It is also referred to sometimes as the 'Sahaja' state.

An ordinary, worldly person has the three states of 'waking', 'dreaming' and 'sleeping'. In comparison, the first three states described can be compared to the 'waking state' of an ordinary person where in the yogi does see and experience the world.

The fourth state described above can be compared to the normal 'dreaming state', where the world is indeed like a dream to the Yogi.

The fifth state is called the state of 'deep sleep' as here the yogi experiences only bliss like in deep sleep but with complete awareness and full consciousness (which is absent in sleep).

The sixth state is denoted by the word 'Turiya' (beyond the three states of the ordinary person) in which there is no 'experiencing' (i.e there is no Ego but only the self).

The seventh and the highest state is beyond Turiya -- 'Turiyateeta'. This state can not be apprehended by the mind nor described by words but should be experienced and is a state of self luster. One is totally withdrawn within and whatever perceived is not conceived. He is liberated and is one with that Supreme spirit irreversibly. This is a state in which a person is delighted and absorbed in the self and only in the self, for everything has become the self. This is a state where the mind is totally satisfied and is untouched by the divisions of happiness or sorrow of experiencing, having merged into the self.

Thus are described the seven stages passed en route to self-realization. Depending on the evolutionary level of each Yogi, the process can be gone through in a single birth or numerous births.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir
1) In Hinduism all stories have great meaning and are related to know the self, in the case of Ramayana I read is like, Dhasharathan (body have 10 indriyas(5 karmendriya+5 jnanendriya) ,who have 3 wives namely kausalya(icha sakti) kaikeyi(kriya sakti) sumitra (jnan sakti) and 4 childrens namely Ram(stoola sharira Lakshman (sukshma) Bharath(Karana) and Shaktrukna (Thuriya),, Stoola (RAM) got Sita(brahmavidya) by connecting the rope of bow(kundalini passing through backborn), Mandodhari and Shurpanaga denotes vasana which activated through Kriya sakthi (kaikei), Thadaka denotes Kama, Ravan(Rajass) Kumbakarnan (Thamass), Vibeeshnan(Swathikam) , Hanuman (Brahmacharyam(mind is like monkey but mind have the ability to keep brahmacharyam have great power like Hanuman) Bali (avivekam) Sugreve (avivekam) Ayodya (Place have no war- pure Soul) Kishkinda (Place for decision making- Budhi) Lanka (place of war -Mind), Raman (Stoola Sharira) have to go through Arnyagam (Samsar) and control the indriya (Panjavadi- control of 5 indriyas) , and he have to distroy mind(lanka) and get back to Ayodhya (Soul)

Sir in this type of study is the need of the hour, amd more hepful for knowing the value of scriptures, what is your point of view sir?

Regards

Sarwam Kalvidam Brahman

Answer
All the mythological stories in the various cultures of the world symbolize the tug of war between good and evil (the dualities of Samsara). The fights denote the effort one has to apply in overcoming the world and Ego illusion. The wars fought in both the 'Ramayana' and 'Mahabharata' denote the fight an aspirant has to put up against Avidya (ignorance) which works through the tentacles of Maya.

Thus, these stories are an interesting and symbolic way of depicting the course of action to be taken by an aspirant striving to realize the self by annulling the Ego blocking the same. The Lord initiates and guides the aspirant, as symbolically depicted by Sage Vasista (Lord in the form of the Guru advising Rama) in the Ramayana & Lord Krishna guiding Arjuna in the Mahabharata.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

When some say that gods appear to who possess honest heart, what does the expression honest heart means in a spiritual context? Is it brahmacharya or virtue?

Thanks

Answer
Brahmacharya, virtue, honesty, all are one and the same. An honest heart in the spiritual context is a term that points to complete purity of the mind wanting nothing but the knowledge of the Atman (self). The honest heart is free from greed, deceit, cunning, manipulation, attachment, arrogance, jealousy etc.

A relatively pure person experiences this state occasionally when he feels a completely pure, selfless (Egoless) and divine feeling towards himself and the entire world without any desire, unrest or coveting for anything. The state is however temporary and is soon replaced by the turbulence of the Ego which resurges with force on account of the seeds of past Samskara-s (impressions) & Vasana-s (tendencies) of 'Avidya' (ignorance) present within.

When such seeds are roasted in the fire of Yoga to know the self, the pure Atman (self) alone remains. Such a sage resides in that state of bliss all the time, without the least desire for anything external.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

I know siddhis by themselves are not important. But reading about the specific siddhis of the Yoga traditions, I found similar siddhis exist in non yogic traditions, which means outside the practice of Yoga. Even if levitation was very common in India, in Buddhism they have siddhis like levitation in the life of Milarepa, Catholic monks too in the stories of Joseph Cupertino, and in ancient cultures too. Some sages say this is because of meditation and others say its God who do this and not themselves. Dont this contradicts all spiritual teachings about the origin of siddhis?

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Levitation_%28paranormal%29#Religious_views

Answer
There is a pot of water. Now whether one calls this a pot of water, calls it by a few other names or does not call it by any name, the water within the pot remains the same. Does it change by any degree because someone called it by another name or didn't address it at all? The truth remains that a liquid with a certain physical & chemical composition exists in the pot. Some call it water while others may not. A few others may say there is no water in the pot, not having seen inside. Nothing changes. That which is... is.

In the same way, there is one infinite force emanating from infinite consciousness which is the power behind everything. Some call it God, others call it by other specific names, a few others do not bother about it at all while another group may say such a force does not exist. All these are different perceptions of the perceiver. Does this change anything? That force simply continues with what is to be done as always. That which is... is.

One with a siddhi draws fractionally from this super power to some extent (as regards that siddhi only) which the body & mind then display. It is like a gadget drawing power from the mains. Whether it is the TV, heater, radio or the computer, none can function without power from the mains.

What if these gadgets themselves were to claim doership without realizing that they are functioning only on account of the power from the mains? Such an assumption would only be a foolish fancy, for the reality is different.

The same applies to siddhi-s. He who intentionally develops/desires or uses these siddhi-s without justification (bereft of the maturity coming from knowledge of the Atman (self)) forgets where these come from, bloats with Ego and starts their misuse. Such misuse soon results in serious consequences to himself and others. 'Avidya' (ignorance) increases and causes his downfall. The fall will not be a small one. It will be very severe & dangerous.

Hence until irreversible knowledge of the truth is not gained by realizing the self, one should turn a blind eye to siddhi-s. Upon knowing the self, all siddhi-s come by themselves to the feet of the sage who knows how exactly to use them as ordained by the higher power.

What someone says or does not say does not matter. There is no contradiction. The truth remains as it is. What is... is.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello I would like to know more about Krishna. I am very interested in mythology but very confused about the excessive complexity of the myths compared to let say other books like the Quran or Christian Bible which are chronological.

1-Does Hindus believe Krishna really existed as a human being, as for example Muhammad or Jesus for Christians and Muslims respectvely? For Christians and Muslims, their respective prophets really existed and their life were not mythical but real, same with the Sakyamuni Buddha or Guru Nanak who's existence are proved. So they make a distinction between myths or fables and biographies of what they believed really occured to their particular sages included their miracles, but about miracles I wont talk because its personal belief of an individual. So its more like a biography.

2-What an Avatar represents in myths? I dont think avatars existed as physical beings, perhaps spiritual beings. For example some Vishnu Avatars had fish features, another tortoise features, another lion features. Does this means something in particular?

All the questions are not to offend, I could ask the same thing about other mythologies like Greek or Japanese with their heroes and gods.

Thank you

Answer
1. Lord Krishna is a direct 'Avatar' (manifestation) of the Supreme who took a human form.

Every living being is also a manifestation of the Lord. What then is the difference? In case of a direct Avatar as in Lord Krishna, there is no 'Agnyana' (ignorance). Consciousness always resides as the universal self without the Ego. So it is the Lord having taken a form and yet not having the least ignorance. This cannot be said of the normal man who identifies with his Ego. Upon self-realization and eventually liberation, the same man reverts to Godhead (his true self).

2. An Avatar can take any form it likes. It is as real as anybody else. The body taken may be physical or astral. These different animals, each represent a particular quality at the symbolic level which the Avatar wishes to convey.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Dear Dhananjay,

I have a strong belief that if people are made to understand the difference between sensual & spiritual happiness in terms of quality & not just in terms of side-effects or duration they would find it easier to cognise & take a decision as to which path to follow & develop a taste for spiritual pursuits.

The large majority has no understanding of the different sort of happpiness gained from meditation.

The below article on basis of scientific study has been almost like a god sent for me in understanding the diff in quality of results gained from one of the highest sensual pleasures like an orgasm & meditation on the other hand.

http://www.scientificamerican.com/article.cfm?id=the-neurobiology-of-bliss-sacre

As a person who has experienced samadhi could you try & put into words what is the chief difference you observed in higher meditative states of absorbtion & life's sensual pleasure.

I'm trying to find a principle on which I can base my understanding & consciously overcome need for sensual gratification rather than suppressing it.

So far what I can deduce is sensual pleasures(be they of any sort from alcohol/sex/drugs) have a way of diminishing awareness,making one unconscious & a sense of stopping of thouhts(this seems common with meditation & therein lies the trap) while meditation increases awareness & absorbtion & disconnectedness from thoughts.Most people drown themselves in sensual pursuits to get rid of constant chattering mind.

There is something in us that wants to stop the mind(addicts go below & sages above)

Pls provide your comments even if this is covered in past replies.
It is always a rare oppurtunity to hear from experienced sages than any scientific study.

ANSWER: 1. There is only one 'Ananda' (bliss) - That of the Atman (self), coming from the Lord.

2. There are two ways to experience this bliss.

3. The easy course is through sense pleasures. This is temporary, limited in intensity, causes debility of the body/mind & increases bondage 'Agnyana' (ignorance), ending in suffering.

4. The other method is to merge consciousness into the Atman (self). This rewards strength and eventually liberation from the very need for bliss, for one becomes bliss himself (his true nature).

5. The wise choose the second path.

6. One's very nature of the Atman is that of bliss. When consciousness identifies with the body & mind, it forgets its true nature, for these two being 'Asat' (unreal & illusory) have no bliss in them. Thereupon starts its quest for bliss from one external object to the other (world). None of these are real and hence cannot give everlasting bliss.

Ultimately, the mind realizes the fallacy of such action and completely gives up the external search. It also gives up the vision of itself, for awareness of the mind is itself another botheration. Then suddenly surfaces the Atman (self) which was what it had all along been in search of. When this process of being merged in the self, as the self becomes natural and irreversible through constant Sadhana (practice), the search finally ends. Then, he who searched is gone. The self which is of the nature of infinite knowledge-bliss-being alone remains, with no desire or want.

Thus every being's quest for happiness is its unconscious quest to know the Atman (self).

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Dear Dhananjay,

DOes this men to suggest that there is no qualitative difference b/w sensual pleasure/bliss & atmic bliss?

No diff. in quality between shreya & preya other than it's duration & debilitating effects.

If menas are different surely the end will carry the signature of it's means.

If both bliss are qualitatively same why aren't serious drug addicts not any closer to god for the moments they are high on drugs.

Answer
1. Sensual pleasure is minuscule & temporary as compared to Atmic bliss which is continuous & everlasting.

2. Bliss by itself is not the Atman. It is one of the traits of the Atman. Thus the self is always in bliss, while all those who experience bliss through some means for a certain duration have not necessarily realized God.

The Ananda (bliss) enjoyed by a drug addict also comes from the self alone. However, the means used to enjoy such bliss are incorrect and ends in suffering as explained earlier.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I want to know the adavantages of Nadi shoodhi with breath retention over without breath retention. I get distracted while doing breath retention and takes much more time though i don't have any other problem. Just curious to know.

Answer
1. There is no breath retention in 'Nadi Shodhana' but just slow inhalation and exhalation through the alternate nostrils.

2. Breath retention arises in 'Pranayama'.

The purpose of both is to purify the body/mind and prepare the mind to merge into the self. Perform the complete process as described in past answers without omission. Mental distraction will eventually subside by itself.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi, I know the question may sound stupid.

But is brahmacharya easy for Hindus and yogis? It seems they have more facility to practice it than other people like Westerners or others. In other religions like monastic Christianity for example the saints like St Anthony did have many temptation related to lust and women and many others too, but there is no such stories of temptations with yogis as if brahmacharya was natural to them. Is this cultural or individual?

Answer
1. The ease or difficulty in the practice of Brahmacharya has no connection with the race. It is dependent on the evolutionary level of the individual

2. It must be remembered that all saints and sages were at one time one among the masses and therefore as much under the grip of ignorance as anybody else. They too underwent much torment under the grip of delusion.

3. However, they had one marked quality which would eventually set them apart and take them towards realizing their true identity. 'Perseverance' and 'commitment' at uninterrupted Sadhana (practice) was the secret. They made it a point never to give up on the practice despite obstacles and downfalls.

They performed correct 'Vichara' (enquiry) into the cause behind their setbacks and carefully strove not to repeat those mistakes. Such effort ultimately helped discern the truth which itself is God's grace. This helped them reach the goal.

All Jiva-s (individuals) go through numerous challenges in the practice. Those who appear advanced will have got done with the same in previous existences with hard work. On the whole, he who strives relentlessly reaches the goal.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
When someone is practicing brahmacharya for months you are accumulating energy. But this accumulated energy should be sublimated. So you recommend pranayama to sublimate it and renew the body and mind. SO this is easy to understand. But if I practice pranayama it brings me confused thoughts because my attention on breathing. Pranayama is not for everybody.

1-If you practice other methods like TRATAKA or THIRD EYE concentration which are concentrative techniques, will this same energy conserved by brahmacharya be sublimated into spiritual energy even if pranayama is ignored?

2-What are the other methods to awaken kundalini except pranayama?

Thanks

Answer
1. How long have you practiced Pranayama? One should apply efforts for a sustained duration of time despite impediments. The thought free state does not come instantly at the start. Do not get cowed down by these barriers.

The aim of Pranayama is to help develop perfect control over 'Prana' (vital energy) and thereby lead to equilibrium. It is a method that eventually helps one overcome the mind. Unless the mind is negated into nothing, the self cannot be perceived. Obstacles are but natural at the start as the mind does not give itself up so easily. It puts up a fight which is to be neutralized through practice spanning several years.

Eventually, the breathing will go on by itself during Pranayama without much attention. The attention that one directed on breathing goes away by itself in meditation. Persevere till you reach that stage. From Pranayama are also disposed the impurities of the body. A Yogi who masters Pranayama and thereby his 'Prana' will also master his mind. Thoughts which are nothing but the mind merge into their source, namely the Ego which in turn merges into the Atman (self).

2. Is not thinking about the 'Third Eye' also a thought? The means always involve the mind during the earlier years. If the efforts are honest, the mind will reverse and merge into its source in the course of time.

3. Try and see if 'Trataka' will give the result of leading to a thought free state. If so, you may then adopt the method without Pranayama.

The methods to reach the self are many. They differ from person to person. These become known by themselves by the grace of the self.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
How to be free from dehadyasa, identification of self with body. Thank you

Answer
'Dehatma Buddhi' (identification with the body) is overcome through 'Abhyasa' (practice of the necessary methods) and 'Vairagya' (detachment for the world & its objects).

The methods suggested for a life of Yoga constitute Abhyasa while Vairagya is to be developed by 'Vichara' (enquiry into reality).

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: I have a doubt.while studying suddenly my semen flows out how is this possible?

ANSWER: The cause is some form of a previous stimulation or mind state which becomes evident later through the release. It can also occur very rarely due to unconscious stimulation of the 'Svadhishtana chakra' (sex center) by Pranic currents due to certain past Samskara-s (impressions). Honest and persevered practice of Brahmacharya with the methods suggested will annul these problems in the course of time.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: So does this mean I have violated the vow of brahmacharya?

Answer
The answer to this question lies with the questioner himself. When an honest inquiry is made as to whether there was any voluntary fantasy/imagination preceding the release (even a few days earlier) with full mental awareness, the answer becomes evident. Any release of semen amounts to a reset in the practice under such cases.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi,

1- Do all religious traditions had enligthened beings?

2-WHy many religious traditions cant accept that other religions may be valid? CHristian tend to see only Jesus as the only holy being that existed, and some modern people in the Hare Krishna movement say only Krishna is holy, etc.

Answer
1. Yes

2. Those who have realized the truth accept all religions. There is no distinction in the truth, for it is one without a second.

A religion is only a path to reach the self and nothing else. Just as there are many roads from different directions to reach a city, there are different roads to reach the self.

The great Lord who is one and only one, call HIM by what name you may, makes different Jiva-s (individuals) take up different paths, based on their individual nature and temperament. However, all these paths reach the self alone which is no different from the Lord.

When the Yogi attains to complete union with the Lord in 'Nirvikalpa Samadhi' (non-dual super-consciousness), he perceives the truth, also called the Lord, also called the self as one and only one. There, there is no religion, no mind, no body and no world. All these fuse into their source, for they were all images on the screen of pure consciousness (Lord). HE is the great, invisible mirror on whom are reflected these images.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi,

As a master of yoga and Indian texts, what is the signifiance of mythicals narratives about gods and demigods? From what I know, about the Kurukshetra War, a famous yogi, Lahiri Mahasaya, said that this represents the many egos that we all possess and we should fight, not real event occured in the past as some others would say. In other myths around the world we have a saint or hero that fights a dragon which never existed but only represents the ego or lust and avarice.

So can we conclude all mythical narratives are just to educate people about spiritual practices in an occult way so just a few can understand? For almost everybody it is more interesting to learn and worship mythological beings than learning Zen or Yoga teachings, thats why many go to church, temples etc but few achieve some spiritual state.

Thank you

Answer
All such stories are a symbolic representation of the war that one has to wage against the identification of consciousness with the 'Asat' (unreality comprising the Ego & its world) to revert to the Atman (self).

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear friend,

1) In what breathing state is mahabandha performed?
2) For how long should the beginner hold each bandha and how should this duration be increased?
3) Is it okay to have a reasonably heavy breakfast and skip lunch? I feel extremely hungry in the morning but not so in the afternoon. I try having a breakfast of five fruits and milk but I still hungry, even if I have Rabi, is it okay to eat the previous days food as well from the fridge, or will this harm me in the long term?
4) My evening meal, which I need, is cooked at lunch, is this okay to eat as well? I don't have the time to cook right now and even if I did, my efforts would cause all sorts of problems and misunderstandings. Garlic and onion is also unavoidable in the present circumstances.

Answer
1. Kumbkaka

2. 3~5 seconds. The duration should not be increased.

3. Breakfast should preferably consist of cooked food made of some cerial or grain. It should be filling and larger in qty than lunch or dinner. A banana may be eaten after breakfast. Mere fruits do not make a breakfast. A fruit meal with some milk & a little food (if necessary) is for the evening. Do not skip lunch; eat some.

4. Eat what is available earlier in the evening than later at night. As suggested, let the evening dinner consist of a little cooked food and more of fruits/raw vegetables.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi,

1-Do you think with the continual practice of brahmacharya you feel more happy in life which for me means less depressed?

2-What are the real benefits of the practice of concentration or third eye in Yoga? Can we say it helps confidence? Thanks very much.

Answer
1. Yes, without doubt.

2. It will eventually help one transcend identity with the body & mind, thereby leading to identity with the Atman (self).

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Do the awakening of kundalini occur outside of the Tantric school of yoga? The doctrine of kundalini awakening is specific of Tantra, which means outside tantric schools, there is no kundalini awakening. In tantra they say, if kundalini dont awake conciously there can be no enlightnment. Is the Tantra school special or superior than other yoga schools or even other religions who dont have kundalini?

Answer
1. Kundalini awakening occurs to all who proceed on the path of realizing the self with sincerity.

2. Just as there are many roads to a destination, there are many paths to enlightenment. Tantra is one such path. Every path is unique in its own way and applies to a specific temperament. Therefore tantra is neither superior nor inferior.

3. Every religion recognizes Kundalini, though they do not call it by the same name.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

Some time ago, I asked about an experience I had when practicing third eye meditatiopn in bed in supine position. I suddenly saw all white with closed eyes and felt litteraly aspired upward, so strong sensation I stopped the meditation. You answered me it was when prana is filling the higher chakras. Do this means the experience was a state of trance even if im not religious? ANd can someone with no religion or religious belief achieve samadhi? I mean there were some non religious figure who at the same time were very spiritual like Socrates, Confuciuss, Plato, etc. WHat do you think?

Answer
1. There is no vision or experiencing in Samadhi.

2. Religion and Samadhi have no connection, Samadhi being the state of the pure self.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir
I decided to practice Brahmacharya about 2 months ago, and since the last 45 days I have not voluntarily ejaculated. I know it is a small duration but nevertheless it is a start. But in these 45 days, I have been having wet dreams once every week on an average. I have tried hard but I do not have any patience for any yoga other than Bhakti yoga. I cannot practice asana,pranayama to preserve semen. I pray daily, read the Bhagvatam daily, do japa and have satsang whenever possible, but I can't do any asana or pranayama. So, I would like to know if I never voluntarily ejaculate, even though I have wet dreams even once a week, will it have any benefits? Can intense Bhakti Yoga help a man transmute his semen? I know what I am practicing is not worthy of being called Brahmacharya, but does it atleast fit the definition of celibacy?

I am a 21 years old college student.
Thanks in advance!

Answer
Continue with the practice of Brahmacharya, with devotion to God to know the self. In the course of time, HE will show the path to be employed.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Ive read in an ancient post an answer about how Nature starts to work for one who is an absolute brahmachari in deeds and thoughts. Can you please explain more this subject? Is it related to spirits who starts helping a brahmachari or Nature who helps him as an automatic process? I didnt understand the real cause behind it.

Another thing, is that after practicing brahmachari, people start to speak more to me, but at the same time at work there is a specific person (a crazy-type of woman who wants to do everything, who is just one position higher in work) who get well with me and helps me, but at the same time started try to control me at work and this I really dont like, it even gets to the point of humiliation. As an expert in human psychology and wisdom how can you explain this and how should I deal with it?

Answer
1. The cause is the gradual reduction of past negative karma obstructing one's well being.

2. Simply ignore the world and stay fixed to the state of the self. What others do is not our business, even if it targets us.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Question
Hello Dhananjay ji, hope you are doing well. I have been practicing brahmacharya and the yogic practices from past 16 days in the sequence you have mentioned earlier.
While I have some queries regarding my practice. These are as follows :
1. The asanas I perform are Ardha – Paschimothânasana, Paschimothânasana, Bakâsana, Sivanandâsana, Halâsana, Sarvangâsana, Dhanurâsana, Pâdahastasana, Chakrâsana, Shirshasana. I have google searched, the way in which these asanas are performed and trying to perform these all. But couldn't get the satisfactory answer for breathing pattern one should follow. Therefore I am really very confused about the breathing pattern one should follow while performing these asanas. Can you please explain in detail the breathing pattern for each of these asanas.
2. Also can you explain the time one should remain in one asana, how to increase the time and how many sets of one asana and of how much time should be performed. Also what is the maximum time limit to remain in one asana.
3. In the early morning, Before starting my yogic practice I do five minutes of sprint running after that 5-8 minutes of all body parts exercises and in the end I do vigorous physical exercises like push ups, pull ups, dhand bethak etc. for 15 minutes. so that I can spend much of my energy meant to nourish physical body as you have described earlier. And after taking five minute rest I start my yogic practice asana, bandas etc. Am I following a right method and are these physical exercises enough to transmute sexual energy meant for physical well being ?

4. I am having a problem from last 4-5 years when I was in class 9th. Whenever I go to piss in public toilets or in my college washroom, if there is someone around I am unable to piss, even if I stand for 2-3 minutes. And it is very embarrasing and many times causes very discomfort for me as I can not go again and again. While I don't feel this problem if I am alone in the washroom. Please provide me with a suitable medication as it is really agitating.
5. In your previous answers you have said that pranayama should be performed after acheiving perfection in asana. As I am a newbie should I do them or not? If no, then after how much time should I start doing Pranayama.
6. From Pranayama in your answers which of the Pranayamas do you think are necesary and suitable for brahmacharya.
Thank You

ANSWER: 1. Slow 'Puraka' (inhalation) during expansive movements and slow 'Rechaka' (exhalation) during compressive movements is the breathing. 'Kumbhaka' (retention - internal or external) is at the final state of no movement while holding the pose.

2. The time one spends in the final state of each Asana depends on one's comfort there. A few seconds should do for well being. One should not force beyond one's ability which gradually increases in the course of time.

3. The warm up exercises are to be moderate and not strenuous or exhausting. One should decide the limit for himself.

4. The condition is only a mental state of self consciousness. Let go of such consciousness which relates to the Ego and be at peace.

5. Perform both. The perfection will come by itself.

6. http://en.allexperts.com/q/Celibacy-Abstinence-3564/2011/5/Pranayama-Yoga-Brahma

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Thank you Dhananjay ji for your kind reply. Most of my doubts are cleared. But still I have some queries. Sorry for the inconvenience caused. My queries are :

1. Here for example I can perform sarvangasana with ease for more than 3 minutes (if I am slowly breathing and not performing kumbhaka). On the other hand, if I am doing kumbhaka alongside I can do it for a max time of 30 seconds. So, which method is correct ? If second method is correct i.e. performing sarvangasana while doing kumbhaka, then how many repititions of this asana should I perform Or after completing one repitition one should go for another asana ?

2. As in your answer no.3 you have said that exercises should be moderate. However, side by side I have to train myself for defence services. So ehat sequence of these strenous exercises and yogic practices would you suggest ?

3. In one of your previous answer you have told that remaining 3 hours in an asana is considered as attaining mastery over asana. Please tell me whether this time of 3 hours apply for only sidhaasana, sukhaasana, padmasana etc. or for all the asana. If it applies for all asanas in which sequence should one increase the time period.

4. In the link you have provided the method of performing Nadi Shodhana and pranayama is clear to me. But I just want to ask what about other pranayamas like bhastrika, kapalbhati etc. Or the pranayama you have given is enough for achieving self-realization.

Thank you very much
Sorry for causing inconvenience again.

Answer
1. One repetition, held for a comfortable duration of time should suffice.

2. The fitness required to pass the physical test will come by itself if what is suggested is applied.

3. Long duration in meditative postures (such as Padmasana, Sidhasana) comes by itself in the course of time if the practice of Yoga is correct. The focus should be on merging the mind into the Atman (self) and not merely on performing physical feats through Asana-s. That which is comfortable is the right duration.

4. It is enough when coupled with all the other Anga-s of Yoga as described.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
sir i have many of your articles from many days and from before i am practicing celibacy but i am falling many times and masturbated. my highest record for not performing masturbation is 6 months .i have this wrong habit from the age of 12.to control myself i left porn 3 years before but then also cant control to masturbate sir yesterday again i saw porn and masturbated 5 times i am not able to control myself please help me i want to become a life long celibate.now i can control myself from watching porn because i have controlled before also but what about temptations this are so terrible that i am seeing many woman body parts everywhere even in anyone face also please save me

Answer
Apply the Yogic practices and lifestyle with surrender to God as described earlier. Perform correct mediation. Success will dawn in the course of time. One should persevere till Brahmacharya becomes effortless. Effort is the key for the aspirant.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhananjay,

hope you are doing fine, I have a question yesterday my father told me to wear a sacred mala of spatika and rudraksha and other stones in one mala and he told that it was kept in japa puja done some years back and it is very sacred.so i thought of wearing it today after bath but today morning i had a wet dream. I didn't wear the mala and decided to wear on starting of durga navaratri's which are in next month.i thought if i wear i may commit a sin. One some days i did't even ate prasad. so if a unforeseen situation like this what should be our decision.

Kindly give your valuable advice.

Thanks,
Ganapathi.

Answer
Holding on to the state of the self through Sadhana is what matters. Then, one is always in meditation, whatever be the nature of external activity. That is the greatest religion, Dharma and state of auspiciousness.

Wear the Mala at the start of Navaratri with a vow for honest Sadhana to know the self. All these external things are only symbols to remind oneself to perform uninterrupted Sadhana and not more.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
sir 1.can we wear underwear over langot .if langot is directly wore over private parts 2.does langot save our private parts when suddenly it get hit by anything that is less pain or something like that

Answer
1. The Langot is sufficient. Why another over it?

2. It offers the right support to the testicles, unlike the normal brief. It also helps protect the private parts to a better extent.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

Do you think Jesus was a brahmachari and practiced Yoga? There are hypothesis that says he went to India or Tibet to learn meditation or even die in Kashmir and not in Israel, is there some truth in this? The Gospels didnt talk about his early life. Paramahansa Yogananda taught that Jesus was the reincarnation of Elisha and a student of St John the Baptist, the reincarnation of prophet Elijah.

Answer
Lord Jesus was an incarnation of the Supreme who came for uplifting the society. The formless Lord takes forms when necessary, for the welfare of mankind, wherein he can appear like a common man going through the motions of life.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear sir,

* who is an Aghori, He is like Urdarweda yogi
*Why mind roaming after bodly matter like thin,fat,belly even after know the truth, is it bz of ego thanking you sir

sarwam kalwidham brahman

Answer
1. The 'Aghori-s' are a sect of Hindu spiritualists who practice the doctrine of non-duality through indulgence in extreme measures to realize the falsity of everything material (as Maya) and thereby realize that Brahman (Lord) alone is real. It is also a path to realize the self as are many other paths.

All Jiva-s on the correct path of spirituality eventually take up absolute Brahmacharya and become Urdhvareta-s. Becoming an Urdhvaretas is a stage which every Brahmachari eventually reaches and the same applies to Aghori-s as well.

2. The identification of consciousness with 'Asat' (the unreal) makes it forget its true nature. Such identification occurs on account of 'Agnyana' (ignorance) surrounding the pure self, of which the 'Ahamkara' (Ego) is an offshoot. The Ego by itself has no independent standing but is only a false superimposition on the eternal self. When it is got rid of through 'Sadhana' (practice) and 'Vichara' (inquiry), the self effulgent Atman (self) alone remains, which is free from all defects. The imaginary dualities do not present themselves from then onward.

Mere knowledge of the truth is not of much use. It is realizing the truth that matters. Such irreversible realization comes only upon negating all the Samskara-s (impressions) & Vasana-s (tendencies) blocking one's true identity with the self. Hence the need for Sadhana.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
sir
1.i want to know that wearing underwear over langot is harmful because i am living in a hostel and when going to bathroom many are teasing thats why i asked this can you send a photograph of langot
2.sir when my friends are discussing about things related to bad things and i am present there then my heart beat becomes fast and i feel very uneasy this happens before practicing brahmacharya also why so
3.in my school when girls are roaming around me or giggling my mind feels very uneasy and wrong thoughts start coming .what to do sir?

Answer
1. The private parts may get subjected to excess heat by wearing the brief over the langot. If such is the condition, then it might be a good idea to not do so. Ignore what others have to say. People pass comments based on their perception, while one should do things based on his own perception. The past post on the Langot has a video on how to wear it.

2. The best course of action for the beginner under such circumstances is to walk away and focus on something more constructive. Mundane talk is a waste of time and energy and nothing good comes out of it.

3. This occurs to every aspirant during the first few years of practice. If one applies all the methods properly, such vulnerability gradually ebbs away in the course of time.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

hi
thanks for your help in clearing my doubt could you explain the importance of sandhyavandanam?
could you also explain advaita?

Answer

1. The 'Sandhyavandanam' is a ritualistic approach performed after the thread ceremony by the Brahmin class to awaken 'Kundalini' to realize the self.

2. To realize one's true self as not different from the Lord is 'Advaita'. It is complete non-duality.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Dear Dhananjay, Please accept my Dandvat.
I am really impressed by your answers. Please let me know how can we meet. You are changing live of so many youths.
It would be wonderful if we can have a get together at lest once in six month or year and also arrange something at a larger scale. This will give us more motivation & commitment. We really need your association it will be wonderful.

If group meeting not possible then please give me your appointment i really need to meet you. Thank you for the valuable work.

Answer

1. The only worthy association is to reside at the feet of the Lord, realizing oneself to be the Atman (self).

2. It is HIS grace alone which is worthy. It is the real light which helps people free themselves from the darkness of ignorance.

That knowledge which one may derive from another also comes by the grace of the 'Brahman' who is within you as your self. The physical body or mind of the person who may be the medium of such knowledge is of no consequence as the Lord alone is the doer. People often mistake the person to be real without realizing it is the Lord alone who is real and is actually working from within all. When the same Lord is within you as the self, why search externally or meet another who is also powered by the same Lord? It is enough if one makes his mind still and merges into the Supreme self within. That itself is Yoga.

If the Lord wills for two Jiva-s to meet, it transpires without a doubt. Else it will not. Hence focus on realizing the self and leave the rest to HIM.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Greetings, I would like to start by humbly expressing my gratitude as your words of divine wisdom have proven to be most helpful in my pursuit of higher living. I am beginning to understand the 8 Limbs of Yoga and felt a very positive resonance upon understanding the materials. Although I would very much like to abide by these principles. I find that my mind often rebels when I try to implement. Example, When I deny myself sensual pleasures my mind immediately adopts a negative state. If it be your will, please shed light as to the appropriate course of action. Your guidance would be very much appreciated.

ANSWER: The negative state is is a reaction which all aspirants face in the course of the initial few years of practice. If all the limbs of Yoga are honestly applied with unbroken Brahmacharya and a sense of dispassion developed towards the world & its objects, the past Samakara-s (impressions) & Vasana-s (tendencies) causing such volatility gradually start to dissolve.

After many years of unbroken Brahmacharya and meditation with God surrender, such incidents greatly reduce and the advanced aspirant comes close to residing in the self most of the time. Such instances do not come into the purview then. Till then, one has to persevere using the methods suggested earlier and cross the hurdles which are the projections of the Ego.

Inquire - "Who wants sensual pleasures"? It will be known that it is the Ego. You are not the Ego but the pure self. So this mistaken identity is to be warded off. That is achieved by the aspirant through direct experience of the self in meditation until all ignorance is burnt away. Hence one has to constantly persevere to accomplish merging the mind into the Atman (self) and taste the self through direct experience, which eventually comes.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: So a man must maintain his dharma no matter how much discomfort it may bring him? Im asking because I want to make sure im not doing anything wrong before I committ myself to living a life of yoga. I appreciate your help and may you extend my gratitude to the lord.

Answer
That fight to adhere to Dharma is itself the challenge one has to face and eventually overcome by reaching one's soul state. Hurdles and obstacles are but natural in this quest and are overcome by constant effort and perseverance, following which shines the grace of the Supreme.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi,

1- Can someone awaken kundalini by concentrating on the ajna chakra (third eye)?

2- When the third eye opens after long time of practice, can you see ghosts and other beings made of chi energy?

Answer
1. Kundalini awakening takes place when the Lord decides it should occur. One cannot do anything until divine will wills so. Upon the time of such awakening, the aspirant gets the mind to meditate on the third eye.

2. Ghosts, which are astral beings cannot be seen by the physical eyes. They have an energy body but no physical body. It is possible to connect with such astral beings if one strives so by the required meditation. All this is however a waste of time and becomes an impediment in the path to the self. Hence the wise aspirant meditates on nothing but the Atman (self) with surrender to the Lord.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Respected sir,
I am 23 yr old student.I am following the celibacy with yoga and pranayma from last 1 year but not regularly.I have following questions:-
1.As i following celibacy in word,thought,did strictly from 3 months then also i have wet dreams so,How many days/month practice of celibacy,pranayma takes to erase all past bad sexual impressions.
2.Is there any special schedule of yoga or pranayma to follow on the day after of wet dreams.
3.Is kumbhaka and deep breathig while studying,walking,traveling also gives same benefits.and is mere kumbhaka helps to convert sexual energy into physical,spiritual energy

Answer
1. Wet dreams stop once the Yogi becomes an Urdhvareta. That will happen by the grace of God if one's efforts are honest, after a few years of practice.

2. No

3. Pranayama is to be applied correctly and not merely Kumbhaka in random.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Guruji,

1) Although the Lord is the actual Guru, can you be considered one of my Gurus for teaching me the techniques mentioned in past answers albeit virtually but also personally in the question answer format?
2) Right nostril partial blockage is a problem only during practice and it seems to be magnified upon pranayam commencement. What is the reason for this? Please explain in detail. However, practice is still possible and yielding benefit despite the extra exertion.

3) My memory is very bad from past marijuana abuse and masturbation. How long will it take me to recover my previously available phenomenal shockingly absorptive and photographic memory if the correct lifestyle and sense of surrender to the All Pervading Hidden Treasure is inculcated?

Answer
1. It is enough if one considers the Lord as the Guru (mentor), as there is no other Guru. Based on the individual nature and evolutionary level of the aspirant, the Lord guides through a physical form, the suitable path for every Jiva.

2. Such blockages can occur until the body is not fully purified. It will not occur after complete purification. Hence one should work hard despite impediments.

3. Do not worry about the result. One's efforts end at duty. The rest will come without doubt at the right time. Hence simply persevere in your Dharma.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello, as a private question

Someone who practice brahmacharya for a long period of time of months or even years without break, get a radiant physical appearance "atractive" which can attract compliment. This in itself is an impediment for spiritual practice because you get temptation and people tell you why dont you get girlfriend, anoying things.

1- Now is there a trick to practice brahmacharya without break but at the same time dont change your physical appearance? I mean make the physical appearance remains the same as someone who dont practice it or jerk-like. This is very important.

Some yogis who were advandved like Ramakrishna looked like a no brahmachari, even as a jerk (without intention of insulting) because for me physical appearance sincerely means nothing. I dont believe at all that what appear outside is the reflection of the inside. Socrates or Laozi which were like beggars and at the same time one of the greatest philosophers of history. They were not like the portrait of Krishna in hindu art.

Thank you for answering if you dont mind

Answer
1. Are you the body? You are pure consciousness which is ever unaffected. Who gets affected by what people say or don't say? It is the Ego. So the real problem is of consciousness identifying itself with the Ego/body. This is the disease which is to be cured. As long as it remains uncured, there will always be one problem or the other. Even if you were able to diminish the radiance of the body, Maya (illusion) will attack you from another angle, for the germ called 'Avidya' (ignorance) is still alive within you and the problem continues.

The wise one who wishes to reside in the self as the self does not waste his resources trying to alter the unreal body, Ego or the impermanent world which are all one and the same. He goes to the source from where these spring forth and kills that source in totem. The source of these three is the germ - 'Avidya' (ignorance) surrounding the Atman (self). Upon negation of the same, all problems and sorrows come to the final end.

2. To begin with, remind the Ego - "It is the power of the Lord which manifests as radiance through Brahmacharya. Hence I neither have any right over it, nor any claim. Therefore, there is no need to react to what the world does, for such radiance is not my doing".

Who created this body? It is the Lord. So let HIM reduce or increase its radiance. That is not our business or concern, for we are not the body or the Ego. Simply learn to hold on to your true self which has no connection with the body and be at peace; ever free.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

Swami Sivananda said in one book that gods (spirits) listen to someone who practice brahmacharya and meditation. Now I know divinaton doesnt helps you achieve self realization or Union with God, but Sivananda mentionned this practice. He wrote: "Iambichus states that the gods do not hear him who invokes them if he is impure from sexual connections." There are some stories about people receiving visions of lottery in dreams or messages in automatic writing or table boards. What is the possibility of achieving something and then do benefical things with it?

Answer
Your true self is the same self that powers the gods as well. Let go of the phenomenal world of which the gods are also a part and first realize your self. That which is destined to come will come on its own accord.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir,
You mentioned that one should remove langot while resting especially at night. Should the langot be removed even if one is resting for an hour after having food in afternoon. Sometimes due to excessive tiredness I rest lying down on bed for 10-15 minutes. Should langot be removed even then ?
What is the scientific point of view with regards removing langot while sleeping/ resting ?
What if I don't lie down but rest sitting on chair ? Should langot be removed even then?
Should the langot be completely removed or even little loosening will do when taking rest ?

Thank You

Answer
1. Not necessary.

2. The Langot should be removed before going to bed at night so as to relax the genital area and aid normal erections which occur in sleep.

For short periods of rest during the day, one may loosen it if one feels like.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Guruji,

1) "Never was there a time when I wasn't or you weren't nor shall we ever cease to be" What is the meaning of this line? What is the need of expressing I and you? Aren't these entities false? Anti-Brahma groups use this line most often to imply continuity of an individual personality after moksha.
2) Why is learning ved mantras from the internet without a Guru but together with the correct swaras and pronunciation detrimental to brahmacharya? And I mean this with 100% experience of cause-effect relationship. Does the same rule apply to learning puran mantras? I learned purusha sukta, narayan sukta and ganapati atharvashirsha. Even the immediate bliss akin to an orgasm is experienced after completing a chant. Then why this control system is in place?

Answer
1. It is a line that refers to the eternity of the Atman (self) and the beginning-less nature of the Ego (which however comes to an end after the self is realized). 'I' and 'you' are only subject-object terms used to denote the illusion of the phenomenal world.

2. As long as the mantra-s are chanted with the correct pronunciation & Swara, after knowing the meaning, with devotion to the Supreme, it is not detrimental, even if accomplished without a physical Guru.

The control systems stating the requirement of a Guru are only to prevent the possibility of aspirants mispronouncing the same or not realizing the correct meaning, erroneously, under lack of guidance.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
sir,i'm 23 old men from india.i'm facing a problem of sperm lekage during urination and also at night,i'm facing it for 8 months.some doctors don't beleave on this things but it is real problem.my life is running out now and i'm doing nothing with this thing.how can do my celibacy pracice if i have this problem.please suggest some treatment.

Answer
This is an issue that is to be solved by you through honest Sadhana (practice) and not by the doctors.

Go through the past answers, very slowly in detail and absorb the essence. Lead a correct life of Yoga using the methods discussed. If a life of Yoga with all the practices described are properly applied, the issue will go away in the course of time.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

WHy is meditating in a supine position in bed not recommended? Can't you achieve samadhi in a supine position, like in the corpse posture which is very relaxing?

Thanks

Answer
The spine needs to be vertical & erect, in line with the neck and head so as to aid the movement of 'Kundalini' to higher domains. This is not achievable in Shavasana.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

I know that spirituality is the essence of religion, but what is the main difference between spirituality and occultism? WHen I say occultism I mean all types of practice like magnetism and other mind-control techniques, concentration practices, occult magic, etc. Osho did talk much about this. Is the difference that those who practice the occult arts dont practice brahmacharya? Or on the contrary they use brahmacharya with that aim? Someone who possess spiritual powers and knowledge of the occult art is always spiritual?

Answer
1. Anything other than the Atman (self) is an unreal image on the screen of consciousness. The quest to identify with one's true self is spirituality, while occultism is another projection of the Ego and therefore not in the purview of the quest to overcome ignorance.

2. Occult art hence has no connection with spirituality; the two representing the manifest & the un-manifest.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Dhananjay, firstly I am very happy to reach out to someone who is an expert in this field of bramacharya and celibacy, as I have recently incorporated some of the practices in my life.
My question is, I have abstained from ejaculation for 1 month now, but after my 3rd week of no ejaculation, I hit a mental roadblock and my mood went completely down. Why did this happen, when I was feeling Extremely confident, smart, and courageous during my first 2-3 weeks of abstinence? I felt on top of the world but recently I feel my energy has drained. Is this normal? Could it be my brain rewiring to the absence of ejaculation, Please give me advice Dhananjay. Also no semen has left my body, I haven't had a wet dream at all.

Much appreciated

Answer
That is a reaction of the mind, further to the reversal from the earlier mode of life. Such occurrences are common during the initial years of practice. Adherence to the Yogic methods with regular meditation will gradually stabilize the mind and produce equilibrium as time goes by.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Some say that it is Brahma or God that awaken kundalini or holy spirit and permit a union between soul and God... at least in theistic religions, there is no spiritual advancement without God. In other non-theistic religions where God is not a concious being as in Buddhism, Taoism, or east asians philosophies, according to those philosophies it all depends on your own efforts. They even have a saying which say "immortality doesnt depend on heaven but on myself". Buddhism as a complete non-theistic religion separated itself from Hinduism for that same reason. In theitic religions, God is the creator of all, in non-theistic religions God is an asbtraction they call Shunyata or Tao. Are non-theistic religions better?

Answer
1. Till the Ego or sense of individual 'I' in terms of subject-object remains, effort is required to realize the truth or God, for effort concerns the Ego and not the Atman (self). Once the Ego has been permanently transcended by irreversible realization of the truth, then effort does not come into the picture as the one who thought he put in the effort himself does not exist. Then, the pure self which is of the nature of infinite consciousness alone remains.

2. It is God or the self or universal consciousness alone, call these by what names you may, which urges the Ego to look inwards and realize its non-existence. Some people call this grace. Without such grace, realization is not possible. Therefore, while God alone is the doer, the Ego assumes such doership as long a it exists, whereupon immediately comes the concept of effort as regards that Ego. As soon as one transcends the Ego, there is none remaining to put in effort and therefore no effort. Then the self alone remains, as it always did.

3. A religion is only a path to realize the self. The self itself is beyond religion. However, since there are different kinds of individuals at different evolutionary levels with different temperament and tendencies, there are different religions. The concept of better or less concerns the Ego which chooses that religion which is appealing to its nature. In reality, the self or God alone remains, who is beyond all religions.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaste,

I meditate after waking up in the morning between 4 - 7 Am, mostly it is 6 AM. In the evening i meditate before sleep.

- I would like to know, what is the ideal time for meditation in the evening. I take my meal at 6:30 PM as suggested by you(before sunset)?

Answer
Merging the mind into the Atman (self) is meditation. The Atman is always in meditation. Hence one can merge the mind into its source at any point of time.

However, there are certain periods when it is most easy for the mind to accomplish this merger. These are the four 'Sandhi Kala-s':

1. Just before Sunrise.
2. Noon (12.00 P.M)
3. Just before Sunset
4. Midnight (12.00 A.M)

Get done with Yogic practice in the evening, followed by meditation on the self. One can have his evening food on completing the same.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Hello Sir,

I ask this as a private question, because I dont think people are interested in this suject. Do all the spiritual beings without physical body are brahmachari? Is the sex drive in the organs or mind? In stories some spiritual beings like goblins and apsaras (nymphs) are still interested in sexual desires and can attack meditators according to stories.

ANSWER: 1. Possessing or not possessing a physical body has no connection with Brahmacharya. The body, be it physical or astral is only a covering on the Atman. There are advanced beings with and without a physical body. Similarly, there are base beings both among those who have a physical body and those who do not.

2. The source of the sex drive is neither in the organs, nor in the mind but in seed form in the 'Karana Sharira' (causal body), from where it is projected into the mind as flow of related thought under favorable conditions. Hence, the wise one wishing to attain liberation burns those seeds through God surrender and Sadhana (practice).

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Sir, so those stories of divine heroes and saviors, offspring of mortals and gods, are true?

Answer
1. Is the world real? The stories concerning this or other worlds are as real or as false. The worlds, physical or astral are only images on the screen of consciousness, as are the images on a movie screen. These concern the Ego and not the self.

2. The stories in mythology are symbolic, with the aim of conveying a particular moral. The entire world is itself the Lord's drama, meant to help the Ego realize its non-existence.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaste sir,

From gods grace and your invaluable guidance I am progressing on the path of celibacy.

It sometime happens that I feel very strong attraction for materialistic pleasure and sometimes I feel disgusted by these same things. Most of time I am indifferent to these things.I am learning to be at peace all the time.

My question is do we need to marry compulsorily? The marriage will happen if god wills or if its in one's destiny but what if it is not? In my case I have no will left at all for marriage.The very idea makes me crawl in my skin,I feel disgusted. It all happened naturally not forcefully after I started practicing celibacy.I want know if is it right to remain unmarried following strict celibacy.Please elaborate in detail sir because you have provided very detailed answers to past questions and it helped me to grasp the knowledge and understand idea perfectly.

Thank you sir.

Answer
1. In the case of some Jiva-s (individuals), marriage is necessary for further progress in the evolutionary ladder, while the same is not necessary as regards some others.

2. Does it matter whether one married in the incident which occurred in a dream? It was after all a dream with dream characters. The waking state is another dream in the life of the Ego, with the world as its background. The real Yogi does not get affected by the incidents which occur or fail to occur in this extended dream, but ever holds on to the self.

3. The Great Lord decides who should marry or not, as HE does all other things. Hence one should relax and accept destiny as it comes, not affected by marriage or lack of it, all the time intent on spiritual practice to hold on to the self.

The true Yogi neither hates events concerning the world (say marriage), nor loves them, for they are a part of the dream which the Ego experiences. He does his Dharma (duty) & views the resulting happenings & non-happenings with a detached and light perspective, as though watching the scenes in a movie, accepting destiny, whether pleasant or unpleasant, with an equal perspective.

The true self which is formless has no birth, no marriage and no death, for all these concern the coverings called the body & the Ego. So why then worry about such events? HE who created this body with its Ego will take care of them as HE always has (with marriage or without it), making them go through that which is required to work out karma. Let HIM do so.

The Lord takes as much responsibility and weight as one transfers to HIM. Hence the wise transfer all their responsibilities on to the Lord who takes it all. Such complete transfer becomes possible only when one transcends the Ego which has been assuming doership. Hence it suffices if one applies effort to overcome the Ego. Why should we plan for things (body & Ego) which we are not? We hold on to our self which is a part of the Great Lord and merge ourselves into it, ever free, ever in peace, happy as a child. That is Yoga and that is what HE wills.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhananjay,
hope you are doing fine.

Thanks for helping us all in the path of brahmacharya. i have doubts on decisions to be made in life.

1.I am 30 years old and unmarried and not settled in life, i can't do a job as i have travelling problem i.e foogy head and dizziness while travelling so i am into business(morning 8am-8pm its not running well),i am practicing brahmacharya (only through praying and doing japa as i am not having time to do meditation and asanas), i am planning to adjust my time to do them. so as to practice brahmacharya i have to get married and done with having children. i think that i am not settled in life and how can i marry a girl and how can i feed her if i marry without having regular income. I daily pray lord to show me some door. I am stuck between the decision of marriage which furthur delays brahmacharya practice.

2.Should i tell the girl that i have problem with travelling in the first meet if i don't tell i will have a guilty feeling of giving false information and if i tell then they may not agree.

3.At free time when i do meditation i felt as if i am spinning after some time the same feeling when i get dizziness why?

Thank you dhananjay for you kind help in showing us the path of brahmacharya. 2 question even though not related to brahmacharya please tell me what to do.

Sorry for the lengthy queries please show me the right path.

Thanking you,
Ganapathi.

Answer
1. Practice Brahmacharya to the best of your ability with surrender to the Lord. Things will happen as they have to at the right time. It is not for us to decide for or against marriage, but accept that which transpires in destiny. HE who runs the show will take care of things as HE always does. What is required is for one to realize the same and give up the Ego whose worries, plans and desires are endless.

2. Why do you worry whether the girl will agree or not? That is not your concern. State the truth and be at peace. That which has to happen happens. Worrying about the result is not one's business. If marriage is in one's destiny, nothing can prevent it. Similarly, if it is not, nothing can make it happen. Be the happy witness and accept HIS will.

3. Ignore these reactions. Unless the practice causes discomfort, minor reactions need not be worried about. All these settle after a few years of unbroken practice.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi,

During most of my teenage years from age 14 to 18, I masturbated excessively. I wanted to stop for a long time, but finally got the will power around age 19. I am 20 years old now and I have not masturbated for several months, and I don't think I will ever again. I was very proud of myself for quitting the awful habit, but recently I've been feeling guilty about this awful part of my past. And I've been feeling that my body and mind is already very much abused by this awful past habit, and that brahmacharya at this point of my life will be useless because I did not practice it during the years that were most important.

So my questions are sir,
1) Can I still recover from the abuse I did to myself in my early years?
2) Can brahmacharya benefit me even though I suffer from nocturnal emissions? (The frequency of nocturnal emissions is decreasing, about 2-3 a month.)
3) Is baldness caused by excessive ejaculations?

Thank you,

Thomas

Answer
1. Yes

2. Practice honestly to know the self. Meditate often. The emissions will eventually taper and finally stop.

3. No. Balding is mostly genetic, triggered by hormones which kick in at a particular age.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Dhanajay,

It's been over two years since my last post -http://en.allexperts.com/q/Celibacy-Abstinence-3564/2011/10/staying-focused.htm

I've been trying to quit masturbation and porn for many years now. I find it extremely difficult. I have tried what you told me but after a few relapses I lose motivation to try again. It's a never ending cycle.

Due to work and various other distractions like noise etc, I can not sleep early and thus can not wake up early. I've tried hypnosis/meditating and falling asleep which helps but it stops working for me after a few days. How essential is waking up early?

I also go to the gym on a regular basis and I'm on a heavy bulking diet as a result. Will that effect my practice of Brahmacharya?

Also after a few days I feel really stressed out from work and various other things which builds up. Meditation helps me relieve some of it but I always find my self relapsing in the end. How can I tackle that?

I do not want to give up. A few words of encouragement will be appreciated greatly.

Thank you very much.

Answer
1. Gradually advance the waking time by 10~15 minutes every week. Early morning wake up is very beneficial.

2. Avoid bulking and limit the workout to fitness.

3. Practice is to applied unless it eventually becomes natural and perfect. There is no shortcut.

Who gets stressed? It is the Ego which considers itself the doer. Let go of doership and do your duty with a relaxed and peaceful attitude. That which happens happens. Our right ends at duty.

Gradually apply the tenets with more and more intensity, until they become natural. The same will come through in the course of time.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

SInce I meditated and practiced brahmacharya as you explained it, I had some few experience like being sorrounded by light and feeling levitation even when lying down at sleep. But the most important for me is rejuvenation. I was old and looking haggard, now my neck got full and face too. I had like pulsation in the neck. Someday I woke up and felt my skin as an object and not my body. I know its not self realization, but is longevity achievable for someone serious in its practice as a byproduct? You said in a post that longevity depends on nectar which descends from the brain. Can you explain this please?

Answer
Preventing the descent of 'Bindu' (seed) in the region of the brain into becoming semen at the lower regions is the key to physical health and longevity. This is achieved by the practice of Yogic methods and meditation, which gradually break down the past Samskara-s (impressions) & Vasana-s (tendencies) responsible for such constant descent. Thereupon, semen is transmuted back into 'Soma' (nectar) and eventually, the very descent stops in case of the 'Urdhvareta', who does not produce semen at all, but retains the Bindu in its subtle form above.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaste,

1) Does the yoga asanas which you have suggested esp. Mahabandha helps decrease libido and ultimately our temptation to masturbate.?

2) How much time shall i spend on yoga everyday?

Answer
1. Yes

2. As much time as is required to perform the complete set of suggested practices, with the mind surrendering all actions as a service to God all through the day.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear sir,
1 Men working in postmortem department have more chances to induce their viragya,is it?
2 I have worked in several firm but get only a small salary from each firm, Is this is the examination of God for strengthen my mind?
Hope you are doing well and in the great process of self realisation

Thanking you sir

sarwam khalwidam brahman

Answer
1. Not unless there is 'Vichara' (inquiry) in the path of 'Gnyana' (knowledge of the truth), for which is required the grace of the Lord. Else, all doctors and morticians would have become Enlightened, which is not the case.

2. Wealth without 'Gnyana' causes destruction. Financial wealth at this stage will become an impediment to practice. Practice Brahmacharya to know the self without any expectation, with surrender and love to the Lord. As much wealth as is required for one's well being, as determined by 'Prarabdha' will be arranged. If the practice is honest, unbroken & sincere, all good things will come to you in the later years.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi. From my point of view, the culmination of the yoga path and of all religions is to separate the astral self from the physical body in a trance, in yoga this state is called samadhi. And there are accepted occurences of canonized saints and mystics projecting doubles, a phenomena known as bilocation.

Answer
1. The Atman (self) is neither physical nor astral. It is beyond both these. Merging consciousness back into that self is 'Samadhi'. It is one's real state. Hence there are none of these astral or physical or causal things in Samadhi which is to be experienced, being beyond discussion.

2. The Atman is beyond location, having no location. Hence things such as bi-location have nothing to do with the Atman or Samadhi, for these concern the unreal body.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

In Tantrism both Hinduist and Buddhist and even in Taoism, they say that with ejacultion a man lose his vital energy. Tantra say that some man with an esoteirc technique can take some of the energy of his wife (yin energy to replenish the yang energy) in a invisible form by act of concentration. ANd can somebody take the energy of someone else from distance by the mean of trataka? I dont ask to do it but just to be aware of the phenomena.

Answer
Let go of all these concepts contrary to realizing the self; these concepts which do not put an end to suffering and first strive to realize the self.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaste,

I have a doubt related to marriage. Its difficult to find a girl who is willing to remain celibate in a way that sexual contact is made for conceiving a child only. What is your opinion on marriage?

Answer
1. If one's efforts to realize the self are genuine, with surrender to the Lord, the life partner eventually falls in line and turns supportive.

2. Marriage or the lack of it has no connection with Brahmacharya which is a state of the Atman (self). Those who are destined for a life of Brahmacharya, will be made to do so by the higher power which runs the show. Why then worry whether the incoming life partner will agree or disagree? Surrender everything to the Lord and be at peace. HE will do that which is to be done, as long as one fixes himself to the self.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
what is the difference between ekadashi vrat (11 th day) and shiv pradosh vrat (13th day). I read somewhere that fasting occasionally increases metabolism and fasting over a period of time (like ramzan fast for a month) reduces metabolism. which is recommended.

Answer
1. The body of the common man is high on toxins and therefore vulnerable to frequent illness. Occasional fasting rests the digestive system along with the other systems and cleanses these to some extent. All religious practices advocating an occasional fast are hence devised as a flushing and cleansing operation. This in turn harmonizes metabolism and produces equilibrium.

2. Fasting also helps the common man set aside some time from the mundane things of life and focus on God during those special days. This in turn helps him gradually develop 'Indriya Nigraha' (control of the senses (taste) and thereby other senses).

3. In case of the Yogi who practices unbroken Brahmacharya with 'Mitahara' (moderation in diet & all other things), the body gets completely purified in a couple of years. Such a Yogi who constantly meditates in the thought of the self does not need to fast as he is already in equilibrium.

Fasting when taken recourse to should be short, occasional and never long. Long fasts eat into 'Ojas' and destroy the body.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaste,

1) Is Semen present in all the cells of our body?

2)Does our semen turns into white liquid merely by a sexual thought?

3)What are the foods which are good for the production of Ojas in our body?

4)What shall i do to avoid masturbation when i get a sexual urge?

Answer
1. Prana (vital, life energy) in reproductive fluid form is semen. Prana inundates all living cells in the body.

2. Prana surcharges the reproductive fluid formed by the secretion of various glands which is then called semen. Hence it is not the fluid itself which is of importance but the life energy powering it. Sexual thoughts withdraw Prana from all living cells in the body and focus it into the sex glands to create semen. Since Prana is connected to the mind, sexual thoughts dissipate Prana.

3. Simple, easily digestible nutritious foods prepared without artificial additives, taken in moderate quantities.

4. Refer past posts.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello, I would like to ask 2 question refering to merit making that confuse me and 1 about siddhis.

1-Do the practice of pure brahmacharya and yogic meditation helps you gain merit?

2-Some masters tell that sometimes only through charity you gain more merit?

3-ABout siddhis, Swami Sivananda clearly wrote in a book: "Your only duty is to practise concentration. You have taken this physical body to practise concentration and through concentration to realise the Self. In another book he wrote: "Moreover, one has to perform great austerities to acquire siddhis. These siddhis are automatically awaken after a certain time. Trataka belongs to a high order of sadhana and deserves to be practised to increase one's mental power and to attain self-realization." What is your opinion about the origin of siddhis?

Answer
1. Yes; but one should not think about such merit or pursue activities for merit as merit concerns the Ego and not the self.

2. Whether merit comes by this means or the other, how does that matter to the honest Yogi intent on the self? All merits and demerits concern the Ego and the body which you are not. So why bother? That which comes or goes is not real and therefore not worth pursuing. That which is real, always is. It is unchanging and complete. That alone is the absolute truth and one's real self, while everything else is an illusion.

3. Siddhi-s, like merit or demerit concern the unreal Ego and body. Desire for Siddhi-s is an impediment to realize the self. The wise Yogi does not bother about them or let them bother him. He ever focuses on attaining to the self, setting aside all other distractions.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaste,

1) I notice a white coating on my tongue which is a sign of ama dosha. I don't drink water 1 hr before/after meal but still go this problem. what shall i do to cure this?

w.r.t question 1
2) How much time shall one keep from drinking water before and after meal according to ayurveda?

3) Does pranayama helps increase digestive fire or agni?

4) If yes, then shall one do 5 mins pranayama before every meal to increase agni hence strong digestion?

5) What is the best posture to sit during sadhna and pranayama. It becomes very uncomfortable after sometime of siting in cross legged posture?

6) Shall one do pranayama before sadhna or other way around?

Answer
1. Ignore the condition; it will go away by itself.

2. One hour.

3. Yes

4. No.

5. Padmasana or Sidhasana

6. Asana, Bandha, Nadi Shodhana & Pranayama, followed by meditation is the order.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Respected sir,i am 23 yr old following celibacy practice with yoga and pranayama.But i am not able to control wet dreams,it occurring as 4-5/month from 4 years.Many times it is only like thick watery juice no whitish element but it makes my moral down. so please answer my following questions.
1.In all your past answers you suggested only to apply the practice of yoga and pranayma to cure wet dreams does it mean that wet dreams can't be cured by medicines or it can't be permanently cured by medicines.

2.What will be natural frequency of wet dreams of person who following bramcharya practice from 3 years(some breaks in that) and frequency of that person who never made any sexual act in his life time..

3.Is it possible that person not experience single wet dream in his life span.

4.Is bald bramchari makes less influence on people than full hairy one.

Answer
1. The cause of wet dreams despite efforts at Yoga is past Samskara-s. These are to be erased through continuous Sadhana. There is no shortcut.

2. The frequency varies from person to person, based on various factors. It is best not to worry about all these things but adhere to correct Sadhana with reverence to God. Wet dreams will stop in due course.

3. Wet dreams stop after one becomes an Urdhvareta and not before.

4. Why do you want to influence others? Do your Dharma and be at peace. That which has to occur, occurs.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Expert: Dhananjay - 11/6/2013

Question
In the previous question i asked you about the posture for meditation and you replied Padmasana or sidhasana.

When i read about these asanas in detail, i found out that sidhasana is the left hand path whereas Padmasana is right hand path. Sidhasana has potential for sexual stimulation.

So, shall i go for padmasana?

WHich one is superior, i mean if i can sit in padmasana then shall it be the first choice?

Answer
1. 'Sidhasana' is a basic Asana that is used by all kinds of Yogi-s. It is not necessarily Left-hand.

2. Go with that which is comfortable and appealing.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Hello,

I read some secular philosophy, both eastern and western. Do you think the Advaita philosophy was propragated and influenced the ancient Greek philosophy called Platonism? WHy there is some similarities as both believed in reincarnation and meditation? Annd below when it says one must become God, not like God, but God, is it self-realization?

In practice it says: "Here, then, we enter upon the practical philosophy. Along the same road by which it descended the soul must retrace its steps back to the supreme Good. It must first of all return to itself. This is accomplished by the practice of virtue, which aims at likeness to God, and leads up to God. In the ethics of Plotinus all the older schemes of virtue are taken over and arranged in a graduated series. The lowest stage is that of the civil virtues, then follow the purifying, and last of all the divine virtues. The civil virtues merely adorn the life, without elevating the soul. That is the office of the purifying virtues, by which the soul is freed from sensuality and led back to itself, and thence to the nous. By means of ascetic observances the human becomes once more a spiritual and enduring being, free from all sin. But there is still a higher attainment; it is not enough to be sinless, one must become "God" (henosis). This is reached through contemplation of the primeval Being, the One — in other words, through an ecstatic approach to it. Thought cannot attain to this, for thought reaches only to the nous, and is itself a kind of motion. It is only in a state of perfect passivity and repose that the soul can recognize and touch the primeval Being. Hence the soul must first pass through a spiritual curriculum. Beginning with the contemplation of corporeal things in their multiplicity and harmony, it then retires upon itself and withdraws into the depths of its own being, rising thence to the nous, the world of ideas. But even there it does not find the Highest, the One; it still hears a voice saying, "not we have made ourselves." The last stage is reached when, in the highest tension and concentration, beholding in silence and utter forgetfulness of all things, it is able as it were to lose itself. Then it may see God, the foundation of life, the source of being, the origin of all good, the root of the soul. In that moment it enjoys the highest indescribable bliss; it is as it were swallowed up of divinity, bathed in the light of eternity. Porphyry says that on four occasions during the six years of their intercourse, Plotinus attained to this ecstatic union with God."

ANSWER: 1. There are many philosophies world over that have similarities. The self is considered no different from God, being an integral part in Advaita. Hence the objective of oneness.

2. The union described is the merger that the Yogi experiences in 'Nirvikalpa Samadhi' (non-dual super-consciousness). When the Yogi is able to hold on to that state even while passing through the daily motions of life, it becomes continuous and permanent. That is the state of the self in the self, beyond time. It is permanent union with God.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Those philosophies are without any religious content which means the essence of religion is philosophy, not worship or rituals which come after. The true religious practice is detachment without giving any importance to religious backgrounds.

Answer
1. The essence of any religion is to reach the Atman (self) and nothing else. Philosophy is an elaboration of methods to overcome identification with the non-self. There is no other objective.

2. True religion is hence the means to attain to the self and the self only. The self is always full & complete, not being attached or detached from anything, for there is nothing to attach or detach with.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
The sage Patanjali says:
3.1 One-pointedness is steadfastness of the mind.
3.2 Unbroken continuation of that mental ability is meditation.
3.3 That same meditation when there is only consciousness of the object of meditation and not of the mind is realization.
3.4 The three appearing together are self-control.
later : 3.23 By self-control over any kind of strength, such as that of the elephant, that very strength arises.

WHat does it means to do self-control on any kind of strenght such as that of an elephant? I understand perfectly the concept of self-control or samyama but how to relate this to self-control on an elephant strenght? It means you imagine yourself as an elephant one-pointedly and get supernatural strenght? I ask this as to understand how are siddhis manifested even if they are not important. Thanks.

Answer
1. When the subject, object and the process of the subject focusing on the object, all fuse, it is Samyama. When this process occurs, one unites with the quality of the object, which may be anything.

2. One does not imagine himself to be an elephant, but merges into that symbolic strength. It takes long practice to master Samyama, be it of any kind. Hence the wise Yogi does Samyama on the self alone without wasting his resources on the non-self.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Sir,

1) If one's sexual desires are totally removed, then one won't get attaracted towards the opp gender.?

Is the connection of the experience of sexual pleasure with opp gender physical appearence is the cause of the attaraction.?

3) please suggest some easier ways to remain unaffected by flattery & shame.

4)If the concept of seprate identity- ego is false, & there exists only GOD alone & none other...would it be correct to say that GOD has made this world out of his own conciousness & trapped in to ego...for the sake of amusement

Answer

1. As long as there is a lack of awareness of one's true nature which is pure consciousness, there is attraction or repulsion to the non-self. Hence permanent residence as the self is alone the remedy to go beyond these.

2. The cause of attraction is the brief opportunity one gets to loose body & mind consciousness and taste Ananda (bliss) through sexual activity. One's very nature is unending bliss, continuous & permanent. The Jiva (individual), however, having lost its connection with that infinite bliss which is its true nature, runs after anything that helps it taste the same for a brief moment. Hence man's quest for pleasure is really his unconscious effort to connect to his own self.

Taste of bliss through anything external is however temporary, debilitating and forms more ignorance. If the Jiva wants to enjoy unlimited bliss without these negative reactions, it should look inward and not outward. When the self is realized, the same occurs.

3. HE will create life situations where the Ego will get beaten into nothing. One then slowly starts to realize the fallacy of the Ego and goes beyond flattery or shame.

4. All this is the Lord's Leela (play). The 'Why and How' will become clear when the one who wants to know these things no longer exists.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

When you meditate in the Self, do the body itself transforms? By Self I mean meditating beyond thoughts as an observer in awareness. Or should you start with more physical techniques? WHat method is better? SOme schools say start with postures and breath and then mind and others say start with mind and then breath will calm down.

Answer

1. Yes. The body gets purified and revitalized when one merges consciousness into the Atman (self) in meditation.

2. One can start as an observer, observing the thoughts when one starts to meditate without getting involved. As this process becomes firm, even the awareness of observing will eventually merge into pure consciousness and one loses all awareness of external phenomena. Then starts meditation.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Can someone meditate at night while lying down without falling asleep? Some yogis practice what is called Yoga Nidra or Dream Yoga. The body go to sleep but the mindstream remain alert to achieve trance.

ANSWER: 1. When consciousness is merged in the self (Samadhi), the position of the body does not matter as the body no longer exists as regards that consciousness.

2. 'Yoga Nidra' is not meditating in sleep. It is only another form of sleep which is more relaxing and intense than normal sleep.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: But the important thing about diferent postures is the kundalini energy which when awake brings samadhi. WHy some master say the kundalini energy in the spine needs a straight vertical position to wake up and go up to the crown chakra? Not an horizontal one.

Answer
1. All these things apply only until one goes into Samadhi and not later.

2. Yes, an erect and vertical spine, in line with the head and neck is preferable for proper awakening.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
When you compare a recognized sage or saints to a deva or god, who is higher in spiritual rank?

Answer
A self realized sage is one with the very Lord HIMSELF and no different, being an extension. Therefore, he is beyond rank, for no ranks exist in reality. THAT alone exists.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

I had begun my Sadhana in the beginning of this year. I could not manage to do the asanabandha-pranayama-meditation 2 times a day, but at least was doing it once a day. After some days, we had to shift to a different apartment, and this was a tiresome task, and it led to the discontinuation in my practice. And now, I am not able to restart it. I am finding it extremely difficult to wake up in the morning. I am stuck in a vicious circle. Kindly advise me on restarting the practice. Every morning, when I wake up and see the clock, I get very dejected. And gradually, the belief that I can follow this path is reducing, which is even more disappointing.

Please help me.

Thanks a lot.
Sincerely,
R

Answer
Make a mental prayer to the Almighty to give strength to continue with unbroken practice to know the self and gradually increase the wake up time by 15 minutes every week. You will soon overcome the inertia and comeback on track.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
When practicionners from some theistic religions like Christianity or Sufism speak of Mystical Union or "Spiritual Marriage", is this the same as Samadhi in Yoga in your view? And between meditation and contemplation, is there any difference?

Answer
1. In reality, there is only one state; that of the self in the self. Consciousness then rests in itself without identification with anything external. That is also called Samadhi, which an aspirant eventually reaches.

However, the degree's of closeness between consciousness and the self vary till the state of the self in the self is not irreversibly attained to. These degree's are denoted by the different stages or types of Samadhi-s. There is however only one complete union or Samadhi as there is only one self, infinite and all pervading.

2. Contemplation precedes meditation.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Hello, I am in a very desesperate situation in life, with money problem. I practice brahmacharya and concentration practice on the ajna chakra for 1 or 2 hours before sleeping.

I would like to know if with this practice on the ajna chakra, which yogi call trataka can you receive spiritual help? I heard that gods and spirits (devas, asuras) can come to help such individual if you give them something in return for example some food or your blood so they can continue to manifest. I know this is not self realization, but someone should start from something and advandce from that level. I could dedicate this practice to be able to do it. Such practice are related to divination. I would like to have your opinion as you are more advandced in this. Thanks

ANSWER: 1. Such an approach will only cause more bondage and more suffering. It is not the way of the wise.

2. Let go of such an approach and adhere to honest practice to realize the self. That much which is in one's destiny and not more will come at the appropriate time. Be content with what comes through effort and focus on the self.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: But when you practice pure brahmacharya and meditation, does it bring you higher chance or luck in life? You know why I dare to ask this even if it goes a little bit out of subject, is because some individual when he was young around 30 like me now had an experience with divination. He practiced what is now called "magnetism" and played a game called cup game in those times, which is like a board game with numbers and letters and a cup of crystal. Because of it he started to had dreams with numbers which he played exactly next day and won 106.000$ in those years a very high sum in lottery. Now he is like a bit psychotic and very sensible to noise and sounds. But the thing is that it was real and worked for him. There are tons of cases like that. Why does it occur?

Answer
That which is due comes and that which is due goes, whatever be the means. These are the results of past karma. The wise donot waste their resources running after such illusions but ever stay steadfast to the self which is the only reality, content with what HE gives.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dhananjay, can you tell me how one's perception of time is affected by Brahmacharya? I have noticed a quickening of time after slips in celibacy as if the day flies by without me. During renunciation from sense desires I notice time seems to barely move. Is it because of an increase of awareness?

Om Nama Shivaya Guruji

Answer
1. Time itself does not exist in reality and is only a relative phenomenon based on the non-self (manifest).

2. There is nothing called time in the Atman (self) which is beyond time. The closer consciousness gets to the self, the less is such perception.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaste!
Hope you are keeping fine...
1.GOD decides the future,is it not?
Then,why Lord Krishna in Bhagwat Geeta says that one gets fruits according to his karma? Does it not mean that people are the creator of their own destiny?

2.Sometimes i will to have to keep myself awake late night for studies,what effect this may have on practice of brahmacharya?
going through some of the answers,i got to know its not good,but if one is sincere,then?

-Thank You for your efforts in helping the struggling souls reach GOD!!!

Answer
1. Yes.

2. Karma always brings fruits - Positive or negative. What is karma? It is the consequence of an action performed under doership. To whom does karma apply? It applies to the Ego. Hence as long as one performs actions assuming he is the doer, one has to face the resultant fruits.

When there is no doership, there is no karma accrued from the action. Such a person is neutral and a complete extension of the Almighty. The actions of such a man are the actions of God.

In all other cases, as long as one assumes doership while performing an action, one accrues karma through that action, positive or negative. Thus one gets fruits in concurrence with his/her karma under doership.

So as long as the Ego exists, it appears as though one creates his destiny, for destiny concerns the Ego and not the Atman (self). From where is the power to live and perform that action coming from? It is coming from the Supreme who has already charted out the course of life events necessary for the 'Jiva' to overcome its ignorance. Life is a series of events designed by the Almighty for the Jiva to achieve this objective.

Therefore it may be said that God decides the future and is the doer, though it appears as though man is the doer.

As long as the Ego is alive, one gets fruits as per his (Ego's) karma, for the Ego assumed doership while performing the action. Since the Ego remains alive till irreversible self-realization, one has to perform actions within the realm of Dharma.

3. Avoid late night studies and instead wake up that many hours earlier. The study duration will remain the same while the benefits multiply.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir

1) is drinking 1 glass milk with rotis at breakfast ok?

2) for dinner does 1 piece of apple would mean 1/4th of an medium size apple & does same applies to beat & capcicum?

3)Is dinner at 7 to 7:30 pm correct or it should be more early?

4) when practising asan while lying flat on back, does the head be towards North/east or the leg?

Please forgive me for such silly Questions

Answer
1. Yes. However, do not omit drinking milk earlier in the morning.

2. More or less.

3. As early as possible in the evening.

4. Face the North or East while in the sitting posture and accordingly lie down with the Legs facing the same.

The quantity of food to be eaten differs from person to person & is to be decided based on one's individual constitution. In general, one can can eat the quantity not causing heaviness.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Swamy saranam
Swamy i have taken deeksha for 3rd time and completed one month. And now unfortunately I got sperm out in sleeping at night.now what will happens I am tensed. So pls tell me what can I do

Answer
One's life should be such that he is always in 'Deeksha'. Being in the thought of God and dedicating all work for HIM is the real Deeksha and not merely wearing saffron clothes or walking barefoot for a short time.

Take up a life of Yoga & Brahmacharya with devotion to the Lord. Strive to be in HIS thought and maintain mental purity. Nightfall will taper away in the course of a few years.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Hello, I noticed after increased sexual activity I have noticed these ""floaters" of the eyes and poor vision. Is this related and have you heard of floaters going away as the body repairs?! Also, I feel HORRIBLE if I become aroused for an hour or longer, like nervous, weak, tired, depressed and very empty afterwards, even if I don't ejaculate.. I am convinced the only path is Brahmacharya. Would you say that sex is a "lower reality" that most people are so numb about they don't even realize it makes them feel bad on some level?

ANSWER: 1. If unbroken Brahmacharya with God meditation to realize the self is honestly practiced, all abnormalities of the body including eyesight troubles will cease in the course of time, leading to fine health and well being.

2. One's true state is the state of the Atman (self) which is beyond sex. The Atman has no sexuality, sexuality being an illusion concerning the Ego. Therefore, the self is the ONLY reality.

The purpose of cupid which leads to sex is procreation. The wise limit it to this purpose and focus their energies to realize the self which is the infinite source of bliss & eternal liberation from this disease called the body.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: You are incredible, thank you so much for helping the world with your practice.

I find I feel totally awesome when I stop engaging in sex, I just keep feeling so bad when I do it.

Do you think I will ever find a "celibate wife" who will live and practice with me, perhaps once a year per child, or is a woman in my life another distraction of the goal, like this book talks about: ("love" being a chemical-biological illusion): http://www.amazon.com/The-Chemistry-Between-Us-Attraction/dp/1591845130/ref=sr_1

I am a young guy so I find my life somewhat empty without the company of a beautiful woman. Mara?

Atman fulfills me more deeply? Happier and freer on my own? What? :)

Oh if you don't mind, are siddhis commonly reported after years of unbroken Brahmacharya? I have a theory that "the fall" is sexuality draining us, and that siddhis are normal human powers as we become closer with God or the Atman. Thank you.

-Marc

I love you Dhananjay!

Answer
1. Stay true to the state of the self with honest practice and devotion to God. If it is in the course of destiny to beget a wife, it will undoubtedly happen.

2. All events which occur in one's life are meant to take the individual a step closer to his/her self, marriage included.

3. You are always the Atman (self) and only the self. All other assumptions are imaginations/ superimposition. Knowing it to be such, be fulfilled, ever free.

4. Siddhi-s are another illusion concerning the Ego which the wise one does without.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Respected Sir,
During holidays we have free time. Apart from the regular yogic practices in morning of bandha, pranayama & meditation how can this time be used.When in working days, there is a lot of work , I used to think that I would read bhagavad gita , gospel of Sri Ramakrishna and other related works but it is difficult to read for long time. Also meditation is not very easy to attain for the whole day.How then can we remain in thought of God? Should I continue with my efforts on meditation, and reading with trying to absorb the essence of scriptures even if some kind of emptiness starts coming.Also suggest something.

thank you

Answer
1. As one gets established in 'Sadhana' (practices to realize the self) with unbroken Brahmacharya, it becomes natural to be in the thought of God by surrendering all actions as a service to HIM. One then enjoys the bliss of the self even while attending to other work or activities.

What is important is to be aware of oneself as not the body or the Ego but only the pure self, content in itself. One may then indulge in all constructive activities which one pleases or is interested in by holding on to the self. It is not necessary to force long hours of meditation. Meditating every now and then, whenever possible, with love to God suffices.

As one progresses, the state of meditation becomes continuous and natural even while attending to external work. The Atman (self) is always in meditation and the closer one gets to the self, the more one's state becomes that of meditation.

2. Apply efforts on meditation as well as reading related material to the extent possible along with a Yogic life of Brahmacharya. Balance and equilibrium will dawn by themselves in the course of time and all other activities will soon become enjoyable in the state of the self.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello sir
I am 17
I have difficulties controlling my senses . How can one improve his will power
I maintained celibacy for 3 months last year now it is slipping. I seem to loose my will power
So please help me regain my will power
ii) how can one prove that he is not his body but his atma?
Please enlighten me

Answer
1. Through unbroken Brahmacharya with a life of Yoga dedicated to realizing the self, will power automatically increases in the course of time.

2. Who wants to prove? When the one who wants to prove is gone, the Atman alone remains.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

There is a video about Yogananda saying that with the practice of Yoga an individual can live a 100 years old in a physical body and die peacefully. Then why the majority of famous yogis didnt achieve even 100 years old longevity?

Non-theistic philosophies like Taoism schools say that by practicing some occult alchemical practices someone can be able to live hundread of years even thousand years in their physical bodies like some of the "Eight Immortals". So it means the physical body of ours doesnt decay but always remain the same. I think this subject of longevity is very important for modern science which fear aging and death. Can pranayama extend life to such lenght? Thanks.

Answer
1. Are you the body?

2. Who lives for this many or that many years?

3. Who is it that is interested in a 'long' life?

When you are the self which has no birth or death, which is beyond time, which is infinite & all pervading and has no need for a body, is it not common sense that you should first realize that truth? Why do you want to settle for something less called the body which is limited, impermanent and which will one day perish?

It is like a king who has forgotten his kingship and roams the streets begging for pennies when the whole kingdom with its riches is his.

4. Focus on the self keeping illusions aside. That is Yoga.

All that which has to come will come.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Why did you wrote that someone who practice brahmacharya starts to develop magnetic personality? I mean what is the link between brahmacharya and developped magnetic personality? WHen you practice brahmacharya it is supposed for being able to detach the spirit from the body by not being attached to it, this is the "Philosophical Life" as Plato would said. This is how I see it.

ANSWER: 1. Brahmacharya brings the body, mind and consciousness closer to one's Atman (self). Since the Atman is the source of all beauty, it follows that these increase in their attractive power further to the proximity. The true Brahmachari however stays unaffected by such changes, all these being another illusion.

2. Detachment is for one's consciousness from the unreal world and not from the real self. Attachment to the self increases, until finally, consciousness merges with the self without distinction.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: SOrry if I continue with this subject even though I asked about magnetism in relation to mind control as used in hypnotism and the "black arts", which is not related to physical beauty but mental concentration and focus. Beauty of the physical body as seen by human beings may help but is not the main cause in this, but this is my opinion. While beauty is like the big or small, or courage, which are not objective things, it can appear as that in opinions of the one who sees it because of opinions or preference.

Brahmacharya in men not only means no ejaculation but not even production of semen which means indiference to sex thoughts. Do this apply to women? It is said in many religions like Buddhism, Judaism, Daoism, that the menstrual blood of a woman is impure. Do this means that if a woman dont have much sexual desires there is less blood or even no blood ejected?

Answer
1. Yes

2. The volume of menstrual release reduces in the course of time with women who practice honest Brahmacharya and eventually stops when they reach the status of Urdhvaretas.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Why is it that some race like some northern people for example have more facility to be brahmacharis or of being with just 1 woman all their life? Is it easier to have brahmacharya and others war-like attitudes in cold season or winter? In spring and summer iut seems sex desires are higher in humans and we tend to work less.

Answer
1. Moderate to hot weather is more conducive for reproduction in all species, while cold is the reverse.

2. Brahmacharya is dependent on the evolutionary state of the individual and does not have much bearing on external factors. Those who are ripe for the practice do so immaterial of geographical parameters.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
swami vivekananda kept life long brahmacharya but still he suffered insomnia hole life,and at time of death he had 31 ailmentes.also he had migraine.how could a brahmachari have so many diseases.

Answer
'Prarabdha' (karma that mandatorily works out in this existence as a result of previous deeds) cannot be side stepped. It has to be worked out, immaterial of whether one is a non-Brahmachari, Brahmachari or self-realized. Bodily suffering can be a part of that stockpile.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaskar Dear Dhananjay,

Hope my words meet you well.

1)Human population is at the brink of destroying this planet.Don't you feel this desire for progeny is not a very charitable/pious desire but one that stems out of parent's insecurity & fear of old age & certain other needs & ambitions?However much may people try to hide this fact.What according to you should be the ideal reason for desiring a progeny,as I believe the subconscious desire of parents definately impacts the soul taking birth.

2)You have said in previous replies that in women urdhvaretas menstrual bleeding will completely stop like how semen production stops in men.If this is so does it mean men & women have to be a little on the sexual/material plane to be able to produce an offspring & as a corollary question does ongoing menses & semen production indicate complete purity hasn't been reached?

Answer
1. Like all other things in this world which is the 'Leela' (play) of the Lord, the concept of a family is also a part. It is a stage of life which is designed to help the soul evolve, just as other stages. The institution of marriage and progeny are the basis of a family. Hence one should accept the same as a valid event in the drama called life and play his/her part as an actor does under the commands of the director (God) when marriage is in destiny.

2. Descent of 'Bindu' (seed) starts at the onset of puberty, following which the downward flow is thrown open for ever, leading to formation of semen or the ovum. It is the stage of a 'Manava' (human mortal) in the evolutionary cycle.

When the Jiva reaches the next evolutionary stage (that of an Urdhvaretas - which is in the rank of a god) through ardent Sadhana, producing offspring or enjoyment of sexual pleasure is not in its purview. These have been done with in previous stages. Hence there is no need for formation of physical semen through the descent of Bindu which weakens the system. Bindu is retained as 'Soma' (nectar) in the region of the 'Ajna Chakra', conducive to Samadhi.

That Jiva mainly focuses on meditation on the Supreme Cosmic being to realize itself. Meditation on the Lord and the resultant bliss is the way of enjoyment for an Urdhvareta. 'Adha Sangama' - The lower union (involving the genitals between male & female) indulged in by a 'Manava' (mortal human) is not resorted to, being lower in nature. An Urdhvareta, being the equivalent of a god in rank and therefore divine enjoys 'Urdhva Sangama' (union with the Supreme consciousness) through Samadhi.

'Adha Sangama' (sexual union) gives momentary pleasure but ends in weakness, suffering, sorrow, bondage and ignorance. 'Urdhva Sangama' (union with the Supreme) gives unalloyed Atmic bliss & leads to strength, freedom and finally liberation through realization of the knowledge of the self. This eventually takes the Jiva beyond Urdhvaretas to merge into the Supreme itself. The Yogi is freed from the cycle of births & deaths on the physical plane which is the abode of suffering.

Thus the stage of an Urdhvaretas is higher than that of a 'Manava' in terms of evolution, and on the parallel, bereft of the descent of Bindu into gross sexual fluid.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Sir,
1) you mentioned that one should stop eating if feeling heaviness.
Breakfast menu:
1) 2 chappatis
2) 1 Full glass milk
3) 4 pieces- badam & kismis

lunch menu
1) 1 medium bowl rice
2) 1 medium bowl dal
3) 1/2 Medium bowl curd
4) little vegetable dinner menu:

1) very small pieces of 4 vegetables
2)1 full two fruits
3) 1/2 glass milk

If I eat more, then I start feeling the stomach getting full & little heaviness.

Is the quantity enough, so as to not cause any weakness?
Is the menu wholesome ?

2) on tying the langot on the right side of waist causes pain at the side due to knot. Will this go away or there is another technique?
3) you mentioned not to use soap for bathing. What should be useds to clean the private areas.?

4) can a cut piece of fruit kept in fridge a day before, be included in the dinner menu?

Sir you have been very helful in making my life stable & meaningful. Thank you so much Sir.

ANSWER: 1. Add one or two chapathi-s & a cup of curd at lunch. Let milk during dinner be one cup. This should suffice.

2. Tie it at the center using a double looped shoe-lace knot.

3. A cold water shower is the best bath for a Yogi. Rub the entire body briskly with cold water, always without soap. If unable to bear cold, use warm water (not hot) and gradually reduce the temperature as time goes by. Washing the private areas & genitals by gently pulling back the foreskin with water suffices. Then towel yourself very briskly with a rubbing motion all over. The Yogi who bathes this way does not require soap and thus prevents the degradation that occurs by the use of soap.

4. Refrigerated foods are best avoided as Prana leaves such food. It is always preferable to eat fresh/freshly cooked foods.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Sir

1) even the raw vegetables ,fruits & Milk should not be refrigerated?
2) how can we keep vegetables & fruits (cut & uncut) & Milk fresh as long as possible without refrigerator ?

Thank you Sir

ANSWER: Avoiding refrigerated foods refers to cooked foods as these lose their essence soon. Milk retains its essence a bit longer while cut fruits-vegetables lose their essence faster than uncut ones. As a general rule, it is better to avoid long storage and store as much as is consumed within a day or two.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Sir
1) does covering the raw vegetables & fruits with wet bori(hindi)/sack a better option than refrigeration, as done by thailiwalas(hindi)...?

2)You mentioned- no solid & liquid should be taken after sunset. Does this also apply to normal drinkable water..?

Thank you Sir

Answer
1. It is better to a certain extent. The means are many, but all temporary. Fresh food is always the best.

2. Yes, to the extent possible.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I practiced brahmacharya for 6 months. 2 years ago, with third eye mediattion during night hours, and someday I had an experience. I saw all white vision with my eyes closed in meditation and then when I woke up my skin was all white and when I touched the skin of my arms and legs, it was like rubber or snake complexion , very strange. My arms I could move very fastly and flexible during some minutes after meditation. I felt it was not my body skin or as an object. But then after I lost those states and began normal life again. I would like to experience it again. WHat was that state?

Answer
1. Various kinds of experiences are possible during the initial stages further to 'Pranothaana' (rise of Prana). All these are to be taken as an encouragement in the practice to realize the self and let go, for all these concern the Ego & body and not the Atman (self) which is pure consciousness.

2. Desire for such experiences is the first impediment to realize the self. The wise one ignores such events and does not rest till the self is realized.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Sir,

I am 20 years old and a few months ago I decided to firmly become a brahmachari. The concept of life as most people live it is repulsive to me and the thought of craving after flesh and sense pleasures seemed disgusting to me and I decided to embark on this path.

It has not been easy, but somehow, I have made it to 2 months without self-abuse. However, lust took ahold of me a few days ago and although I controlled myself consciously while awake, I had a very sexually charged nocturnal emission and I feel as if all my efforts have gone to waste.

1) How do I deal with this depression that is slowly killing me from the inside-out? Have my two months of sadhana fully wasted as a result of having thought of these thoughts and having had a wet dream?

2) For some reason, although I can control my sensual feelings for women by envisioning Swami Sivananda's technique of meditating on a corpse, I cannot do the same for males. By birth, I consider myself a straight male but as a result of my abstaining from sexual thoughts as a brahmachari I develop a very, very strong attraction for the male organ of reproduction and have an overwhelming desire to perform oral sex on the organ of another man. This bothers me heavily and I desperately need your advice.

3) My intelligence is most important to me. I consider myself a scholar and the benefits brahmacharya has given me thus far are tremendous-Increased confidence, intuitive grasp, feeling of strength in the body, etc. Will my nocturnal emission destroy all gains? How do I control it further? When I develop severe cravings for the female body or male organ of reproduction, regular meditation and mula bandha does not work. What must I do?

4) When will I see the gains from my practice, in terms of intelligence? Will a single wet dream have cancelled any spiritual progress and intelligence progress I have made? I have heard of the medha nadi and aspire to reach the heights reached by Swami Vivekananda one day.

My god truly bless you. Your answers on this forum are my daily inspiration for my sadhana and desire to hold brahmacharya.

My thanks in advance,
Jacob

Answer
1. Turn a blind eye to failure and focus on regular & uninterrupted Sadhana with meditation. Only through practice and dispassion do past Samskara-s weaken in the course of time.

2. Homosexual attraction is not caused by Brahmacharya, but is the result of past deeds. The solution to overcome the same is through sustained efforts at a life of Yoga to realize the self.

3. Let go of worries as regards failure. Also let go of this attachment to scholarship or strength. All these concern the Ego. Hold on to the state of self and be at peace. That which happens, happens. Let us see what happens.

4. Our duty ends at honest effort performed with a detached perspective. The rest, HE gives and we accept without contest.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Hello Sir,

Do the Asuras (fallen angels and nephilims in other religions) practice brahmacharya? Ive read some stories in Indian mythology of Asuras practicing tapas (brahmacharya) for years and yoga to acquire superpowers. In all religions there is the same stories of eternal clash between demons and devas in heaven. Do this represent the clash between evil and good tendencies in man?

ANSWER: 1. All power comes from the Atman (self) alone. When one shuns all other distractions and focuses on a particular objective with one pointed effort, it is 'Tapas' (austerity). Then there is a natural and unhindered flow of energy from the self as regards that objective. Whether it is the Asura-s or Deva-s, honest effort always has a commensurate effect.

2. The Yogi does the same; but in his case, the objective is the self itself. This leads to the best outcome.

3. All mythological stories represent the effort one has to apply in overcoming the Agnyana (ignorance) to realize one's true self which is itself knowledge. The real demon is the ignorance within oneself, annulling which the divine shines forth.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: After reading the difficulty of brahmacharya. Can someone castrate himself by medical means? You said that the bindu descends from the brain where it is stored as nectar to form the semen in the testes. SOmeone who is castrated do not produce semen and if he is able to meditate or focus can he attain the self easier? Was there case of yogis or immortals in India or China where castrated people attained self realization? Thanks

Answer
Does the ignorance surrounding the Atman reduce by castration? The body is the effect of ignorance and not the cause. Hence let go of such foolish ideas. Such an attempt would only result in more debility, ill-health and unwanted karma (further to bodily mutilation) which one has to workout through much sorrow & suffering.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

Last night I dreamed I was walking along a beach and a large tidal wave (tsunami) came up behind me, overtook me, and carried me away. I have had dreams with tidal waves before and I believe they are related to brahmacharya. These dreams seem to suggest a great latent power waiting to emerge. Could you provide any comment on these dreams?

Thank-you for your kind assistance,

Ron D.

Answer
It may be taken as a sign of encouragement, if one so pleases. However, one should not get attached to such visualizations but always hold on to the self.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaste,

In a recent answer you mentioned that one should not use soap. I am glad that i am going to get rid of soap now

Does it apply to shampoo too? i really hate using shampoo. I am sure our ancestors who used to live a simple life style never ever used anything like shampoo. Am i right?

What about oil? Our body has got natural oils. Are they sufficient or shall we use some oil? if yes, then what did our ancestors used for this?

I am asking all these things because i want to live a true Bhartiya lifestyle with brahmacharya.

Answer
1. One might use soap nut powder or 'shikakai' powder as an alternative to shampoo.

2. Soaking the head overnight with warm oil, twice a week is beneficial. It releases excess heat. It is to be followed with a head bath the next morning. Oil can also be applied to the face and body with the same frequency.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir

Can repetitive chanting of OM mantra be considered a spiritual activity, enough for transmuting that corresponding part of semen.?

Thank you

Answer
1. The chanting bears fruit when performed with a mind focused on the Omkara alone as representing the ultimate reality, free from all other thoughts. Mere mechanical repetition does not suffice in most cases. Such a thought free mind is attainable only further to 'Pranayama' in the case of most people. Hence the need for all the Anga-s of Yoga.

2. Upon attaining to such a state, one soon goes into silence in the state of the self. The Atman is silence.

Therefore, chanting of OM can be taken up as a supporting activity to the other suggested practices.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

Let me explain my situation with this evil habit of masturbation.

As a teenager, I was relatively free from impurities and I did not indulge in this habit. While being a teenager and attending a public school, I attended a sexual education class as it was required in the curriculum. Soon after, I became curious and after hearing lectures on private parts, I watched pornographic videos out of curiosity and learned the vile habit of masturbation when I was 13 years old from these videos.

I have fought with this habit greatly and when I failed to fight this habit with my willpower, I took recourse to religion. I tried to end this habit when I was 14 or 15, but I failed. The longest I've maintained myself without recourse to the evil habit was 14 days.

Years later, while in my first year in college, I read Swami Sivananda's book "How to get varaigya." I believe this book ignited a longing in me to live a spiritual life, as the life of the renunciation someday. I stopped being familiar with women, and avoided illicit conversations. I also prayed that someday I would be removed from this Maya and attain Self-Realization someday.

As I took to this resolution that I would start living a spiritual life to the best of my ability, and I would attain self realization, I began mercilessly cutting off close relations with women. Keep in mind, before this, I did not have physical touching with women. Although I interacted with them, I always could not bring myself to a closer point of familiarity, because I was scared and it seemed disgusting to me.

It is strange indeed. I am considered by many women, to be a very handsome man. I experienced many temptations, many outreaches, by many women, but I have succeeded in resisting them, and not getting familiar. When I walk into any classroom or any public situation, I get stares and smiles from many, many women. Even older women stare at me with a lustful look when they believe I am not looking. Women have even called me (and they do not know my phone number beforehand nor have I ever talked to them) asking if they can have sex with me. While walking in the street, I get stares and smiles from women all the time. I cannot walk to the college grocery store without getting a few lustful glances from the women who work there or who are shopping at the same time. Sometimes, I think this handsome face is a curse because it creates more attention from women for me, and is a hazard for me. Nonetheless, I have been successful in resisting women, talking about women and etc....

I always have the name of god on my lips (that I've chanted for the past four or five months). I've noticed that I am much more calm, happy, peaceful and never, never get angry whatsoever. It is strange indeed. I am no longer a social slave, or slave of other people. Whenever I meet a woman, I prostate myself before her and see my god in her. I believe I am well established in this behavior. Now I want to tackle this evil habit of masturbation.

I plan to wake up at 4:00 in the morning everyday and start sadhana. I see in your previous answers that you have suggested Hatha Yoga to some people. Can I supplement this with bhakti yoga (Meditation on Isvara, Japa and Kirtan?) or will I create an undesirable effect in the body?

Answer

1. At whose beauty are the women staring at? The source of all beauty is the Atman (a part of the Lord) and not the body or the individual. A fraction of the beauty of the Lord shines through the medium called the body, just as the light of the Sun is reflected on a mirror. It is foolish to think the mirror itself as the source of light, when it is the mighty Sun who is the source. Minus the power of the Atman (which leaves the body at death), the same body becomes a stinking, luster-less corpse which the same women will run away from. Then the truth is there for all to see. The same applies to the body of a woman as well. It is all the play of Maya.

The Ego is the fool here which has to be shown its place by trampling it under the foot of 'Viveka' (wisdom) gained through 'Gnyana' (knowledge of the absolute truth).

First let go of the Ego which assumes itself to be beautiful, when the reality is that it has no independent existence, being an illusion. The first thing a Brahmachari should do is put in all efforts to remind himself of the falsity of the 'I-ness' or Ego which assumes doership. As this practice becomes established, one becomes humble and is unaffected by insult, injury, pride, success, failure, attention, attraction, revulsion or any kind of reaction which the unreal world subjects oneself to.

2. Go through each and every past answer very slowly, absorbing the essence and putting those methods into practice. Let it take a few months; there is no hurry. The gist and the inner meaning behind those answers should become a part of your system. That thorough and deep should the study and implementation be. If the same is sincerely resorted to, both masturbation and other impediments at Brahmacharya will be overcome without doubt.

3. Hatha Yoga can be coupled with Bhakti Yoga.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

In Yoga, strating as a form school, Pranayama or retention of breath precedes concentration, meditation and samadhi.

Are there many type of Pranayama one can practice?

For example the Anapana or watching or counting mentally the breath can be considered pranayama even if there is no forceful retention of breath?

When you practice third eye meditation or visualizations, is it recommended to practice pranayama at the same time?

Answer
1. The elementary kinds of Pranayama-s are performed to purify the system for health. Controlled inhalation, retention & exhalation of breath is ultimately required to succeed in controlling & finally annulling the mind for Samadhi.

2. Pranayama precedes meditation. In meditation, there is only the object or seed of meditation which eventually merges into the subject. No other activity is performed.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Namaste Dhanajay ji,

I see lot of saints with long hair and our ancestors are shown with long hair even in tv series except Brahmins with a single log hair.

Please put some light on this, i am not trimming my mustache this time. Does our facial, head and other parts play any role?

ANSWER: 1. As one evolves and gets closer to the self, the need for hair reduces, for then, one is able to receive direct knowledge from the Atman (self) to a larger extent.

In case of animals, the knowledge of the self is non-existent. Instinct ensures survival. This is the reason animals have much hair. Hair acts as an antenna to receive signals from the environment to ensure survival. Hair is therefore like an extended sensory system.

2. During the initial years of Sadhana, keeping head, facial & bodily hair acts as a protective mechanism and is helpful to practice. After many years of advancement, the need for hair reduces and one slowly overcomes such need or dependence which is a carry forward from animal lives.

One need not worry about hair as the body regulates itself and decides whether it needs hair or not.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: So what would you advice for a beginner like me? SHall i keep my hair and let them grow long? When i talked to my mother she wasn't happy. But there are few things for which one must take a stand irrespective of opposition.

Answer
All these are external things (concerning the body which is the non-self) which one should not spend much thought on. Simply focus on Sadhana to know the self with devotion & surrender to the Lord. HE will decide how much hair should be grown or not grown and you will automatically comply with the same.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Do this passage in your opinion speaks about the inner world one find during meditation?

"There is a mountain situated in the midst of the earth, or center of the world, which is both small and great. It is soft, also above measure hard and stony. It is far off, and near at hand, but by the providence of God, invisible. In it are hidden most ample treasures, which the world is not able to value. This mountain by envy of the devil, who always opposeth the glory of God and the happiness of man, is compassed about with very cruel beasts and other [sic] ravenous birds, which make the way thither both difficult and dangerous; and therefore hitherto, because the time is not yet come, the way thither could not be sought after nor found out. But now at last the way is to be found by those that are worthy, but notwithstanding by every man's self-labor and endeavors... "The earthquake being past, there shall follow afire, that will consume the earthly rubbish, and discover the treasure, but as yet you cannot see it. After all these things and near the daybreak there shall be a great calm, and you shall see the Day-Star arise and the dawning will appear, and you shall perceive a great treasure. The chiefest thing in it, and the most perfect, is a certain exalted tincture, with which the world (if it served God and were worthy of such gifts) might be tinged and turned into most pure gold.

Answer
The passage refers to nothing but the self, which is the essence of everything and nothing. En route to reaching the self, various temptations (such as siddhi-s & their offerings) greet the Yogi. The wise Yogi however stays clear of these, ever intent on the final goal. The cruel beasts and birds are the ignorance present within man, which one encounters every minute as impediments to practice.

The Earthquake refers to the various upheavals & downfalls one encounters in practice. One finally wins over these by the grace of the Lord which shines further to unswerving self-effort. The fire which consumes the rubbish is the fire of self-knowledge which consumes the rubbish of ignorance around the Atman. Though almost one with the self, yet some impeding Vasana-s still exist (refers to the state just before the 'Dharmamegha Samadhi'). When the Yogi finally crosses this state, he attains 'Kaivalya' (self-realization) which is the ever luminous Day-Star, matchless in shine.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay, I would like to start out by offering my most humble and sincere gratitude for sharing your divine wisdom. I have been in the process or cultivating "vairaghya" (detachment). By the grace of the almighty, I am seeing some success. But as I move further along the path, I am beginning to fear devotional thoughts towards God because I feel it might cause me to slip further into attachment. On one hand, I have never experienced a higher bliss than surrendering my ego to the lord with love and humility. On the other hand, great teachers like Buddha suggest to never become attached to anything, not even the idea of god. (so I have read). I am fully aware that god is the only truth and I wish to show my devotion. My question is what is the correct attitude when cultivating devotion, humility, submission and love for the almighty?

Sahil

Answer
Can you separate space from space? You might enclose it in a container, yet, it still occupies the container, which occupies space. You can only add a layer or covering around space which appears to contain it. You cannot separate it from space. Whatever you try to do, you only succeed in making compartments around it, while space always remains in space.

The Atman (self) is like space, which is always in space (Lord), being an integral part. Even if you do not want it, you are already attached to the Lord. There is nothing separate from HIM, HE pervading everything, just as everything you see is in space. So the question of separation is invalid. The question of presence or lack of attachment with HIM is invalid. You are always merged in HIM. The question of maintaining separation does not arise.

The only thing you can do is work at breaking the layers obstructing the merger of the space in the container with the space outside. In this case, it is the 'Agnyana' (ignorance) surrounding the Atman which is acting like a container. This container is what is called the 'Ego' - which is making you imagine you are separate and God is separate. When you break it, then the space within merges with the space outside. Then there is only space. Even earlier, the space within was inside the space without. You imagined it to be separate, while that was not the reality.

So it is most beneficial to develop a sense of attachment as regards God. The only thing required is to strive at breaking the imaginary container called the 'Ego', following which you realize that you were always free and 'seperation' was an imagination.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhananjay,

I am in a dilemma. Through practicing brahmacharaya, I am cutting off relations with women and worldly minded men. When I am doing so, I think I am hurting their feelings and damaging feelings of friendship. I do not wish to hurt the feelings of other beings (as god resides in those beings and hurting them is equivalent to hurting god), but I want to practice brahamacharaya. What should I do? Kindly help me.

Answer
Who hurts whose feelings? The Atman (self) within you or 'others' as you term them is beyond pain or pleasure, always being in bliss. The Atman is itself the Lord who resides within. That which is susceptible to pain or pleasure is the imaginary Ego and not the Lord/self. It is the cunning thief called the Ego, fed by Maya, which is giving these lame excuses to escape the truth. Simply ignore its lame justifications and hold on to the practice, to realize the self.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

I just began the practice of Brahmacharya about 2 weeks ago, and had been already experiencing a renewed focus and sense of spiritual growth. However, this morning I had a nocturnal emission and lost some semen involuntarily. I know that ojas takes 30-40 days to build up in the body, and I want to practice Bhramachayra for at least one year to see its benefits. Did I completely lose the benefits of having practiced Brahmacharya for the last 2 weeks because of this one involuntary loss of semen? How do I stop the nocturnal emissions for good, as I don't want to lose any more semen? I almost wanted to cry this morning...it is so frustrating to mentally want to give yourself to an idea and then have your own body sabotage your efforts! Please help, and thank you!

Answer
1. The first benefit from the practice is your desire to remain in the state of Brahmacharya. That objective has now been renewed. Strive sincerely towards the objective, turning a blind eye to failure. Success will eventually come and wet dream will taper away.

2. Go through all past answers very slowly, absorbing the essence and putting it into practice. Depending on how honestly you implement those methods, residence in Brahmacharya becomes more longer and natural.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

In a book of Sri Aurobindo it says if one could permanently reside in the self or Natural State, the physical body's cells could transmute in light. In Buddhism this is known as Rainbow body and the teaching are very similar. Offcourse the body in practical terms wont change in this era but could it still transfom in a better vehicle if one remain in the self? WHen one resides in the self, the self itself gives energy to mind and body without any effort of our own? Thanks

Answer

All that one needs to do is to reside in the self as the self. When this is accomplished, the best results ever possible are impinged upon both the body & the mind. The maximum possible benefits (within the purview of 'Prarabdha') will be awarded to these two vehicles, for these depend on the Atman (self) for their existence, not being independent by themselves.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

QUESTION: Dear Dhananjay,

I hope this message finds you in good health.

You are my guru and my authority for learning about brahmacharya, and your answers have given me strength to tread this path. I am around 20 years old, and I had problems with keeping my mind clean of impure thoughts, but it has been almost 3 months since I have maintained physical brahmacharya (no self-abuse, but occasional lapses into pornography).

One thing that I really struggle with is controlling lustful thoughts. The issue is as follows. When I see an externally beautiful woman, the only way I can induce vairagya is to think of Swami Sivananda's decaying body technique. Perception of the gross materials of the human body is also sufficient to make me open my eyes. However, I find this troubling.

Although I am improving in my courage, I find my mind mentally disturbed and unable to concentrate on my duties after I have induced vairagya by looking at pictures of mummies, plastinated bodies, Gunther Von Hagens, etc. It is OK even when bodies are preserved, but the sight of decaying corpses fills me not only with vairyaga (which is good) but also fear, nervousness, and depression (which is bad).

I fall at your feet and ask for your advice. I need to maintain vairagya, but not at the expense of screwing up my mental state. Seeing such ghastly images of the human body incites fear, but WHY? It is worse when I am alone at home. Is it because society has brainwashed us into respecting the body and scary movies portray dead bodies and spirits as scary? Is it my fault? Dear Brother, please help me-I need to conquer this obstacle to move on.

How can one maintain the bliss of detachment without this fear? Or, after a certain point, do you not feel fear even when thinking about decaying corpses? We don't feel fear and agitation when we see a decaying animal on the road. But I do when I think of the same of a gorgeous damsel.

Please tell me both the root of these problems and remedies through which I can solve them and progress. The most important problem is that when I try to meditate, I see these gruesome images and my tapas is disturbed and unfruitful.

My sincere regards,
Shravan

ANSWER: "A fraction of the beauty of the Atman (self), shines through the body of a man or woman at youth, making the unreal and lifeless body, which is nothing but a lump of flesh appear real and desirable. Those who want to eternally enjoy the real beauty should seek the Atman - the source of that beauty and not the bag of flesh, which eventually rots away" - Always remember the truth behind this line and memorize it. Recall it whenever a lustful thought emerges at the sight of the opposite sex and hold on to the self as you do in meditation.

Just as moonlight at night, reflecting on a seashell, on the sands of a beach makes the shell appear as silver, a very minute fraction of the Lord's power shines though the impermanent body at youth, giving it the power of attraction, so as to attract a mate to aid creation. This is Maya. Maya is that which makes the unreal appear real. It is the power of illusion. Once this purpose is served, the Atman starts to withdraw its beauty and the body starts losing its sheen with age. Imagine the body of a beautiful man or woman in old age, wrinkled, decaying, emitting a foul smell. Where is the beauty?

The unreal body, which starts rotting with age, completely showing its foul nature the moment the Atman vacates it at death, has no independent existence of its own. Just as a seashell is not silver, but appears that way by virtue of moonlight reflecting off it, it is not the body which is beautiful but the power of the Atman or Lord which shines though it, making it appear beautiful. The wise who seek eternal bliss and liberation do not run after the seashell, mistaking it for silver. Such action only ends in disappointment & sorrow. They do not fall for the illusion, but ever keep their minds on the self, reminding themselves of this truth.

Absorb the essence of this truth and remember it at all times. Recall it when troubled. Keep the mind one pointed on the Lord who is nothing but the self. Always persevere at regular and honest 'Sadhana' (practice). Never interrupt it. Regular & unbroken Sadhana is very important till one realizes the self. As long as you do so, no harm will come to you and all fears will be kept at bay.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Thank you so much for you response.

Indeed, from this response and your previous ones, I understand that indeed, the body is a rottable bag of flesh that starts showing its true nature once the atman departs. In fact, even before any rotting, it is a gross collection of muscles, bones, ligaments, etc, hardly something to be aroused by.

However, my question concerns the fact that my mental state of happiness, peace, and well-being is disturbed when I consider this truth and particularly, when I think of a decaying body. For some reason, seeing/thinking/observing of the rotting degeneration of the human body fills me with fear and also sickens me to such a point where I CANNOT successfully focus on my daily activities. Does this make sense?

In other words, how do you, as an experienced practitioner, manage to both induce vairagya in yourself with these thoughts of the true nature of the body and still stay undisturbed and calm? E.g. I cannot see pictures of Egyptian mummies during night time by myself, but I DON'T understand where this fear is derived from?

Answer

1. It is not necessary to remind oneself of a rotting corpse or look at dead bodies, if found disturbing. It will suffice when one observes the characteristics of ageing among both men & women. The appearance of wrinkles, bloating, grey hair, puffiness of the face and other general characteristics of degeneration, when compared with the earlier signs of youth, will appear stark in contrast, depicting the transient nature of the body.

2. This reality is to be reminded only when necessary and not all the time. When one does so and focuses the rest of his time on constructive activity & meditation for a few years, the mind stays fixed to the self and seldom wavers. Then, the occasional sexual thoughts pass away, without causing harm. The awareness of reality becomes stronger with less instances of lust.

3. Fear itself is the effect of Maya. It is a product of imagination of the unreal. Do not worry about fear. It is but natural that latent fears stored in the 'Karana Sharira' (causal sheath containing the seeds of past Samskara-s) surface during the initial years of Sadhana. All aspirants go through these phases, during cleansing of the 'Chakra-s'. Simply adhere to honest practice with surrender to the Lord. In the course of time, residual fears will gradually dissolve and taper away. The Yogi eventually becomes completely fearless without doubt. Then, one smiles at himself when reminded of his earlier states under the grip of delusion, realizing it was only a dream.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
In the Dharmic traditions of India and Tibet, there is said from centuries that a practicionner needs a guru, a physical human guru of a recognized lineage to receive empowerement. Then one is permited or encouraged to start practicing disciplines such as brahmacharya, pranayama and then concentration and then no-dual or formless practices such as Zen or Advaita. In ancient times, teachings were hard to find and there was no comparative studies between one tradition or religion to others. Every genuine religions in her mystical form has the three parts of purgation or purification, illumination and union. Those practicionnes who received teachings in ancient times received it from the only ones who had it, the gurus, and those few who received the methods were practicing seriously and achieved realization.

Now in this materialistic and capitalist era of ours, all is different, in one part its benefical because now everyone can find theory and methods easily in books, internet with some research and then study and compare for some time, but one lack the presence of a human guru and in modern world almost no one practice seriously even if he knows the methods because one have many distractions, tv, entertainment, work, complex clinging minds, fashion, glutonnery, no will-power. Even in ancient spiritual countries now people are very materialistic. Same people but different mentality.

1-Is this because there is no human guru available? 2-Can someone still advandce without human guru, only with the methods and teachings one knows? 3-In the practice of brahmacharya, doesnt it only depends on yourself only? Thanks

Answer
How did you hear about the existence of something called the self? How did you come to know about the fact that one must strive towards realizing oneself? That force which made these things known to you, despite your not knowing any of these things earlier is the real 'Guru'. It is the higher power called the Lord who made these things happen.

Who is the Guru? The Guru is nothing but the Atman or the Lord which guides through a physical form or without one, guiding through other means. Based on the evolutionary level of a Jiva (individual), the Lord guides through a suitable form. When a Jiva is ripe to take up serious practice in the path of self-realization, it is initiated into the same by the Lord, through a physical form or even without one. The initiation can be through physical presence or non-physical means. These do no matter.

The processes starting with purification, study, application, illumination, realization and finally union with the Supreme cosmic being are all imparted only by a single Guru namely the Lord. The physical entities which act as mediums of the Lord can be one or many. Thus the one Lord may guide through various physical forms if HE so wills. There are cases where there is no external form or medium at all. As regards such rare aspirants, knowledge dawns intuitively from the Atman itself which is no different from HIM.

Even with other cases, the aspirant is constantly guided from both within & without. The Atman from within pulls the mind towards it, urging it to strive in overcoming residual tendencies. This is the guidance of the Guru (Atman) from within. The physical form commonly referred to as the 'Guru' gives the aspirant an external push on the physical plane to again turn the mind inward with his physical teachings & directions. In reality, there is no within and without. There is only the Lord who works from everywhere. Therefore, the Lord alone is the real Guru, take what form HE may, or may not.

The Era and social setup have nothing to do with finding the Guru. It should be remembered that all these transient things are a part of the drama called life created by the Lord. Just as the background, actors and scenes in a stage drama constantly change, while the director remains the same; society and environment change with time in the drama called life, while the director (God) remains the same. Having scripted this drama, HE himself takes the necessary steps required for the appearance of a Guru at the right time, based on the evolutionary level of the aspirant.

If one's efforts are genuine and honest, the Guru HIMSELF will appear at the right time to guide in some form or without form. It is not that aspirants in older times easily found a Guru, nor that the same is difficult at present. None of these things are in our hands, us being actors. The director decides these things and we follow suit.

1. If society today appears radically different from earlier times, that too is a part of HIS script which we accept without contest.

2. That force which made the 'methods & teachings' known to you will arrange for further progress as well. All that is required is to remain quiet and heed to HIS directions.

3. Who are you? That you or your 'I-ness' is the source of all trouble. It is the thief blocking residence in your true self. It is the thing to be got rid of. It is assuming it knows 'something', that it is 'responsible for the outcome of its efforts' as well. That I-ness is assuming all these things and taking responsibility for everything and nothing. Let go of it. That is true surrender. It will then be known that the Guru always existed, all the time. All questions then disappear

The true aspirant need not worry about anything as long as he perseveres in sincere & unbroken practice, with total surrender to the Lord. That is all one needs to do. The rest, HE takes care as HE always has.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaste sir,

I am following celibacy for long time but encountered many breaks in this period. There was time when I slipped into depression cursing myself blaming myself for breaks during following celibacy but your invaluable instructions and words deeply absorbed by my mind helped me to start anew again and again and again.

Now I finally entered into such state of mind that breaking celibacy is very very hard for me and HE has given me his blessings. My Eyesight is IMPROVING RAPIDLY. From age of 13 I have problem of weak eyesight and in 11 years since wearing eyeglasses first time my eyes are healing and my eyesight is improving. This is all due to practise of celibacy and his blessing to me. I never feel so blessed and happy. I always wished that first sign of his blessing be improved eyesight and HE fulfilled my wish. Now I am more determined to merge with him eternally.

I am very greatful to you sir because you have given new meaning to my life and always inspired me to practise celibacy and never give up even when break occured.

I have not yet started meditation and other aspects of celibacy though I know they are very important. On this day I will start pranayam and meditation with his blessing and your words of encouragement.

As inspiration to me will you please describe how one turns from human into URDHVARETA in detail. This will help me alot sir.

Thank you so much sir.

Answer

1. When the Yogi masters 'Sabija Samadhi' which consists of four stages and culminates into the 'Sasmita' state, he becomes an Urdhvareta. Then, Bindu (seed) which was earlier descending from the 'Ajna Chakra' in the region of the brain, down to the 'Svadhistana Chakra' in the region of the genitals to form semen, completely stops its downward flow. From thereupon, the production of gross semen stops. He is then an Urdhvareta.

2. Reaching the state of an Urdhvareta calls for intensive and unbroken practice of all the Anga-s of the Yogi with regular Pranayama & meditation. The body needs to reach a high degree of purity by the said austerities and much impeding karma needs to be dissolved through ardent Yogic practice with long hours of meditation. Unbroken Brahmacharya is the basic foundation for such effort. During this process, the Yogi develops strong 'Saranagati' (surrender to God) with the mind completely intent on HIM. When such a degree of practice is held on to for a considerable period of time, the state of the Urdhvareta is reached by HIS grace alone.

Persevere for a few years with the complete set of Yogic practices described, with unconditional surrender and love to God, without asking anything in return. All that has to come will come by HIS grace.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

greeting,
I m 24 years old I have read many articles on brahmacharya and known that its is difficult to practise realistically after so many attempts my faith and I failing to keep this vow resulting in outburst of emotional quilt as I know this is against morality so also the perfect being or our super humans like lord buddha and mahavira and jesus christ gave sermons on practising celibacy though intellectually understanding also even though I fail to practise this makes me think I m so fake to myself and in reality its so I tend to get attracted rather to net and porn and realize lately its so against me this has complexified my personality though late realization and regretting are always in vain but has been a habit pattern in which im struggling to practise bramacharya lately failing miserably though having understanding ther philosophical aspect the practical aspect and practise remains unfulfilled my question to you is I know the practical men are few and less rest majority are swayed and are flowing in craving of sensuality yet I ask are there some concrete ways of implication of brahmacharya effortlessly in admist of so many sensual objects of gratifaction which one is persuaded to bow .how can one root out passion so that there is no future possibilty of one in remaining aware of his future downfall and whats the guarentee that one will not slip again my personal experience is that there was a time when i thought now I m clean from passion but months later and now that I realize that were temporary and I now I m addicted to lust craving I have tried many techniques but Im facing limitation practically If I could get a techique to practise brahmacharya I would be grateful to you. I have highs and lows on this path its like walking upstream or crosscurrent the moment I loose my hold or firmness or slight negligence leads to a big slip and lead to downfall on this path is uphill as it seem to me it is tough not easy but it seems so easy to our saints how to develop firmness to this path to get a grip hold on to brahmacharya i do excercise and I have intellectual knowledge of path but practical essence is missing how can I learn to practise brahmacharya I have been slipped hundred a times and miserabally often I think Im obliterating nature force thats why Im getting my mental state disturbed I have stirred the bahmacharya issue so many times that I m not enjoying my age Im often shy and take time to open up I dont drink or smoke nor I party like my rest friends but I find people who not stuggling like me and carelessly n recklessly breaking laws seems to be more happy then me and apparently enjoying life and sex what is the use of compressing your desire which outbursts are like sleeping volcanoes at a given time how can I reach a state at which I can be assured of no set back again at this path though also how is implementation of execution can be carried out in this vunerable loka plane of existence also whats the importance of brahmacharya to young adults like me even older peoples now a day fall prey to vasanas and are addict to passion and in proceess of uprooting passion am I not becoming passive and inhert to my surrounding IM not becoming impotent as there is no utiliztion of sexual organs one of my friend says long term abstinence leads to stopping of sperm formation and dystrophy of sexual organ if I were to marry in future after 3-4 years can it lead to have conception issues to my wife I dont want to marry now but definetely in future and also dersire to raise kids can my abstinence of present will affect my future .and also I wanna know modern medical fails to notify any importance to celibacy no one dies after having sex or get retards after sexual act too much over indulgence may be in my opinion a fruitless and empty habit and addiction to sex and urge to sex and realtions in my conception are noted demerits of sex .why does saints sages scriptures disapproves it controlled healthy realtion with wife for kids is brahmacharya where there would be in my faculty to search such an non demanding selfless wife who will agree to have sex for kid and not for sake of gratification also how can I controll my karma. Is masturbation a sort of adultery or a normal expression to subside passion within a give time framwork or episode medicos say it is natural behavior but I have read that even animals dont masturbate but only procreate .some supports this thoery as animals are of inferior intellect and knowledge man have superior faculty of experience and cognition so why do men masturbate very often .studies in a survey says 95%of young population masturbates rest 5% are lying that they don't are there practical practitioner how can We know that they are not lying .recently news on so called saints who teaches celibacy are caught on grounds of misconduct how can one believe and evoke faith if that happens so . there are so many questions nobody have personally guided me in this path rather this conception of brahmacharya people think rather responses and mordern ideologies are often discouraging .Im studying for my post graduation are there evidence celibacy enhances and boost memory in my according bramacharya is essential to get poised mind which evntually i find through my experience after masturbation there is personal guilt that kills me from inside if i were not have knowledge on that note would the same guilt persist. also can brahmacharya be practically achived as a long term that is for 3-4 years andafter having kids for life time what if my parterns disapproves of it will it not affect relationship with my wife if so it can ruin my wedding how can I explain my partner in future .I wanted to be brahmachaya but in my houshold life is this practically possible how to convince my future wife. Also I have not done sex like a relationship with anyone till date an Im healthy regularly do my gym I good looking yet my friend often tease me that Im spoling my life is that .so my ideology is I cant spoil someone life .I wanted honest and commited relation that only a wife can give .Is it normal to have ocassional voluntary masturbation if desires are strong and they dont let u sleep and lurks your mind i find unless i dont masturbates these desires dont seems to subsides and worsens on further refrain and sexual desires increases its peak @ 3-4 day of refraiment from sex if i continue to observe bramacharya my condition get worsen day by day I get erection on single desires often it leads to public embrassment the desires go strong after refraiment from sex why so please reply Im curious hope your answer rightfully enlighten my path.

thanks a lot for your precious wisdom on this path

Answer
1. Taking up regular and honest 'Yoga Sadhana'- Practice of all the Anga-s of Yoga (to realize the self) is the way to get established in unbroken Brahmacharya.

2. Complete eradication of lust is achieved only when one irreversibly realizes the self.

3. 'Saints' attained sainthood only after eradication of their Ego-s. Till then, they were one among the masses. All saints went through as much suffering as anybody else. Some even went through more. It was not an easy path to realize the self. Till one identifies with the Ego, the journey appears very tough. Only when one surrenders to HIM and becomes humble does the Ego start to vacate. Hence strive to let go of the Ego.

4. The honest Brahmachari does not become impotent in marriage. The Lord assures him of progeny in marriage, if it is so destined. Leave these worries and surrender to HIM, trusting HIM completely.

5. The nature of the incoming life partner, as all other things is already fixed by destiny. Do you Dharma and leave the rest to HIM.

6. No saint & nowhere in scriptures has marriage and limited progeny been denounced. What is important, is to take up the practice, to realize the self, at the earliest.

7. Let go of what others say, don't say, do or don't do and first strive to realize you self.

Go through each and every past answer slowly and apply the said methods for a few years honestly. If this much is done, everything will be taken care of by HIM and things fall in place.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Hello,

Yesterday when I lye down to bed to meditate before sleep, I had a strange experience. I practiced that practice which say be an observer and let thoughts come and go until mind remain clear and somewhat empty. I did that for almost an hour while in a very confortable and no tension posture. In a moment I lost conciousness or awareness to say it simply, but a moment later I started to hear like voices from television in my ears even though the tv was off, and had clear vision of my room even with my eyes closed as if I opened my eyes while lying down. I could see my body, arms and legs lying down and in that state said to myself I was in sleep but fully conscious as if awake. Then I forced myself to move and feel my arms moving but invisible and the body remained unmoved, after I moved and wake up. Some years ago I had similar experience but I never continued it out of fear, in those times I didnt have much knowledge. Is this an entry to an out of body? Some position helps this experience? Is out of body experience the goal of Yoga?

ANSWER: 1. The aim of Yoga is to realize the self.

2. Ignore such experiences and strive to go beyond the body & mind which are unreal. Residing in the self as the self is the only reality and state, worthy of attainment.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Hello, But this experience I didnt search for it, it was in a click if I could say. It was as if the physical body went to sleep and the mind was awake in a "sleep paralysis" induced because of meditation. It was because I tried to go beyond body and mind as an observer I attained that state. But when I was in that state I become attached to it and wanted to explore it. So if this comes again I have to let go of it and continue to meditate as an observer?

Answer
1. Mere observation eventually makes the Ego interfere and the observation gets colored by the past Samskara-s (impressions) & Vasana-s (tendencies) of which the Ego is made of. Before the aspirant knows it, he is not impartially observing as a neutral witness but as the limited Ego. Complete, neutral observation without letting the Ego interfere is not possible all the time in the unrealized state. It is therefore necessary to perform correct Sadhana to vacate the seeds of past karma which constitute the Ego. Then alone does the Ego start fragmenting, leading to its eventual dissolution.

2. Let go of desire for all bodyily or mind experiences which come en route and focus only on attaining to the through free state with complete awareness. This alone leads to the merger of the mind in the Atman (self). Everything else is a distraction.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

In Mahayana Buddhism, there is a concept called the Bodhisattva Vow. This vow is a commitment to delay one's own final liberation from the cycle of birth and death to return to the world to work towards the liberation of all beings. The Bodhisattva puts off his own liberation until all beings have been saved from suffering. Is this an actual choice one can make? Would this choice be available to any individual regardless of one's spiritual path?

Thank-you,

Ron D.

Answer
After the Yogi attains to 'Kaivalya' (self-realization), he becomes a 'Jivanmukta' (liberated, though occupying the physical vehicle). Then, the one who made choices is gone. The one who wanted or did not want something is gone. Pure cosmic consciousness, free from all desires alone remains. The Lord alone functions from such a body. Who then remains to return or make choices? {The Ego having vacated}. Where can HE go or not go, HIM occupying all space, time and beyond?

That which the Lord wills alone transpires through such a being, which may be called HIS seamless extension, for the purpose of understanding. If it is in HIS plan to stay in that body till dissolution of the cycle, for the benefit of mankind, it happens. Else, it does not.

If commitments are made by a 'Jiva' (however advanced it may be), it indicates that the entity making such commitments (Ego) is still alive (however minuscule be the degree). Therefore, it is to be known that such a being which exercises choices has not yet fully merged with the Godhead or attained the final state (call the state by what name one may), beyond which there are no other states.

The full blown realized soul is incapable of exercising any personal choice (there being no one to do so) and is hence a direct extension of the cosmic being. HE alone works from such a body.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Is there any advantage of taking bath in the morning?

I find it difficult to bath in morning during winter season, I take bath only with tap water(cold as supplied).

I read somewhere that we should not put our body through unnecessary exertion.

Answer
1. One should always bathe in the morning so as to ward away 'Tamas' (inertia), clean the body of its dead cells and infuse fresh Prana into the system.

2. If using cold water is difficult, use warm (not hot) water.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello SIr,

I really have 2 very important question for me.

1-WHen I wake at morning but remain in bed let say 6 or 7 am, the sexual thoughts can appear very strong when you let them pass through the mind. For me this is the most dangerous moment of the day where I can fall. The rest of the day I have almost no strong impulse. I am 29. WHy?

2-I have the feeling that by just thinking of sex I could feel my energy being lost as my body was preparing itself for sex with semen production. Even if there is no ejaculation, the body start to feel trembling or nervous when sexual thoughts are supported by the will. The thoughts itself do not produce semen but yes the will in my opinion. Is there loss of energy just by thinking of sex? Why?

Thanks

Answer
1. If the secretions of the 'Pineal' gland produced in the body during the latter part of the night are not transmuted by early morning Sadhana, these flow down and activate sexual energy. Then there is eventually an expulsion which always debilitates the body & the mind.

One should wake up by 4.00 A.M and perform honest Sadhana if Brahmacharya is to be established.

2. When the mind is turned inwards towards the Atman (self), it assumes similar form and is full of strength, peace & bliss. Sexual fantasy is the effect of the mind being turned outwards, towards the 'Asat' (unreal), ignorance being its cause. The result is an expulsion of energy flowing outwards towards the unreal. Energy stored in the 'Sukshma sharira' (astral or subtle body) then starts to drain, resulting in weakness and an eventual break in the physical body as well.

It is the mind, which is nothing but flow of thoughts, that is responsible for producing or not producing semen. The mind turned inwards, towards the self, stops such production and mind turned outwards towards the unreal starts it.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi,

As you know there is a tradition of meditation which says that when someone conserve the essence of the body or vital energy and at the same time meditate to open chi channels, the body can become "pregnant" of a spiritual fetus. This fetu start to grow with meditation and become a complete immortal spirit body that can separate from the physical body and ascend to heaven. They say if someone dont cultivate this during lifetime, he will not ascend to the heaven. There is two types of body. The invisible one or yin body and the physical one or yang body. For an individual who reach that state to project the spirit, is this enligtnement or real immortality?http://www.all-dao.com/immortality-achievements.html

Answer
1. Who goes to heaven or hell? It is the Ego and not the self, which is all pervading. Heaven and hell are unreal in terms of the absolute. He who goes to either of these without the knowledge of the self, has to eventually return back to Earth, on the physical plane, and continue with his efforts to realize the self.

2. Hence the quest for spirit or astral bodies is not of any use, being another novelty and nothing more. Living in a spirit body does not reduce one's ignorance by the least. It does not contribute in any way to Enlightenment, where, there is no body or mind. Hence the wise Yogi does not aspire for it.

To irreversibly reside in the self as the self is the only state worthy of attainment.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Is it true that one wet dream or sexual thought immediately breaks the 12 years vow of celibacy and one have to start it from begining.

Answer
An involuntary, infrequent, wet dream does not amount to a break in the practice. However, copious and regular wet dreams which are the effect of willful sexual fantasy or activity in the waking state cause an effect similar to a break.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
namaste dhananajay ji

1. can a brahmachari take milk and ghee? because gandhi ji said that we should not take milk or any other dairy products

2. how some one can eat food without spices? i know that we must not take it. but in BG shri krishna said that we should not eat tasteless food. i think boiled vegitables are also tasteless. can u tell me your diet plan please.

3. can we take trifla churna.

4. why god created us?

(my English is not good...if there is any mistake then ignore it please)

Answer
1. Yes. Milk & its products are beneficial and suitable for Brahmacharya, being 'Satvic' (calming) in nature. Gandhiji never made such a statement. He used to consume goat's and cow's milk on a daily basis.

2. Who asked you to take spice free food? Spices & salt, taken in moderation, cause no harm.

3. Not really necessary for the Brahmachari.

4. Who was created? The Atman (soul) has no birth and death. That which was created was the body & the mind. To make you realize you are not both these is why God created them. So when the one who asks this question realizes who he truly is, this question will not arise.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi, In the practice of third eye meditation in which I roll the eyeballs up to the forehead and concentrate and meditate in that state, I felt it was easier to forget my physcial body, I dont feel it anymore. I tried many meditation techniques and breath techniques but no one helped me to forget the body as this simple practice. Sometimes in a chair or sometimes on my right side in bed. Not only I felt no body sensations after some time but when I roll up the eyeball while maintaining the eyes closed, my mind itself gets automatically very concentrated and not moving much. After 30 minutes or so, I start to see like white circles forming and dissapearing and then deeper like white lights switching on and off when I could reach some true stillness and forgeting bodymind. WHen I see such lights even for one or so seconds I feel I have refreshed waters or vapours. One time my vision became all white for a second and felt it in my body and mind. These white lights are prana going upward or doing frictions on the eyeballs?

I think if someone have unbroken celibacy it helps and if not, the lights dont appear and the mind become tired of doing such practice. With this practice after some weeks, someone could easily forget body, at least for me it worked. Thanks

Answer
1. The lights are only neural currents fed by Prana in the form of visuals. There is no other significance. When meditation of the self is true, no lights are seen, for presence of light is an indication of the presence of thought which is not meditation on the self.

2. Let go of fixation for visions and phenomenon. None of these are of any use. Only when one rests as the self in the self without the mind, does meditation fructify.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Good day,

In a texts it says: "Because the unified field of consciousness is your own inner nature you need not look far to find it. It is easily experienced through the practice of deep meditation. All you need to do is to bring your awareness to the deep inner level of unified consciousness, and imbibe that status within your conscious awareness. Operating from that status you gain command and support of all the laws of nature."

When a person reach the inner nature with concious awareness it brings him joy, energy, siddhis, inteligence, wisdom, but why if the inner nature is not reached by concious awareness it doesnt? If the inner nature is always there why it doest bring always joy and energy to the entity as in the waking state or even sleep? Sadhana and meditation are necessary, the inner nature doesnt shine always.

From a book: "It is by participation of species that we call every sensible object beautiful. Thus, since everything void of form is by nature fitted for its reception, as far as it is destitute of reason and form it is base and separate from the divine reason, the great fountain of forms; and whatever is entirely remote from this immortal source is perfectly base and deformed. And such is matter, which by its nature is ever averse from the supervening irradiations of form. Whenever, therefore, form accedes, it conciliates in amicable unity the parts which are about to compose a whole; for being itself one it is not wonderful that the subject of its power should tend to unity, as far as the nature of a compound will admit. Hence beauty is established in multitude when the many is reduced into one, and in this case it communicates itself both to the parts and to the whole. But when a particular one, composed from similar parts, is received it gives itself to the whole, without departing from the sameness and integrity of its nature. Thus at one and the same time it communicates itself to the whole building and its several parts; and at another time confines itself to a single stone, and then the first participation arises from the operations of art, but the second from the formation of nature. And hence body becomes beautiful through the communion supernally proceeding from divinity."

Answer
1. The Sun is always shining throughout the day; yet why does the presence of a cloud which is less than a billionth of the size of the Sun block light, bringing darkness? It occurs because the cloud comes in the way of our limited vision and the Sun. Does this mean the Sun has lost his brightness? The Sun always continues to maintain his state of light and heat. It is the observer who is afflicted by the illusion that the Sun has dimmed in power, further to the interference of the cloud in the path of vision.

2. If the observer were to occupy a windowless room, no sunlight enters and he will say "There is no Sun, just darkness". The Sun however continues to shine, least affected. The same occurs between one's Atman (self) which is pure consciousness and the Observer (Jiva) who is limited by the clouds of ignorance that constitute the Ego, blocking the individual consciousness's (apparent) merger with the universal stream. Though there is only one Supreme consciousness which occupies all space, time and is beyond these as well, 'Avidya' (ignorance) that constitutes the Ego results in the apparent formation of the individual consciousness which then identifies itself with that (such as the body, mind & world) which it is not. Just as the cloud blocking Sun rays created an illusion of the Sun having dimmed in power, the Ego makes consciousness assume itself limited, separate, and blocks the stream of universal consciousness from reaching the entity.

3. The entity then behaves as a subject interacting with objects, while in reality, there is neither subject nor object but only pure consciousness. The illusion so created is called 'Maya'. When one fully overcomes through Sadhana this apparent 'I-ness', the cause behind a sense of individuality, it will be realized that there is neither subject nor object but only pure consciousness. The world, which is only a mental mirage then disappears to the seer who rests in his true state of pure being. That is the truth, the real state and one's real self. It is of the nature of purity, existence and continuous bliss.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

SInce teen age I masturbated a lot until 24-25 years old, Im now 28. At the age of 24-25 I started to practice brahmacharya without much knowledge and was able to practice it for 7 months even though no meditation, with just one wet dream in the entire period. So now when I recollect I am impressed to be able to do it without much trouble for long time in my first try, after masturbating for such long time. People around say I looked like a military or something, and asked if I ever get a no answer. Then I fall because I didnt have much knowledge (just reading some incomplete gnostic stuff)and say to myself : "its just one break". WHen I practiced brahmacharya I didnt even know for sure if the advantage I got was because of it, and I practiced easily without knowing much. And then I restarted again and fall, restarted and fall, restarted and fall, never able to have more than 3 weeks of brahmacharya at a time. The first period of 7 months I felt i was being helped from high but when I do the effort myself alone I always fell. Now I asked God in humility to help with this and never boast myself and dont get angry or jealous, and gave my IPAD to a woman. I dont understand how I could remained with brahamcharya in the first try for long period of time without much knowledge... DO you get support from God or angels with this practice? Now that i know this alchemy transformation, is repracticing brahmacharya repeatedly after many falls an insult to God?

Answer
1. The initial success was further to the help from above, to orient you into the practice.

2. For further success, you should apply these two principles without a break:-

I. Become completely humble, let go of the 'I-ness' (Ego) which indulges in self-flattery and always keep in mind - "The 'I-ness' - Ego does nothing and is incapable of anything, having no existence of its own. It is only an illusion, shining by the light of the Atman (self), just as the moon which has no light shines by the light of the Sun. I will not let it crop up its head, but will ever remain humble with surrender to the Supreme."

II. With such an attitude bereft of the actions of the Ego, the mind should be turned inwards through honest and regular Sadhana, using the eight Anga-s (limbs) of Yoga as suggested in past answers with devotion to the Supreme. When such sincere efforts with an austere life of purity are applied continuously for many years, one gradually ascends to being in the state of the self for longer periods of time and Brahmacharya becomes rock steady.

Always remember the Ego to be the chief source of trouble. He who conquers the Ego is no different from the Lord, having merged into his true state. He is the one who has woken up from the dream called life into the reality of pure consciousness.

Do not worry about failure. Simply focus on what has been said above and persevere. All that has to come will come.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Dear Dhananjay,

You have answered so many important questions here and as an aspirant, I humbly thank you for all the wisdom in your posts.

One day, I hope to attain the self-realization that you have and is evident in your answers to all the responses here.

A few questions here. They deal with doubts and conflicts that plague me and only you can advise me on the proper course of action to be followed. I will be eternally grateful, for your words mean more to me than anything imaginable.

My background: I am a young physical brahmachari (22) and I strive to uphold my brahmacharya. I have been in the practice for upwards of only 3 months thus far, but I notice the positive changes in my more positive moods, confidence, and ability to attract others. I don't want to focus on these as the goal is to stay afloat of these, but I am mentioning them for the sake of explaining my background. While I wish to sublimate my sex energy, I do not wish to become self-realized at the present-I am very ambitious and would love to become a wealthy and successful businessman. I intend to use the money to both live a worry-free yet non-indulgent life and start an eye clinic to help children with retinal diseases and problems such as my little brother.

1) I wish to become popular in a particular culinary field, but I foolishly, having no guidance when younger, spread devastating rumors about a few influential (And successful) kids in the industry who were my age, about 5-6 years ago. Thinking about my past blunder and ruined friendships and opportunities haunt me to this day, although the ghosts have mitigated. Should I focus on improving my passion for cooking without chewing the past? I don't know what to do. I am also afraid that, although I have now taken to a quiet, contemplative, and non-reactive life in which I don't talk much about others, my past will ruin my future and rumors will be spread about me.

2) Although I am training myself in brahmacharya, I still care heavily about what others think of me. There is a devastating new disease on the planet in the form of social networking, and even when I post something on sites like Orkut, I am always concerned with how many people will like my posts, respond to them, etc. How does one truly develop the ability to not care? Isn't this something that should come from brahmacharya?

3) Although a physical brahmachari, I sometimes do view pornography to test my resolve and see if I can maintain equanimity of mind even when such images are present. It is quite hard though. How can I improve in this regard? I wish to channel my energies to eventually have enough money to open the eye clinic for poor children and pay off my father's crippling debts.

4) I have heard that brahamcharya improves memory. Is this really true? Does it improve IQ, and if so, by how much? Memory is highly correlated with IQ, and when we hear stories of Swami Vivekananda having amazing memory retention, it seems that his IQ must have increased as an Akhanda brahmachari, yes? Is this achievable? I wish to harness my ojas for this purpose instead of frivolously wasting them on napkins and flesh.

However, I am tremendously jealous and demotivated when I see natural geniuses-Those who naturally have high IQs and superbrain memories and don't need to follow the life of brahmacharya to obtain such benefits. It nearly deflates me. How should I deal with this and jealousy in general?

Your responses are what I am most eagerly awaiting. I cannot thank you enough for the calmness and stability you have taught me through past answers on this site.

ANSWER: 1. Strive in your primary Dharma (duty) which is to realize the self and work honestly in the career shown by destiny, with humility towards all. All that has to come will come. There is no cause for worry as long as one follows these two guidelines

2. Such a desire to receive compliments or a self-conscious concern about what others think of oneself is the play of the Ego. The Lord will eventually create life situations where the "I-ness' - Ego will be beaten into nothing. This will gradually negate it, making it humble and respectful to all. Snub the Ego and persevere with honest practice.

3. Viewing porn is the easiest way to debilitation in the physical, mental and finally karmic fronts. He who watches porn pushes himself into creating very foul karma, which will become the cause for various other kinds of sorrows, in all walks of life. The wise man stays clear of such activity by persevering in Sadhana to know the self. Go through each and every past answer on the methods required and adopt them meticulously.

4. To the extent one practices residing in the self, that many benefits follow. This is to be known through direct experience. The true Brahmachari eventually overcomes all debilities and shines with the light of Brahman - As an epitome of superior mental faculties.

It is not one's business to look at the world or judge it. Different Jiva-s achieve different things, based on their past & present karma. One should let go of comparison or judgement and first realize himself. That which has to come will come at the appropriate time, to the extent of one's destiny. It is not for us to think about the results. One's actions end at honest effort. This is the only duty and the correct way of conduct. He who treads such a path is not touched by happiness or sorrow. He stays in the realm of the self, in pure bliss, at the feet of the Lord.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Thank you for your response Dhananjay.

I am still not fully clear on the points you had mentioned. Could you please elaborate a bit more on my first, third, and fourth question?

The issue is that I cannot forget past blunders, such as ill-spited gossip that backfired. They have robbed me of me confidence and drive. I would do anything to go back and change it. But my wise elder friend, also a yogi who is seeking to realize the self, tells me that whatever happened was destined to happen and that I could have not avoided it because of my karma.

Is this true? Then how do we take responsibility for our own actions? It is very confusing and contradictory, is it not?

Also, is it OK for me to have wealth aspirations or power aspirations? For these, I feel that the ego is needed to drive you with self-confidence and power. If it is not needed, how can one succeed in the competitive business world, attract people, and achieve his goals (after all, the Vedas do stress the Purushartha of wealth)?

Lastly, are there people who have realized the self but are also practical and live in this world and achieve business success to fulfill their needs (open an eye clinic in my case, for others it may to support their parents, etc)?

I ask all this because while the advice you have given me is excellent, I do stress that I am a very young guy and I do wish to proceed in a path of brahmachari, but not necessarily renounce the world. Swami Sivananda specifically advised against this, as we do have duties to many people and we must experience various stages in life before proceeding to full renunciation, is it not?

Answer
1. Apply efforts in the career of your choice without attachment, and watch silently, unaffected by success or failure. With time, the course of destiny will gradually become known. There is no use worrying about the future, as one's right ends at honest effort. The outcome of an action is dependent on factors beyond one's control. Accept the will of Lord and be content with that which will be given.

2. A Jiva commits a mistake with the erroneous belief that such action will be beneficial. Depending on the strength of the seeds of such belief which are the result of Agnyana (ignorance), the invisible teacher called God gives it lessons of experience in the classroom called life. Suffering for its misdeeds, the Jiva realizes its mistake, not to repeat the same again. Thus it is made to rectify itself and take up the path of Dharma. Therefore, there is no need to worry about the past, once the lesson has been learnt.

Realizing this truth, the wise man neither ruminates over the past which is gone, nor worries about the future which is yet to come but focuses on the present with right conduct and efforts to realize the self. If this much is done, all things gradually fall into place.

3. Let go of the 'I' (Ego) which is assuming doership as regards its actions, which is concerning itself with responsibility, which is worrying about the outcome and which is strongly attached to the future. Do what is felt right at the given moment, to the extent of your ability, within the bounds of Dharma and be at peace. Things will happen in the way the higher power wants them to happen. It is not one's business to worry about the outcome. One's purview ends at right efforts.

4. It is a wrong notion that efforts for self-realization will soon culminate into that objective without fruition of desires. If one applies efforts to realize himself, with love & devotion to the Lord, that much wealth, power or other desires, within the realm of Dharma, which are destined in 'Prarabdha' will come at the appropriate time without doubt.

5. Efforts in the direction of self-realization will bring the highest possible practicality and success. The best possible outcome as regards all aspects of life will gradually blossom.

Even if you want to renounce the world, it will not happen until the higher power wills so. So let go of all these worries and do your Dharma as suggested. All that has to come will come without doubt, at the right time.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Is brahmacharya related to magnetism, hypnotism and distance communication?

Answer
Every activity, be it of the above mentioned kind or some other is fueled by 'Prana' (universal cosmic energy). There is no life without Prana manifesting through a being. Since the availability of Prana increases through Brahmacharya, it is possible to invest the same on various techniques. One should however not develop a fascination for such activities as they become impediments in the path of the self.

To reside in the self as the self is the true meaning of Brahmacharya. The sexual aspect is a by product and not Brahmacharya itself, for there is nothing called sexuality in the Atman (self).

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Sir,

I want to ask, does this concept of sexuality, Brahmacharya, relate to a particular race or culture? In my knowledge It doesnt appear all religions or nations have this concept of sexuality. Others religions can have monasteries but brahmacharya is not the main reason why those institutions exists. Monasteries are explained because the wealth of monks and the priesthood will go to the main church or institution and it will accumulate wealth that way. Monasteries are mainly for economic purpose.

Answer
1. Brahmacharya is the means to realize the self. It is residence in one's true state of pure consciousness. The aim of Brahmacharya is not merely overcoming sexual desire. The aim is to realize oneself. All other benefits are byproducts and not the final end or objective.

2. Brahmacharya exists in all true religions without exception, call it by what name one may. As mentioned, self-realization is the objective and not mere sexual abstinence. True Brahmacharya is to realize and reside in the self, irreversibly, be the place a monastery, a home or some other.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Dear Sir,

I am preparing myself to start doing pranayama in the morning. However in the evening I will be coming back from office only at 8-9:pm. Hence I am wondering whether it is ok to do Pranayama only in the morning. Or can I do it in the morning and around 10pm in the night before dinner.

thanks

ANSWER: 1.Perform the complete set of Yogic practices consisting of Asana, Bandha, Nadi shodhana, Pranayama and meditation as suggested in past answers, early in the morning, before Sunrise.

2. Mediate for 15 minutes on the formless Lord, before retiring to bed at night, without asking anything in return.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Dear Sir,

Thanks for your kind reply, I could access the previous material provided by you in the below link

http://en.allexperts.com/q/Celibacy-Abstinence-3564/2011/5/Pranayama-Yoga-Brahma

Also I would like to clarify about 3 bandhas. How many times do we have to perform bandhas before starting nadi sodhana.

As a layman with no help from any guru, can I simply start doing bandhas or is it necessary to do any preliminary exercises before this. I feel that if we do these asanas wrongly the effect can be disastrous hence the question.

thank you for your kind attention

Answer
1. Each Bandha is to be performed 3 times.

2. Learn the Asana-s suggested in past answers from a competent Hata yoga teacher and perform the same.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I recently came across a post in forums where it(amaroli) was being discussed before that i never thought of our Urine as a natural healer or pure energy solution.

I would like to hear from you the benefits of drinking own urine and tips for beginners in this.

I've also read that our morning's first urine between 3-4 am contains melatonon which assist in meditation.

BTW, today i took bath with my urine. I collectedd the midstream of urine and sstored it in glass container. Accidently, a little bit of it went in my eyes too. is it safe?

Answer
Sivambu, when put in the eyes cleanses them and helps improve eye sight in the long run.

http://en.allexperts.com/q/Celibacy-Abstinence-3564/2013/1/practice-amaroli-urin

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaskar Dear Dhananjay,

1)Tantric sex or 'non ejaculatory sex' (people commonly equate the two) is believed to be by some folks to be enough to achieve atma sakshatkara.They say that vajroli kriya can then be used to transmutate the semen remaining to ojas.I doubt seriously whether we can cheat one's way to godhead.Anyways I have the below doubts re. this.

a)Is Vajroli an automatic kriya happenning on account of prolonged abstinence or a physical one to be performed like others?

b)Is Vama marga a genuine marga or a theory constructed to justify base intents?

2)A man's body produces semen i.e is reproductively capable lifelong ,whereas not so is the case with females once she enters menopause.So one can understand the old age among men who aren't continent or in brahmacharya via loss of prana,but what causes the sudden debility in females after menopause when their prana is no longer being wasted in periodic emissions as before.

3)Shankara says in viveka chudamani,verse 2:
For all beings a human birth is difficult to obtain, more so is a male body;

What is that significance of a male body greater than that of a female.Why has god given the male body voluntary control over his sexual fluid(even though males are more hormonally susceptible to lust because of much higher levels of testosterone) & not the female.

'With greater power comes greater responsibility' so goes the adage.

The greater drive in males seems like a curse because it blinds men in passion & makes them slaves of lust.

Women don't seem to have such animal lust .

On behalf of all male sadhaks striving earnestly pls enumerate what is the advantage & responsiblity(to be careful of) in being born with a high sexual drive in a male body.

Answer
1. Non-ejaculatory sex is not Tantric sex. It is the same as regular sexual intercourse, but without ejaculation. It can be used during the initial stages of Brahmacharya, in marriage, to overcome the slavery for ejaculation, so as to completely give up the sexual act in the course of time.

2. What is Vajroli? Real Vajroli is the automatic sublimation of the sexual essence into the higher regions to form Ojas, further to a life of honest Yoga & Brahmacharya, with surrender to God. Drawing up some fluid or expelled semen back into the body is not Vajroli. Such a practice is of no use. Expelled semen, if so drawn up, will only reach the bladder and will again be thrown out during urination. The wise do not resort to such foolishness.

3. There is no sexuality in the Atman. Sexuality is an illusion concerning the Ego. Where then is 'Atmasakshatkara' (self-realization) to the one desiring the illusion?

4. 'Vama Marga' is an approach which calls for a very high degree of discipline, under the guidance of a Guru who has himself realized the self through the same method. It is not for all. It is as genuine and valid as the Right hand path.

5. The amount of 'Bindu' (which comes down to form semen in the male or the ovum in the female) is lesser in case of a woman as compared to a man. The expenditure is also lesser in case of a woman, being limited to one egg per month. The remaining part of the stockpile is retained after menopause in the higher regions to facilitate sustenance, just as it was retained before puberty. The volume available after menopause is however very much smaller. This is the reason for rapid debilitation.

6. The female is the representation of 'Prakriti' (energy which is responsible for manifestation), while the male represents the 'Purusa' (pure consciousness or the Lord, unaffected by Maya). Prakriti or Sakti is thus the offshoot of the Purusa, having no independent existence of its own, just as the Moon has no existence without the light of the Sun. Therefore, women are governed by Maya to a larger extent as compared to men. For the same reason, women easily develop Bhakti (devotion) but find it very difficult to develop Vairagya (dispassion), their intensity for passion being multiform.

Birth in the male body, therefore, offers a better possibility to realize the self, 'Purusatva' representing pure consciousness, with detachment being its primal nature. Hence a man who wastes himself running after the unreal misses the greatest opportunity.

7. While the sexual drive in the male appears superficially higher, it is also easier for the male to turn it inwards through aligning himself to the self through 'Viveka' (wisdom) and 'Vichara' (inquiry), for the basic nature of the male is governed by pure consciousness to a larger extent.

8. Women have a stronger and higher degree of sexuality than men, their nature being governed by Maya to a larger extent. However, their power of restraint is also stronger and well contained.

To whom does sexuality concern? Find out that entity and negate it. Then pure consciousness alone remains and one realizes there was no basis in the illusion called the male and female.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Dear Dhananjay,

I can't believe this happened. After 3 months observing strict physical brahmacharya with several night emissions in between, I lapsed into viewing sinful material and committed a physical lapse. I am 20.

I am anguished. This is bothering me heavily. Has all the stored prana been wasted? Also, most importantly, the REASON why I took to this measure was because during my phase of brahmacharya I had several night emissions per week which was frustrating.

However, there is one development which I am happy about. A firm agnostic before, an amazing transformation occurred in me which turned out to be extremely beneficial for me without me even knowing it (I learned to focus out distractions and daydreaming right before I took my first driving lesson...without God's grace, this surely would have not happened). I am convinced that he will help me achieve true brahmacharya for the next several years-Is this the right perspective?

Last problem which bothers me. A few colleagues at my work place, young guys in their 20s, passed away a few weeks ago, and they presumably did not have any sensual relations. Sometimes I worry that, god forbid, if something were to happen to me that could incapacitate me, I will never be able to experience sensual pleasure with a woman in the future, and I think, what if I just tried it now before embarking on brahmacharya? Please give me a convincing reason to uphold my celibacy...I wish to retain it to harness my mental powers fully, but this alone does not satisfy me.

Most of all, the break in physical brahmacharya is paining me very much. I am in a confusing situation and I hope not all my progress, however small, has been lost. I had great excitement for life and better memory, and I feel OK now, but not exceptional.

God bless you,
Sandy

ANSWER: 1. Brahmacharya is to be practiced in thought, word & deed with surrender to the Lord. Mere physical abstinence fails in due course and is not Brahmacharya. Apply the methods required, as suggested earlier, in totem, on a regular basis.

2. Surrender and trust in the Supreme is the basis for eventual establishment in Brahmacharya.

3. Who dies and who takes birth? It is the body & the Ego. You are neither of these, yet assume so. To overcome this illusion, so as as to reside in your true self, which is beyond birth and death should you practice Brahmacharya. Such a man who resides in the self is always in bliss and auspiciousness, having overcome the illusion of being the body and mind. He has overcome the need for recreational sexuality, the gateway to sorrow. The practice will give the best results in all walks of life as well.

The reason for Brahmacharya is the same as the reason for recreational sexuality. Both are indulged in for bliss, happiness & well being being one's true nature. Brahmacharya helps one realize the self, thereby leading to the greatest bliss & well being, permanent in nature, while sexuality fails in doing so.

4. The urge to revert back to Brahmacharya and not break it in future is the first benefit of the practice, however small it be. Hence strive as suggested and overcome the Ego, the cause of all trouble.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: I appreciate your response, but I would be grateful if you could be more direct.

When people have asked tough questions in previous posts, your answers sometimes tend to be very broad, but if that is all that must be said, I fully understand.

Has all my prana been lost as a result? I do feel OK, although I experienced some pain in the knees.

First important question-I have become obsessed with IQ. I go to one of the world's top schools and it bothers me heavily that some people naturally have better cognitive ability me. I can become a good businessman or scientist, but I am, for example, not smart enough to become a world-class physicist. How do I deal with this? INsecurity is not a solution!

Another very, very important question. A colleague of mine who was honest and virtuous died at the age of 21 a few days ago. His parents, notable charity givers, were shot and killed 4 years ago by a man gunman. When my faith in god builds, it is times like these that make me think there is no divine being and no sense of karma. I am truly tired and unconvinced by the idea of just past karma or past sins-Tell me, were 7 million Jewish people who were killed in the Holocaust all holders of negative karma? It cannot be.

Sincere regards,
Sandy

Answer
1. A voluntary break results in substantial loss of Prana. It is to be avoided at all costs.

2. Based on one's past karma and the will of God, different people are differently enabled. It is incorrect to compare oneself with others, as every person is unique by himself. That which is in destiny comes at the appropriate time; not more & not less. Hence the wise do not waste their resources in the pursuit of desire, but remain fixed to their Dharma, doing their duty, without attachment, content in the self.

3. Whether one accepts it or doesn't, what is.... is. HE who is directing the drama called life decides who performs which character, the screen play and the screen time. As an actor, one's purview ends at obeying the directors instructions, all the time holding on to the Atman (self).

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay, Request for answers to my following doubts.

1. Why has God made so much suffering?

2. I have practiced Brahmacharya for a few months but sometimes feel like going back to my old sex life. What will happen if I do so?

3. If someone doesn't believe in God and self-realization, will he still get liberation? What if he decides to lead a life for pleasure without any desire for these? what is his future?

Thanks for your time and efforts.

Answer
1. Who suffers? It is the body & the Ego. You, the Atman, never suffers, being beyond the illusion called suffering. To make you realize you are not the body or Ego, to make you overcome this false identity which you believe in, are they subjected to suffering. Suffering is the way to overcome belief in the unreal.

2. Whatever you do, you will come back to Brahmacharya and will eventually make it your way of life, so as to realize yourself. This is how it is ordained. The wise realize this soon and make all efforts to stay true to the path.

3. Desire for pleasure is an attempt for happiness, the objective of every person. Is there any person who attempts to be unhappy? Is there any living creature which wishes unhappiness and pain? The objective of the universe is itself well being. Every action of every being, from morning to night is only for happiness and well being. There is no other force which drives the world.

The error is in searching for this happiness outside. It is the external search which is the mistake. When one realizes this truth, he also realizes that his very nature is happiness. He realizes that it was present within, all along, so close, so within himself as his own self. That truth is itself God, that entity within, one's real self, which is always in bliss is itself God.

So it is impossible for anyone to go away from God, even if he wills so, when he himself has no other independent existence. Therefore, all beings will eventually come to realize this truth, be they believers or non-believers. Self-realization is not something new which is to be achieved. Realizing who one truly is, is itself enlightenment. It has always been there and will always be. Nothing new happens. One only overcomes the false identity and realizes his true identity, which has no identity. That itself is liberation.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaskar Dear Dhananjay,

As per sanatan dharma philosophy every individual is said to be under 4 debts from birth .

The Taittiriya Samhita (6.3.10.5) of Krishna Yajur Veda says:

जायमानो वै ब्राह्मणस्त्रिभिर् ऋणवा जायते
ब्रह्मचर्येण ऋषिभ्यो यज्ञेन देवभ्यः
प्रजया पितृभ्य एष वा अनृणो यः
पुत्री यज्वा ब्रह्मचारिवासी तत् अवदानैर् एव
अवदयते तत् अवदानानाम् अवदानत्वं

3 debts:

"A Brahmana on birth is born with a threefold debt, of knowledge or mantra (brahmacharya) to the Rishis, debit of sacrifice (yajna) to the Gods, of offspring to the Pitrus. He is freed from his debt who lived as a pupil, who performs yajna (to the Gods) and has a son (putrI); this (debt) he returns (avadayate) by these givings, and that is why the givings (avadAna) have their name."

4th: The Shatapatha Brahmana 1.7.2.1-6 also enumerates these debts and adds a fourth debt--a debt unto mankind (manushya Runa)

I can understand this concept was relevant during olden days as people believed gods shower the rains & there was the gurukul system.Also helping fellow humans from whom we have taken help in need also seems logical,but what I don't get is this pitr rin.Am I really indebted to my ancestors to produce a child(that too a male one atleast).Are lifelong celibates under these debts or does the effort at brahmacharya(person may not have become realized yet in his lifetime) overcome these debts.

We still hear stories of naisthik brahmachari Bhishma being there in put loka for not paying his pitr rin,whereas on same page we hear Hanuman as a chiranjeevi & many other siddhas & avatar's who did not beget any children.

Pls provide your understanding of this.

Answer
1. To whom do these debts concern? Who are the Gods, ancestors & others? Who are you and what is your relation with these?

You are the unborn and eternal one, who is under the delusion that the world and its characters are real, while the fact remains that the world is the Leela of the Lord, with people playing the roles of imaginary characters, as in a dream. It is a Leela, being enacted, to help the Jiva overcome its ignorance and realize itself as no different from the Supreme.

2. As long as one assumes doership with his Ego and considers himself not as the Atman but as a son, father, grandson, pupil or some other character, he has to face the karma which accrues from such an assumption. Such karma can then result in relationships of various kinds and therefore 'Rina' (debt) with these characters.

The minute one overcomes such an identification and tells himself - "All these relationships are as unreal as the world which is like a mirage of water in the desert. Due to my past karma which resulted in related debt, this body & mind find itself in a so called relationship with other Jiva-s. Who am I and who are they? When my I-ness in terms of the Ego is the effect of Maya and unreal, it follows that the I-ness of the other Jiva-s is also unreal. Therefore, I will remain fixed to the self, watching 'Rina' (debt) which is the effect of Prarabdha karma work out, for none can stop Prarabdha."

When such an attitude of self surrender to the Lord is taken up with the sole aim of self-realization, all debt that one has previously accrued with other jiva-s will work out by itself under HIS grace. One need not worry about this debt or the other. Such a worry exists in case of the man who takes up doership and takes the world, his Ego and people as real, who is rife with desire and not in case of the honest aspirant who has developed 'Vairagya' (dispassion) backed by 'Gnyana' (knowledge of the truth).

If one makes self-realization as his life objective with honest Brahmacharya and Yoga as the means to attain the above, all past debts with the concerned Jiva-s will be settled in due course as though in automaton. One need not spend energy and thought on the matter. Life situations will appear in such a way that the settlement of debt occurs precisely at the right time and in the right magnitude. That which has to come or go will come and go, as dictated by Prarabdha. The Yogi remains detached from pain or pleasure, as the case may be, realizing it is all a part of the settlement. He remains fixed to the self.

The greatest service one can render to mankind is to give another 'Atmagnyana' (knowledge of reality), to overcome the delusion called Samsara. This is possible only when one first realizes himself. One who pleases the ancestors or Gods may incur their good will (which is again in the realm of Maya and therefore unreal) but does not succeed in overcoming his own ignorance or that of the ancestors and Gods. It is only by the attainment of 'Brahmagnyana' (knowledge of the Supreme) that one free's himself from the grip of delusion for ever. He then becomes capable of rendering real help to others. Such help is the only real help. It is the real repayment of debt, for one has repaid the debt of creation itself through realization. No further debt exists as regards such a being who has served the purpose of the human birth.

Therefore, one need not have even an iota of worry as regards debt, as long as he is true to realizing the self. The debt will be settled through pain or pleasure or effort, as the case may be, under the law of karma. Whether one wants it or doesn't, that which has to go will go and that which has to come will come. Nothing more or nothing less comes or goes. The laws of karma are that precise and accurate. The real Yogi does not let pain or pleasure affect his inner state of tranquility, viewing both these as a part of the dream. He remains steady as a rock, anchored to the Supreme, whereupon all debts clear by themselves, through the mediums called the body & mind.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello, Since I practice mental brahmacharya as you say for some weeks now, which means I never go into sex thoughts, at night when I sleep with just some little clothes, I have to open the window even when the temperature outside is around 0C. I feel hot in the face, the legs, the neck, at the top of the head. Since it happens after I began mental brahmacharya I feel this is related. Is it because the body has more prana available and prana gives heat? ANd when you practice mental brahmacharya, does it become harder to continue after some weeks or months or it will remain stable and the same?

Answer
1. Increase in vital energy, further to Brahmacharya, reduces the need for external heat. This makes the aspirant not feel much cold, in an atmosphere where the common man feels so. Since there is an increase in body heat, one may not feel comfortable in excessive clothing.

2. Merging the mind into the Atman (self) is Brahmacharya. Nothing else is. The sexual aspect is incidental and not central. As long as one strives to merge the mind into the Atman (self) with the required practices, he has done his part. Stability comes in the course of time, with diligent and uninterrupted practice.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Pranam

Should a brahmachari consume aphrodiasics like shilajit, garlic, etc.

Does aphrodiasics drugs increase sex desire?
Please guide me.

Answer
1. Aphrodisiacs are for those who aim for 'Bhoga' (union with the senses) and not those wanting 'Yoga' (union with the Supreme).

2. Go through past answers regarding food to clarify on what to eat and what to avoid.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello, How can we explain siddhis? When a man merge his mind in God as in samyama (with concentration), at that time the mind absorb power from God to manifest siddhis?

For example the siddhis anima or levitation comes because during the moments when the mind is absorbed in God, the body itself receive the spiritual power from God? ANd do this siddhi happen only in Yoga?

Answer
1. Merging the mind into the Lord leads to self-realization and not Siddhi-s which are in the realm of Maya and therefore unreal. Those Siddhis- which are in destiny, can however still manifest.

Siddhi-s are the product of merging the mind into the cause responsible for their manifestation.

2. Levitation is achieved by the practice of Samyama on the 'Vayu tattva' and related 'Tanmatra', whereupon, the principle of lightness as that of air is merged into and the body rises up in space.

3. Siddhi-s can be a by-product in Yoga. They are attainable through other means as well.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I have been practicing brahmacharya for nearly six months... I an successful too since I do yoga and pranayama, only thing is, nocturnal emission occurs to me if I talk or chat with girls... Is it abnormal? Us there anything I can do to rectify it? I want to follow perfect brahmacharya... But this nocturnal emission bothers me... Does speaking to girls weakens us from brahmacharya? Please shed your wisdom on this and kindly help me... Very grateful and thank you

Answer
1. This is an indication that the activity is being carried out for, or is leading to connecting with the concerned people in a sexual perspective.

2. A beginner Brahmachari should limit contact (be it verbal, or mental) with the opposite sex to necessity and not more. Such contact should be brief and to the point. Else, Brahmacharya fails.

Abstain from such activity and persevere with honest practice. The problem will resolve by itself.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Since I practice this brahmacharya for 3 weeks or around, when I eat little I feel im full. I eat the same things al before but the quantity itself is half and little, maximum 2 meals a day with just water as liquid. Even though I still continue to eat meat but half the quantity of before. I eat at 12:00 pm and 5 p.m. If I eat as much as before I feel heavy with difficulty to breath.

So when someone practice brahmacharya he needs less food? WHat you think of the meals hours? No eating at morning and night.

Answer
The quantity of food necessary for sustenance becomes lesser as one gets established in the practice. For more details, go through past answers.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

Thanks for your advise, I have recently started doing some asanas as you recommended together with meditation at the end of pranayama. During this meditation I just try(relaxed) to focus on 3rd eye chakra and after some time I see an empty(do not know how to describe it is not "empty" per se")space there and I wonder what is this space. During this time I can see some thoughts moving here and there but I try to focus again on this empty space. So my question is what is the significance of this empty space is it some sort of energy and I am sometimes wondering whether I am this empty space itself. It gives me a very relaxed feeling and I do this only for 15 minutes after pranayama. Your kind insights will be very helpful.

Another question is when we sit in a completely dark room, and then we open and close the eyes there is no difference. and what do we perceive with opened or closed eyes at this time. Is what i see with eyes opened and closed in the dark room , same as what i see during 3rd eye meditation.

Answer
1. The third eye region is the representation of the 'Ajna Chakra', which is the gateway to connect to higher realms of consciousness and finally with one's own self, which is pure consciousness.

2. One should focus on the empty space as representing pure consciousness or the Atman (self), no different from the Lord, extending to infinity. When one first sits in meditation, the mind and the senses are still active and various thoughts crop up. One should ignore all such thoughts and focus only on the infinite, reminding oneself as being no different. When such a meditation on the infinite and pure nature of the Atman (self) is carried out for many years, all thoughts disappear and one merges into pure consciousness which is his true state, without any external awareness. That is 'Samadhi' (union with the self), the practice of which acts as a tool for self-realization.

3. You are not the empty space but the infinite Atman, from whom has come the space & in whom rests that space. The Atman is beyond space and time, for these concern the limited mind. Meditation on empty space as representing the Atman is only a method to eventually transcend space and time, so as to realize one's self which is beyond both these.

4. It is always preferable for the beginner to meditate in the dark, as the presence of light/visions becomes a distraction. One should not focus on that which is seen during meditation, whatever it be, for that which is seen is of no value. Only when one overcomes all the senses in the meditative state and overcomes the awareness "I am meditating" as well, does real meditation begin. Then, there is no mind but pure consciousness alone. Such a state is attainable only through surrender of the 'I-ness' (Ego).

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Since a failure in brahmacharya can be considered a separation of God, is it like laughing at God when restartinf? Ive read in old post to dont worry much about failures but concentrate in the future. Can this be done? For example I ask myself if after a break I restart can I have benefits again If I practice it for the same period of time. The subject of the consequence of a failure is very important.

Answer
1. Failure occurs when one succumbs to the ignorance surrounding the Atman, under the action of Maya. He who wishes to attain unbroken Brahmacharya, which is nothing but residing in the self as the self should therefore work at annulling those embedded seeds of ignorance. This is possible only through uninterrupted 'Sadhana' (practice of the required methods) and 'Vairagya' (dispassion for the world, reminding oneself of its ephemeral nature).

There is no reason to despair, as the purpose of this birth is attain to the self. Through breaks and falls, the aspirant gradually realizes the smallness of his Ego and comes to the firm belief that recreational sexuality is not the way to happiness. The realization that everything 'Anatma' (non-self) to be an illusion, gradually dawns. This knowledge then helps him turn inwards and look for his true self, which itself is endless bliss & pure consciousness. One's true nature of Godliness, without the need for anything external, eventually becomes known.

2. Can one separate himself from his very own self? There is only one self and being there is itself Brahmacharya. Trying to give up Brahmacharya, once it has been initiated by the higher power is therefore impossible. There is no other course but to restart the practice. Not doing so will only lead to more sorrow. When HE decides to put the Jiva into the practice, it is final. The Ego cannot do anything even if it stubbornly tries to walk away; the strings from above will not let it happen.

Therefore, the wise thing to do is to stop lamenting over what has happened and focus on what is to be done at the present, to get established in proper practice. If this is rightly carried out, whatever benefits destined, will come by themselves. One will regain what he lost and eventually realizes that the one who lost or gained was not the self.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhananjay.

I've been practicing Brahmacharya for over two years now. I have never seemed to be able to maintain it for more than 30 to 40 days and in recent months I have had the misfortune of failing once a week.

1. I've read all the books and I don't believe theirs a web site out there on Brahmacharya that I have not visited. But still, despite my study of the subject I fail. Adverse thoughts just come to me whether I want them to or not. Those evil impressions are very strong in me. A part of me longs for love but another part longs for God and Brahmacharya. I'm trying to choose Brahmacharya but uprooting the impressions seems a far away and distant possibility. What am I missing?? How can I further motivate myself to succeed in Brahmacharya?

2. Worship of a deity or saint is an appealing topic for me. I've read that by worship we send pranic energy to it which it in turn uses to send us it's own higher spiritual prana...Is that right? I cannot seem to decide which saint or deity to pick however...I do like the idea of Hanuman as he was noted as a perfect Brahmacharyi (Although I'm sure all the other saints and Gods are too). How might I better decide which/whom to pick? Also, can you go into some detail about the pranic energy stuff when worshipping? Would it be a big help in maintaining Brahmacharya??

3. Do you know any good techniques for dealing with anger??

Thanks!
Liam.

Answer
1. Regular & uninterrupted Sadhana (practice), coupled with Vairagya (dispassion to the world), with surrender to the Supreme is the key. Pure love is Brahmacharya and pure love is itself God. It is lust which is contrary to Brahmacharya and not love.

Till the strong, past Samskara-s (impressions) & Vasana-s (tendencies) which induce lust and sexual appetite are still strong and alive, the possibility of a break exists. You have reached a stage where some of these seeds have surfaced; hence the frequent breaks. Turn a blind eye to these downfalls and persist with proper and uninterrupted Sadhana, on a regular basis, as suggested in past answers. You will soon tide over the storm and residence in Brahmacharya will stabilize by regular Sadhana.

2. Whether the object of worship is a deity or a saint, all energy comes only from the Supreme. Deities or saints also function from the power received from the Supreme and are hence a manifestation. Hence the wise direct all their devotion to the Supreme alone, although it is allowed to worship HIM through a deity or saint. The self within oneself is no different from the Supreme, just as the self within a deity or a saint is also the Supreme.

What is worship? Letting go of one's Ego and merging one's mind into the Lord is worship.

Nothing else is. Now the Lord is both within (as the self) and also without as the infinite Supreme. The Lord is all pervading. One might worship him in any way he likes. Mere rituals or external signs of worship are of no use if one does not give up his Ego. Through worship, the Ego is displaced & one comes closer to his or her self and therefore gets better access to qualities of the Atman (self). It is then called as receiving energy from the higher power, for the sake of understanding.

Choose any form that appeals to worship, always remembering that it is not the form itself which is the object of worship, but the Lord within it as the source. Do not worry about Pranic energy. All such thoughts are a waste of time. One's focus should be on nullifying the Ego and merging with the self/Lord, following which, Prana inundates the physical and mental vehicles automatically.

3. Anger is a part of the Ego. It has no independent existence. Negate the Ego and anger will disappear by itself.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: It is suggested that a person who chooses to be a householder should start practicing Brahmacharya at 34. My wife died when I was 49. what is suggested for me.

ANSWER: 1. Brahmacharya is to be striven for right from puberty and continued in marriage. That is the best course of action. Procreational sexuality within marriage, for a child, is not contrary to Brahmacharya. As soon as one gets done with producing an offspring within marriage, all energies can be focused on Brahmacharya to realize the self.

2. Take up honest and regular Sadhana (as suggested in past answers), with the complete set of Yogic techniques, with surrender and devotion to the Lord, to realize the self. There will never be a better time.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: As I've already crossed 50 before realizing the importance of Brahmacharya, after death of my wife, is there spiritual sadhana left for me in the remaining lifetime to ralise the Self or I've to wait for next birth.

Answer
There is neither the need nor the possibility of waiting. You are already inside the gates on the road to Sadhana, which will progress as it should, by HIS grace. Simply persevere and be blessed, doing that which is expected of you.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I find many of the things you write here about celibacy very interesting, but you always assume bliss is the ultimate goal. Is there any traditionally prescribed path for those who want power?

Answer
1. Bliss is not the ultimate goal of Brahmacharya. To realize oneself is the final goal. Bliss is one of the traits of the Atman (self). As long as there is a desire for bliss, the Ego still exists, for it is the Ego who wants bliss, being separate from the self. Therefore, the one who desires bliss is still to be rooted out. Only when this is achieved, does the stainless and pure Atman who is of the nature of pure consciousness remain. The Atman does not desire any bliss, for bliss, knowledge and power are a part of it and not external to it.

2. One should not mistake bliss to be the goal. It can be used as an incentive by the beginner to motivate himself, but cannot be the final goal. To reside in the self as the self, so that not even the least desire for bliss, power or other things remain, should alone be the goal and nothing else. That alone gives the best possible, everlasting outcome.

3. Why do you want power, when you, the Atman, are yourself the greatest power of powers? It is lack of this realization which is making you search for power outside. If you realize you self, the greatest power will be at your disposal. That is the path for you.

Apply efforts only to realize the self. Nothing else matters.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir,
I have seen many people who have abstained from sex for many years (at least I think so). Yet, I see them overcome with tiredness, stress, health problems etc. My question is: is there any difference between normal celibacy and brahmacharya? I am a little confused.

My second question is: what should be my morning schedule and breakfast in order to follow brahmacharya with great effect?

Answer
1. Mere abstinence from physical sex (celibacy) or repression of sexual thoughts at the mental level is of no use. It leads to ill-health and unrest. What is required is to overcome the sex drive itself through transmutation of sexual energy into higher realms and finally realize the Atman (self), which is unlimited and infinite. One then resides in the self as the self, without identification with the non-self (comprising of the body, mind and the world). This is what is required.

2. Wake up by 4.00 A.M, freshen up & drink a large glass of water, followed by a glass of warm milk. Perform the complete set of Yogic practices as suggested earlier, with devotion and surrender to the Lord, to realize the self. Let his be followed by meditation on the Atman (self), as described in past answers.

Drink a cup of ragi or wheat malt (preparation described earlier) after getting done with the meditation. One can then have a morning bath and attend to his other responsibilities, all the time holding on to the self, as one did in meditation.

3. Eat the available breakfast, as early as possible, ensuring that it is filling and wholesome. This should suffice.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

sir,i have few questions:
1.For how many years you have been practicing brahmacharya?
2.Why and when you adopted this idea .
3.How you came to know about celibacy or brahmacharya .
4.What is the benefit of knowing myself i.e self realization.
5.what are the benefits you are getting after being celibate.
6.Have you ever seen god.How you can say that, you are answering our questions because HE is directing.You at least would have heard his voice?if not ,then i can also say that whatever question i am asking,it is His will.Then what is the difference between me and you.You are brahmachara while i'm not.Where is the difference.
7.Since my childhood i have been listening about rebirth and moksha.And i also know that the mere objective of brahmacharya (as told by yogi like you sir)is to attain moksha so that we can make ourself free from rebirth.Sir ,i am totally against this concept of moksha as it is illogical.
8.In your answers i have seen that when people asked you about its benefits,you never gave straight forward answer .suppose if i ask this"sir,if i follow brahmacharya ,will I be able to remember whatever i read?"then your answer is "you should not think of benefits,you must be devoted to Lord.
9.Also it is said"if your wishes are not fulfilled then there will be rebirth.so my wish is masterbation and if I am not fulfilling my wish than how can i attain moksha.This is contradiction.

Sorry sir ,for asking such crap and absurd question,but i hope that your answer will satisfy my curiosity.I have deep respect for you.

Answer

1. For now, it is not in divine will to proclaim the details of Sadhana which were carried out by the entity replying to this question.

2. The higher power decided to make this body & mind adopt the practice, just as it does all other things.

3. It was the same higher power, which initiated this entity to take up the practice of Brahmacharya to realize the self, just as it does with other entities. There was no other cause and no other reason. Everything is a part of IT's grand plan.

4. You assume yourself limited, as a separate individual, further to identification with the body, mind & the world. This causes constant unrest and dissatisfaction. You try to overcome this unease by applying your body and mind into the world, through the senses. A temporary satisfaction is achieved, soon to be replaced by more dissatisfaction and unrest. In the process, overall well being is gradually depleting, irreversibly. The cycle has become unending...

The reality is different. Your are unlimited. You are not the body or the Ego. Your true nature is that of infinity. You cannot be contained. It is this reason, which is the cause behind the unrest. That which is infinite and all pervading, whose very nature is freedom and boundlessness, which has no limitations, which is ever free, full of bliss, has become imprisoned within this body and mind. It is thinking itself to be the body and the Ego and is therefore constantly under pain.

To overcome this state of illusion, to overcome this wrong assumption, so you can be infinite and unlimited, ever free, ever happy, without any need, should you realize who you truly are. That is the only purpose of your existence, to realize your self.

5. The one who wanted this and that is gone; there is no one to receive benefit or reject loss...

6. Who see's? See where? Who is to answer? What sound from where there is only silence? Yes, this question is also HIS will, as is this answer.

There is no difference between you and me; the difference is an illusion concerning that which assumes the YOU and ME as being separate.

7. Who has been hearing about rebirth or Moksha? Who has this or some other objective? Who is it that is against Moksha? Who finds these things illogical? Find out the correct answer to this question.

8. The father tells the little child - "Fire burns". Can the father make the child realize the meaning of burning? It is not possible. That, the child realizes when it burns it's finger on a flame. That is when it realizes the real meaning of the burning sensation. Till then, the word 'Burning' is only another word to the child.

It is the same as regards all other things. Explanation only leads to knowledge. Explanation does not lead to realization. That, one has to realize by oneself, through direct experience. Matters concerning Brahmacharya or self-realization are no different. One can only educate others on the path to be followed and the means to be adopted. Nothing more can be done or should be done, if one wishes the other's welfare; if one wishes the other to 'Realize' things. That is attained only through direct experience.

Absorb the essence, meditate on it & apply the gained knowledge in real practice. The answers will become known by themselves. This is the correct approach. The aim here is to negate the one who has doubts, when he is knowledge himself. If all answers are provided by spoon feeding, when will the one being spoon fed disappear?

9. Who wants to masturbate? Find out the correct answer and then kill that entity. If properly found out, it will be known that the entity desiring masturbation is not the real 'You' but a superimposition, an assumption. 'Moksha' (liberation) is then automatic.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
hello
I have been trying to keep my vow of brahmacharya for more than 1 year.I have had slips.Now my 12th board exam is approaching.There is a great pressure on me to perform to the expectation

so is it a right time to fight lust or should I resume my efforts after my exams.
for 10 days I have been keeping my vow however i do not feel that much love towards god as i used to have immediately after a break.
so how to improve my devotion?

Answer
1. If your efforts on your academic study are honest and sincere, there will be no time to lust. Where is the time for such activity or thought to the one who is committed to his study, with exams fast approaching?

2. Being honest in one's Dharma, with complete commitment, is itself devotion, when performed as a serivice to God. So focus on your studies completely. If your focus is genuine, you will not have the mind for any other thought and Brahmacharya occurs on its own.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello, in Hinduism and Tantric Buddhism, what is the real meaning of the wrathful deities and heroes which have blue and red skins?

Answer
The Supreme manifests itself in wrathful forms, to dissuade the Ego from furthering evil and to remind it of the pain and sorrow which follow wrong actions. In other words, these deities are the protectors of Dharma (righteousness), acting as guardrails against slippage of the aspirant into the wrong path. They can be worshiped to help overcome the Ego. A mental image of these deities can be used, to overcome and negate evil thoughts. They are the guardians of Dharma, working under the directions of the Lord.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

Six months ago, I left my job due to exhaustion. It was the second time I had left the same company for the same reason. Following an incredible succession of events, I am back at this job once again. It is a good job and I feel much differently about it this time. I feel much more confident and less stressed about doing the job. There are still challenges, but I feel these can be faced and handled. I feel a sense of recognition from others for my work and who I am as a person. All of these changes, including better diet and sleep, I credit to brahmacharya. It is really unbelievable and I thank you once again for your support.

Today I was walking to a meeting which had me somewhat nervous. I realized my role was to rest in the self and accept whatever happened as God's will. It occurred to me that surrendering to the moment, even when I was afraid, was in a sense 'practice' for ultimately surrendering my ego to the infinite and throwing myself, though perhaps terrified, to the mercy of God.

Thank-you,

Ron D.

Answer
1. When the vehicle you are travelling in is carrying you, as well as your luggage, do you strain yourself by keeping the luggage on your shoulders? You keep the luggage somewhere in the vehicle, forget all about it, relax and enjoy the journey. Carrying one's luggage on his shoulders, while seated in the vehicle is not necessary.

2. In the same way, HE is carrying you, making your mind and body do that which is necessary for your evolution, in the journey to the land beyond sorrow. Why should you worry, fight or strain yourself with the circumstances you encounter on the way when taking you to the destination is HIS responsibility? Simply relax on HIS able shoulders by putting all your weight and worries on HIM. HE takes as much weight and responsibility as one transfers.

Therefore, the wise transfer all their responsibilities to HIM, become free of all expectations or worry, and watch as mere witnesses, the unfolding drama called life, all the time holding onto HIM tight, engulfed in HIS thought. Being the all powerful, all knowing, Supreme Lord of Lord's, the great primal being without a second, HE takes care of everything, treating those who surrender to HIM as a loving father treats his little children, with sureness and affection.

All that is required is to do that which is expected in the line of one's duty, to the extent possible at the given moment, without expectation, and relax. The rest, HE takes care...

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Do you think hand seals or mudra like chin mudra have a beneficial effect on meditation? ANd can we sleep all night with locked hand seals like the chin mudra?

Answer
1. The purpose of the Mudra-s is to help focus energy upwards, so as to eventually help overcome body & mind consciousness. All procedures in the science of Yoga are only to reach the state of meditation, culminating in Samadhi, which is nothing but merging the mind into the Atman (self).

2. No. In deep sleep, there is no body, no mind and no world. Where then is the question of a Mudra? Letting go of everything concerning these alone leads to sound sleep.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: I was always asking myself if for a brahmachari there is other means to have a child without the normal mean (sexual coitus) of physical beings. SInce a perfect brahmachari does not produce semen, can he still have a child by a "supernatural" mean? If we look the birth of Jesus, Mary was made pregnant by the "Holy Spirit". Is there other means of reproduction for higher beings?

ANSWER: 1. The higher power generally ensures that producing offspring (if so destined) is got done with before reaching the state of an 'Urdhvareta' (following which semen production stops)

2. Everything is possible when the higher power wills and only if HE wills. Conception without physical union is also hence possible.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: But for sure, for many historians and intellectuals today the existence of savior and heroes are mere legends and mythical narratives because of some unexplained things and lack of proofs. Can we explain them too as symbols, as the philosopher Jung say, the struggle one face in our own life and the world?

In that sense, Krishna, Christ, Hercules would have been equivalent to our modern day superheros in movies and games. Mere mythical heroes created to explain life in a warlike iron era where the explaination of birth and conception were unknown, the necessity of giving autorithy to kings and where the conditions of life were harsh and cruel for most people. Later on during late Antiquity, people invented philosophy to explain the world without reference to myths, later on science came to try to explain the world without reference to philosophy but with observation and proofs.

Answer
There is no need to prove anything. Depending on their evolutionary level, people accept or reject things, to their individual levels of perception. The only thing required is to find out as to whom the world appears and who experiences life and overcome that superimposition.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Dear Dhananjay Ji,
After reading books and material on the subject matter of the self, by the grace of the lord, I am beginning to experience glimpses of a separate awareness with has the ability to view my physical self, objectively. Naturally I would like to strengthen the presence of this awareness within my own psyche through meditation. My question is what would be the contents or the method of meditation to strengthen this awareness. Also, my mind is beginning to feel 'empty'. Almost as if my vichara sakti and intellect power is beginning to disappear and diminish. Is this supposed to happen when one is merging with the self? I dont tell anyone about these things, is that supposed to include not telling even gyani purushs like yourself? Your divine guidance is very much appreciated. Much love and well wishes to you. Thank you ANSWER: 1. What is required is constant and unbroken Sadhana, which eventually leads to deep meditation and thereby residence in the self (Samadhi).

2. The seed of meditation to realize the self is the infinite (pure consciousness). The method to achieve this is to first start meditation on the endless, infinite, empty space devoid of all objects, thoughts or forms, thinking one's self as no different from it.

The aspirant sits in Padmasana or Sidhasana, closes his eyes and focus at the 'Thrikuti (region between the eyebrows). He then sits steady, relating with the resulting dark, empty space as the infinite and endless self, no different from the Lord. By the strength of his past Samskara-s and Vasana-s, various thoughts surface when he sits to meditate and even while in the process. All these thoughts are to be displaced and ignored, for they are all impediments to meditation. Succumbing to such thoughts results in failure.

Through years of such practice backed by strict adherence to all the 8-Anga-s of Yoga, the mind gradually becomes empty of all thoughts, yet is fully aware of itself in the ocean of consciousness. Then starts 'Savikalpa Samadhi' which leads to Siddhi-s (which are another distraction)

After spending many years in the regions of Savikalpa Samadhi and finally realizing the illusive & false nature of the Siddhi-s and therefore that of the Ego, the aspirant finally realizes the Ego to be his greatest enemy in the quest to the self. That the Ego, world and the mind are one and the same, being reflections of each other, is eventually realized. This leads to extreme dispassion for the world and its objects.

There is a sudden drop in the intensity of the Ego, which is now perceived as being false and unreal. Its nature of superimposition becomes clear. This eventually leads to withdrawal of the mind into the self, where even the awareness "I am meditating" is lost and pure consciousness alone remains, with all the senses going dead. That is 'Nirvikalpa Samadhi', the entrance to which opens the possibility into residence in the self.

3. Various states of the mind and non-mind are experienced during the initial stages of practice. These appear and disappear, making the aspirant feel as though the goal is reached, while the reality is different. One should ignore all these and tenaciously persevere till he is free from the opposites both inside and outside the state of meditation; till the mind is irreversibly merged in the self for eternity. Then alone does one reside in the self, as the self, where there is no in or out, no subject or object and no 'I' or 'others'.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: What is the difference between dharana meditation and dhyana meditation? Also I have read that no amount of reasoning or intellectual inquiry can lead one to the self. The self only comes through direct experience. How is one introduced to an experience of the self? Purely by ones effort and the grace of god? If yes, what is defined as "effort"? If you could explain the process by which one through effort leads to the self?

Answer
1. Dharana refers to concentration meditation within the purview of a field.

2. Dhyana refers to unwavering contemplation on the seed of meditation.

3. Reasoning comes under the realm of the Ego and not the self, for the self is all knowing and hence does not reason. Therefore, it is not possible to know the self through reasoning. The self is to be known by itself.

4. When the one trying to know the self disappears after the required Sadhana, the self knows itself by it's (HIS) grace.

5. Effort refers to activity carried out by the Ego to know the self, though it is the self alone, by whose energy the Ego functions, having no independent existence of its own. By such effort, the Ego ultimately gets dissolved, and the self, which is of the nature of pure consciousness remains.

6. The self is not realized through effort but by itself. Effort is however required, as long as the one applying it (Ego) is alive.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: 1)How important is physical-exertion/exercise to the maintenance of Brahmacharya?

God has been kind to me and doesn't let mind wander into sexuality even in the company of women (seem to have a maternal affection to my female friends).

However, recently I have had troubles: very brief wet-dreams.

2) After years of vegetarianism and living alone in a small-room in a cold western country, have not been able to look after myself properly- hence started consuming fish alone as medicine(not that I like the taste) 2/3 times a week. I do not eat onions or garlic and was hoping that fish fillets wouldn't do much harm as Manu Smruti categorises it as Rajasic and there are far worse vegetables. But on the whole, it was just persuasion from friends that led me to it and the fact that I must be able to perform well mentally in order to earn a living and look after my family, but I'm still quite unhappy with the decision (it's only been a month) - What is your suggestion?

I'm 22 ; had led a very disastrous teenage life of masturbation although have only had intercourse with one woman ever whom I was in love with and still continue to be good friends. I have been a pure-vegetarian since 13 but recently gave up and has been celibate since my 21st birthday. I do not practice any physical yoga, do walk a lot every day and am in good shape except a slightly potty belly(which is supposed to be a sign of Ishwarya!) My communion with the self us quite strong but feel slightly cut off after giving up vegetarianism.

Also there seems to be rewards placed as I progress in my brahmacharya- are they mere distractions or godly gifts? I refer to women being increasingly attracted to me, social-connections and wonderful material opportunities coming my way.

Should I worry too much about it? Or just leave it to divine- will. Thank you- I would really appreciate your advice. Om Tat Sat!

ANSWER: 1. It is preferable to be vegetarian during the initial years of Brahmacharya, to realize the self. The kind of food does not matter much to the advanced aspirant close to Enlightenment, as his base Samskara-s have mostly been negated, and limited food, be it of any kind, for sustenance does not cause havoc. However, the same cannot be said of the beginner, whose past Samskara-s and Vasana-s are very much alive.

Remain silent and eat the food which the inner voice suggests.

2. The frequent wet dreams are the sign of lack of proper transmutation. Walking or physical exercise comes in the realm of the body. It cannot work at the mental and causal levels. For that, proper Sadhana is required. Yoga Sadhana is therefore important for sustained progress. Go through all the past answers and apply the said methods in totem.

3. Ignore all the rewards, all the attention and all of the superiority which the Ego goes through on account of these. These are all distractions, which become serious impediments, if taken seriously. That which has to come comes... and that which has to go goes... The wise Yogi stays indifferent to both attention & rejection, profit & loss, happiness & sorrow, keeping in mind their illusory, ephemeral and unreal nature.

It is the self alone which is real and till one resides in the self, as the self, irreversibly, one should not rest and should not get distracted.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Om Tat Sat!

To clarify: Initially, there were slight nocturnal emissions or emissions during the day after passing the urine that seemed like very thin liquid(Cowper's fluid perhaps as mentioned by Swami Sivananda) But the wet dreams as I said in the question before, started occurring after 6 months or so; very brief- perhaps one every month where I do see something explicit for spur of a moment and know what's happening) More vigorous sadhana is the only solution, I believe, you would say.

Further help needed:

1) Sleep: Have experienced greater tiredness/need to rest after taking up Brahmacharya. Does this mean Prana is being lost someway? I do not seem to go into the dream state at all(perhaps I am not recollecting it at all) but is the deep sleep/ sushi pit state as good as knowingly residing in Brahman as Brahman(what I referred to as Communion in my previous question)

2) Is it possible to succeed materially as well if one takes up Brahmacharya? Im really vexed when I think that most of that which is required for Brahmacharya calms one down and does not promote anything materilistic that brings monetary success in today's world. Not that this is my final goal but one that I must fulfil as a duty to parents. Moroever, I feel I could use my abilities better in these fields quite well and may not be quite ready for solittude. If I had my way, I would take up a solitary life of reflection as soon as possible.

4)Could you please suggest a time-table including a diet plan? How many times should one eat? (At the moment I have a fruit and sprouts breakfast and eat only after 12 AM and about 2 meals until 8pm and fast until fruits in the morning. I find it hard to wake up very early in the winter but once upon a time, did manage to do that and practice. Yoga-asanas and pranayama every morning in India with a teacher! Here my room is tiny and can barely stretch myself. The only option is running or brisk walking to exercise the body and keep my head fit for studying a professional subject and succeeding there.

I believe the wet dreams are more due to physical causes, irregular food or even perhaps occassional overeating and the like rather than mental emotions as I don't really have any worth mentioning during the waking state.

I'm so sorry to keep asking these questions; but I really do feel that I must open up to god who has come to me via Allexperts!

Answer

1. Lack of proper transmutation results in stagnation of energy at the lower regions, which then turns into inertia, heaviness and slumber. Correct transmutation will solve the issue. Hence the need for adequate Sadhana, as suggested earlier.

In 'Nidra' (deep sleep), individual consciousness is neither aware of itself, nor of the body/Ego/world. It is a state bereft of identification with these three and also bereft of identification with itself, under the cloak of 'Tamas' (darkness/inertia). Therefore, Sushupti or deep sleep does not confer knowledge of the self. Residence in the self is complete knowledge, awareness, bliss and pure being, which is contrary to deep sleep.

The bliss obtained in sleep is hence of a much inferior nature, stemming from the lack of consciousness of the body/Ego/world alone. The Jiva in sleep is in a state of inertia, completely unaware of itself as pure consciousness, while residence in the self is complete awareness of one's true nature of knowledge-bliss-pure being. There is hence no communion, for any state bereft of knowledge of the Atman is not communion.

2. That which is destined to come or go will come and go to the extent dictated by Prarabdha, at the right time and not before. Neither more, nor less comes or goes; neither before, nor later. The practice of Brahmacharya with surrender to the Lord gives the best chance for success, whatever be the concerned field. Knowing it to be such, let go of such useless worries concerning the Ego and do your Dharma without expectation.

3. Detailed answers as regards food & lifestyle are available in past answers.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Hello Sir,
This is the first time I have crossed 100 days of Bramhacharya. I thank your valuable guidance for this. However, I have become very thin because of change in diet. I have left onion, garlic and sugar.
Recently i went to a family marriage and everybody was asking why i became so thin.

I have no problem with my body posture but got fed up with everybody questioning this. Even in my office, people are asking If I'm all right or suffering from any disease.

Please suggest. Waiting for your answer.

ANSWER: 1. Small quantities of sugar in the diet does not pose a problem, neither does giving up onion or garlic lead to weight loss.

2. The body can take time to adjust to a change in diet & lifestyle. As long as adequate and nutritious food, as suggested in past answers is eaten in a timely manner, there is no cause for worry. Continue with the Yogic lifestyle and Brahmacharya.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Hello Sir,

The question may sound silly and I think I know the answer but still wanted to ask. Can I take multivitamins i.e Becosules else I feel weak and lack energy? My family is insisting for this.

Answer
1. Constant use of external supplements is not advisable. If necessary, it should be temporary.

2. The correct way is to lead a life of Yoga & Brahmacharya with moderate and nutritious food. That suffices.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I would like to know for sure if I practice total brahmacharya unbrokenly, the sexual semen awake kundalini?

And in other books Ive read the sexual energy (which permit for the possibility of having sexual desires and thoughts) is itself a form of energy the kundalini can take in the physical plane, but not the pure kundalini which helps in spiritual advandcement. So then if I understand correctly when I dont cooperate with sexual desires when they appear, the kundalini remain pure and closer to the self. What is kundalini in your own words, and is kundalini the prana energy that link the spirit to the body?

Answer
The grace of the Lord is itself Kundalini and nothing else. When this grace manifests, energy which was restricted within the lower regions (in sexual or other gross forms), moves higher, leading to movement of consciousness closer to the self. This phenomenon is symbolically represented as Kundalini awakening.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Dear Dhananjay,

Because of the study groups I have formed, I am forced to interact with worldly people and people who do not even attempt to practice brahmacharaya, and other rank materialists. I try to avoid their company as much as possible, but in certain situations I am forced to interact. I would like to avoid the evil vibrations that they send out and protect my sattvic bhava, and my desire for liberation. Please tell me how I can do so when around them.

Thank You.

ANSWER: 1. This occurs when one's Ego and the world are taken to be real. Who is evil and who is getting affected by the evil? It is the Ego in both cases, for the Atman (self) is ever untainted and unaffected. When one lets go of the 'Aham' (I-ness) which is being affected, the world does not pose any problem.

2. As long as one's Prarabdha (karma that dictates the events of this birth) remains, one will have to complete some obligation or the other as regards the world and its people. One can neither sidestep his responsibilities, nor is doing so beneficial. Every person has to be true to his Dharma and abide by the path shown by destiny.

3. It is neither realistic nor correct to expect others to know or practice Brahmacharya, for every Jiva is in its own state of evolution. To be in the midst of the world and yet maintain Brahmacharya in thought, word and deed is what is required. This is possible when the world is realized to be a drama, with people as the actors playing a role; and one remembers himself also as an actor playing a character, without taking the character to be real.

Just as an actor does not get affected by the part he plays or by the events occurring in the drama in terms of reality, the aspirant takes the world lightly and plays as an actor, always keeping his mind fixed on the reality. When the same is practiced with a life of honest Sadhana for many years, one becomes insulated from worldly vibrations and stays in the light of the Atman (self). Such a Yogi lives in the realm of reality (pure consciousness), whatever be his external activity; be the place a forest, the office or some other.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Hi Sir,

I hope this message finds you well. It's been more than a year since I've asked the above question, but the following contradiction appears in my mind when I attempt to apply the principles you've stated:

In one portion of this forum, you have instructed aspirants to stay "aloof" and "minimize interaction," while in the above advice, you've instructed one to play his "role." If this role means being social, and interacting with many for the sake of properly fulfilling one's work duties (such as a job), should the aspirant disregard the advice to stay aloof and rather feel completely free and unhesitant to interact with many? I find this also strange to follow because Swami Sivananda has expressly stated that an aspirant should never mix with "worldlings" and should never be intimate with anyone, yet if one's role requires one to mix and become intimate with people and work colleagues, which guidance should the aspirant follow?

If the aspirant must shave his beard, groom his hair, and apply certain natural moisturizers to his skin to play the requirements of his role, even though these behaviors are restricted by yogic law for yogis, should the aspirant do so?

If one's role requires one to make many friends, and perhaps even be around these friends when they "drink" or do something sensual, can one become intimate with them?

I know an advanced aspirant (as described above) is not affected by these different worldly vibrations, but as a beginner aspirant who may be easily affected yet is forced by god's circumstances to violate yogic advice for the sake of his "role" in society, what should I do?

Answer
1. Aloof internally, always detached, yet interacting and behaving social externally. One should groom himself to the extent required by his occupation, yet be indifferent to appearance internally.

2. One follows the same with friends, limiting interaction as per necessity.

3. Do your Sadhana and leave the rest to HIM.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay Prabhu,

1) Does the brahma muhurtha start at 3 globally and if not can 3 be considered an auspicious time?

2) Swami Shivaananda advises against vegetables? Are salad vegetables like cabbage, capsicum, cucumber, carrots (low quantity), lettuce etc. beneficial?

3) Sometimes sleeping late is unavoidable. The next day sleep deprivation is a problem. It becomes difficult to pay the sleep debt. What can be done?

4) Is sleeping in the afternoon from 12 to 3 possible (allowed)?

5) Conversation and work (more the former) seems to lower consciousness. What can be done?

6) The ego surfaces during intellectual and verbal and other types of achievement. What can be done?

Answer
1. Yes

2. There is nothing against the consumption of vegetables. All the above said can be eaten.

3. An occasional reduction in sleep does not pose much of a problem. The same should however not be made into a habit. Retiring to bed early and waking up early is the best policy, whatever be the nature of work. Try to wake up at the same time and make up for the sleep, in the later part of the day, if possible.

4. Avoid much sleep in the day and keep it short, if there has been a deficit at night.

5. To the best possible extent, maintain silence, with a smile, in the thought of the Lord and do your Dharma sincerely. Then work does not cause any problem. The silent, pleasant and calm man is always the most efficient worker. His work is impressive and thorough. Silence is the language of the Atman.

6. By whose power has the Ego achieved? It is by borrowing energy from the Atman (self), for the Ego has no power of its own; just as the Moon has no light of its own, but shines only by virtue of the light coming from the Sun. Remind the Ego of this reality, following which it automatically vanishes.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

I have been practicing Brahmacarya, with many failings and restarting, for the past few years. within the last year and a half I have solidified the habit of limiting my ocial interaction with women, especially in private places. I have mostly eliminated the desire for company, but lust remains. Masturbation is my weak point.

I read that physical exercise is key to move energies into a different channel, but I also saw you recommend against body building. Why is this? I lift weights and I wonder if you mean body building for aesthetics, or any form of training for greater strength? I want to serve in the military and weight training is part of that, so Id like to know what about body buiding makes it unfit for part of brahmacarya.

Answer
1. There is no harm in natural body building, when done in moderation from the viewpoint of Brahmacharya. To be avoided are excessive and extreme workouts which tire the body to the extent where one does not have the mind or energy left for spiritual Sadhana, as it is not possible to maintain Brahmacharya through physical exercise alone.

2. Body building will naturally reduce in intensity after one reaches advanced stages of Brahmacharya in the quest for the self. Till then, one can take it up as an exercise for health & well being.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear sir,

I have been doing pranayama+ (others), for the past couple of weeks. I have been trying not to miss doing pranayama in the morning (wake up at 5:am) even if i had to sleep late. However, sometimes due to nature of my work, i have to travel in flight (4 to 5 hrs) and my arrival time would be around 2-3 am in the morning. In such cases i am wondering whether i can skip doing pranayama for 1 day or should i forcibly wake myself up in the morning and do. Frankly speaking i can push myself up and wake up in the morning, but i just wanted to know what is the better option for my overall well being and yogic point of view (i travel around 2-3 times in a month)
Thanks

Answer
If your feel fresh and capable of performing the Yogic practices after reaching home, you may do so, early in the morning. Else, rest for a while and perform the Yogic kriya-s at any one of the next four 'Sandhi Kala-s' (Before Sunrise, 12.00 Noon, just before Sunset, 12.00 midnight). One may however perform meditation at any time, with devotion to the Lord, to realize the self. The true aspirant always holds on to the self, with devotion to the Lord, playing his part cheerfully in the drama called life.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

The energy or inner fire that pass trhough the nadis pass through obstructed channels and when it encounters toxins or obstacles it removes them out of the body to recover health according to eastern medicine.
I was wondering if brahmacharya along with pranayama and meditaton on the self are sufficient to purify the nadis channels of the body? And sometimes it could happen that an advandced practionner of meditation or even someone who take much medicaments during life, after death, the body could remain incorrupt or not prone to decay for long time, is this related to purification of nadis by medicaments and the spiritual practices?

Answer
1. Following all the eight Anga-s (limbs) of Yoga is the best method for purification of the physical and astral mediums (of which the Nadi-s form a part). There is no better method.

2. Taking external medications is not connected with practices such as Pranayama and meditation, which work from within and are hence more thorough. The true Yogi neither needs, nor gets the mind for external medications.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir, I am 20 year old and I want to practice celibacy because I have sagged skin. so, I want to know till what time I have to practice celibacy to become like I was in my teen and also I want to know that if I will practice brahmcharya will it affect my sexual life later or will it decrease my semen or sexual hormone or sexual interest ? I just want to regain my youthfulness but I don't want to ruin my sexual life for that after my marriage.. Please guide me that for how much minimum time I have to practice brahmcharya to get desired results. Thanks

Answer
1. A few years of unbroken practice, with proper transmutation will improve things.

2. All systems including the sexual system shine with health and well being further to proper Brahmacharya. Hence there is no need to worry as regards married life.

Do not worry about the results. Practice honestly, with surrender and trust in God. That which has to come will come.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
My diet consists mainly of fruits, vegetables, and milk. I hardly eat meat. My fruits, vegetables, and milk are all mainly inorganic. I have read articles, even ones claiming to be backed by Ayurveda that argue modern day fruits and vegetables are sprayed by a lot of pesticides and are grown unhealthily for the earth and for people to consume. They argue that if this is your main diet, then you will have hormone imbalances, deficiencies of sorts, etc. Can you give me any counsel on my diet? I currently live in the United States and get most of my food from Walmart and Ingles.

Answer
1. One has to sustain by making the best use of available food . It is impractical to go searching for that which may not be easily available, or is beyond one's reach.

2. Include grains such as wheat or corn, or their by products in the diet and take to a balanced diet which serves the nutritional requirements of the body. To the extent possible, avoid processed food.

Go through past answers as regards planning a Yogic diet.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I know brahmacvharya is very very important to the body, the mind and the spirit. But at the same time why some world sages didnt appear to have practiced it? In the story of Krishna we can read he had sexual relation with hundreds gopis or servants even if he was considered a enlightened one. This is just one case. Then offcourse we can find other such examples in stories of past sages or the great religious founders. Moses had a wife before "seeing God". Offcourse in modern world the majority were practicing brahmacharya but not always in the past.

So I know its important now but why some practioner did not perfect it as some who take the vow of being a monk and going to monasteries or living in remote areas (Himalaya or some desert area) to prevent such sexual contact with the opposite gender?

And do you think Jesus was a brahmachari or monk since childhood? There is no known thing.

Thanks

Answer
1. The union between Lord Krishna and the Gopi-s was beyond the body and the mind. It was 'Urdhva Sangama' (communion with the Lord). The Gopi-s let go of their Ego and merged their minds into the Lord, resulting in perfect communion with the Supreme consciousness, as in 'Nirvikalpa Samadhi'. It was not the lower sexual union (Adha Sangama) involving the body. Hence there was no sexual relationship, though it may appear otherwise.

2. After Enlightenment, there is no possibility of the lower sexual union as the one who did so no longer exists.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Respected Sir,
I have been trying to practice the life as described by you with pashimothanasana and dhanurasana , with bandha , pranayama and meditation. I am an engineering student.

1) During the times of exams and when they are close by , what is to be given preference regular sadhana in early morning or studying for exams with only little of meditation. Also every morning and at night I read some spiritual texts like bhagavad gita and gospel of Sri Ramakrishna. Dharma though is done for the rest of the day with little rest of 5 -10 minutes in between study hours. If I continue sadhana or I only study with little time for meditation, my work would still not be complete. How does one decide the limit of work in such cases when work is indefinite. Even after efforts from my side the results have not been very good. What should be my attitude towards this question if pressure comes from parents to not use too much time for activites other than studies.

2) In morning time a lot of time (1 hr 20 min) goes in getting ready by taking bath and other chores, after waking at 4 am. How can this time be reduced and what should be the state of mind in these activities. Also I encounter sometimes insects and mosquitoes in bathroom where they may die if I take my bath or wash my hands , what should my attitude be.

Answer
1. Are Sadhana and work different? This doubt has risen because you consider your 'Dharma' (worldly duty) and 'Sadhana' (efforts to realize the self) as separate. This is the wrong assumption to be got rid of. Your Dharma and Sadhana are one and the same. When you perform your Dharma honestly, as a service to God, there is automatic and perfect Brahmacharya which will eventually take you to the self. Similarly, when you perform honest Sadhana, also as a service to God, by letting go of your Ego, you smile in calm and peace and Brahmacharya again becomes automatic.

What is Sadhana? It is not merely performing some Yogic practices, waking up at 4.00 or following the tenets of Brahmacharya. Sadhana also includes doing justice to the role given to you as an actor by the director called God, without expectation & with complete surrender. Does an actor performing the role of say a warrior in the drama think about his home and family during his act? He forgets everything else for the period of the play and really behaves as a warrior, performing what is expected of him, in line with the script. As soon as the play is over, he comes 'out' of his character and becomes himself, unconnected with the character of the warrior.

You are now the actor, playing the role of a student, in the drama called life, with God as the director. You will think of nothing but the subject of study on hand, absorb its essence completely, become one with it (as the actor did while playing warrior) and perform perfectly in the exams. Just as the man who played the warrior was the same before and after the drama (but only behaved as a warrior in the play), you (the Atman) remain the same, whether the role displayed, is that of a student, a friend, an employee, a husband, a father or somebody else.

If this truth is realized, there is never any problem or confusion, whatever be one's role in the drama called life. Even when the roles change, there will not be any problem, just as a drama actor never gets affected in reality, whether the role he plays is that of a king or a beggar. One is always in Sadhana, holding on to the self, in the thought of the Lord, whatever be the nature of external work.

When it is time to study for the exams, immerse yourself in the related study completely, forgetting everything else, playing your role of a 'student' like a hero. Know your study to be a service to God and think of HIM whenever time permits. That itself is Sadhana, for it is the director (God) who has given you the role of 'student', and your duty is to please the director as a perfect student. Nothing more is required. Once the exams are over, you are 'out' of the character and revert to the regular Sadhana (Yogic practices) to realize the self. The same thing continues when you graduate and take up a job. You immerse yourself in work completely, playing the role of an 'employee' during work hours and come 'out' of the role whenever time permits or when the work day ends, back into the thought of the Lord.

2. To the extent possible, one should not intentionally hurt or injure any other living being. However, as long as this body exists, some being or the other gets knowingly or unknowingly hurt or injured. As long as the physical body is being fed with food, water and air, a few million beings are getting hurt, injured or losing their bodies in the process. This is completely unpreventable. The only way one can completely prevent this is by realizing one's self and not taking rebirth in the physical world. Till then, one should strive the best to avoid conflict with another being, to the extent within one's capacity and develop a sense of love, friendliness & respect for all other fellow beings. Such an attitude of looking at all beings as not different from one's own self takes care of everything.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
My dear brother Dhananjay thank you very much for your valuable service.You learn me many things,once again i have question....

During my deep meditation i feel sudden sexual attack for 1\2 or for 1 minute whiteout any sexual thought or image, i really do not understand it because during meditation we try to union with God so why this feeling??? if possible explain in detail....

Thank you

Answer
1. Till the old Samakara-s (impressions) & Vasana-s (tendencies) stored in the 'Karana Sharira' (causal body), blocking Enlightenment are not fully eradicated, they can surface at any point of time, including during meditation. This is because the Karana Sharira covers the Atman (self), as Maya, and has to be pierced while attempting meditation.

2. Ignore such incidents and focus only on God/Atman. Perseverance and surrender to God are the methods to sustain meditation.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
In my little experience I experimented that practicing meditation with hand seals (mudra) helps one to think less, in other words the mind becomes still for longer time and easier. ANd at bed for example when I lye down on my side before sleep I relax and maintain this mudra for let say an hour or two in a relaxed posture. In your opinion can you practice mudra when possible, even if one is not meditating as during sleep, watching movies or bus? The effect of a mudra is to rechannel the energy of the body inside so I thought that this can be practiced always. Thanks

Answer
1. It is enough if one goes to bed in the thought of the Lord. No mudra is required during sleep, as energy is harmonized into a state of equilibrium in sound sleep, all by itself.

2. The thumb represents the Supreme, the index finger represents the individual soul, the middle, ring and little fingers represent the causal, astral and physical bodies.

In 'Chin Mudra' used for meditation, the tip of the index finger is joined at the first phalange of the thumb so as to represent the merger of the Atman with the Paramatman (lord), with which, it is always integral, yet perceived as separate due to Maya. The other three fingers are pointed downwards, representing surrender, dispassion, and abandonment of the three bodies which one is not. The Chin Mudra, thus, represents communion with the Almighty, forsaking the Ego and the world. It is conducive to meditation.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Sir, Do having much sexual desires brings loss of energy in a subtle level even if no ejaculation of seed take place? Can you see benefits after some weeks of practice?

Answer
1. There is only one kind of Brahmacharya. It occurs when one merges his mind into the Atman (self) in thought, word and deed. Anything else is not Brahmacharya.

2. Sexual desires are to be overcome by gaining 'Gnyana' (knowledge of the truth) & by transmuting energy into higher domains, so as to realize the self. If the same is not carried out, the energy eventually gets lost (first mentally & later physically) through some means or the other. Therefore, Brahmacharya is to be practiced in thought, word and deed.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: how buddhist people get nirvana without surrendering to God?
they do not believe in god and i think to get moksha we must surrender to God

ANSWER: 1. Whether you call water as water or call it by some other name; whether it is a blind man drinking it or one with sight, does water not quench the thirst of all those who are thirsty? Who says God exists or does not exist? It is the perceiver, namely the Ego.

2. Just as there are different roads that lead to the same city, there are different paths to realize the truth. Belief in the Supreme Almighty is not necessary for all the paths. Even if one doesn't believe in God, one has to believe in himself, for no one can deny his own existence. If such an Atheist was to put honest efforts in knowing who he is, he too arrives at the truth, for one's self is itself the truth.

When the Ego is completely annulled through 'Gnyana' (realization of the truth), that which remains is pure consciousness. Whether one calls it God, Atman, or something else, or does not call it by any name is of no consequence. That which is... is. It is always in Nirvana, always unaffected and always in 'Moksha'(liberation).

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: thank you so much for your answer...
i also believe that i am not body ... some people say that these genes are responsible for this & that so some people get angry easily .... these hormones are responsible for that so that Mr. X do this and that etc. .... so if my body is controlled by these chemicals and structure of genes or dna then i don't think that i must be responsible for any thing.... according to that theory every thing is pre-planned ... if this is pre planned then we can make a system to know past and future by taking every vibration, no. of atoms etc. of universe at but then i again think that at the the time of big bang these things were planned and i get an answer from myself that .... "NO these buildings ,roads cant be planned at the time of big bang" so i think that i am not body because i can take my decisions .....

and i also believe that god exist... because whenever i asked form god that if you exist then show me a path so that i can find you... and he showed me that path...and once i wished something and he gave me instantly which was impossible ... so i believe in god also....

but i asked question about believing in god because yama and niyama says us to believing in god.... if we are not good in following one of yama and niyama can we find god or that bliss?

Answer
'Ishwara Pranidhana' (surrender to God) is an option, a path to realize the self, and not mandatory. One who seeks the truth need not believe in anything. All that is required is honest perseverance to know oneself, to know who one truly is. When this is correctly realized, only one truth remains, call it God or by whatever name one may.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello, as an expert in yoga and kundalini, to awake kundalini, do we have to cultivate and remain in a passive state of mind where there is mental stillness? WHat is the difference between that and some individual who go in a passive state but at the same time they are not conscious or aware of their experience of unconciousness as in a medium-trance or sleep, there is no real spiritual progress for such trance or sleep.

Answer
1. Kundalini awakening occurs all by itself, when a life of Yoga with Brahmacharya is practiced, as suggested earlier to realize the self. Separate efforts are not necessary. Maintaining a mental state anchored to the self is what is required.

2. The state of being in the self, as the self is the only true state. All other states are an illusion, as in a dream.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello, I started to practice brahmacharya at the age of 28, some weeks ago, Im almost 29 years old now. Since normally or the ideal world one should start to practice brahmacharya in his teen years after puberty, do we still get all benefits at age 28-29? I never practiced it before my late 28 years since I didnt even know there was such thing and even if heard (it was not my case, no internet nor lot of books at those times) at teen years, a common teen after experimenting sexual things cant understand brahmacharya entirely in my opinion although some saints and spiritual people practiced it since birth. But at 28-29 where the man is more mature in the head, do the body is capable of not only get the benefice of this practice but even reverse the aging process that occured previous to that and was consequence of a bullied life in teen years and unchaste life in the young adult years?

Answer
Everything transpires by HIS will alone. Based on one's evolutionary level and the will of the Lord, different people will be made to take up the practice, at different stages in their lives.

Simply practice with honesty and devotion, so as to realize the self, without worrying about the results, and the best results destined to occur will come forth, at the right time.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

namaste sir,
i want to practice non-dualism but i have great devotion for lord shiva.sir please show me the path.if i have to stop my devotion to lord shiva to practice non-dualism.

Answer

Devotion to Lord Shiva, or any other God, does not in any way become an impediment to non-dualism. Whichever God be the object of worship, all worship goes to the Supreme alone, for there is nothing outside of HIM. Keep this in mind and worship the God of your choice, with love & devotion, with the sole objective of realizing the self.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Sorry to continue with the previous posts about non-dualism, but isnt supposed that a devotional or theistic path to God is by definition a dual path where God (or Allah or whatever name) is seen as a pure spirit or abstract entity and the human is always separate because a sinner?
I am not christian or muslim at all but people there dont believe in non-dualism because humans are limited beings. These are the things who confuse people in religions.

Answer

It is the Ego & body which sin, being limited, and not the Atman (pure self) which is considered no different from the Lord in non-dualism.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

namaste sir,
i am a great devotee of lord shiva.i want a vision of lord shiva as clearly as i saw other persons around me.
Q.1- If the vision is possible,then how?

Q.2- last month just after doing masturbation in night i had a dream in which swami vivekanand was hugging me and saying"please ,bath daily". What does this dream indicate?

I like swami vivekanand very much and always talk about him.

Answer

1. When you succeed in flawless performance of Yoga Sadhana to realize the self, with devotion to the Supreme, in the form of Lord Siva; when Brahmacharya becomes natural and effortless, having merged in the Love for the Lord; when you reach the stage where the Ego will no longer exist and is completely merged in pure consciousness, you will experience Lord Siva.

2. "Realize yourself as pure consciousness and let go of the assumption, of being the one, who wants to masturbate". That is real bathing. It is possible only in the ocean of pure consciousness (Atman).

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay Prabhu,

N/b: I am obese and just out of the teen group

1) When doing tittli aasana as a padmaasana aspirant, how close to the groin should the joint legs (the flappy bird) be?

2) When doing halaasana, during the return journey how should we be breathing? Is it okay if it is impossible to keep the legs together and straight during the initial stages, keeping in mind and attempting to reach the eventual goal?

3) What should one say when pressurized by people of other faiths to convert to their faith? And references are made to Idol and cow worship and mockery in general with regard to our faith? The blood starts boiling, answers are expected and the yogi must tread carefully.

4) How can one handle irritation, conflict from others, hatred for injustice performed by others etc.

Sometimes this 'injustice' can be anger at dalits, whites, women etc. learning the vedas (albeit minute portions) and swelling in a pompous bubble at their achievement.

Sometimes this can be religious intolerance, hypocrisy and other legitimate subjects which still manage to unsettle the mind.

5) Is it possible to keep the ego at bay while engaging in mundane conversation at the unavoidable family function? As you know, the awkward silence is not always possible. What is your advice on this?

Answer
1. The heels of the joined feet should be under the groin and the sides of the upper calf muscles should firmly rest on the ground.

2. Halasana: Lie flat on the floor with the arms extended beside the legs and take a slow, deep breath (Puraka). Hold the breath in retention (Kumbhaka) and gently raise the legs. When the legs become vertical, very slowly start releasing the breath (Rechaka), accompanied by lowering the legs behind the head. Maintain the final pose with slow and easy breathing.

Before the return, perform another Puraka and gently bring the legs back to the vertical position in the state of Kumbhaka. From this point, start slow Rechaka and gently lower the legs back to the ground as slowly as possible. With practice, one should keep the legs completely straight, throughout the Asana. They are to be lowered one at a time.

3. Getting into arguments or debates as regards any topic is the resort of the fool. The wise

Yogi maintains silence to the best extent possible and neither projects his views, nor questions those of others, for such activity is nothing but a projection of one's Ego. He maintains his state of calmness by holding on to the state of the self, irrespective of what others say or don't.

4. Let go of the Ego which perceives all these illusions and be quiet. Your duty is to be in the self, as the self and not be this or that.

5. It is not awkward silence which is required. One need not appear unsociable. What is required is be internally quiet, with complete lack of internal involvement in what others say or don't, though externally smiling and nodding one's head, as though interested (All the time holding on to one's self in action and not words). Let people say or do as they want to. Let them say the crow is white and that the Sun is black. By what way are you concerned with all these useless discussions? Will such a debate take you closer to realizing your self? Will worthless talk ending in heated arguments remove the 'Agnyana' (ignorance) surrounding your Atman or improve your wellbeing? The wise do not get trapped in such foolishness.

Arguing, debating or even forcefully projecting one's views as regards any topic, be it material or spiritual is nothing but a projection of one's own Ego. The Yogi who wishes his well being, so as realize himself does not indulge in such foolishness, which is of no benefit to anybody. He remains calm and quiet internally, with an outward smile, behaving as though he knows nothing, keeping his Ego snubbed under his feet. The urge to argue or debate belongs to the Ego. It is the Ego which gets hurt by insult or happy with praise. Let go of it. Your duty is to kill the Ego which knows nothing, yet tries to show it knows everything. Let people have their views, whatever those be. Hold on to the self and be quiet, always at peace.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Sir,

I am very glad to contact you. I am a victim of Over-Masturbation. I've had very severe symptoms and by grace of God I am able to overcome a greater part of it by medications and Sadhana.

Still my shattered nervous system is recovering and my brain and mind are not functioning at their best. I am a strict practitioner of Brahmacharya last several years. But still, when I feel very well rejuvenated after some 15 20 days of Brahmacharya there comes uncontrollable wet dream that shatters off all my saved energy and happiness. Thus again I am starved of vital energies and thus still suffer from symptoms of Masturbation. I would be grateful if you can suggest me some Yogic practices that I could add to my existing Sadhana. Currently I am doing Sadhana of Anulom Vilom, Kapalabhati Pranayams, Vajroli mudra and Moola bandha along with breathing observing meditation for one hour everyday.

Also please suggest me very strong Ayurvedic medication that I can use for complete recovery by rejuvenating my nerves, brain and all parts of my affected body...Please guide..

OM..

Regards,
Nirmal.

Answer
Slowly go through all the past answers and apply the complete suggested schedule of 'Ashtanga Yoga Sadhana' for Brahmacharya and self-realization, starting with Asana, culminating in Samadhi. This is the best medicine.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
respected sir,
I am an engineering student.i stopped masterbating for 93 days.and again masterbated as I was sleep deprived,exhausted and my expression were not serious.one thing happened along with my combined efforts I was able to check my anger.but I went through your question site and many other websites I found that without yoga it is worthless.so I again masterbated.also I have problem that I live in hostel shared by 4 student so it almost impractical to wake up in brahmamuharat or do yoga.so please suggest me what should I do..should I stop thinking about celibacy " I kmow celibacy is vast" !sir suggest me I am confused.

Answer
1. Masturbation is extremely harmful to both the body & mind. It generates harmful karma that debilitates the very system. First stop the activity.

2. What does one do when his life is in danger? Will he say - "I live in a hostel, so I cannot save my life"? The urge for Brahmacharya should be much more than the urge for life. Just as one does whatever possible to save one's life at the time of peril, one should be prepared to do anything to achieve Brahmacharya to realize the self. Great benefits come only further to great sacrifices and not without.

By losing one's life, one only loses the body. By succumbing to a life of lust, one loses his body, mind and connection with the soul. He goes far away from his own self and there can never be well being to the one who has moved away from his Atman (self), under the grip of Maya (illusion). Any amount of name, fame or money cannot give happiness & well being if one does not reside in the self. Much unwanted karma gets generated, ending in pain & sorrow. Liberation from the painful existence called Samsara becomes impossible.

It is only by the grace of the Lord that one gets to know about the gem called 'Brahmacharya' to realize the self, and is then given the mind to practice it. Only a Jiva which has striven in this direction in previous existences is given such a mind. The Lord has shown you that Supreme path, that great path which is matchless, which has no other equal, which even the celestial Deva-s (deities) aspire to follow. It is not shown to all. Will you let go of this opportunity and fail the Lord? What is there in this world which can equal residence in absolute Brahmacharya? There is nothing which can even come close to it, for the world is an unreal illusion, while Brahmacharya, which is nothing but residence in the self is the absolute truth.

Wake up at Brahmimuhurtham, find an open space outside the hostel, or at a temple, or on the terrace, or any other suitable place and perform the complete set of Yogic practices to realize the self with devotion to God. Maintain a Yogic state of mind through the day, with purity, surrendering all actions as a service to God & content with what comes by HIS grace. If your efforts are honest, unfailing and absolute, the Lord will solve everything for you and ensure that suitable conditions are provided for further progress.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi, is that true that for someone who is long established in brahmacharya or perfect purity, all his actions or works will go fluidly, without much problems? Ive read that in Hindu books of brahmacharya like the ones wrote by Swami Vivekananda and even in the concept of "Te" or virtue in Zhuangzi book. I mean what is the relation about someone established in a state of brahmacharya and luck? This is mentionned many times but never explained.

Answer
1. Merging the mind into the Atman (self), and thereby getting free from the grip of the Ego is Brahmacharya. When this is achieved, Supreme consciousness, also called as God alone functions from such a body. Such a person performs all actions as a service to God, without expectation for the fruits of his work, accepting the results with equality, be they of success or failure. Therefore, he is not concerned about the results.

When such an attitude of dispassion is practiced, one works in a relaxed manner, giving his best at the required action with complete energy and efficiency. Since complete and thorough work gives the best chances of achieving high efficiency, the possibility of success is higher, though such a one does not get affected even if there is failure.

2. Luck is that factor, which weighs on the outcome of an action, despite the presence or lack of supporting effort. It is the effect of past karma, influencing the outcome of the present effort. Since he who practices Brahmacharya as described above seldom indulges in incorrect action, the chances of accruing negative karma reduce greatly. This in turn prevents the formation of future obstacles which might other wise have cropped up due to actions performed under the lack of 'Gnyana' (knowledge of the truth). Past karma must however be worked out without fail. What is termed good luck is nothing but the positive vibration resulting from such a state.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Lord Dhananjay,

I want to do aasanas precisely but my current reference book of Baba Ramdev (Yog: It's Philosophy and Practice) is vague with regard to systematic structure of practice, with gradual increase in intensity. I am obese and I can't immediately jump into your prescribed set of aasanas. My fitness is such that I can walk 30 mins without difficulty, touch the floor without bending knees, do halasana with legs not straightened and perfection far away but not do things like karna pidasana, sidhasana etc. I hope you get the general picture. Please advise me. There are no yoga schools here.

Answer
1. The set of Asana-s that aid Brahmacharya to realize the self have been mentioned in previous answers. It will suffice to practice those and perfect them gradually. Apply slow, regular and persistent efforts, to the extent possible; do not hurry. In the course of time, they will be fully mastered.

2. Look for a senior Asana practitioner, from whom these Asana-s can be learnt in person. Let your efforts at Yoga & Brahmacharya to realize the self be sincere and honest, with devotion to God. You will come across a person who will impart the details of Asana practice.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,
I would like to ask you two very private question to know to know your opinion about two things that happened to me during and after meditation. It was at night when i was meditating on the third eye with the technique hindus call trataka with eyes closed, and suddenly I felt my field of vision complete in a white screen and my body felt like it was aspired upward so strongly i become scared about this in one second and left my meditation. My skin become as like under anestesia. This was during meditation. The second thing happened some days after it was like a wheel or like a globe rotating and orange in colour that moved in front of me when walking for some time and then dissapeared. As the Sun Very flashy thing and almost 3D. What those thing represent or mean? I ask you because I think you know spirituality and you are very advandced in this. Thanks.

Answer
'Pranothaana' (upward movement of Prana along the spinal column) occurs during meditation. During the initial stages of practice, this Pranic movement can manifest in the form of visions or experiences at the body & mind level. There is not the least need for fear. However, one should not get caught with such happenings and must remain fixed in the practice to realize the self alone, for all these are distractions.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
first off i want to thank you for the beautiful answers you are giving people in need of guidance, i bow to you for doing your divine duty. Your answers are pure and very authentic as from experience and i truly appreciate them.

So my question is how can psychic powers be achieved? I am only 20 days in brahmacharya but already i feel internally more into myself at home.
Do psychic powers come of their own? levitation, breath retention under water, moving objects with mind, etc.

thank you for answer. I only seek these things for my private self and not to make a show of them but to enjoy them for what they are.

thank you.

Answer
1. The aim of Brahmacharya is to dissolve & eternally vacate the one who wants these powers.

2. When he who wants them is gone, that which remains is the Atman (self) or pure consciousness. That state is what is termed self-realization/liberation.

So first realize the self. You may then decide about powers.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: This might sound ridiculous or it might be a great question for you. But I think you already know where I'm going here :)

I'd really like to be educated on the difference between what a Man becomes practicing cultivating celibacy, Brahmacharya, semen retention for long periods of time & a what they call in greek mythology, Demigods?

They depict Demigods in greek mythology as having all keen & sharp senses, stronger & faster than a mere mortal. They are naturally divine & powerful.

A brahmachari becomes powerful through the practice of celibacy as it is said.

So I wanted your input on comparing & contrasting the two.

ANSWER: 1. Through honest Brahmacharya to realize the self, the aspirant first becomes a man of virtue, then a divine human, then the equivalent of a demigod, later a celestial deity in rank and finally merges into the Supreme Almighty itself, no different from it, although residing in the physical body throughout, till the exhaustion of that karma which supports the presence of the physical vehicle. This entire journey can span over many lifetimes or a single lifetime, based on the speed of advancement, which in turn depends on one's past actions & the will of the Lord.

2. In reality, one's Atman (self) is always one with the universal Supreme, no different from it. All these transgressions are only in the realm of Maya (illusion), concerning the Ego/world. Therefore, the wise Yogi ignores all these promotions, ranks and their accompanying powers & settles for nothing less than realizing his self, one with the Godhead, for that is what the self really is. That is the only truth; nothing else is.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Hey I just wanted to thank you for your insight and knowledge on my earlier questions!. You may or may not remember me but I used to ask you many questions in the past!. & I'm amazed & glad you're still answering questions!.

My new question I've been seeking insight on is if abstaining from sex (brahmacharya) causes a build up of static electricity within the human body. You know, when you shock someone by accident with just your finger or shock yourself just by touching the Tv or something metal.

1. Is this static electricity within the human body from brahmacharya practice?

2. Is static electricity a sign of high energy levels?

3. Is this a result from an increase in our bioelectricity? (Energy Body)

Answer
1. Electricity is also a form of energy and static is another from of Prana.

2. Not necessarily.

3. Static is energy in one form and need not be connected to the practice. It only means that the person has the tendency for such build up. It is not in any way connected with one's level of consciousness.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Dear sir,

I have started doing Asana+Banda+Pranayama+meditation for the last 2 months. I have 2 questions related to Asana and Pranayama

1) Asana: After waking up and taking a shower, I sit in Siddhasana for 5 to 10 minutes before doing bandhas. I just wanted to know if is it required to do some other yogic exercise also or simply siddhasana is enough for optimum growth (in your other answers, I saw you recommending many different asanas for different situations) Also I sit in the same siddhasana for doing mula bandha, pranayama and meditation so total time in siddhasana is around 1 hour.

2) Pranayama: I started doing pranayama with 16 second retention and after 1.5 months I moved to 24 second retention. recently I observed that inbetween pranayama, I get cough (deep cough)after 2 to 3 cycles of prayanama. So I stop and then resume pranamaya after few minutes,(I have been observing this cough for the past 1 week (almost everyday and only once during 6 cycle set)-so just wondering any corrective action need to be taken)- I have a very awkward feeling because of this break in between

Also while doing pranayama I do not take a break in between each pranayama cycles. So is it necessary to have a break in between each cycle of pranayama or can we continue all the 6 cycles of pranayama without breaks. (I was doing comfortable the 6 cycles with out breaks)

thank you for your kind attention

ANSWER: I.
1. Padmasana

2. Vajrasana
3. Ardha & Purna Paschimottanasana
4. Halasana
5. Sarvangasana

Perform these after offering Prayers to the Lord to realize the self.

II.
Then perform the Bandha-s

III.
Then Nadi Shodhana

IV.
Pranayama

V.
Meditation on the Atman (self)

* Till the body is not completely purified, such coughing etc. can occur. Ignore the same and continue with the 24 second retention. With perseverance, the Prana will fully remove the underlying impurity in the course of time.

* A few seconds of break should suffice if there is no exhaustion.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Dear Sir,

Noted your comments and Thank you for your reply,

I just want to clarify few more points

1) Regarding Asanas, I could collect some information from the internet. However, I would like to know how many repetation of each of this asanas we need follow or how long do we have to sit in each of these asanas. in website it shows 5 to 10 mnts or even more?

2) Is ardha paschimothasana same as ardha Padma paschimothasana?

3) Regarding sarvangasana, I was going through this website and found Matsaysana is recommended after sarvangasana http://sivanandaonline.org/public_html/?cmd=displaysection§ion_id=1252 please let me know your comments

3) Bandas- I am doing 1 cycle of bandhas with 3 repetation of each bandhas, should I increase the cycle of bandhas to 2 or 3?

I just want to ensure that I do these things in the correct way,

thank you

ANSWER: 1. A single repetition should suffice, when performed correctly. Maintain the Asana end pose for 8~10 seconds.

2. Yes

3. You may perform it, if you so wish.

4. No

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Sir,

many thanks for your kind reply

Reference to asanasa,

Padmasana, though i could do this asana, my knee of left leg is not touching the ground while the other knee is touching the ground. but looks ok and i can sit for almost 1 minute.

Vajrasana -ok

I had a tough time doing paschimottanasana and halasana (I even sprained my back in between)

So can I do uttanasana initially and then after say 3-4 months I believe my body will become more flexible and then I will try paschimottanasana

I am also comfortable with sarvangasana, so can I skip halasana for the time being and slowly move from sarvangasana to halasana.

Note:(I am 31 years old and weigh 55 kgs, i was doing some physical excerise before such as push ups and pull ups, bitex and hence i feel my body has become very stiff)

Thanks

Answer
1. All Asana-s are to be performed to the extent possible, initially.

2. Perform Paschimottanasana to the extent possible. Do not apply too much force.

3. The same as regards Halasana.

With sustained efforts, the postures becomes perfect, in the course of time.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Hello,
Concerning the last post, in the demigods stories are they talking of real physical beings? The gods of mythologies are spiritual beings (invisible to humans) and not physical but the demigods which were supposed to be their progeny were physical beings here on earth. They were called demigods or hybrids because they descended from a god and a virgin woman at the same time and so hybrid. Yogis like Ramakrishna for their part are considered 100% human with normal parents so there is difference between yogis and demigods.

ANSWER: 1. It is the evolutionary level of the Jiva which matters and not the medium of birth or the kind of body of residence.

2. As the Yogi evolves towards the Atman (self), he promotes and passes through these ranks, which are nothing but evolutionary milestones, though occupying the physical vehicle. However, as long as a rank exists, it is still in the realm of Maya and therefore unreal. The truth is beyond these ranks. It is the state of no rank & the truth behind all ranks. It is pure consciousness, undifferentiated and infinite.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: 1. It is the evolutionary level of the Jiva which matters and not the medium of birth or the kind of body of residence.

Thanks very much but in relation to the possibility of this medium of birth for a being because of reincarnation, that possibility of birth is pretty scary for a western mind in general. So even if the medium is not important but it is still a very strange thing because the natural medium for birth is between a man and woman. DO you let me ask if the stream of gold in this story is similar to what yoga call tejas or ojas energy?http://www.theoi.com/Heros/Perseus.html#Danae

Answer
Setting aside matters concerning reincarnation or mediums which one has no first hand experience about, first persevere to know who you are. All questions get answered that way. Thinking about abstract, metaphysical concepts and debating about these serves no purpose. It is a waste of time and energy. Realizing the self alone matters.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

At my job, I am having a difficult time with my boss. I perceive her as a bully with a terrible temper. Other people have left the job the because of her. Many people talk and complain about her behind her back. I find myself becoming very angry, even hateful towards her. I am aware this is an unhealthy state. My question is whether it is better to remain in this situation and learn to remain calm and composed in the face of abuse or better to leave and not allow myself to be treated this way. There is also the option of confronting this person about their behavior but I don't know if the result would be long-lasting. This woman's bullying reminds me of my father's behavior. Perhaps this is an opportunity to learn to deal with this history. Though, I am not sure I am up to the task.

Thank-you,

Ron D.

Answer
It is not everyone who is fortunate enough to come across such a situation. A situation, which gives a wonderful opportunity to kill the Ego and get close to the Atman (self).

1. One may try to leave or try and continue. It is up to the person. However, one can neither quit till the time to quit has arrived, nor stay on after the time to depart has been reached. Things happen as they have to, governed by the laws of destiny.

2. Knowing it to be such, be calm and unaffected, doing your duty with sincerity and commitment, to the extent possible, as an actor playing his part in a drama. Let people talk as they want or do as they please. One should not get affected by external factors, but learn to hold on to the self and be at peace, wishing good to all, even in the most trying of situations, forgiving those who wish one bad or cause trouble.

The wise Yogi earnest at realizing his self, takes his enemies as manifestations of God, sent to destroy his Ego for Enlightenment. While the enemy himself does not know it, the Lord who dwells inside one and all (including the enemy) as the self, knows everything and is working for one's good and nothing else.

Delink yourself from the Ego and be divine, always holding on to the self, wishing everyone good, harboring no ill-feelings. The Ego is the Yogi's real enemy and enemies who hate you hate your Ego. So one's enemies are really one's true friends, for they hurt the Ego, thereby providing one with the opportunity to destroy it and get rid of it.

When such an attitude of forbearance, duty-mindedness, respectfulness, well wishing to all, forgiveness & love is practiced unconditionally with people without fail, the Ego starts dissolving into fragments, to be gradually replaced by an aura of great strength, power and divinity. The person becomes engulfed by the purity of divine consciousness which is nothing but the self. He then resides in the highest state of auspiciousness and no harm can touch him.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaste,

Having been practising Brahmacharya for a few months now, I feel my body to be undergoing a second teenage. Having had a disastrous teenage life of porn and masturbation never had acne before or other teenage illnesses; although this was the case- somehow god has been kind to me since the vow of brahmacharya in erasing out sexual thoughts.

I notice that I have started getting difficult- spots (Acne) on the face and on my upper back after all these months of celibacy. I wonder if this has anything to do with it.

I now seem to be sleeping longer and finding it hard to get up very early in the morning which wasn't true in teenage.

I am required in my job to have good appearance to carry on with my worldly-duties and this acne is bothering me.

Will cold-water showers help(I live in England) Will urine-therapy help? Is there anyway to achieve a clear face with fair complexion so that I am able to carry on in the job I do?

Answer
1. Acne is not connected to the practice.

2. More sleep further to abstinence is an indication that transmutation is incomplete. This makes energy stagnate in the lower levels, thereby leading to lethargy & stupor. The true Brahmachari needs lesser sleep and is ever active. Apply the suggested methods thoroughly.

3. Practice Brahmacharya as described earlier. The acne will go if it is destined to.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Expert: Dhananjay - 3/19/2014

Question
QUESTION: Dear Sir,

I am a 23 yr old and have full beard and long hair.I decided to grow it to avail the benefits of hair. I have not cut hair for 18 months.I am learning Indian classical music and want to evolve spiritually through music.My hair and beard is irritating me a lot.My head hair always touches the back of ears and neck and makes it warm and sweaty .i have to adjust moustache every 2 minutes coz it comes on lips. The sensations of hair and beard is a 24*7 irritation.So my questions are:

1.does removing the hassle of hair outweigh the benefits ? because if my hair is cut i will feel free and thus can think clearly. Will I be better off keeping the hair in the long run?

2.Please suggest some ways to reduce the irritation of both hair and beard .tying a pony pulls the head and is uncomfortable .

3.Can I evolve spiritually only through music or should i do some meditation,etc

4.Can you suggest any guruji I can personally visit to ask my doubts.I live in Mumbai

ANSWER: 1. Slightly trim the hair, mustache & beard, to the extent required for comfort.

2. Making the hair into a bun at the crown of the head (Brahmarandhra) & tying a Shiva type knot (as seen the the photos of Lord Siva), is most beneficial for rise of Kundalini. It is an excellent hairstyle to conserve energy at all times. It is conducive for deep meditation. The next option is to make the hair into a bun a bit lower (as done by the womenfolk). Those who find these hairstyles not very practical for everyday life due to professions/circumstances, trim it shorter.

3. Spiritual evolution, which occurs only by HIS grace will become complete through a life of Yoga & Brahmacharya (using all the Yogic methods as described earlier) to realize the self. This will also help in the study of music. However, the practice of Yoga & Brahmacharya to realize the self will be the central pillar for evolution, for you in particular.

4. Apply the efforts required to achieve the above, with love and self-surrender to the Lord, asking nothing in return. HE will ensure that the doubts are cleared, in the way required, either by a personal Guru, or through other means.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: 1. yogi bhajan says that by trimming the hair you lose your antennas.is that true? does it take 3 years for new antennas to form?
2.which option is better a]to keep it uncut and bear the irritation but enjoy the benefits b] trimming it and being free,clear minded but less benefits .I can only decide on whether to trim or not , if this point is clear

Answer
1. One must eventually overcome dependence on the body (of which hair is also a part) and reside in the self as the self, for you are not the body but the self alone. That is the only truth. Hence one must not become attached or develop a fascination/dependence for anything non-self such as the world, objects or the body (including hair). However, the presence of hair is conducive for energy management as regards the beginner.

2. Surrender means leaving all decisions to HIM alone. There is no path greater than 'Saranagati' (surrender to the Supreme). Hence take your mind off the matter and let HIM decide whether to trim it or keep it. Accept what happens, remaining neutral. Focus on Sadhana to overcome body consciousness, hold on to the self and be at peace.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello
thanks in advance.

i think am gay. 40yo, unmarried, when performing yoga, meditation, self massage, or just sitting calmly and quitely, either get attracted towards myself or some imaginary male and without touching any body part, the penis gets erect and starts ejaculation.
the family situation and financial position is that there are no chances of getting married either way. (homo or hetre. and hetro i dont want too, as i know am gay).

please help.

ParshuRam

Answer
Ignore sexual thoughts to the extent of your ability and take up a life of Yoga with the required lifestyle, with surrender to God, to realize the self. Let the urge to overcome this illusion be strong and genuine. With perseverance, you will gradually overcome the issue henceforth.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Guruji,

Please explain and evaluate the different chakra-s and their relationship with brahmacharya.

Answer
1. The seven Chakra-s are the representation of the levels through which consciousness passes, on its way back from identification with the non-self, into itself. These are denoted by the confluence of Nadi-s (astral energy channels).

2. Through proper transmutation of the vital energy via Brahmacharya to realize the self, the conserved Prana awakens Kundalini, which then ascends and purifies the physical, astral and causal mediums. The chakra-s are correspondingly purified, stage by stage, depending on the intensity & continuity of practice.

There is no need to ponder much about the process involved, as it is automatic, occurring all by itself, in case of the Yogi applying the required methods, as described earlier. Mere, theoretical knowledge about the details are of no use and rather become a distraction. Direct knowledge from experience will dawn by itself, through diligent practice, to the honest Yogi, who surrenders to God & performs Sadhana in an unbroken manner.

When this much is done, individual consciousness gradually dissociates from the non-self, to eventually merge into the universal consciousness irreversibly, which is the state called 'Kaivalya' (self-realization).

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Hi Sir,

Good day..

If someone abuses us physically or verbally and if I retaliate in anger to control them and to teach a lesson to them for their mistake will it constitute a negative Karma?
Sir, I am asking this question because in my each step of my day today life this concept of Karma is disturbing that if I am doing negative Karma, even in simple things...

Please help me Sir..

Regards,
Vimal.

ANSWER: 1. Every action performed with Ego consciousness generates karma, be it good or bad.

If someone abuses you physically, verbally or even in thought at the personal level, an instant karma is accrued by the abuser, which he or she will have to pay for, now or later. Such karma accrued will itself punish the doer, without fail, in the course of time. One is punished by his sin itself. Why then should you retaliate in anger or try to teach them a lesson?

The abuser has identified with his Ego while performing a malefic action under the grip of ignorance. The karma generated by this action will follow him and ensure that the required punishment is awarded, at the destined time, in the way required. This is the truth and there need be no doubt about this.

If you fall prey to anger, retaliate and try to teach him or her a lesson by taking the law into your hands, you identify with the Ego and perform another malefic action, for which you too will have to bear the fruit. Earlier, there was only the abuser who identified with his Ego and performed a wrong. He alone was answerable. Now, you too have fallen in line with him, becoming a party to the act of ignorance, resulting in another karmic act of negativity. Now both of you are in the same boat. There is no difference between the two of you.

Therefore, the wise Yogi does not take recourse to such a line of thought or action at the personal level. He forgives the wrong doer, wishes him well and holds on to his self, not letting the Ego get in between. That is true surrender to God. Letting go of the Ego which is what gets hurt is real surrender. Through such forbearance, quiet, endurance and surrender to God, wishing well one and all (including the wrong doer), the greatest strength and auspiciousness is attained. An aura of great power eventually surrounds the Yogi who practices such Ahimsa. He is protected by the very Lord HIMSELF.

2. The following is an incident from the life of Bhagavan Ramana Maharishi (a realized saint who lived in Tiruvannamalai, South India), denoting the power of right conduct. In the year 1924, a few thieves in search of wealth attacked Shri. Ramana's ashram. Shri. Ramana, who was a realized soul, having forsaken all possessions, did not possess anything of value in his hermitage. A few books on Yoga, some food, clothes and a few utensils were the only things present. When the thieves realized that their efforts had gone waste, they became angry and started throwing and breaking things. Shri. Ramana requested them not to do so and calm down. Further infuriated, the wrong doers repeatedly hit Bhagavan and some of his disciples, who tried to intervene, injuring them in the process.

Shri. Bhagavan, the great Yogi that he was, however did not take any of this personally. A thief gave a blow on Bhagavan's leg causing great pain. Shri Bhagavan however looked at the man compassionately and remarked - "You may hit the other leg as well, if you are not satisfied". He even offered them food, seeing they were hungry. The thieves eventually left, realizing their mission had gone waste.

A year later, the same band of thieves were arrested by the law for another crime elsewhere and hanged to death. They were punished by their own wrong doing, which followed them, awarding them with what was due, as per the laws of karma.

The laws of the Lord are just and very impartial. They strike with mighty force when the fruit of karma gets ripe for harvest. Knowing it to be such, one should not interfere with divine will. One should not try to control anybody or anything, under the grip of the Ego. The only thing required is to control oneself, using the ropes of 'Gnyana'. There is a higher power which is watching everything and which will do what is required, at the right time. It is not for us to project the useless Ego.

Do your duty calmly and cheerfully, to the extent of your ability and forgive those who may indulge in wrong doing. Let go of the Ego which is prone to the illusion of insult & praise, good & bad. The Atman (self) is beyond such illusion and always unaffected. Identify with it and let go of all other things. Then there will be no worry and no anxiety. To such a one, there is only peace and quiet, whatever be the nature of the world.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Thanks for your answer..

Sir,
(From my day today experiences)..Generally is it really possible to live in this world speaking only the Truth? Or is it really necessary to do so?
I am very much tired of these bookish terms that say Speak Truth, be Non-Violent, and so on..Is that practical?
Being Truthful is a great thing but what will you do if someone trickily persuading you to do something that you are not interested and we are intended to say an white lie that I have this work that work etc..? There are countless situations like that where white lies are needed..

Also when we don't like to disclose the reason why we are not taking part in their activities we are supposed to say a white lie here..Is that wrong?. Will that add to our negative or positive Karma?..How do you define "Truth"?

Also is that possible to be Saatwic always irrespective of people playfully doing intolerant and Rajasic activities towards you? there is always a limit to everything ..right? How tolerate we must be towards these things..

Please share your views Sir...

Regards,
Vimal.

ANSWER: 1. The closer one's consciousness gets to the Atman (self), the lesser is the identification with the 'Asat' (non-self) comprising of the Ego, body & the world. In parallel, one's urge to utter the untruth also reduces.

2. There is nothing called today's world or the past world. The world is only an illusion perceived through another illusion called the Ego. It is identification with the non-self which makes the Ego assume it will gain some benefit by uttering the untruth. This is an incorrect assumption; the product of ignorance. Nothing but sorrow follows the utterance of untruth. One who speaks falsity never attains peace and happiness. While he who holds on to the truth is always at peace, unaffected by the world and its offerings.

3. If such 'Satya (perfect truth) is practiced correctly for a long time, one develops the strength to remain silent in situations where uttering the truth might cause harm to oneself or others.

4. Holding on to the self and being in that quiet state is 'truth', whatever be the nature of external activity. He who realizes this is ever quiet and always in truth, though uttering words externally, or displaying some emotion, while dealing with the world. To realize this truth and reside in the truth, one should perform Sadhana and annul the Ego (which indulges in the untruth, itself being the untruth). Then alone does the meaning become clear.

5. As long as you identify with the Ego and the world, you will take yourself and the world seriously and thereby react to what occurs or does not occur. The moment you realize the world as a stage, with life as a drama and people as actors playing their part, you transcend the need to 'react' at the personal level and remain uninvolved internally, though indulging in external talk or emotions.

Such a Yogi plays his part in the drama, displaying the emotions of anger, happiness, sadness etc. externally, but ever remains unaffected internally, cool as a cucumber. He may laugh, scream, rejoice or appear dejected externally as the situation demands but always stays calm and composed internally by holding on to pure consciousness, which is beyond these dualities.

6. One may react to situations as required, in the manner necessary. However, the reaction should be an external display and not internal. Being Satwic does not mean that one remains like a stone, with no display of emotion or reaction. It only means that these are shown externally, as may be required, as done by an actor playing a role but are not experienced internally with seriousness.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Many thanks for your Wisdom Sir.

So, Even if the situation demands a white lie, for example someone is asking me to join a party or a picnic and if I am unwilling to join and can not say directly-No, shall I say some white lie like I am not feeling well, I have some other work etc even if I've no other work?

Is it a wrong to do so. As you said Shall I do that with out disturbing my inner bliss?

Sir, please clear my confused state...

Answer
1. If you are a true Yogi, you will always have the most important work. Holding on to the meditative state and related Sadhana is the main work for the Yogi. He is always at this work, which is why he does not feel the need for much external interaction.

2. Hence he who indulges in honest Sadhana will not be uttering the untruth if he says he has other work, for a very important work always awaits him. In due course, one does not even have to explain to others. Silence speaks more than words.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Sir,

It's been traditionally told that there are four margas of Spirituality: Bakthi Yoga, Karma Yoga, Raja Yoga and Jnana Yoga.

I have a question that if the Self-Realization attained by a Jnana Yogi and a Raja Yoga in the end is same or there is any sort of difference in terms of realizing the Self and in terms of Chakras?

Please answer....

Regards,
Vimal.

Answer
1. Since there is only one self, one truth and one God, which are all one and the same, there is only one self-realization, whatever be the means taken to reach it.

2. Let go of the concept of Chakra-s, body, mind, world and all other things non-self and focus only on realizing the self, which can be accomplished by no other means but through annulling the Ego. Then, all that is to be known will become known.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

What is the difference between losing energy by incontinence or ejaculation and losing energy after running for example? For me both are the same.

ANd when the body stops producing semen because of brahmacharya does it means the body stop aging?

Answer
1. Through incontinence and lack of proper transmutation, the vital seed of life is lost, resulting in debility and degeneration.

2. The tiredness or fatigue which follows moderate exercise is temporary and short lived. One emerges fresh and more energetic in due course, which is not the case with losing the seed.

3. After becoming an Urdhvareta through proper Brahmacharya, the debilitation of the body which is normally accompanied with age rapidly slows down. To the extent that one spends time in communion with pure consciousness (Samadhi), debility correspondingly reduces.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Master,

Just some quick questions relating to sadhana for brahmacharaya:

1.) Nadi Shodana--I read in "practice of brahmacharaya" that Pranayam is alternate nostril breathing, that is: inhaling through one nostril, retaining the breath and then exhaling through the other nostril.... According to Science of Pranayama, Sivananda says the yogi must follow a similar procedure. So isn't Nadi Shodana and Pranayama the same thing? Please explain if I am confusing the exact procedure of doing Pranayama and how Pranayama is different from Nadi Shodana.

2.) Fasting-- Sivananda says that fasting clears the five capital sins. I have some diet control, that god has allowed me to have, so I'm wondering if I can fast for Ekadasi days and whether this would be fine for yoga? I plan to first fast for 12-15 hours and increase the period to 24 hours, but nontheless do yoga on the fasting days.

Diet--I don't like eating any other meals other than breakfast, lunch and dinner (3 meals a day), so can I abstain from drinking or eating anything during early morning yoga practice and during the afternoon practice. I plan to eat breakfast right after my morning sadhana and eat dinner right after my evening sadhana. Is this permissible? I would eat the required number of calories, just only for three meals a day rather than consuming food during yoga itself.

Answer
1. In 'Nadi Shodhana', there is only alternate nostril breathing (Puraka & Rechaka) as explained in past answers (http://en.allexperts.com/q/Celibacy-Abstinence-3564/2011/5/Pranayama-Yoga-Brahma), without Kumbhaka (retention). Whereas, in Pranayama, all the three are carried out.

2. Those who take 'Mitahara' (a balanced and limited diet), with a life of Yoga & Brahmacharya do not need to fast unless there is an illness or health issue. All sins vacate by themselves through an honest life of Yoga & Brahmacharya carried out to realize the self. Unnecessary fasting, when there is no issue in the body, only leads to weakness and ill health.

3. It is preferable to drink at least two glasses of milk and a glass of curd on a daily basis for optimum health. If you do not feel the urge for the same, early in the morning, drink a glass or two of water before the start of practice.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
dear sir
one said to me that praying before the photo of Mahavatar Babaji is against the law of kriyayoga, Lahiri baba, Panchanan Batacharya are not intererted in such things, is any true behind that?

sarwam khalvidam brahman
Vijith

Answer
One can pray to the Supreme through the image or idol of any realized saint, if one so wishes. The kind of Yoga which the saint adopted for realization does not matter, for it is the means to Enlightenment and nothing more.

All prayer ultimately goes to HIM alone, whoever be the medium of worship. There is no such rule against prayer to the Supreme, performed with an attitude of reverence and devotion, through the image of a realized saint.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Greetings Dhananjay,
I am a 20 year old guy and I have been striving earnestly to practice Brahmacharya for a few years now. I completely left masturbation over a year ago but wet dreams seem to be a great obstacle for me and I would like to understand them much better. At the start wet dreams would come as often as twice a week but now have subsided to no more than once a month. And as I have progressed, sexual thoughts seem almost nonexistent in my waking state, but they seem to creep in during my sleep and cause me to discharge. So my questions are:

How much damage does the occasional wet dream cause?

Do I fail to receive the advantages of Brahmacharya by these infrequent accidents?

Do the advantages of Brahmacharya cultivate only in the time that one can maintain seminal continence, or do they cultivate in the long run despite occasional nighttime discharges?

Sometimes I feel that it is really not possible for me to forever be completely free from wet dreams and subconscious sexual desires, even though I feel very proud of myself that I don't masturbate and will only have sex for procreation.

If I can live the rest of my life with just a couple wet dreams a year, how much will I benefit from Brahmacharya?

Thank you very much.

Answer
1. If a life of Yoga, with Brahmacharya, is applied uninterruptedly in the waking state, the occasional wet dreams taper down to the very minimum, causing negligible harm. Wet dreams completely stop after attaining to Urdhvaretas.

2. The less frequent the nightfalls, the better is the result.

3. They cultivate in the long run, as long as the nightfalls are minimal and there is no lapse in the waking state. The Yogi who puts in genuine focus on Sadhana, with surrender to God, neither thinks about wet dreams nor about the advantages of Brahmacharya. He perseveres only to realize the self, asking nothing in return. Such a Yogi alone succeeds.

4. One should first let go of the pride of temporary success. One should not take credit for the results. Brahmacharya, like all other things occurs only by HIS grace and not by one's efforts. The great Lord pulls up the devotee with sheer compassion, looking at the efforts he applies, granting success. One's efforts do not lead to success, they help subdue the Ego, whereupon the Lord sends HIS grace.

Let go of measurements as regards benefit and loss. Reach and hold on to the state where you will no longer expect anything from Brahmacharya, where it becomes natural and effortless, and where there will no longer be any reason for practice, yet there is selfless practice. That which has to come will come.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
namaste sir,i am much thankful to your sincere guidance provided to me in recent past sir,i am in second weak of my brahmacharya practice. I have to mention my some events of my past life so you could familiar to my situation.

I am from lower middle class family earlier living in my village and now living in kanpur city to complete my studies i have recently completed my class 12 examination. Last year i shifted to a new rented room which was much nearer to my school. A girl is living just in front of my house. She called me ' bhaiya' ,but i think that she has some other feeling for me in heart ,when i was out in balcony she constantly glances at me, she always try to remain as much as close to mee. She is recently visiting my room in order to help her in studies. I am also getting attracted to her. I feel and think about her lot during day and night , it is creating hindrance in my brahmacharya practice. So my question are as follows.
Q.1-sir what should i do?
Q.2- if i should stop speaking to her.
Q.3- sir if she want to lure me or it is only friendship.
Q.4- what should i do in these matters when girls try to have intimacy with me.
Q.5- if brahmachari should not speak to any girl.
Please answer as soon as possible.

Answer
Stop all unnecessary contact, be it verbal, visual or physical proximity and cut all ties of familiarity. Let there be no interaction henceforth. The implementation should be complete.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear God in the form of Dhananjay,

I have several queries related to the practice of self-surrender and giving up all sense of doership to the all-mighty and practicing bramhacharaya.

1.)

A. I practice most of the asanas you listed, but in addition, I practice several mudras Swami Sivananda also recommended—including the Yoga Mudra and the Maha Mudra. I practice these mudras in between Bandha and Pranayama. Any commentary on these, and how much time I should aim for in the practice of both of these mudras?

B. I started Pranayama recently and do six pranayams in the morning and six pranayams in the evening doing 16 second retentions. Sometimes, I get a pain in my lower cheekbone on the right side of my face while doing this. Is this a cause for concern? Also, may I increase the number of pranayams from 6 to a higher number if I am feeling comfortable?

C. Books to read. Any spiritual books you would recommend I read to goad my mind to give up this ego completely?

D. Sirhasana. I am unable to practice this. Is this absolutely necessary or can I keep Sarvangasana as a replacement?

2.)
A. When I surrender to the lord, and I am doing any physical activity, should my attitude be:

Ex: The lord is walking through my body…
Ex: The lord is eating through my mouth…. Etc.

Ex: The lord is walking down the street through my body
B. When I am doing an intellectual activity, should my attitude be:

Ex: The lord is learning this through my intellect
Ex: The lord is understanding this through me
Ex: The lord is typing up this message through my hands
C. When an evil thought or a thought relating to the ego (what this body or the intellect in this world), or the women/people that this body or speech affected in the world, what should be my response? Should I think:

The Lord is thinking these thoughts?
The lord has done this/has spoken about this etc…. through my body?
The lord is experiencing this pain through me
The lord is experiencing this feeling of attraction through my mind etc…

D. When I see a woman my mind finds attractive or look at myself in the mirror, should my attitude be: This is the lord's beauty? This is the lord's body? This is the beauty of the lord?

3.) What in the world belongs to the Jiva? And does the Jiva indeed do anything?
A. I have heard the Jiva is a drop compared to the ocean of brahman. So is the Jiva indeed powerless compared to Brahman? Therefore, shouldn't one just completely rely on the Supreme Spirit and not on himself?

B. When a Jiva exerts his willpower to get rid of temptation, is his ego acting or is it his willpower? And from where does this willpower or the motive to improve come from?

I am sorry for so many questions. But I need to understand this in order to clear myself of doubts, and confusing thoughts.

Answer
1A. Bandha-s are to be practiced after Asana and before Nadi Shodhana. 3~5 seconds suffices as the holding period for the Bandha-s.

1B. Limit to the 16 second retention till there is no longer any pain in the cheek bone. Pain is an indication that the body is not yet ready for more. Do not increase the retention for now. That will happen later.

1C. The Ego cannot be overcome through bookish knowledge. It is removed only through honest Sadhana & life experience, which in turn lead to 'Gnyana' (knowledge of the truth). Books conducive to this effect have been listed in past answers.

1D. Perform Sarvangasana for now. 'Shirshasana' will occur on its own, if it is so destined.

2A. The attitude to be applied is -"The Lord makes the body go through these actions, as a part of HIS Leela (play), as dictated by Prarabdha (past karma working out presently), so as to help me realize who I truly am. I am only the impartial witness, not being the body or the mind or Ego but the pure self".

Such an attitude is practiced by remaining neutral, with the Ego subdued. After many years of such practice with unbroken Brahmacharya & Yoga, there will no longer be the need to remind oneself of this fact, as the one who is to be reminded (individual Ego) becomes weak, being replaced by pure consciousness. After Enlightenment, there is no Ego but pure consciousness alone.

2B. The Lord does not have to learn or understand anything, for HE is the all knowing, all powerful one who has no need of any kind. It is the individual body and mind which are subjected to the motions and experiences of life, under the purview of past karma, so as to help the Jiva (individual) overcome its ignorance, leading to self-realization. The attitude to be applied is as that stated in 2A.

2C. Supreme consciousness does not think. It is. The Almighty has no desire, no thoughts, no pain and does not feel attraction or repulsion. One should not mistake these feelings as those of God. They are that of the individual Ego and illusory. With advancement, one eventually realizes the same.

Thoughts, be they good or evil, are the offshoots of the individual Ego, dependent on its past Samskara-s (Impressions) & Vasana-s (tendencies). Hence the Ego is to be cleared of its evil or disagreeable thoughts and brought back under the foot of the Atman (pure consciousness), when such thoughts arise.

2D. The attitude for the beginner, as regards the body of the opposite sex should be -"This body is a bag of flesh filled with blood, bones and human waste which will eventually become foul smelling & old by degeneration and decay. It is not worth losing Brahmacharya over. The beauty seen is a reflection and not real."

The beginner will fail if he or she tries to see the beauty of the Lord through the body of the opposite sex. That occurs naturally in case of the advanced soul nearing Enlightenment and not with others. Such a purified soul experiences only the Lord everywhere, with no sexual response from within. Till then, one should avoid reasoning and remind the idea of the foul nature of the body at the physical level. Else, one gets drowned in the ocean of Maya (cosmic illusion).

3. Since the Jiva (individual) itself is non-existent (being an illusion), the world is also an illusion, for there is no world independent of the Jiva. What then belongs to whom and who does what? There is no belonging and no doing in terms of the absolute. Everything except the Atman (self) is an illusion on the screen of pure consciousness.

3A. One has to rely only on the Supreme. When this is done, the Supreme makes this body & mind do that which is required.

3B. Will power is the apparent power obtained by the powerless Ego by drawing from the Atman (self) as the TV set draws power from the mains. The Jiva has no power of its own. All power comes only from the Atman or Lord. Hence one should remind the Ego of this fact and keep it snubbed under the feet, till it dies for ever. Then, the pure self, no different from the Lord alone functions.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Guruji,

1) The day before yesterday, I woke up to sexual imagination. I was not enlarged nor was I lusting but the experience almost seemed like conscious fantasy. I immediately jumped off that conveyer belt and went back to sleep without further fantasy. This has not resulted in any form of wet dream yet. Does this constitute a break as I really don't want to pour the small bottle of cold mineral water I have gathered in this scorching sun?

2) I tend to feel irritated and infuriated by my loved ones. Although I control these feelings and displace them with attempts to emanate pure love, I can conclude that these slight deviations have been more than merely fleeting. Does this constitute a break?

3) What does one do when complemented? How can one reply when statements like "You're very intelligent" or even the dreaded "Wow, I think you're a brahmachari!" are directed towards him by people who know the concepts of yoga but ignore them or even otherwise? It seems that jealousy from people noticing the newfound 'tej' (bright lustre) of the bag of flesh and bones can trigger a break.

Answer

1. Fantasy or anger are not breaks by themselves but will lead to a mental break, which eventually ends in a physical break, for lust and anger are the tools which dissemble residence in the self. Hence these should be nipped at the bud itself. Remain quiet and displace lustful thoughts calmly and thoroughly, by taking the mind off them at the start itself through 'Vichara' (inquiry) and 'Viveka' (wisdom).

Do not wrestle or reason with sexual thoughts, as 'Maya' (illusion) cannot be won over through reasoning. Maya is more powerful than the intellect and logic. It will slice and destroy intellect and reasoning within seconds, as a knife slices through butter. Displace the thought, replacing it with 'Gnyana' (the absolute truth) and diverting the mind onto some other constructive activity.

Maya can only be overcome by annulling the Ego, following which the all powerful Atman (pure self) shines. Under the light of the Atman, Maya, unable to play her games, disappears instantly. This is the method. For this, one must perform honest and regular Sadhana, with surrender and love to the Supreme, following all the 8 Anga-s of Yoga assiduously.

2. It is but natural that various kinds of emotional upsurges occur during the first few years of Brahmacharya. The beast called the Ego, which has been let free for millions of lifetimes to roam as it wanted, suddenly finds itself shackled by the tenets of Brahmacharya, which it tries to overcome by staging sudden and intense protests. Till the Ego is not fully roasted in the fire of Gnyana, such occurrences are possible.

One should ignore the Ego and its tantrums, drink a glass of water and divert the mind elsewhere. Else, it leads to a loss of equilibrium, wherein, man performs foolish actions, gaining unwanted karma, for which he will later have to repent.

3. One should never proclaim or even mention to others, the practice of Brahmacharya, which is a divine and personal equation between the aspirant and the Supreme. He who does so falls without doubt.

Remain internally quiet, humble and calm, reminding the Ego that it is a wingless bird flying in feathers borrowed from the power of the Atman. The wise Yogi does not pay attention to flattery, compliments or praise, which are all forms of Maya. He smiles at these and remains quiet internally, reminding himself that the luster & intelligence come from the Atman and not the Ego.

Snubbing the foolish Ego which has no better work than to react to everything and nothing, the Yogi remains ever humble, as though knowing nothing, like a fool, all the time vigilant, holding on to the the truth in silence.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Sir,

Can you please suggest which book should I read to understand Gita. I have "God Talks with Arjuna" suggested by you in the past answers. Actually I'm looking for a book in Hindi as I can read and understand hindi much faster.

I'm practicing Aasnas and pranayama daily in the morning (at 8AM as I work in late shifts) but unable to practice meditation. I tried third eye meditation but I feel very tired after doing this. It seems I'm not doing it correctly. Can you please suggest the best way to learn meditation? Should I learn it from any good teacher or join any organization. I stay in Bangalore.

Thanks.

Answer
1. Try: http://hinduebooks.blogspot.in/2009/05/srimad-bhagavad-gita-sadhak-sanjivani.htm

2. Continue with the practice of Asana, Bandha, Nadi Shodhana & Pranayama as described earlier. Then sit quiet in Padmasana with no other thought for a few minutes. No thought or want should be entertained in the mind, trying for a complete void. Do this with surrender to the Supreme. In the course of time, meditation will occur all by itself.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Guruji,

1) Yesterday I had an unconscious wet dream at around 11pm. I soon realised it had occurred and went to wash up. The reasons I can attribute this to is:
a) Irritation leading to internal and eventually outward anger.
b) Fried food, tea, garlic and sweet food consumption
c) The last two days there was no physical activity (demotivation occurred after A above)
d) I had woken up on two occasions with involuntary sexual dreams without physiological response or even much mental involvement, which I immediately displaced.
Do you think all four points fed failure?

2) After the wet dream, I again (!) woke up to D above and did the same defence action. But today morning, I lost my temper not realising what I did; it was as if I was not in control. This has led me to consume fried food and tea because I am sure another wet dream will occur further to deviation, no matter how much effort I put in here onwards. What is the point of putting in any more effort if all the bliss will evaporate anyway? Meditation was no fun today.

Answer
Let it take a few months, years or lifetimes. One should not give in or give up, till the state of Brahmacharya becomes effortless, permanent and natural. Persevere undauntedly; HIS grace then dawns by itself.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Humble Pranams Dhananjay-Ji,

I am a long-time reader of this page of yours and I am striving to be a true brahmachari.

I hasten to ask you three questions, all of which are very important, going forth.

1) Although I am getting better at conquering lust by inducing vairagya of the mortality of the flesh cage called the body, I am still somehow intensely impassioned by the idea of receiving oral sex from a woman. I also have sudden cravings, despite being of heterosexual orientation, to give oral sex to a man. What is the reason behind these two? How to conquer?

2) I am a student at a good university and I consider brahmacharya to be essential. I am smart and hard-working. However, I am dejected when I view students who are geniuses around me who both score better marks due to natural intelligence AND enjoy sense pleasures.

I do not wish to compare. However, will my intellect and grasp of knowledge become better as my brahmacharya improves? I have noticed that of late you have turned away from your direct answers and instead say "practice honestly, that which will come will come". Why this change? Should we not be certain that with proper brahmacharya memory and intelligence will increase?

3) It has been a month and a half since practicing brahamcharya and my improvements in intelligence and vitality are small. For example, I still need as much sleep as before. At times I doubt that progress is being made and sit down disappointed. In times of time frame, how should I motivate myself? When will I notice more results? Perhaps by the end of a full year? I realize all is possible only with God's grace. BUT I would like to get an idea of things to expect at different time frames, roughly speaking.

Yours truly,
Pranav

Answer
1. It takes time and patience to root out the seeds of past Samskara-s. Ignore all cravings of the non-self and hold on to the self through honest and uninterrupted Sadhana. Evverything else will be taken care of.

2. One's right ends at effort. The results are not one's concern. That, HE decides, based on HIS own grand plan and one's past karma. Hence do your duty and be content with what comes.

Intelligence and all other abilities increase naturally through the practice of correct

Brahmacharya. This is certain. However, the extent varies, depending on factors mentioned in 2.

3. My dear friend, is it rational to expect the Sun and the Moon further to a month or two of practice, when there have been millions of births of 'Abrahmacharya' in the background? Let go of this hurry and be patient. Things happen as they should, at the right time, and not before.

Samskara-s and Vasana-s which have fortified over innumerable past existences take their own time to dissolve. One should not worry about the results, for that is not in one's hands. It is effort alone which is in one's purview. The Lord does not give success so soon, just because the Ego wants it. Real success comes when there is no longer any Ego to desire it .

Practice the said methods in an unbroken manner for a few years, without expectation, with pure love and surrender to the Lord, without asking anything in return. The answers to your queries will be realized through direct experience.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

I am practicing the following attitude towards brahmacharaya:

1.) Whenever I see a woman who appears beautiful in my mind, I remind myself of the corpse of a woman, and tell myself immediately that she doesn't exist, as a woman does not exist in the future, past and present, but only appears in the present. Her beauty is unreal. It does not exist. It is impermanent.

I also remind myself with the corpse of the woman, to remind myself of what she will be in the future, and that the temporary, minute beauty I see is a reflection of the permanent beauty of brahman or atman.

Moreover, if women look at me, I tell myself that my body also does not exist, and that the beauty of my skin and my physique does not exist. It is ephemeral. The beauty of youth will disappear is only a reflection of the atman within.

However, if a woman wears makeup, dresses herself with elaborate perfumes and other articles that make her body and face appear more "beautiful," (and I can notice this), what should be my attitude? Where does that perceived beauty come from in that case? Is it a reflection of Brahman?

2.) I have read that in order to have complete self surrender, one must give up the desire for liberation itself, and completely act as an instrument of the lord, and perform all sadhana as a service to him, not expecting anything in return, including spiritual progress. However, you have mentioned that the desire for liberation, if intensified, will result in self surrender. However, Ramana Maharishi, says the desire for liberation must also be given up. Please explain this sir. Should I expect spiritual progress from the Lord? Should I expect eventual liberation? Not in this lifetime, but liberation eventually?

Thank You

Answer
1. External makeup, clothes or other cosmetic enhancements are only devices used to reinforce the effect of 'Maya' (cosmic illusion). The resulting, apparent beauty, is an illusion similar to that performed by a magician and not real. Minus these, the skin appears very ordinary. Minus the skin, the human body is the equivalent of a slaughtered carcass hung at the butcher's, with foul smelling blood, fat, flesh, bones, bodily secretions, urine & excreta.

If proper Vichara (inquiry) be done, it becomes clear that the very objective of external makeup and beautification is to hide this foulness within. To hide the foul smell emanating from the body, deodorants and perfumes are resorted to. The very nature of the body is foul smelling, as observed in the morning. This is its true state. Much effort is applied to clean it, freshen it and beautify it through the day. But again, by the end of the day, the foulness surfaces again, for reality cannot be hidden with external coatings. The process is constantly repeated to maintain the illusion. There is nothing attractive there in terms of reality. The Yogi who realizes this completely does not get the mind to savor the body of the opposite sex.

2. Yes, the desire for liberation will also have to be eventually given up, for who desires liberation? It is the Ego. The Atman (pure self) is always realized and always liberated and hence has no desire, including that for liberation. It is complete and content to infinity.

However, as long as consciousness identifies with the Body/Ego and the Ego has not been annulled with the requisite Sadhana (as in the case of the beginner aspirant who is yet to realize the self), the desire for liberation can be used to propel and motivate oneself. It can be used as a tool to kill the Ego.

This is like using a fire to extinguish itself. When fire is not fed with more wood, it burns the existing wood and eventually douses itself completely, upon conversion of all wood into ash. It may be said that the fire has consumed wood, which was acting as the fuel has killed itself in the process. The Ego is the fire, past Samskara-s are the wood and the resulting ash represents the extinguished Ego, following which the empty space free from fire represents realization.

When proper Sadhana to realize the self is carried out with surrender to the Supreme, one will eventually reach the stage where even the desire for liberation goes away by itself, just as the fire disappeared on its own upon combustion of wood. It is a natural and automatic process in case of the genuine Yogi.

Do your duty (through Sadhana to realize the self) and be quiet, expecting nothing in return, accepting that which comes on its own. Everything else will be taken care of.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Guruji,

1) Does sharing a room with non practioners (due to need for saving electricity used by A.C) lead to loss of prana due to the concentration gradient? Contact during the day is kept to the minimum.

2) Are we commiting himsa (violence) if we calmly decline commiting actions detrimental to the practice eg. Shaving beard, white lies on the phone etc. This gets the other party EXTREMELY WORKED UP AND ANGRY.

3) What is the benefit of eating prasadam?

4) What other factors within a household with servants and other comforts lead to loss of prana?

Answer
1. If sharing a room with another is a part of one's destiny, at a certain stage in life, it cannot be sidestepped. One has to hold on to his Sadhana and focus on his objective alone.

2. No. However, one should not utter the untruth with a personal motive, for some selfish gain.

3. By offering food to God, a small portion of one's Ego is diminished and the resulting food is charged with a percentage of Supreme consciousness (based on the extent of the worshiper's surrender), however small it may be. Consuming this offering (Prasadam), therefore makes the mind tranquil to a certain extent and more aligned with one's Atman (pure self). This much is the benefit and not more.

4. Let go of these worries and accept what destiny offers as a result of your Prarabdha. The aim should be to kill the thief within (Ego) and not external things. To the one who is intent on Sadhana, who holds on to the self, external factors do not cause much trouble. They get realigned, to the extent deserved, by the higher power which runs the show.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaste sir, I have been interacting with your good self and reading ur articles quite often and I really feel good to have your knowlegde and experience helping me and others, the questions are many times small and answers are very large and explanatory, I thanks for ur efforts, I understand that every has to make his efforts, I want to ask about mantras ie what mantras to chant in general, eg bij mantras, other basic mantras and where to concentrate, any good book or site for mantras for reference, I know that mantras carry energy but its a vast topic and I want ur guidance as basic level, may be for others who are beginners, , thanks and regards

Answer
"Soham" (split as Saha+Aham - meaning "I am HE") is the greatest, yet the easiest mantra. There is none greater or more powerful. Surrender the Ego and chant this mantra mentally at all times, with 'So' in inhalation and 'Ham' in exhalation, with devotion to the Almighty. It is called as the 'Hansa' mantra, for it denotes the union of the Jiva (individual) with the Supreme, on negating the Ego. Nothing more is required to the one who practices a life of Yoga & unbroken Brahmacharya with the sole aim of self-realization.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Guruji,

I keep on breaking the practice voluntarily and in a grotesque manner, despite having tasted unfathomable bliss, guidance from God and repeated plus ongoing punishment directly traceable to the act of wrong doing. I have developed vairagya and also a lot of practical knowledge through trial and error, and yet I DELIBERATELY fall. Please help me get over these voluntary breaks. Despite having noticed and felt God, I lose awareness of him further to a break and surrender and devotion become a problem. Should I take a formal vow to Gayatri Ma and how can this be done? There doesn't seem to be any priest I can trust over here. I want the vow to be official and motivated by fear of punishment.

Answer

1. Persevere to the best of your effort in Sadhana. The Ego, which is stumbling due to Agnyana will be dealt with by HIM, in the way required, so as to merge it into the self. HE will arrange life experiences in such a way that the Ego will be straightened out, so as to fix it in unwavering practice, through punishment or otherwise.

2. Taking a formal vow will not be necessary for now. Simply continue with the suggested practice, cent percent with devotion to HIM. Do this much regularly, without fail and be patient. HE will take care of the rest.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Hi,In different religions if we put dogma and cultural habits away can we say that they all want to reach the same goal or the absolute origin?

In the Christian, Clement of Alexandria (c. 150-215): "[T]he Word of God became man, that thou mayest learn how man may become God. For if one knows himself, he will know God; and knowing God, he will be made like God" In Islam, Al-Hallaj (c. 858 – March 26, 922) said "I am The Truth", "There is nothing wrapped in my turban but God".
Those two individuals said that the human being can become God or how can those citations be explained?

Answer

1. Yes. All religions lead to the one truth, called as God, who is only one. One's self is no different from God, as a drop of sea water is part of the ocean.

2. Who has to become God? Your true self is always God, being an integral part of the Supreme. There is nothing new to be achieved. All that is required is to overcome the wrong assumption of what you are not. You forget who you are and identify with the non-self comprising of the body, Ego and the world as yourself, following which suffering starts. When this delusion is overcome forever, you realize yourself. To achieve this, different paths prescribe different methods. However, all paths lead to the Lord alone.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Hi Sir, can you explain what is the best breathing method in your opinion? Pranayama means the retention of breath is intentional and in anapana you watch the breath in detached way until it cease without intention, can we practice both methods?

Answer

1. Both are methods suitable for different people in different stages in Sadhana. Anapana

Buddhist method is more suitable after a certain stage of advancement has been attained. For the beginner, Pranayama might be more preferable.

2. Stick to one practice.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hey Dhananjay.

I've been wondering for some time now, if this practice of brahmacharya truely offers the healing benefits some texts claim it does.

I've been suffering low mental health for some time, until i found out, that porn and masturbation wasn't good for your health.
So i choose to stop, but it took a while, for me to get the hang on how it worked.. and how to stop the wet thoughts from entering the mind.
today I'm at 120 days of celibacy.. and this time I find it very easy and I want to continue on this journey for many years to come.

The reason I write, is to get some clarifications on the healing benefits..

I've been having some bad knees for some years now. I'm 23 years old. I've been dealing with a problem called "myofascial trigger points" Which gives me knee crepitus and sorta inhibites me from doing sports at the level I have been able to do so before.

One of my biggest desires are for those Myofacial trigger points to disappear from my body.. and leave me with a normal functioning body.

My question is, is it possible, that the practice of celibacy will make it possible for my body to heal these trigger points illnesses from my body?

Kindest regards from Martin - Denmark

Answer
There isn't any form of self effort superior than striving for Brahmacharya, which offers the highest possibility to achieve excellence of the body & mind and eventually realize the self, when coupled with a life of Yoga. Hence the possibility to overcome the issue through such means is very bright.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
question: I recently quit masterbation. I broke up with my girlfriend a couple wks ago, I started masterbating and then I stopped. I want to be able/willing to participate in another relationship in the future with bad images in my head.

I have sometimes tried meditation in the past but I did not try to really give it a shot. I mean I would do it a little here and there but nothing consistent. I was advised to use medidation as an outlet for the build up sexual energy.

Any recommendations with using meditation? or, specifically using it for controling the urges?

Hopefully I made some sense.

Thanks for your time

Mike

Answer
1. Meditation, which is merging the mind into the self, and the final stage of Yoga, cannot be achieved all of a sudden.

2. The preceeding 7 Anga-s of Yoga are to be reasonably perfected as a preliminary foundation.

Incorporate a life of Yoga with the related lifestyle first. Meditation then becomes reachable.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

I was seeking a few clarifications.

1. Why should the Pranayama practice be of 6 cycles? What are the effects if more or less than 6 cycles are practised?

2. What is the significance of 8, 16, 24, 32 (multiples of 8) seconds of holding the breath during Pranayama?

Regards,
Ganesh

Answer
1. The prescribed Pranayama is a general approach, which applies to a wide range of people with different bodily, mental and karmic constitutions.

2. Even numbers represent symmetry and form the basis of all that is created (manifest). There is always a reaction to any action in nature, these being within the realm of duality. The body and mind, being a part of the manifest, also come within this purview of duality. Hence it follows that the procedure of Pranayama uses even numbers.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

Before this life of brahmacharaya (which has been successful in the physical sense for the past several weeks), I was an obsessive weightlifter and worked out obsessively. Furthermore, I received large amounts of attention from women, and I slowly gave up my old life of weightlifting/working out and focusing on the body to a life of spirituality dedicated to achieving the self.

However, I find my attachment to my body and my looks are still so great. Whenever I go to public places, women stare at me, and although there isn't a flood of lustful thoughts during the moment, there is usually a torrent of lustful imagination whenever I arrive to my room. Furthermore, I often find myself staring at myself in the mirror, checking the smoothness of my skin, flexing my muscles in the body. I know this is wrong, but the force of habit is too strong.

Any remedies to solve the situation?

Answer
Simply persevere with the required Sadhana, to realize the self, attributing all the seen beauty and strength to the Supreme alone. All desires for the non-self will taper in the course of time and eventually vacate. Then, one does not feel conscious of the body & the Ego. These work as mere extensions, under the will of the higher power, whatever be the nature of external activity.

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

I would like your sincere help and inputs regarding an important matter.

I will be travelling to a world-renowned violin competition at the start of May and I would like to do well. I have been following the path of brahmacharya for the last 2 months or so and small progress in mental clarity and physical strength is present.

The issues I face are as follows:

a) When going to the competition, the glitter and glamour of the world will be on full display. Much talking and interaction will be present. What must I do?

b) Several years ago, I unjustly spoke unkindly about some others and will now have to face them. I am nervous about meeting them. I am also nervous because they will be watching me when I perform. It is moments like these that confuse me, disturb me from my peaceful state, and show me truly HOW LITTLE I have achieved in the path of brahmacharya.

c) I fear embarrassment and ridicule if my performance doesn't go well. I am also nervous about what others perceive of me and think of me. It is eating me from the inside out.

I could not thank you more if you please tell me how to proceed, in a detailed fashion, regarding the above concerns. My ultimate goal in life is brahmacharya and all other goals are a means of achieving this.

Kind Regards,
Preyas

Answer
1. Maintain a calm, pleasant and quiet demeanor, always internally unaffected with the external happenings (be they pleasant or unpleasant), looking at the whole scene lightly, as a drama, yet playing your part correctly.

Actions speak louder than words. Your performance should make a statement and not your words.

2. The wise one does not worry about his past, which is unchangeable. He holds on to the self at the present, in a detached manner, as explained above, taking praise and censure equally, unaffected by both, knowing them to be nothing but illusions. Nothing affects the one who works in this manner.

3. Let go of the Ego which has all these unfounded fears and be your pure self, peaceful, ever free & completely unattached with anything. That which has to happen will happen. Why should one worry about these things? Does one worry about what happens in a dream? The waking state is another dream on the Atman and nothing else. One's duty ends at sincere effort. Do that much, relax and be quiet.

The only way to be, is to let go of all unnecessary thoughts and hold on to the self. Then, the best of one's ability emerges automatically and one is most efficient.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Guruji,

1) What can one eat when travelling by necessity for 4 days? Should one live on merely fruits, nuts, milk and raw vegetables or can one also eat the simplest of the plethora of cooked foods available?

2) Each brahmin is born into a veda shakha. This is often shown on the family amla tree at the Kuldevi's temple. What if I don't find my shakha of yajurveda sweet sounding and enjoy chanting another shakha of the yajurveda? As you know, it often takes upwards of 10 years to study one veda. Can one study the preferred shakha instead of studying the birth shakha? I come from a family that has not studied veda for many generations. I am disheartened at spending a lifetime in a shakha I don't enjoy.

Answer
1. Eat the available food, making it a point to include some fruits and milk.

2. The Veda-s and their branches concern the Ego and not the Atman (self). To the Yogi, whose sole aim is to realize the self, there are no divisions and no branches, for all that is seen and perceived is ephemeral and illusory, being Maya. The self alone is the truth, pervading everything, everywhere, there being nothing else. It is no different from universal consciousness. This is what all the Veda-s ultimately ask man to realize. This is the ultimate essence of all the Veda-s. There is no Veda whose essence goes against this truth, nor one which asks man to realize anything else.

You may chant any shakha of Veda, as long as it is done with an attitude of reverence and devotion to the Supreme.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Hello,

You know when a man reach perfect brahmacharya could he stick to just one spiritual method to achieve the self or shoud he mix many together? The spiritual methods are breathing excercise, mantra, kundalini yoga, zen meditation. ANd I have another question if you dont mind, there are religions who dont have yoga or sadhana like Jewish or Christian religion but at same time they had history of man with miracles and superpowers, how if there are no hih stage related to metaphysic and kundalini like in Tantra and Yoga?

ANSWER: 1. One method is to be followed.

2. There are different paths to realize the self. The prescribed method is one such. Whether one calls a method 'Yoga' or something else, or does not give it a name is of no consequence.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Thanks, I know there are methods to attain the self. The Kundalini energy depends on dissolving the ego to awake to 7th Sahasrara Chakra or its the other way, the ego dissolving depends on awakening first the kundalini? If the awakening of kundalini is a consequence of first dissolving the ego then teachings of kundalini and chakras are not essential to dissolve the ego.

Answer
1. The awakening of Kundalini is a consequence of divine grace and nothing else. The Ego is still very strong at the time of awakening. As Kundalini goes higher, the Ego will very slowly get beaten and destroyed, stage by stage.

2. By the time Kundalini reaches the 7th Chakra, the Ego will be almost annulled in the process. When this is fully and irreversibly accomplished, Kundalini merges into the Purusa (Supreme) and becomes one with HIM forever. Then the one who wanted realization no longer exists. He is gone forever. Pure consciousness alone remains.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaskar Guruji,

1) What can one do when faced with competition for giving 'selfless' service (a term quite internally contradictory in this context)? I have been giving this service for about three months, but today somebody started sharing the work with me and this irritated me. I tried VERY HARD but in vain to remain unaffected, thinking good thoughts like, 'He is trying to help me', 'God acts through multiple entry points into maya', 'Everybody is atman manifested', 'Ignore the rambling ego' etc. but this still took away my 'wa' as the other guy has other such opportunities for work but I don't get involved, sticking devotedly to my task. I do it as service to God and for brahmacharya assistance/commitment. This particular example is just one among the many such situations the aspiring karma yogi faces.

2) Can you please suggest some other selfless service ideas I can do if my competitor takes my place?

3) Why do I become affected by other people's vibrations of hatred and jealousy no matter how hard I try? What is the way out?

4) How is 'prathyaahaara' practiced and perfected?

Answer

1. With whom are you competing? For what are you competing? Does the word 'competition' have any meaning to the one with wisdom? The true Yogi does his duty without expectation & without desire. That alone is service to God and not doing work with some vested interest or a feeling of expectation in the mind. Irritation or any other emotion of inadequacy, when someone joins or shares work is a reaction of the foolish Ego under the grip of Moha (attachment) & Lobha (greed).

Just as the Lord works through oneself, HE also works through billions of other bodies and minds. That which is to be done through you will be done through you and those actions which are to be done through other Jiva-s (individuals) will be done through them.

Where now is competition? Who competes with whom, when it is the Lord alone who is working through all the different people? "Isavaasyamidam Sarvam" - "All this is pervaded by the Lord alone".

It is not the business of the Ego to oppose, interfere or question. Show the Ego its place and work without attachment, to both the work and its results, whatever they be.

2. Let go of the Ego and remain quiet, both internally & externally. That is the best selfless service. Then, those actions which are destined to transpire through the body & mind go on automatically, without trouble from the fool called the Ego.

3. Through Sadhana & patience.

4. By withdrawing the mind from roaming after objects of the senses, Pratyahara gradually fortifies. Keep the mind focused on the Atman (self) by remaining free of thoughts in internal meditation (whatever be the nature of external activity). That itself is Pratyahara.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Respected Sir,

I request your guidance on the following decision. I am a first year engineering student. I have been trying to follow the path shown by you of yoga and brahmacharya to realize the Self. I would be getting a summer vacation of two and half months . I have two options to utilize this summer. One would be to spend around 40 days at my college campus and do some elective academic project with professor . Another would be to go to some spiritual camp or Vedanta learning camp in some ashrama of Ramakrishna math . Since first year summers are mostly free and an academic project would not lead to much learning , so have been advised by professor to do some work of ones choice in summer. In my last winter vacations also I had asked you how to utilize time but this time I have about three months and there would be lot of time in between the regular practice of yogic practices in morning and evening. Please suggest some direction which would be best for growth towards goal of realization.

Thank you

Answer
Keep the mind free from thoughts, in constant inner meditation on the self, whatever be the nature of external activity or circumstances, remaining neutral & silent, with unbroken Sadhana. That itself is the greatest meditation.

Then, that which is destined to happen will happen smoothly, as per divine will, be it in the college campus or elsewhere. Accept it happily. All activities which the Lord makes the body and mind go through are for realization and nothing else. Such a Yogi need not even plan on what to do; everything is taken care of. The Lord takes as much responsibility as one transfers on HIM.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I know as you mentionned earlier, siddhis are themselves manifestation of mind and not enlightnement. But dont they come as a by-product of a life of yoga? What is the cause of manifestation of the siddhis?

Answer
1. Siddhi-s come to the extent destined, to that particular body & mind, from the power of the Atman, just as the rays of the Sun pass through a piece of cloth, when held against Sunlight.

2. The cause of any kind of manifestation, including the world is the Leela (play) of the Lord, Siddhi-s included.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Greetings Dhananjay,

I am a 20 year old male. I have been practicing Brahmacharya successfully for over a year now. However lately for the past few months, I've been feeling very dispassionate and disinterested towards life in general, as if I was suffering depression. I have not been giving much focus on my college studies. I don't feel like living a normal, married life. I feel like I want to dedicate my life solely to spiritual pursuits.

Is it normal to feel this way during Brahmacharya?

Also I like the idea of having a nice wife and children. And of course I would practice Brahmacharya in marriage and have sex only for procreation. But if I have very little conscious interest in sex, should I even enter into a marriage?

Answer
1. At one point, the aspirant feels as though he is ready to give up the body and the world with extreme dispassion. A few days later, the same aspirant longs intensely for all the things he used to covet earlier. All these are oscillations of the Ego, which are to be ignored. Various states of desire and no-desire are passed through during the initial years of practice. They are of no consequence. One should turn a blind eye & focus only on uninterrupted Sadhana.

2. HE will decide if you have to enter marriage, when and with whom, as HE decides all other things. Do your duty (Sadhana to realize the self) and remain quiet, accepting whatever HE decides, as regards this dream called life.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I am a humble practitioner about 2 months along the path. I agree with and respect all your teachings. Except for your definition of God.

Sir, you always claim that God is somehow not only omnipresent but also in control and in full awareness of all beings and mechanisms. You even say that he pushes individuals toward self-realization.

I am a strong rationalist. In fact, I follow brahamcharya because to me it is rational to withdraw the mind away from fleeting external pleasures such as young women. Who is God? Is God a tangible being? Or is God simply the power of nature, the law of cause and effect (karma) that ensure that actions meet appropriate results? I find this unresolved questions a great impediment to my practice and awareness and would be most grateful if you could elucidate your views and teach me the truth.

Obeisances,
Preyas

Answer
1. Who are you? Who is asking this question?

2. One need not believe in the existence of God; but cannot deny his own existence, for you are aware of your existence.

3. In the rational approach, one does not believe in anything, except that which is tangible and comprehensible. So the first thing to be found out is who you are, for all other perspectives and view points of what is and what is not is based on your cognition of those things. It is not possible to know the truth about something without knowing the truth about the one who wants to know the truth.

For now, find the correct answer to this question. Then let us take up the matter of God, if that matter still remains.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

When praying, who is the devotee and the one to whom he is devoted? Is the ego operating when practising devotion during prayers (although it is fun)? When in unity (total surrender in non prayer action such as movement) what is the difference between the devotee and the one to whom he is devoted? Since there is no difference, what is devotion to the Supreme (in prayer)?

Answer

1. The Jiva (individual supported by the Ego) is the devotee, trying to invoke the grace of the Supreme, through devotion, in external prayer. In meditation, the same individual tries to merge his Ego with the Atman (self), again no different from the Supreme, by overcoming all other thoughts.

2. Unity occurs only when the Ego completely merges in the Supreme, as in Samadhi. Then, there is no mind. That alone is complete surrender.

As long as the Ego exists, the mind also exists and duality therefore exists. As soon as the Ego merges into its source (Atman), there is no duality. Hence duality is an illusion concerning the mind and not real. One is always the Atman and only the Atman.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

I feel very much yawning (jamhai) esp. during meditation. How to get rid of this?

Answer

Yawning & sleepiness during meditation is the result of Tamas (inertia). It will resolve by itself in the course of time with regular and unbroken Sadhana, whereupon, energy stagnating in the lower Chakra-s (responsible for stupor), rises up into the higher regions, leading to a clear and tranquil mental state

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

1) Is there any way to conquer sleepiness which can lead to laziness, when sleep is not of very high quality during the initial year or two?

2) How many hours of hard mental work is recommended for a beginner?

3) Is living on family income such as a self sustaining business or even inheritance detrimental? An individual living in this way, with dispassion, can have all the time he wants for trying to dissolve into bliss.

Answer

1. With regular Sadhana, issues concerning sleep resolve by themselves. There is no shortcut.

2. As much as is required to fully utilize the mind and keep it active and bright.

3. One receives the income which is destined by his past & present karma. One should be content with whatever comes through honest effort and focus on merging his mind into the self.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhananjay ,

I had undergone an operation for Retina Detachment in my better eye(as posted earlier).Post silicone-oil operation vision is hazy and Glaucoma has also crept in.I am using Lumbigan and combigan eye drop.I am trying my best to observe Brahmacharya but mental slips and noctural emission occurs at regular interval.

Can I use first morning urine as eye & ear drop considering the fact that I have weak optic nerve,retina and suffering from a number of eye ailments.I have started using it for nearly 1 week and it gives relief from pain.In one website they have warned us not to use it.

Can I use it in my normal eye also.It is also not normal as -9.000D specs are being used.Optic nerves make crackling sound which I can hear while moving my eyes.Can drinking first morning urine may have side-effects.

One more question.I am not able to read from my left eye.Everything appears wavy.Should I continue in software company or switch to PSU bank(i recently got selected in one).Please guide what else i can do to avoid further deterioration of eye condition.

Thanks a lot for guiding us.You are doing a very noble work.May Lord bless you with supreme devotion!

Answer
1. Use the Sivambu collected in the 'Brahmimuhurtham', as eye drops for both eyes.

2. Consuming Sivambu collected between 3.00~4.30 A.M has no side effects. Its benefits are indescribable in rooting out various forms of ill-health.

3. Yes, you may switch over.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

I have been making efforts at yoga and brahmacharya since the age of 18. I started meditating regularly for 1-2 hours at the age of 21 and started doing regular pranayam from the age of 26. I only started having some degree of success at brahmacharya around the age of 27-30 when I would reach several months of purity (maximum attained was 5 months at a stretch) before relapsing into perversions like self stimulation. At an earlier age, I messed up even more by going to certain clubs but I won't give too much details out of respect for other forum readers. But all that stopped since the age of 27, except for self stimulation and porn which I couldn't give up for a long time. You have given good guidance to me several times in the past and I would have some really good experiences from regular meditation, pranayam and brahmacharya practice, but my ego would rise and I would relapse into self stimulation and even porn after few months of purity. Sometimes I would have visitors and couldn't keep up sattvic diet or would get stressed from work and couldn't keep up sadyhana and fall during those periods. I was especially prone to fall after travelling. The pattern (few months of purity followed by fall) continued for several years until the age of 33 last year, and I ended up getting some major health problems. (I usually never get sick) I once ended up in an emergency ward and thought I was going to die.

It became so bad that I had to take a break from work. Also there were pains all over the body and I couldnt even lie down straight, especially if I ate regular food. The only thing that helped was completely switching to bland healthy food. I gave up salt, sugar, dairy, oil, white rice, processed food etc and switched to vegetable juicing, fruits and whole grains. After a month, health stabilized a little. As a result of eating pure food, thoughts also became pure and I made a resolve to take up brahmacharya and yoga for rest of remaining life and never to return to old deviant ways. I slowly increased sadhana and took a long break from work and came to India.

Now I have finished a little over 4 months of brahmacharya at a stretch. I have been doing sadhana 8-10 hours a day for the past three weeks or so, and it often continues through sleep (it's a kind of wakeful sleep). Health has been constantly improving and paramatma has been really kind to me, and allowing me to make amends and return to the correct path. But suddenly I am getting a relapse of a chronic hip pain that I used to have (since age of 23 when I used to do kung fu). This is affecting my ability to sit for long hours in meditation. I recall reading in some of your earlier replies that after a certain time, there is detox reaction in the body where body eliminates toxins and certain pains may resurface. Can you please elaborate on this? Do you know how long this phase of detoxification may last? I have done a lot of mistakes in life and paratmatma has been really kind to me and giving me this opportunity to make amends. I am wondering how to deal with this latest challenge.

I am really grateful for your continued guidance and support and pray to paramatma to shower you with his abundance grace, blessings and ultimate Self realization.

thank you,
jai sat chit anand

Answer
Simply continue with the required Sadhana, turning a blind eye to any pain with the reminder -"Past karma committed by the Ego are being borne by the body & mind for final evacuation in this birth. Let that which happens happen and get vacated for good, for I am neither the body nor the mind, but the pure self alone, who is a mere witness".

The issue will go away in the course of unbroken practice.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
1) Why does one feel like showing off his spiritual progress despite subduing the mind in all other fields? Is this because of the inherent spirit of generosity in the human spirit (that drives one to share)? Or is it some subtle perverted desire (under the influence of maya) to receive credit for one's efforts and acquire name, fame and superiority? This can apply to material progress as well.

2) Can yogic practice for self realisation commence about 10 or 15 minutes before 6 in the morning?

3) Say, I have a property that I want to sell. This property houses a wild, forest like garden. A lot of sparrows, crows, monitor lizards, chameleons etc. come to this place for food (bread and grains provided a few times a day) and water. Upon selling the premises, one cannot take the wild creatures with him like domestic dogs and tortoises, nor can provision of services persist. The new owner may also cut down the trees. What are the implications of this?

4) What is the reason for sadness and extreme compassion and love for animals?

Answer
1. The desire to show off is the tendency of the Ego, which, being powerless, having no independent existence of its own in reality, tries to make up for its inherent lack of strength, knowledge and bliss by jumping at any and every opportunity for self magnification. One should snub the Ego and keep it under the foot of Gnyana.

When one holds on to the self through unbroken and proper Sadhana, the result is an increase in Vairagya (dispassion), for everything perceivable by the mind & the senses. The Ego gradually becomes weak, resulting in peace and tranquility, with no desire to prove or show off. One who is in the Atmic state is content in the self by the self, with no reaction internally, though displaying external emotions to the world. He does not get the mind to show off, for the truth is infinite & illuminating, all by itself.

2. Yes, the earlier, the better.

3. To the extent governed by 'Runa' (debt) that one has accrued towards various other Jiva-s in the Lord's Leela (play), those Jiva-s will be sent into one's life to settle that debt. One can neither stop what is to be given, nor give more than what is to be taken. The law of karma takes care of all these things automatically. Therefore, one need not worry about the future of any being, for all are taken care of by HIM. It is enough if one remains kind and considerate to the extent possible, wishing all well.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi, do you know the ancient stories about a x hero battle dragons/monsters, are these stories allegories about battling the ego? The perfect examples in India could be the story of Rama killing Ravana.

Answer
Yes, all mythological stories denoting the fight between good and evil represent the slaying of the Ego, following which pure consciousness shines. All wars so fought are nothing but the inner war one has to fight against the enemy called the Ego.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

1. Should (Asana, Bandha, Nadi Shodhana, Pranayama) be practiced when a person has throat infection or slight cold.
Under what circumstances should the practice be stopped(i.e. during fever, flu-like symptoms, etc). Should it ever be stopped for any kind of illness?

2. What about the practice for women during the menstruation?
Should the practice be stopped just for 3 days, or should it be stopped till there is no more flow.

Heartfelt thanks.

Answer
1. The practice stops by itself when there is no Prana (life energy) to perform the said methods, further to illness. As one recovers, the Yogi gradually gets the mind to revert back into practice. One generally does not need to give up the practice under minor conditions of ill-health.

2. As soon as there is cessation of heavy bleeding (after 3 days), the practice can be restarted. However, women can perform meditation, even during the menses, without taking recourse to physical practices & Pranayama.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Sir
thanks in advance

1) my body type is skinny, very thin, lean, so no separate stomach and lower abdomen, how other men have. so inferiority complex.
what should be the position of kaupina thread? i tried above waist bone, on waist bone and below it. but neither felt comfortable when used for 12 hours or so. many a time a cut my skin.

2) you have guided not to wear kaupina in night time. but when not wore it, erections ejaculation, noctornal emission taking place.

3) the cloth is covering the private area twice and tucked again back. so very problematic when in journey or in city when urination call is there, as above kaupina there is trouser. any easy way for tying and tying?

4) how much tight it should be? more tighter, the thread is pulled down creating pain from side.
(cant use stitched one as environment is not favourable, place and members around. so using thread and white old dhoti cloth for kaupina.

5) as weight is very low, feel shy, guilty, inferiorty complex.

6) lost father at early age. he was very short tempered, so no communication. am the 9th child. at the birth time, both parents crossed forties, early fiftees. now cant communicate properly with mother. brother 15 years older, brother-in-law 28 years older, but happy in there life, never wanted to communicate. parents didnt want me to mix with friends, so no friends. now no way to get a friend, because of family situation had to leave native place and come to a city. no one male member to communicate. feel guilty of finding a male life partner. am i dishonest with my parents.

thanks
regards

ParshuRam

Answer
1. Tying it (moderately tight but not too tight), just above the hip bone is the correct position. Do not use a thread. Use a stitched Kaupin, as described in past answers.

2. Nocturnal emissions are to be overcome through Sadhana and not by tying the Kaupin during sleep.

3. With practice, the task becomes easy. The benefits outweigh the extra effort.

4. Use a stitched Kaupin, with a broad, belt like cloth as the waist band. It should be tight enough to just let a finger or two pass through at the abdomen.

5. Different people have different constitutions, which results in different kinds of bodies. There is no cause to feel shy or inferior. Be happy with what God has given and focus on Sadhana. You are not the body but the Atman. Realize this and be at peace.

6. Based on one's past karma, every person is born & lives under a certain set of circumstances. Do you Dharma (Sadhana to realize the self) by following the 8 Anga-s of Yoga properly. In the course of time, everything will stabilize, leading to auspiciousness, peace and happiness. This is certain.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir, my greetings to you. Please clear some questions that are bothering me.

1. In a previous answer, you said to know god a person must realize who he is. Who am I?

2. Do enlightened beings also eat only vegetarian food? Are there not cases of such people taking non-veg?

3. Does one experience pain and pleasure after enlightenment?

4. Can a realized person do whatever he wants, just like god... since he has become one with God?

Answer
1. As long as the one who is asking this question exists, the self cannot be realized. When the one asking the question merges into the self, it will be known through direct experience.

2. An enlightened being eats a little of whatever comes to him by way of his Prarabdha (karma working out now), to sustain the body. He has no sense of differentiation between vegetarian or non-vegetarian food, for he takes in only the Prana (essence)in food, without least effect from the Guna (trait) of the elements that constitute the food. He is not concerned with any of these things, for the one who was concerned no longer exists.

3. The body & the senses of the realized sage experience pain or pleasure when consciousness partly associates with them, temporarily, when he brings his consciousness down into the worldly plane for 'Lokasamgraha' (benefit of mankind). However, he (as the Atman), remains completely unaffected, watching both pain and pleasure equally, with no internal reaction, as a mere witness, unconcerned with both these.

4. When he has become one with God and there is therefore only God, who is there to 'will', 'wish', 'do' or 'want'? That which the Lord wills occurs, just as always. Such a sage is an extension of the Lord in flesh and blood, with no individual want.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
1) What is the subtle difference between Atman and Paramatman; Brahman and Parabrahman?

2) What can one do about external sounds such as cars passing, crows etc. during meditation? Merely remind the mind of their falsity?

3) Does meat eating (when a vegetarian diet is possible - unlike in a dessert) create illness causing karma for being part of a culture thriving off killing innocent creatures?

4) Does ignoring someone you hate (including refraining from pleasantries and greetings) constitute himsa? It is a deep, karmic, unexplainable and unconditional hatred. Interaction is kept to strict, POLITE, verbal delegation in the workplace. No love or hate is normally felt for ANY OTHER person and this is quite contemplative.

Answer
1. First realize the Atman. Other questions later, if they still remain...

2. When Pratyahara is perfected, external sounds do not matter.

3. One eats the food which is necessary, based on one's activity. Meat is the food for those indulging in hours of strenuous physical work. Under lack of such work, meat becomes toxic within the system. For a purely Yogic life, with a little physical activity and much meditation, meat is not necessary. So when one does that which is not necessary, he has to face the repercussions.

4. Hatred kills the one who hates. Being silent without malice does not produce negative karma.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Respected Sir,

Thank you for clearing some of my doubts thus far.

I am going through much confusion with several matters now. Kindly advise me on the right path.

I am practicing brahmacharya to the best of my ability for the past 3 months, and I have been fortunate enough to not have any night break thus far. I will strive further along this path.

1) When I pursue the path of self-realization, I notice that I lose all my motivation for external accomplishment in work, career, music, etc. I am only 21, so I cannot afford this. For the time being, would it be OK to divert my senses away from the sex impulse but focus on other worldly pursuits? I am confused.

The moment I appreciate sense pleasures, the highs and lows of emotion overcome me and I start to care about what others think, etc. However, the moment I withdraw inward, I start to become ruthlessly dismissive of others because I see them as hypocrites. Please, please help.

2) I attended a funeral of a dear mentor a few weeks back. I was gnawed for a little time but then realized that the body is merely a vehicle through which a soul continues its journey. I know you have said earlier that the Jiva leaves the body upon death and stays in the astral plane for some time, but I don't understand what is the difference between Atma and Jiva. Is Jiva part of the Atma? When people in the West talk about the "soul", which of these two are they referring to? In the case of a Yogi, are the two one?

3)A close relative who is spiritually inclined has told me that while brahmacharya is the best path for now, the secret to a long life is following the varnashrama 4 stages of life. I agree because all the great sages in the past who solely confined to brahmacharya from birth and never experienced sexual/married life had very short lives-Swami Vivekananda being most prominent. Whereas those who first tasted earthly pleasures, then started on the path to self realization, lived healthily (such as Swami Sivananda and Gandhi).

Why is it that a life of pure brahmacharya is always short?

4) Although I am ambitious, I find myself constantly lonely and depressed during the night hours and wish that I had a partner-A female who would live with me, provide me with emotional/household support, yet also understand and respect my practice of brahmacharya. Is this advisable?

Basically, I am confused. As a result of my very small experience with brahmacharya thus far I have felt healthier but I am also very, very confused. I don't understand why. Please help this young practitioner.

I don't have a physical guru. I have hoped desperately for such a guru who is truly self-realized in today's world but don't have one. As far as I am concerned, you are my only living guru and I am forever indebted to your kindness.

Preyas

Answer

1. Where has it been said that one should not do his given duty? Sadhana does not mean sitting in meditation from morning to evening in one place. Sadhana is holding on to the self and doing all worldly duties without attachment and without expectation, as a service to God. , Brahmacharya then occurs all by itself. Set aside an hour for Yogic practices in the Brahmimuhurtham and do that which is required, through the course of the day. With practice, things will flow smooth.

2. Atman is the pure, real self, no different from the Lord, by whose power an individual functions. Jiva is the resultant entity formed by the superimposition of the individual Ego on the Atman, whereupon consciousness comes down into it, creating the illusion that one is a limited individual, with a body & mind and separate from universal consciousness. In the west, the Jiva is referred to as the 'soul'.

3. Ayus (life span) is dependent on various factors. Brahmacharya is not the single factor on which it depends. Do your Dharma (efforts to realize the self) and be quiet. That which has to happen will happen at the right time, based on HIS plan.

4. When marriage is destined, a suitable partner will enter into one's life at the right time. If one's efforts at Brahmacharya are honest after the birth of a child, the partner also eventually turns supportive.

5. The Lord is the real Guru. There is no other Guru. If one surrenders to HIM, HE will instruct, either from within (via the Atman) or from without (through a physical medium called as the external Guru). Hence the Guru is always with you and HE knows you better than yourself. Let there be no fears.

Simply persevere with a life of Yoga & Brahmacharya, with the sole aim of realizing the self, without asking anything in return, with love and devotion to God. At the right time, all that which has to happen will happen (be it marriage or other things). Your duty ends at doing this much. The rest, HE takes care and is not your concern.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

namaste dhanjay bhaiya,
I am 25 year old . I have failed 1000 times and not been able to follow even 0.1% of your advice so i feel very bad asking questions from you.... sometimes i feel that i must stop this practice but not been able to stop also.... I feel that this thing is very very difficult for me.... i can understand your teaching from mind only.... mind know that this is good and that is bad.... but you know when maaya works then every logic of this mind fails.... so i want to ask you if someone try this thing until his death and not been able to do anything and remember god at last time. will he get moksha?

Answer

1. One should never give up. Having being awarded with birth in the human body, one's duty is to strive for Brahmacharya, to realize the self, till the last breath, with devotion to God. When this much is done, Brahmacharya will eventually become the way of life. If not in this birth, the benefit of the effort will be carried forward to the next existence, where one eventually gets established.

2. One gets the mind to immerse in the thought of the Lord and only the Lord at the time of death, only when past Samskara-s and Vasana-s which are preventing such residence have been mitigated to the final extent.

When these are still in strength, one gets engulfed with attachment to the body & the world at the time of death, as a result of which he passes away with desire for these. Since such past impressions have not been annulled, and since there is still desire for the Asat (unreal) he takes birth in another body, without Moksha (liberation).

Therefore, to achieve liberation, one should roast all the seeds of past Samskara-s which are preventing residence in the self, as the self, completely. Such a Yogi passes away immersed in the self (no different from God) and hence becomes THAT. He has no rebirth in the physical plane.

Who is encountering failure? It is the Ego. You are not the Ego but the pure self. Remember this and live as the self through honest Sadhana. Strive honestly for a life of Yoga & Brahmacharya, using the necessary methods. Things will improve in due course and you will eventually establish in Brahmacharya in this very life.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
hello greeting, I m 25 yrs old I wanted to ask are there means to achieve stainless brahmacharya since there are wide space boundary between practical practise and understanding my understanding constantly makes me helpless on counteracting passion since I have very limited success on this path I do not know I feel guilty after not living up to my motives in achieving brahmachrya can u give constructive means to bloom into glory of true brahmachari

Answer
Go through each and every past answer from the start and apply the said Sadhana in an honest and uninterrupted manner. The practice will get established in the course of time.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
A long time practicioner of brahmacharya (understood in the limited sense of abstention from sex in thoughts, deeds, and words) if he practice meditation he can reach a state of forgetting body and mind easier than a common man?
The body appear much as an obstacle as when you feel it heavy or with much muscular or nervous tension which then attach the mind to the sensations of the body or to the coarse or irregular breath during meditation.

Answer
1. Yes.

2. When meditation on the self is practiced for many years, with unbroken Brahmacharya carried out in the true sense, the mind eventually de-links from the body and merges into the self, following which there is no longer any awareness of the body, world or mind. That is termed as Samadhi. Then there is only the ocean of pure consciousness, the true self.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi. About the story of Moses and his staff and the passing of the Red Sea by the people. The parting of the Red Sea and the passing of the people between the two wall of water can be the equivalent to the prana passing through Ida, Pingala, and then to the central sushumna nadi? The serpent staff could sometimes represent wisdom becuase when it awakes and pass through chakras it permit spiritual union with the source? It's unbelievable to see many people in history take the same symbol to represent spiritual wisdom. http://www.1paradigm.org/serpents.html

Answer
Whatever be the symbols used, there is only one truth, which alone is the source of everything. Different approaches are used to denote the means used to arrive at the truth. What ultimately matters is realizing oneself to be no different from this truth and resting as THAT, eternally, in peace.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Good afternoon, Since my birth, specially in childhood, teen years and early 20ths I went to catholic church with my family and so learn about Christ and past church saints, going to mass and learning prayers. Now im not religious. But since the time I can think more precisely I started to have some doubts about that. In my cultural religion there is no teaching at all about brahmacharya per se, the teachings are mere society rules as everybody knows like believe in Christ, not killing, not stealing, love the neighbours, but in reality nothing really deep or life changing.
What is the necessity to assist to religious places in that case if the person dont meditate or dont practice brahmacharya? Why some religions teach brahmacharya and others dont? Isnt practicing religion in that way like living in ignorance about the reality?

Answer
Verses from the Holy Bible, advocating Brahmacharya:

"Flee from sexual immorality. Every other sin a person commits is outside the body, but the sexually immoral person sins against his own body. Or do you not know that your body is a temple of the Holy Spirit within you, whom you have from God? You are not your own, for you were bought with a price. So glorify God in your body."

--Corinthians 6:18-20

"For there are eunuchs who were born that way, and there are eunuchs who have been made eunuchs by others--and*there are those who choose to live like eunuchs for the sake of the kingdom of heaven.* The one who can accept this should accept it."

--Matthew 19:12

1. All religions advocate Brahmacharya, which is nothing but glorifying the Lord, by merging one's Ego into HIM (who resides as the pure self within). This process is itself meditation.

There is not such a religion, in the true sense, which does not advocate the above, call the religion by what name one may, or not call it by any name at all.

There is only one Lord, one truth and hence only one religion. The path used to reach the Lord is that religion, and there are as many paths as there are people and hence there appear as many religions, which all lead to HIM alone.

2. Practice that which HE makes you do, with devotion, love and surrender to HIM, whatever be the path. That itself is the greatest religion.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Guruji,

I previously asked you a few queries regarding a music competition that I had planned to attend. To remind you quickly, I am a young brahmachari who has been engaged in the practice for a few months.

Despite performing well at the event, politics ensued and I came back empty-handed in 5 categories although numerous individuals among the general public had thought I would have taken 1st.

A young girl of 15 won the grand prize. It was her first attempt.

How does one deal with such crushing disappointment? After laboring for 5 years, coming back empty-handed in each, only to witness the machination of politics and the administering of the prize to a 15 year on her first try? Granted, she was talented. But I had merited at least a 2nd prize in at least one category.

So many efforts, so much disappointment. By the law of karma, am I to assume that I am destined to not find true success? All I want is to make people happy with my vibrant and passionate singing. My music appeals to countless individuals. Yet I find myself stymied.

Is it right for me to blindly put my faith in my unswerving brahmacharya? I know that the realization of the self necessitates the destruction of the ego, but as a young man in his early 20s, I find that it is necessary to have self-confidence/ego in order to compete with other hungry youngsters. I do, after all, need to succeed in the material world to satisfy my needs and those of my parents and eventually have the money to open an eye ashram/scholarship center for disabled children with eye issues like myself.

What is one to do in such a grave predicament? All energies are thrown yet the universe seems to mock one in the face. It is painful. I have not received any recognition and seem to lack the cunning needed to infiltrate this political circle to win a grand award (Which will hugely boost my career).

Isn't the practice of brahmacharya in some way conducive to the development of a magnetic personality, one that can overcome obstacles and others? Thus far, I do not know and I stand before you confused and worried. Only your teachings can salve my wounds and establish me on the correct course of action at this time.

Humbly yours, Preyas.

ANSWER: When the one experiencing all these emotions is gone, when truth shines from all around, further to annihilation of ignorance, that which is due will come, to the extent deserved.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Is that truly all there is? How can such a confusing topic be solved through the realization of the self? I ask because it seems as if cunning and political collaboration are the drivers of success in today's world. When you refer to "to the extent deserved", does that mean that success is just a derivative of whatever prior karma we carry?

Answer
To whom is the confusion? Realize it & let go of it. That which then remains is the truth. The entire world-show is staged with this objective and nothing else. Then, that which has to come will come. This is the way for you.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaskar Sir,

1) Artificial intelligence has become a common concept of recent. Is maya the crème de la crème of an artificial intelligence programme? Does that not mean God is merely the power source and the rest is just automation since the Atman is ever constant? Then all these concepts of gaining sidhis, material opulence etc. are like a Super Mario character collecting coins?

2) In light of the above concept (if at all relevant), how does one annul the ego during creative and mundane operation such as painting, studying, working etc. What should be one's perception of the dream like reality one is moving about in?

I apologise if the above topics sound silly but please enumerate as work is an EXTREMELY CONFUSING concept for me and the topic is difficult to exhaust.

2) I believe interaction with fellow aspirants may be beneficial at this preliminary stage. Please endorse this or advise against it, as you see fit.

If endorsed by you, I request all aspirants interested to send me their name on +254718888881, on WHATSAPP so that we may start a group called 'Self Realisation'.

Answer
1. Various things manifest through Maya, as per the grand plan of the Almighty. All these are only illusions and not real.

2. Like an actor playing his part in a drama. The actor behaves as the character for the time being, but always holds on to himself (the real person).

When one learns to reside in the self, work takes place automatically, with minimum thought. Tasting the self & residing in the self, gradually occur, after few years of unbroken Sadhana.

3. Interaction is to be avoided. Real knowledge surfaces only in solitude. The Atman is silence.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear sir,

I have been doing yoga (asana, bandha, nadi sodhana, pranayama, meditation) for the past 4 months, For pranayama I am doing 24 counts(breath holding) for the last 2 months(I started with 16 and then increased to 24 after 2 months, my question is as follows

1. While doing nadi sodhana, my breathing pattern has become very silent and smooth recently (initially there was some sound +heaviness), I do nadi sodhana for 5 minutes (1 cycle takes around 40 to 50 seconds), so I can say I do around 6-7 repetitions in 5 minutes.(Do I need to increase this to 10 minutes?)I feel so much relaxed after nadi sodhana

2. While doing Pranayama,(I do 6 repetations), for first 2 repetation my breathing is very smooth+ no sound , after that it becomes heavy with sound and it is fast as if I cannot fully control my intake or exhaust.(I feel as if I cannot take breath smoothly as I do for nadi sodhana) Am I missing something here or is it ok to continue like this until I can do it smoothly: I feel I am not in control of my breath.

3. Food:- These days, I feel that my stomach is full even with a little of food and I do not feel much appetite especially in the night. (can I drink just 1 cup ragi + 1 small banana+ 2dates) will that be sufficient for the night

Answer
1. Increasing Nadi Shodhana is not necessary.

2. Continue with the practice.

3. Yes, as long as there are no signs of hunger and the malt contains a glass of milk.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Respected Guruji, I am a frequent reader of your page. Your gnyana has truly changed my life and rapidly accelerated my growth towards the self. Know that your pursuit of the self is also to be blessed by the supreme for the work you have done, are doing and will continue to do. I feel I should begin trying to uphold the values put forth in the ashtangas.

However, sometimes in my life I am forced to go against those values due to the expectations my superiors at work have from my role as an employee. My understanding is (feel free to question its validity) that my work is inherently related to my dharma in this life time, therefore I try my utmost to fulfill my workplace duties with my best efforts. But how does one strike that balance between moral values such as speaking truth, causing no harm to other beings etc. and one's dharmic responsibilites?

Answer if it be the will of the Supreme.
Humbly Yours,
Sahil

Answer
1. The nature of one's Atman (true self) is that of the Lord himself. Therefore, he who lets go of the Ego & surrenders himself to the Supreme (by merging the mind into the self), works as a mere extension of the Almighty.

Since such a person does not commence any work for personal gain (knowing there is nothing to be gained or lost in reality), the actions of such a man are the actions of God, and therefore always right. They automatically fall within the bounds of Dharma (righteousness). Such a person does not worry about what is right and wrong, for his mind, having surrendered to the Lord, remains neutral, without desire and anger. The Lord takes care of everything, and makes him do the right things.

2. It is enough if one holds on to the self. Dispassion, detachment and virtue are then the natural byproducts. One need not do anything special to acquire these, for these are one's very nature. 'Moksha' (liberation) is one's (Atman's) real nature. Liberation or self-realization are for the Ego and not the Atman. The Atman is always liberated. All that is required is to overcome identification of consciousness with the non-self (Ego, body & world). To achieve this, one has to perform continuous and unbroken Sadhana, at all times.

When this much is done, the Yama - Niyama-s occur by themselves. He who practices such restraint eventually becomes the embodiment of auspiciousness. The Lord does not let wrong actions to transpire from such a body & mind, for the one who performed wrong earlier is no longer in charge.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir,

Is reincarnation real?

Thanks. Best to ya.

Answer
1. Reincarnation concerns the Ego, which finds itself in different bodies and circumstances, birth after birth.

2. In terms of the absolute reality, there is no reincarnation, for the Ego is unreal and the Atman (self) is eternal and constant, having no birth or death.

Therefore, there is no birth and no death. One remains as he is, as pure consciousness.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhananjay

I have been trying to practice brahmacharya for the past few weeks. To be precise I have not watched / done anything related to sex for the past 28 days.
In addition over the past 2 weeks I have started to do Pranayama and meditation early in the morning.

My Question: In the initial initial week , although I had very high urge to do something related to sex, I abstained and I felt full of energy. But of late I feel very sleepy, and tired. I do martial arts and have noticed a significant decrease in my stamina over the last week.
I wanted to know if there is something I am missing in my practice of celibacy that is causing such side effects of weakness, when on the contrary I should be brimming with energy?

Answer
When transmutation is not carried out correctly, energy stagnates in the lower regions, leading to Tamas (inertia), causing stupor and lethargy, which eventually ends in a break.

Sexual energy, when properly transmuted leads to brightness, cheer and constructivity. Go through all the past answers & apply all the said methods completely. The issue will resolve.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir,

If reincarnation is real, that means we die and our soul or jobs or whatever comes back into another body, right? I wish I could liberate myself within this lifetime, but I may only make it to the level of samhadi. I don't know, I'm just being hypothetical. Can you tell us what you know about reincarnation and whether all of us will be liberated one day? Or do we have this one life to make the best out of what we are given? I would love to receive your perspective and understanding on the subject, please.

Thank you much.
Best regards

Answer
1. You, being the Atman (self) are already liberated. Life, death and bondage are the dreams experienced by the Ego. To wake up from this dream, by getting free of the 'I-ness' (Ego) is self-realization. Every soul will eventually wake up.

2. Performing Sadhana to the best of one's effort, with surrender to God is what is required. Then, the best outcome is eventually attained and one soon wakes up.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Dhananjay,

In response to my last question, thank you sir! You give great philosophy. I aspire to become brahmacharyi so badly. It's great, and I love my devotion for The Lord. I wish to know all answers one day, even as many as you. Philosophy intrigues me greatly, and I desire another answer with real or hypothetical examples from you :D. If a soul's flesh-vessel dies, whether in his quest for brahmacharya or not, will he be reborn into another vessel!? Will a man that transpires greatly to be The Lord's vessel be gifted with advantage over others in his quest for liberation, as Scriptures may elude to? If a man is at war with The Lord, will he be given a human-bodily vessel, or perhaps even an animals vessel, with much disadvantage and hardship fated to him or her in his destined quest for liberation?

I don't know if this question is congruent with what you're here to teach, which I perceive to be honest sadhana and action that brings liberation, but again, I'm deeply intrigued and appreciate your answers.

Best regards,
Erik

Answer
Karma accrued by one's Ego in an existence (be it towards or against realization of the self) is carried over to successive existences, where it bears fruit. The results are also corresponding. Therefore, he who works towards realizing the self finds himself in a better overall position in the next existence as compared to one who works against the same.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Again! A few questions regarding prana flow and transmutation. What happens to the flow of prana when ones mind is beginning to merge with the self? Does it begin to rise up towards the higher centers or does one still have to actively raise it through the yogic methods prescribed? (Pranayama, Asana etc). I recently read a post of yours where you mentioned that if energy is not being transmuted in the correct manner, it begins to stagnate in the lower regions causing Tamas and the related lethargy and inertia. I am experiencing highly tamasic traits within my mind. I meditate on the silence of the atman every morning with little to no effort since its become habit by the grace of god. However, everytime I try to initiate a cycle to habitualize other practices such as pranayama, i never gain the required momentum and it eventually fails. Thanks!

Answer
1. One's mind moves and eventually merges into the self only when Prana moves towards the higher regions (through the required practices). Correspondingly, Prana moves higher, only when the mind moves towards the self. Both move in tandem and are inseparable. Hence one should perform Sadhana on one side and also let go of all thoughts, following which the self alone remains.

2. In case of the beginner, adequate physical & mental work, along with the prescribed Sadhana is to be performed on a daily basis, if stagnation is to be avoided, along with dispassion for the ephemeral world. Then, energy automatically flows higher, and does not cause lethargy or inertia.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: I dnt know but somewhere i read that a brahmachari should not use fan, cooler , ac etc.
Is this true that we should live according to environment?

ANSWER: 1. Occasional, mild use of a fan, under hot conditions poses no problems.

2. Air-conditioners should not be used. The environment in an AC atmosphere is high on foul, impure air, devoid of Prana. The humidity is altered. It will lead to various forms of ill-health in due course. Use of air-conditioners is one of the primary causes of respiratory problems, which lead to all other problems.

Sweating is a natural and healthy process. Nature has programmed the body to expel heat & toxins through sweating. The body should be allowed to sweat under heat. Curbing sweat through an artificially conditioned atmosphere will result in disease in the long run. One should let external air to freely move around the room through windows and ventilators.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Thank you so much bhaiya...

(1) I live in jaipur and temp is around 40-43 degree... So whenever i go outside i pack myself like egypt mummies :D ... Earlier only girls used to pack themself like that but now boys also doing this because this temp and pollution creates skin problems... But one day i read that girls bones are weak because of this... So what should we do... How to wear in this temp...
(2) once my friend (who is an ayurvedic doc) said that we must not wear tight jeans or cloths etc. Because it keeps our sexual organs active. Is this true?

Answer
1. Take a cold water bath every morning & wear looser, cotton clothing. With progress in Yoga Sadhana, one develops the ability to withstand extreme conditions.

2. Clothes should be comfortable. How tight or loose clothing should be, varies from person to person. Sexual desire stems from the mind and not the clothing.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I was wondering how long you think your copy and paste, one size fits all answers will gain credibility. Every answer to legitimate questions are always the same. You tell people to abide in the self because everything is false. An 8 year old child could come up with a better answer. I know you won't publish this question because it exposes you as the fraud that you are.

Answer
My dear friend,

The self (pure consciousness) has no 'size' and no limitation, being unlimited. There is no 'all' but only the self. There is nothing but the self everywhere and the self alone is real. The energy which helped you write this query also came from the self alone. You, me and everybody is the self, which itself is God. The one who 'fits' or does not fit is the one to be got rid of, following which, infinite consciousness alone remains.

Realize this truth and let go of the one who 'wonders'; residing as the pure self, blessed, free and quiet in peace.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Dhananjay,

Various difficulties are arising. In the 3rd month of brahmacharya. No lapse in physical act, few lapses in thought (And corresponding 1-2 night emissions when indulgence in thought was not curbed).

The practice is becoming very hard. Every sight of a beautiful blonde woman causes the organ to become engorged. Mind cannot think abstractly about how the body is just a filthy piece of flesh.

How should a practitioner in my stage proceed? Mind cooperates 50-50 and temptation is strong.

On a related note, how does brahmacharya improve the following factors: health, IQ, and wealth? I saw the irate question of a poster above who accused you of "copy-paste" answers but I know your answers are similar because you are self-realized and have atma gnyana.

However, in my case, please provide me with some elaborate answers. I am a beginner on this sinuous path and don't know whether it is the right thing to do esp. when most around me indulge in various pleasures on a daily basis-I stay aloof of these. I am still only a masters student and I have to support my family, gain material wealth to stand on my own, etc. while pursuing the self-awareness.

Thus far, the only way I can keep myself happy on both fronts is to tell myself-"It is OK to pursue material wealth and intelligence-boosting entities/studies but not to indulge in lust".

Your friend,
Jacob

Answer
1. Regular & unbroken Sadhana (accompanied by the required physical and mental work), development of Vairagya (dispassion towards the world & objects, knowing them to be temporary and not ultimately conducive to well being), surrender to God (with the complete trust that he will take care of everything) and strict adherence to the 8-Anga-s of Yoga are as much as one is required to do from his side.

Then, past Prarabdha karma will slowly work out (in the course of this existence or coming existences), without the addition of further unwanted karma, eventually delivering the Jiva into liberation.

2. One should first learn to be patient, realizing that karma accrued over innumerable births cannot be erased in the course of a few months or years. The immature Ego expects the Sun & the Moon, further to a few months or years of practice. The law of karma cares a tuppence for the Ego and its oscillations. Till the Ego & its desires are not completely destroyed, the Lord does not grant union with himself. Divine law takes its own course.

Perform Sadhana (as suggested in past answers), surrender to the Lord and be patient. Let it take as long as it is required. That which has to come (be it health, wealth or other material possessions) will eventually come, without the least doubt, to the one who follows this 'Atma Sadhana' meticulously. To him, and to him alone, 'Atma Gnyana' and deliverance into the self is certain.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
hello, i want to know that how can i get rid of the negative energy caused by porn in my body. i am 23 year old guy. i was thinking of reiki healing. can you guide me in this situation. i want to live a positive and healthy life.
thanks

Answer
1. Methods required to overcome porn have been addressed in past answers.

2. Go through each and every past answer from the start and apply the same in practice. The issue will get resolved.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello, I have trouble controling the sexual urge.

In the book of Swami Sivananda it says : This world is nothing but sex and ego. Ego is the chief thing. It is the basis. Sex hangs on the ego. If the ego is destroyed by Vichara or enquiry of "Who am I?", the sex idea takes to its heels by itself.

How do you practice this enquiry method?

Answer
1. To destroy the Ego, one has to destroy the past Samskara-s (impressions) and Vasana-s (tendencies) which make the Ego.

2. This is achieved through dispassion for the world and by the requisite Sadhana. After long practice of such Sadhana, the seeds of past Samskara-s gradually weaken, following which, enquiry into the self gradually dissolves the 'I-ness' (Ego) & the self eventually shines.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaskaar Dhananjay,

Thank you very much for answering my last query.

I had a couple of doubts.

1.Since it is summer season,the water from overhead tanks is generally quite warm if not hot(sometimes hot too) and to bath with cold water,can we make it cold by adding ice into it?

2.I've read that a vegetarian diet lacks in vitamin b-12.Since I'm a vegetarian,I'm worried I might a develop a deficiency of the same.So,which foods should I resort to eating which do not hinder my sadhana and make for the deficiency too?

3.I was going through the past answers,in one of them("The dangers and effects of Porn, mixing with people"),you said that while viewing porn,a mental sexual union is established between the astral bodies of concerned persons.What happens when someone not watches but reads porn?Will the same effect take place?

Dhanyawaad
Sameer

Answer
1. Use water at atmospheric temperature, be it warm or cold. The Yogi should develop the ability to be unaffected by the extremes. This leads to 'Titiksha' (endurance), which in turn translates into the ability to be unaffected by the highs & lows of life, being fixed to the self. There is however no harm in adding ice, if one so wishes.

2. Dairy and related products, taken as suggested in past answers will do.

3. Visual activity is stronger than mental fantasy, as the object of lust is more specific. However, Brahmacharya fails in both cases.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hari om.
Brahmacharya Paalan Mein baar baar Fisal jaata hun..

Purani adato ki wajah se kuch kamjori mehsus hoti hai..
Mein Medicine pe Trust ni karta..

Mein Brahmacharya Jeewan jeena chahta Hun..
Kripa Maarg Darsh kare...

Jai Hind..

Answer
अब्रह्मचर्य का कारण हैं अज्ञान.
साधन और वैराग्य से आत्मज्ञान प्राकाशित होत हैं.
जैसे यह प्रकाश बढ़ता हैं, अज्ञान कम होते जात हैं, और ब्रह्मचार्य अपने आप मज़बूत होत हैं.

साधन करने का क्रम पुराने उत्तरों में स्पष्ट किया हैं. सारे उत्तरोंको धीरे धीरे पढ़िए और कार्यरूप में लाईये.
बिना शक, भगवान की कृपा से सफलता मिलेगी.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
1) Should one urinate in his pants at the office and blame the bladder? Should one tell his boss and family how he used to masturbate? Should one pretend to fall at an important meeting? Should one embarass himself during public speaking? If not, why not?

2) Apart from sadhana, how does one develop titiksha (endurance) to the highs and lows of life? It seems the perfect day ends on a horrible note and the worst of days ends happily.

3) What does one do when told off without justification?

4) What does one do when he gets uncomfortable when another person stares at his food?

5) I prefer the path of ritualism such as sandhya, prayer etc rather than yoga (a choice is necessary for both are demanding). Will this take me to yuj? If not, why not?

Answer
1. True Titiksha (endurance) comes when one learns to let go the one who has to endure.

2. The path taken does not matter, as long as the end is annihilation of the Ego, which is experiencing all these emotions & asking all these queries. So strive in that direction, setting all things aside. No more queries will then remain.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hari om sir,

I am practicing brahmacharya, I am 35, unmarried. I have sometimes loss of seminal fluid while defecating. I don't get any bad dreams but sometimes my penis gets errected early in the morning, which I found its normal for circulation of blood by reading your posts. But I feel it disturbed, it comes down when I do Japa in my sleep. Sometimes I have to wake up disturbing my sleep and do Japa then it's normal. This generally happens in around 3am. I tried wearing kaupin in day and with no under garments while sleeping, at that time I found more errection than normal when I do n to wear under garments.

My eye nerves turn red very soon when I sit for long in front of TV, computer , or read books for long. Is it because of loss of semen.

I am only able to balance in my sadhana by yoga, meditation, proper diet. But not able to move further.

Can you please advice me regarding
1. Loss of seminal fluid. Is it a medical problem, or any subconscious thoughts.
2. Errected penis. How to overcome.
3. Red eyes.

Answer
1. Do the required Sadhana without a break and with full devotion and surrender to God. It appears as though there is no progress at certain times; however, there is always progress, slow and gradual, unnoticed by the practitioner. It takes time and patience for Sadhana to bear fruit. One should persevere, despite obstacles. Success eventually comes after such perseverance.

Ignore everything and do the Sadhana as suggested in past answers, following all the 8-Anga-s of Yoga meticulously. The issue will eventually go away.

2. It is normal for the penis to experience erection in sleep or on waking up in the mornings. This is a sign of the body having rested and being in good health. It is one's own ignorance, which associates sexual thoughts with a non-sexual erection, caused by a surge of blood flow, thereby inducing sexual thoughts. Let go of focusing on the regenerative organ and busy yourself with Sadhana in the 'Brahmimuhurtham'. With progress, the misconception will go away.

3. Redness in the eyes is generally the result of over-straining the eyes under poor lighting or very bright lighting conditions. Altering the degree of light can reduce the problem. Avoid long hours in front of the TV. Excessive TV viewing is neither good for the mind and body, nor good for Brahmacharya. Rest the eyes by taking a break in between or washing them with cold water.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello hope all is well. I would like to ask if these 4 stages described as the same 4 samadhi states of yoga?
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Teresa_of_%C3%81vila#Mysticism

Answer
1. There is ultimately only one truth, which is God, of which the self is no different from. Therefore, there is only one 'Samadhi' (union with the Supreme). In that state, there is no mind, no body, no senses, no Ego and no world, for all these are one and the same, being illusions on the self. There is only pure consciousness, the ultimate truth, limitless, infinite, eternal, indescribable, full of unimaginable bliss and beyond change, there.

2. The stages that the Jiva (individual) passes through (as experienced by the Ego), in reaching this final stage are termed as the different stages of Samadhi, for the sake of convenience and understanding, in different cultures, by different names. Nothing more.

There is however only one truth, and therefore one Samadhi alone. Being in the self, as the self, in one's true state is that Samadhi.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir I Have Some Confusions..
Please Answer,

1.)Is Drinking Tea During Practise Is A Break..?
2.)Thought of a Girl is a Break or Not.?
3.)Refer diet for Brahmacharya and i have only 48 kgs.age20
Hari Om.

Answer
1. It is preferable to stay with milk and avoid tea, coffee etc.

2. If the thought ignites lust, it leads to a mental break.

3. Diet is explained in past answers.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello dear sir,

I have sinned badly over the past week, and have suffered tremendously for it, I have found that when one wastes his seed, he loses all, memory, intellect, spiritual strength, his devotion to God etc., I have noticed that my very consciousness was reduced and cast into a hell, in prison to the vile lusts.

Will I recover from this, with continued practice of Brahmacharya, sadhana?

thank you sir.

Answer
1. Do not repeat the mistakes.

2. Perform honest Sadhana to realize the self, with complete surrender to God. The situation will gradually stabilize. The mistakes should however not be repeated.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Sir,

Thank you for your previous inspiring answers. I have a few interesting queries left after conducting sincere vichara during meditation sessions and contemplation.

1) Swami Vivekananda said famously that as long as (his) body was alive, duality would exist. Dhananjay, I understand that realization with the atman and the recognition of the impermanence of the physical flesh-cage is the ultimate goal, but as a functioning member in society, isn't one's ego necessarily present at some small degree, even for an advanced practitioner?

Vivekananda, upon hearing a foreign missionary criticize Hinduism, threatened to throw him overboard. He become emotionally overcome when dealing with India's poor. A 100 % self-realized man would have dealt with inspiring India's masses without becoming entangled in the emotional aspects, understanding they were simply the "leela" of the lord, as I have understood from your past answers.

2. In an attempt to improve my ability to practice the 8 yamas of yoga, I have searched youtube for an honest practitioner and not one of thousands of people who put up yoga tutorials without the smallest idea of the lifestyle it entails. I found certain videos by Dr. Dhananjay Gunde, and would like to know if that is you. I trust your physical self's progress in self-realization and would be happy to learn from these videos if it is, in fact, you.

3. Swami Sivananda and Vivekananda always spoke of the need to develop a strong physical body. They are both the self-realized sages I look up to most. However, once again, doesn't this focus on the physical body seem incompatible with the full realization of the atman?

4. While the aforementioned two yogis are highly relatable to me, I have a very difficult time understanding Ramana Maharishi, although it seems that he was truly the most wholly self-realized of the three, completely not getting involving in worldly affairs but still being a part of the world. What does he mean by the "I thought"? By holding the "I thought", is one not further binding himself to the snatches of the unreal Ego?

Sincerely,
Jacob S.

Answer
1. The realized soul dons the Ego of the role assigned to him in 'Samsara' (as an actor assumes the Ego of the character he plays, with its mannerisms etc.), appearing as though really involved, while always being detached, fixed to the self. He then works without desire, unaffected by the results of his actions.

Inwardly calm and completely unattached, yet outwardly displaying various emotions, he remains free for ever, sporting in the ocean of the self.

He may externally don the appearance of a king in the midst of pomp and luxury, surrounded by riches. He may appear as a saint, clad in his robes, with a calm & serene demeanor. He may appear like a mentally unstable or retarded recluse, clad in rags, unkempt, living in a ruined, dilapidated, roofless house, all alone, with all the signs of insanity, subject to unpredictable behavior.

To him, all these are one and the same. They are only characters in the Leela of the Lord. He does not internally identify the least with any of them, nor gets affected by the reactions of the world. Having completely overcome identification with the Ego, body and the world, he remains like a painted flame, always ablaze, without a trace of fire.

The realized soul can only be identified by another realized soul, for there are no external signs. The actions of the realized soul can only be understood by another realized soul.

2. Apply efforts on the complete Sadhana suggested in past answers. Surrender to God and work with a strong urge for realization. That which is to be imparted will be imparted by HIM, in the way required. The self within all beings is the same, be the being an insect, animal or a man.

3. As long as one does not develop 'Moha' (attachment) & a fancy for the body, there is no harm in devoting some time to its upkeep, with the sole view of healthy sustenance; for the body is the vessel which serves as the medium of working out past karma.

A healthy body, free from disease & ill-health is supportive to 'Atma Sadhana'. This much and not more is warranted.

4. The 'I', one immediately relates to is the Ego. When constant Vichara (inquiry) is done on the 'I-thought', with Yoga Sadhana in parallel, one eventually realizes the fallacy of the Ego and the presence of a constant truth, of pure consciousness behind the Ego, by whose virtue, by whose power, the false Ego is sustaining; just as the Moon appears to shine, having borrowed from the light of the Sun.

When the 'Ashtaga-s' (8-limbs) of Yoga and 'Vairagya' (dispassion for the unreal) are also correspondingly practiced, one eventually overcomes the Ego and merges into the Atman (self). It is the real 'I', pure consciousness, the only truth, eternal, constant, infinite, full of bliss and ever integral with the Supreme. Bhagavan Ramana's method is the most direct and straight forward methods to realize oneself.

It will appeal after the Jiva (individual) reaches a certain level of advancement.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir,
Is drinking Amla+Aloevera Juice reduces weight of a Thin person.?

Is It suggested to him not to take this?

Answer
1. Being thin or plump is the effect of one's constitution, which is the result of past karma.

2. Let go of this worry and fancy for the body, which you are not, and perform the required Sadhana to realize the self, through Brahmacharya.

This portal is for instruction on self realization and not weight loss/gain.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hari om sir,
Thanks for your earlier reply. I am not still convinced about the fact. I tried to sleep without undergarments in past, but due to errection problem I stopped many times, which was natural.

This time I will continue. But I would like to clarify one thing. Will this continue, even when energies flow into higher chakras. A person who have attained urdhvareta may not experience this because all his energies are in higher chakras.

Sir, How can i contact you personally, may be sometime later once.

Answer
1. Perform the complete set of the suggested Sadhana and be quiet. All issues will resolve in the course of time.

2. What is required is contact with one's Atman (self) which is both personal and universal. It showers the benefit of the most superior contact, for there is nothing but the self, ever one with the Lord, it being the all encompassing truth. When this is attained, the contact will come through.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello, after some 6-7 months or more with this brahmacharya with just some occasional lustful thoughts but not break i had an experience during meditation one time. When i wass meditating ive felt like aspired upward like in an instant. Very strong sensation. But the strangest of all was one morning in my room. Walking normally i saw just in front of me like a fire ball very much like a sun with special effect and very bright. It moved in whatever direction i walked. It changed his form to various geometric diagrams like many circles in very vivid colors or lines of fire. This happened after some weeks seeing grey filaments from the corner of the eyes. Is this just internal energy or spirits? Of what usefulness is this if I dont know what it is? Thanks.

Answer
All these are to be taken as encouragements in practice and nothing else. They do not have any spiritual significance. Visions & experiences concern the non-self (mind) and are hence unreal.

One should set aside all these experiences, which become distractions if given importance and focus on residing in the self as the self. That state of equanimity is alone real and the only truth.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaskar Dhananjay,
I seek to understand how liberated beings view marriage & progeny.

I have never got why Shiva whose is mahadeva/adi-yogi/foremoost ascetic/chita bhasma dhari/who adorns himself with garland of skulls & serpents/who burnt kaam-dev to ashes/who is triguna teetha chose to become a householder in the first place when he married sati.The puranas state that Brahma requested adi shakti to incarnate as dakshputri & get Shiva married.This seems childish & there should be a deeper implication to this as the story of kartikey comes later when sati takes rebirth as parvati .

I believe unless one understands the need to balance masculine & feminine forces inside one's being brahmacharya is but a distant dream.Marriage is a metaphor for that need.

Also i believe Swami Vivekananda has said a naisthik brahmachari or an unmarried brahmachari is always held at a position above the married rishis & householders.

So pls provide your insights as to how should an aspiring urdhvareta whose desires liberation within this lifetime approach marriage if the decision is left to him.

Answer

1. From the one & only Lord (also called Purusha, Siva, Parabrahman, Supreme etc.), who alone is 'Sat' (real), who alone is 'Satyam' (truth), within whom everything is contained (Isavaasyamidam Sarvam) & who pervades everything (Sarvam Khalvidam Brahman), originates 'Prakrti' (the component responsible for manifestation & creation), which then manifests into world & form, perceivable by the mind & the five senses, via Maya (the power of illusion).

This creative principle is also termed 'Shakti', the feminine principle. The world, body, mind & matter are all the offshoots of Shakti and therefore unreal illusions. Just as images appear on the cinema screen, the Lord, through Prakrti, creates the world & mind illusion on the screen of Pure consciousness. In reality, Shakti, the feminine principle (represented by Goddess Parvati) has no independent existence, bereft of Siva, for she has come from him, while HE has always been, is and will be forever.

The marriage of Siva with Sati is the symbolic representation of the union of the Ego (under the realm of Prakrti) with the Purusa (Lord), whereupon results realization. Therefore, Yoga (union with the self) is also called 'Sivashakti Samyogam' (union of Siva with Shakti), following which the Supreme alone remains, as HE always does. At the microcosmic level, this occurs to the Jiva when it attains to 'Kaivalya' (self-realization). It is all the Leela (play) of the Lord.

2. To whom does marriage concern? Who is higher or lower? All these concern the Ego & the body. Are the Ego & body real? Are you the Ego and the body, which are nothing but illusions arising from Prakrti? You are always the Atman (pure consciousness), an integral part of Purusha. It is one's ignorance which makes him assume he is the Ego and the body, which exhibit higher or lower levels, while one's self (Atman) is always one, pervading all beings. There is nothing lower or higher there. It is 'Satyam' (the absolute truth). The self within all beings, be it a human, animal, insect or a microbe is one and the same. THAT alone pervades everything. Therefore, the concept of lower and higher is unreal and hence non-existent to the Enlightened sage.

The realized soul see's his self in every being and all beings within his own self. Having merged with the truth, he see's the same everywhere.

In the Lord's Leela, different Jiva-s are given different roles. One is given the role of a house holder, while another is given the role of being single. One plays the role of a king, while another plays the role of a poor man. The Lord does not discriminate between roles. Every role is viewed equally. A Jiva playing the role of the poor man is as dear to the Lord as the one playing a king. To HIM, all roles are one and the same, for the roles are unreal, while HE (who pervades all Jiva-s as the in-dweller within, is alone real).

Those who are unaware of Brahmacharya are at one stage of the Leela, while those who do and strive for it are at another stage. One is playing the role of a householder, while another is given the role of a Naisthika Brahmachari. As long as each follows his Dharma properly, both are equally dear to the Lord. All these stages only concern the Ego and not the Atman (self) which is ever liberated. The realized being looks at all other beings with equality, not concerning himself with lower or higher, which comes in the realm of untruth.

3. Leave all decisions to HIM. If marriage is a part of destiny, HE will make it happen, at the destined time. Let go of the one who wants to decide and do your Dharma (to realize the self) correctly. When the one who wants this and that is forsaken, the self alone remains as pure consciousness. That itself is liberation.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

This personality that I have is naturally shy, awkward, is easily irritated by the company of others, timid in front of women and men with large achievements, and generally appears arrogant and insensitive to the feelings of others. Nonetheless, I've been very sensitive to the opinions of others and what they think of me, that I've made sacrifices on my part and sacrificed my values on multiple occasions just to please others and make them think better of me (Loka Vasana). If a woman or a man makes a disparaging remark about me, I am extremely sensitive to it, and have been extremely sensitive to such comments.

As a result, my social interactions have not been the best. Over the past year or so, I've isolated myself for the sake of Brahmacharaya and achieving self realization. I realize that friends are your real foes, because they stand as a block on the path of realization. I am extremely conscious in front of others and I hate this feeling of self consciousness.

Often because of my sophisticated and unorthodox language and communication skills, women and men cannot understand my language and communication. When it comes to social skills, I have almost nothing, and I cannot read anything from social situations.

Sir, because of the role god has given me, I have to interact with others on two different occasions: Office and Social Situations that my parents force me to be in. How is a Brahmachari supposed to interact in such situations, especially in situations where one is supposed to interact with others, especially (A) women and (B) people who are naturally jealous, duplicitous and cunning?

What should be one's reaction when others are trying to mock him in front of others, to prove their self worth? How is a Brahmachari to react? And if one is insulted by others for no reason (or is brushed off), can one assume it a result of jealousy on the part of others? And why Sir, am I so sensitive to social interactions and what others think of me?

Answer
1. The world is nothing but a reflection of one's own Ego and past karma. There is no need to try and please the world in particular. What is required is to be oneself, comfortable and at ease, doing that which one is inclined to. Then, one eventually loses self-consciousness and experiences freedom and peace, which in turn lead to confidence.

Be polite, friendly, casual and yet to the point with all, be they men or women. Let the involvement be superficial and never real. Wish none bad. Take the world lightly, as a drama and never seriously. Let go of the Ego which suffers from inferiority, further to taking itself seriously. This is as much as one needs to do. This behavior ensures that one does not accrue negative karma, which comes from mentally or physically harming/paining others or wishing them bad. When a life of 'Atma Sadhana' is carried out in parallel, one overcomes all fears and tendencies of inferiority in the course of a few years.

2. No harm comes to the one who holds on to the self and wishes good to all. That which one gives another, is giving it to one's own self, for the self within all is one & the same. Therefore, he who wishes good to others, wishes good to himself. He who indulges in jealousy and cunning is burnt by the very same fire. The harm is to himself and not others. Simply ignore the situation.

3. Who is being mocked? Who is feeling bad? It is the Ego. The Ego is the enemy which the Yogi is trying to overcome. Hence the situation is welcome. God is working through those mocking you to unnerve and kill the Ego, while they themselves do not know it. It is a beautiful opportunity for spiritual evolution. When others mock or deride oneself, the Yogi should perfect the art of remaining calm and silent, not reacting & never wishing them bad, for it is the Ego which is being ill-treated and not you the Atman (self), which occupies all beings.

Sensitivity is the feeling experienced by the ignorant Ego and not your self. So kill the thief called the Ego and be at peace, as the self, blessed & ever in bliss.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

I sincerely appreciate your prior answers to my questions on Swamis Vivekananda, Sivananda, and Ramana Maharishi. I now understand that while these individuals may have played certain roles in society for various reasons, they were ultimately engrossed in the self.

Upon further contemplation, a few more questions arose.

1) I considered the roles I play-brother, student, teacher, scientist, etc. In each role that I play, I color my physical body and mind with certain attributes (for example I must be confident in my mental math ability to be a successful scientist). Therefore, is it safe to say that identification with the ego is unavoidable if one is to live and interact on this planet? If this is not the correct approach, kindly advise me; in that case, I am encountering much difficulty when trying to understand how I can remain confident in the abilities of this physical body and mind yet still not identify with the ego.

2) Over the last few weeks, my meditation practices have been growing more and more restless. In fact, I am ashamed to admit that one some days I have completely failed to perform it. I will be taking on a significant challenge and I seem to constantly forgot Lord Krishna's insistence that one must focus simply on the action but not the fruits of the action. I feel the energy gains previously made stagnating in lower chakras and transmuting into tamas and not sattva.

3) In terms of considering this world as the Lord's playground "leela vibhootam", I do not see how the path of a brahmachari is different from, for instance, a degenerate thief. Why must one then follow the Dharmic path? Or is it possible for a thief to follow Dharma by stealing, because the proper role of a thief is to steal! Why should the role of a brahmachari be considered in a higher light than other roles? If not, what distinguishes the virtuous and self-restrained (yogis) from the corrupt and degenerate? Different evolutionary stage?

I appreciate your guidance. Upon following this practice, I have unfortunately lost all motivation and enthusiasm. I treat my passions as merely roles that must be played accurately, and my overall sense of stability and progress is diminished and I feel immense lack of productivity.

Sincerely,
Jacob

Answer
1. A role cannot be played without the Ego. However, the difference between the common man and the realized soul is that the common man functions from his own individual Ego, takes it to be real (and therefore gets affected by the outcome of his actions & the world), while the realized soul temporarily associates with the 'Ego of the role' being played, taking it lightly, as an actor plays a role (never getting personally affected by his acting).

While the common man considers himself as the Ego & the body, at the individual level, the realized soul does not associate with any of these and can act as many role's as needed, by creating new, temporary Ego's for the particular role, with ease. There is no individual identification with any of the created Ego-s, beyond the purview of the act. There is never a personal identification with any of these at all. Remaining neutral, free from desire, he functions as the medium of expression of God's will (there being no individual will).

Therefore, the actions of the Enlightened sage are the actions of God.

When the Yogi strives for this path and functions accordingly, with regular Sadhana to dissolve past Samskara-s, he gradually comes closer to his self, following which it becomes easier to function from temporary Ego's without any personal identification.

2. Undulations in Sadhana occur to all aspirants. One has to persevere, despite obstacles, without giving in and without giving up. Then, the practice eventually gets established, after a long time.

3. The role of the Brahmachari, in quest of the self, is the role which gradually dissolves unwanted karma, prevents the addition of new, unnecessary karma, eventually freeing the Jiva from all further role's for ever (via liberation), granting eternal release from suffering. Other roles do not bestow knowledge of the self, but only entangle the Jiva in further unwanted karma, thereby binding it to the ocean of pain called 'Samsara'. This is the vast sea of difference.

Lack of enthusiasm is a temporary phase of withdrawal of the individual Ego, which is subjected to motivation and demotivation. When the individual Ego is fully annihilated, the Yogi assumes the temporary 'Ego of the role', which is most enthusiastic in working as the medium of the Lord's Leela.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhanjay Ji,

My blessings for you, For doing great service to Humanity.

i am Married 39 yrs Old , I have practicing Sadhana For About 4 Years. In Routine everyday wakeup at 6 am and after I go for japa 50minuts after that my body specially lower legs part have numbnesss, now i feel sometime heaviness in my heart as well.
After this i go for a walk and little bit jogging for total 30 minutes. I am bit tired after my jaap and feel lazy to go for walk.I used to be not so tired before in my early time.
please advise me what should i do for leg pain?
2 Is it ok too go for walk after Mantrajapa ?
3 If You any Other advise for Sadhana

Answer
Wake up at 4.00 A.M and perform the complete set of Yogic practices described, consisting of Asana, Bandha, Nadi-Shodhana, Pranayama, Japa & Meditation. The heaviness in the heart region will go away further to complete practice. It is normal for the legs to feel a bit numb after an hour or so in the posture.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir, I am in not Indian, I was raised as Christian catholic but in reality, im an agnostic since i had the age of reason. DO you feel someone could practice brahmacharya just to improve oneself even if I dont have strong religious belief? It not so much that i dont believe in religion, but i just dont have such a strong desire to adore something divine or a God like many other people do in churches or in front of statues, i feel its not in my personality. Are such things as wisdom or knowledge possible without much belief in God or divine things, for example they were sages who were not particularly religious or adored divine beings like spinoza or COnfucius but were considered wise.

Answer
Do you believe in your existence? One may not know whether God exists or doesn't but cannot deny his own existence, for you are aware of your being. Brahmacharya can be practiced by all those who believe in their existence, to improve themselves in all fronts, attain to brightness, luster, strength, magnificence, and eventually realize who they are. One might later take a call on 'God', if that question still remains.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Dhananjay,

I hope you don't mind me asking a few more questions. After hearing your guidance, I shall vow to pursue my sadhana and questions on my own for a few months before asking you further questions. I will stay quiet and contemplate further questions on my own, but knowing the answers to these will be invaluable for my further progress in brahmacharya so kindly show me the right path.

1) Although I realize the false nature of the body, mind, and ego, I nevertheless do also realize the importance of having a successful financial life since it is my duty to support my parents and my desire to perform karma yoga by opening up scholarship centers for poor youth across the world. I, of course, would also like to experience material comforts to some extent since that is the only way desire for the sensual world can be fully annihilated.

When pondering this question and the need for success in one's life, I automatically desire a female companion who will help me with my daily chores around the house, support me in my job endeavors, yet will also understand my desire to maintain brahmacharya. I have such a girl in mind. What is the proper age to pursue this, if it is correct? If not, how does one overcome the innate human longing for support and lack of loneliness? Lastly, it is even feasible to pursue this life of self-restraint if one is with a female?

Thinking of this girl pulls my heartstrings; it ensnares me in the kind of trap that every aspirant must desperately avoid; yet I am trapped by the FEAR that I will lose this individual. Yes, I understand this is a pathetic state of mind to be in given my quest to realize the self yet I also realize that I will need someone who is smart, intelligent, and supportive as a companion.

2) The next issue is that as a novice of the yogic path, I wish to connect with similar practitioners in order to motivate myself to overcome the false and fleeting sense pleasures which the Western world so blatantly promotes. However, I have not been able to find such a community. There seem to be no individuals in America my age who even desire to pursue this path. Shall I abandon such concerns without fear and confidently pursue sadhana on my own?

3) I follow yoga sadhana every day in the morning. During the phases following pranayama and other breath control exercises, I meditate quietly on God, who I take to be the supreme power and inexorable laws of the universe. Is this a proper perspective or must one meditate on a formless, amorphous entity without ascribing any characteristics to it? I am confused by why idol worship (through various types of idols such as mahavishnu, shiva, durga, etc. is a common facet of Hinduism given that the supreme intangible paramatman is one and the same, unable to be captured by such tangible depictions.

4) With regards to material success, success in brahmacharya, and success in finding a suitable companion as addressed in the first bullet (and if this is, in fact, a correct goal to even consider), would the correct path be to ask for the lord's embrace and not expect any results?

I ask for your blessings after hearing your advice for the following as I undertake this next portion of my journey to realize the self, in which I will simply stay quiet and contemplate my brahmacharya on my own. I will not ask questions during the period and will, with the grace of the Lord, reach out to you once more after this period.

Sincerely, Jacob

Answer

1. Those wishing companionship should do so within the bounds of 'Holy Wedlock'. As soon as one starts earning, one is free to marry. Marriage does not prove an impediment to self-realization, when the urge for liberation is strong and genuine.

He who practices unbroken Brahmacharya till marriage, and continues to do so after the birth of a child, progresses in the path of realization without hindrance. Material comforts, wealth and all other things come to the Yogi who strives in the path of the truth with complete surrender. Brahmacharya and Yoga, which bestow the knowledge of the self itself also give wealth and material comforts at the destined time, if one so wishes. Through unbroken Brahmacharya to realize the self, that which one wishes (in the worldly plane as well) is also granted. One should be patient with unconditional devotion to God, always fixed to unwavering practice, whatever be the obstacles.

2. The path is to be tread alone.

3. One should meditate on that which is appealing, be it God in form or without form (as the formless Supreme, within which rests the formless self).

4. Simply persevere in Sadhana, asking nothing in return from HIM, full of love for HIM. All desires, including a suitable partner, will be granted at the right time.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Can i have a girlfriend if i practice semen retention..
Also,can i have sex with her and not ejaculate..will it be fine or will there be energy loss?
Also,does virginity has a greater impact on the sexual energy of the person and causes an aura of pureness

Answer
Any contact with the opposite sex as man-woman, outside the bounds of marriage will not be conducive to Brahmacharya. It leads to ignorance, pain and suffering.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Namskaar Dhananjay,

While walking on the path of Brahamacharya,can a full body massage be taken?Also,will it be dangerous if massage is taken from a female masseuse if no male is available?

Dhanyawaad
Sameer

ANSWER: One should not take massage from another as there will be an intermixing of their individual Prana-s and karma-s, causing undesirable consequences & a downfall. A Brahmachari should NEVER take massage from a female masseuse.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Namaskaar Dhananjay,

Thank you very much for your reply.

So,you mean that one should massage himself if necessary and not take it from another person.Right?

Dhanyawaad
Sameer

Answer
When the art of meditation (merging the mind into the self) is perfected, all stress dissolves in the ocean of consciousness and one does not need massage.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

1) The question is from the perspective of a manager dealing with an 'enemy' in the form of a subordinate. Great hatred has developed. The entity in question will be referred to as 'friend' for the purpose of this query. Should one avoid delegating to friend, doing as much as possible by oneself without internal malice? Delegation of work yields grumpy friend.

2) When instructed to delegate to friend by a superior, can instructions be conveyed without the slightest greeting or friendliness but without rudeness or internal malice?

2) Should one do his own housework eg. Washing clothes, sweeping etc. and are there any benefits in this?

3) What should one do when offered fried prasadam such as crumbly samosas (which cannot be cut in half), cooked by impure people? And what should one tell the person who offers it?

4) Isn't the only way to prevent wet dreams rejection of hatred, anger, irritation and jealousy?

5) Can a year of abstinence without wet dreams yield superior (not yet superlative) memory?

6) With reference to 5) above, what happens if one marries after such progress with strictly procreative intercourse?

Answer
1. The role of a manager is to politely, yet firmly instruct his subordinates on their duties, as formulated by the organization or his position. The dharma of a subordinate is to follow the instructions of his manager completely (even if he does not like the work or may not agree with the concept).

A manager who does not enforce what is expected of him indulges in Adharma.
A subordinate who does not follow his manager's instructions indulges in Adharma.

Hence do your duty without emotion, professionally, calmly and report to to the higher ups on the course of disciplinary action to be taken, if the subordinate does not perform his expected duty. This is as much as the manager is supposed to do.

2. One may do so if necessary, if one finds time. Doing one's work instills a sense of independence, which helps overcome attachment & dependence on others, so necessary for the Yogi.

3. Take a small bite, in the thought of the Lord. No harm will occur.

4. That, when coupled with unbroken Sadhana (following all the 8-anga-s) meticulously, for many years, turns the Yogi into an Urdhvareta, following which wet dreams disappear.

5. Yes.

6. Procreative intercourse (with one's lawful wife, per wanted child) comes within the purview of Dharma. No harm is accrued from the same. After the birth of the child, the couple may take to unbroken Brahmacharya to realize the self, following which they attain to all the 'Purushartha-s' (goals of the human existence) and eventually 'Kaivalya' (self-realization).

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Sir,

One doubt aggravates my mind.

Please take the following scenario. It haunts me and disturbs me and I would like to know of your answer.

An aspirant of the brahmic path lives quietly, does his dharma, and accordingly supports his parents, who do no harm. Another individual, full of malice and contempt, willingly murders the parents of the aspirant.

In this case, how would a yogi react? Although he would realize this world is fully false, would an urge of familial affection urge him to immediately kill the murderer on the spot? Or should he simply notify authorities of the occurrence and trust that dharma will accordingly sort things out?

The reason I ask is because I am a novice on the path of brahmacharya and slowly, I have been tempering my reactions to external stimuli and not letting the outside world bother me. However, I fear something terrible like this should not happen since it would completely destroy any little progress I would make. Kindly advise how to proceed.

Would the great Swami Vivekananda, if he were in this situation, not have taken matters into his own hands and finished off ANY individual who murdered another person right in front of him? I feel that he would have.

Regards,
Preyas

ANSWER: All occurrences are the result of past karma. Nothing occurs against destiny. One gets what one deserves, based on his past actions, which ripen and bear fruit, at the destined time, yielding what the world terms positive or negative experiences. Knowing it to be such, the Yogi stays true to his Dharma and never takes the law into his own hands.

He who kills another, accrues the karma of murder, which will follow him like his own shadow & deal with him, as per divine law, at the right time. He will undoubtedly have to pay for this act.

One who faces this situation may proceed as per the law of the land, through proper legal action. Even if he is unable to do this for some reason, divine law takes its own course and will execute justice, flawlessly, at the right time. This is certain.

The Yogi does not retaliate with violence. Retaliation with a similar act only leads to further unwanted karma, which he himself will have to bear. It does not serve any purpose. It is not the way of the wise. Revenge is the path of the ignorant mind. There is nothing called revenge for the Gnyani.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: If the karma were accrued to a doer, then would this also apply if it were the duty of someone to kill? e.g. in the old medieval days kings had executioners whose job was to put others to death.

if this entire world is fake, why does it matter which physical, unreal entity kills another?

Also, suppose one is fully aware that the penalty for murder under law of the land is death. In that case, why does it matter who distributes justice, either the yogi or the courts? After all, both are merely human institutions.

Lastly, does every bad experience a person endures on this realm the result of a prior bad action in a previous life? Or can it be the case that a soul/person goes through undeserved harm in this life but will be accordingly rewarded in the next life for unnecessarily receiving something unfair (e.g. a cruel death, undeserved punishment, etc.)?

Answer
1. There is no karma as regards actions carried out impersonally (without involvement of the personal Ego), under the rules of one's Dharma. A soldier in the army, who kills the enemy to protect his country, under the commands of his officer does so under the tenets of his Dharma. Therefore, he does not accrue any negative karma. Rather, he accrues negative karma if he fails to slay the enemy, for then, he has not followed the dictates of his Dharma.

2. Does the entity indulging in murder believe itself and the other to be unreal? Had it been so, there would not have arisen the need for murder in the mind of the entity, for there would have been no anger and no sense of revenge. One does not try to take revenge on the characters he encountered in a dream, upon waking up.

An entity indulging in murder does so out of anger or another emotion, or for some assumed benefit, completely ignorant of the absolute truth. It believes itself, the other person and the situation to be very real. Only under such conditions, when one has taken himself and the other seriously does one get the mind for such severe action. A Gnyani (one who resides in the truth) does not take any situation personally, knowing it to be unreal, and therefore forgives. Divine law protects the Gnyani. He does not interfere.

3. Justice is always delivered by divine law only, whatever be the external means. It is not one's business to assume doership as regards anything.

4. What is termed good and bad are the result of past actions of the Ego. Nothing occurs by chance. The Ego, under the grip of ignorance, assumes doership and performs different kinds of actions, for which it will experience different kinds of results. The Yogi gives up doership, becomes the tool of the Lord and gets free from the wheel of karma, after working out the remnant karma, necessary for settlement of his past actions. Then follows liberation.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Sir.
I am currently practicing abstinence. I wish to study about the practice of Brahmacharya. Since I live in Bangalore, can you recommend some places to start? I want to practice Brahmacharya under careful guidance hence I ask you.

Thank You.
Revan.

Answer
Strive honestly with the suggested Sadhana (go through all past answers), with devotion and surrender to the objective. Guidance will come as and when required, at the appropriate time.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaskaar Dhananjay,

Thank you very much for your last answer.I had a couple of queries-

1.For last 4-5 times,whenever any wet dream occurs,it just culminates in emission and no visual is accompanied by it.I mean,I don't remember what culminated the emission.Is it considered to be progress,as previously wet dreams used to accompany vivid visuals?Or,is it just a temporary happening?

2.In one of your previous answers,you said that this human existence is so valuable that even deva-s crave for it.So,is it that in 'devayoni' only bhoga(pleasures) are to be born and no suffering is there?Can't any deva do penance and practice bramacharya in that existence?Also,are higher planes(brahmalok,satyalok,maharlok etc.) not conducive to brahamacharya penance practice?Are they meant for sensual enjoyment only?Is Earth the only place(Loka) for attaining liberation or there are many other loka-s?

Kindly spare me for asking so many questions at once.It's just my curiosity after reading a religious treatise.

Dhanyawaad
Sameer

Answer
1. Whether the situation involves visuals or does not, it is only a play of the mind in the realm of the 'Asat' (unreal). What is important is to burn and deactivate the source responsible for the same, following which the possibility for such incidents becomes void. Hence the Yogi should keep his mind focused on dissolving past Samskara-s and Vasana-s responsible for the same and reach the state where there are no more such incidents, through honest Sadhana.

2. Just as there are beings on the physical plane seeking the self, there are beings in other planes seeking the self. Just as beings from the Earthly plane reach liberation, beings from other planes also attain liberation.

Who is a Deva (celestial)? what is a Loka (world)? These are things concerning the 'Aham' (Ego), which goes through various states of fancy, in the realm of the unreal, in its journey towards its own annulment, to finally merge into the truth. The pure self (Atman) is infinite, all pervading, formless, rank-less and one without a second, being one with the Supreme being. That alone is one's self. Knowing it to be such, one should not seek, ponder or bother about these 'different planes', which are all states of the mind and nothing else. None of the Loka-s are eternal, being in the realm of the mind, which is Asat (unreal). The Atman alone is real and one with the Supreme. No other state is worth seeking.

Therefore, one should turn a blind eye to imagination about other planes of existence and strive towards realizing his self, from his current plane of existence, where the higher power has currently positioned him. Everything which is to be known will then be known. Anything else is fancy and not conducive to residence in truth.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Is the Self the Supreme Absolute? ANd the concept of the Avatar means what exactly? WHy some individuals like Krishna were considered Avatar and other enlightened beings no, was he higher in enlightnement?

Answer
1. Who is asking this question about the self and the Supreme? To whom does this doubt persist? When the one doing so is gone forever, then THAT alone remains. Then there is no one to call it self, Supreme or something else. THAT is...is. Silence.

2. In an Avatar, consciousness always resides in the self, as the self, right from birth (in the physical form), though externally displaying various emotions. The Supreme cosmic being manifests as an Avatar for certain reasons, at certain times.

3. Lord Krishna was an Avatar (therefore Enlightened right from birth) and therefore the Supreme in blood and flesh, with full awareness of the same. A non-avatar is born unenlightened and later attains to enlightenment. This is the difference.

When the pot is broken, the air in the pot merges with the air outside. Can the pot-air partially merge with the atmospheric air after the pot is shattered? There is nothing of the sort. Similarly with Enlightenment, there is Enlightenment; no partial, higher or lower Enlightenment. Then THAT alone exists.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir I m eating in a mess so I have no other option to eat anywhere else so in diet they are mixing fried onion and garlic sir I m practicing brahmacharya what to do Sir

Answer
Eat what is given by destiny and persevere in honest and unbroken Sadhana, as explained in past answers, with 4.00 A.M wake up and all other requisite practices. The rest will be taken care with time.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: I was receiving an antipsychotic drug called paliperidone(it has a half life for 25-49 days meaning it stays in your system for 125-245 days from one injection) for 11 months straight with an injection once a month. During that time, I couldn't get an erection or ejaculate. I also started having memory problems, trouble following a conversation, lost of interest in my studies, gained 30 pounds, lost my physical strength to exercise or do yoga, and more problems. I've been off the medication for 4 months now. Around the second month I was able to ejaculate again, but not a lot of semen comes out. Today I want to pursue Brahmacharya again because I remember the clarity of mind it gave me before.

What should I do to speed up the process of cleansing this medication out of my system

ANSWER: Apply the complete set of Yogic practices (as described in past answers) with 4.00 A.M wake up and the required lifestyle of Brahmacharya. All toxins will get flushed out in the course of time.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Thank you for the reply. I have a few questions.

1. Since I'm currently not working, is it okay to meditate the rest of the day after a yoga session in the morning? Physical exercise is difficult for now because the injection gave me hyperprolactinemia(reduced muscle strength , high prolactin, lower testosterone, erectile dysfunction, reduced sperm production.)

2. During meditation, can I repeat an affirmation the whole time for restoring my health?

Answer
1. Meditation is the state of the Atman (self). Merging the mind into one's self is meditation. One can meditate whenever possible, for as long as one wishes.

2. Do not ask or wish for anything other than realization of the self, before sitting for meditation. If one thinks, wishes or wants something in meditation, it will not be meditation on the self but meditation on the desire, which is not conducive to realization of the truth.

The aim of meditation, should be to merge the mind into the self, so that nothing but the self remains. How will the mind merge into the self if one keeps affirming a want or desire? Hence let go of all these wants and perform 'Nishkama karma' (actions carried out to realize the self alone without any other desire). When this much is done, with surrender to God, all that which has to come will eventually come on its own.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Dhananjay,

I went through your previous answers on wet dreams.

After roughly 4 months of physical brahmacharya and attempted mental brahmacharya, I had a wet dream during the waking hours while I took a nap. There was pedophilic imagery, which highly disturbs me. I do not understand because I have been attempting with full sincerity to hold mental celibacy, shun sexual thoughts when they arise, and so forth.

1) How can this be explained?

2) How do I stay casual and well-engaged in society (roles must be played) when the exterior world is so sex-obsessed? I had a wet dream one day after watching a normal comedy movie with a few racy scenes, but it is disgusting how everything is driven toward the sex impulse.

3) How does the practice of pranayama, bandhas, and Nadi Shodana improve one's intelligence and mental functioning? Is IQ affected?

4) I will try my best to practice sadhana expecting nothing in return. How does one maintain a sense of purpose in life? When everything is merely a role to be played well, does one not feel vacuous on the inside?

5) In the last 4 months, despite no voluntary lapse and attempt for clean thoughts, 3 wet dreams have occurred. Is this a sign from the almighty that my practice is not destined to succeed?

Have all mental, spiritual, and physical gains correspondingly been destroyed?

I will admit, I have not been regular in my practice of meditation, pranayama, etc. I thought merely abstaining from sexual thoughts/acts would suffice but it appears that semen somehow leaks through? Is this the working of the astral plane?

6) In India there are a group of individuals who perform "Nadi Josi", a form of service which purportedly tells one of past and future births. Is this legitimate? If so, how can a directory be updated with names of each new person who is born?

7) Lastly, yesterday I contemplated the cycle of samsara while reading about a Saudi prince who owns over 300 Rolls Royce cars and the world's largest passenger plane. How does one accumulate SUCH good karma? Assuming he engages in no wrong, will his soul be positioned similarly in future births? Sometimes when viewing such wealth disparity it is hard to believe prarabdha karma could be so different that one person dies at 10 with cancer while another enjoys the world as a billionaire for 80 years.

I am eternally grateful for your answers. Please show me the right approach to consider for these queries.

Humbly yours,
SR

Answer
1. Past Samskara-s bring up such episodes when they surface. The way out is to displace such thoughts and replace them with opposite thoughts, through Vichara (inquiry) Viveka (wisdom) & Vairagya (dispassion for the unreal), always regular in Sadhana.

2. Put in your efforts, as suggested in past answers and be patient.

3. All faculties of the body & mind improve through Yogic practices (details available from past answers)

4. The sense of purpose concerns the Ego, which plays roles. The Atman (self) has no purpose and no roles. So play as required and be quiet, holding on to the self, in bliss & peace.

5. While a wet dream by itself does not reset practice, one should strive honestly to avoid the same. After many years of regular Sadhana, the issue will get resolved. First achieve a few years of unbroken practice, with all the necessary methods suggested. The answers will then be known by themselves.

6. Live in the present, the future will take care of itself.

7. Do your dharma and be quiet. That which has to come will come. Questions not concerning the practice of Brahmacharya to realize the self are not in purview.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Sir,
Thanks a lot for your previous answers and showing me the correct path. Can you please answer couple of more questions?

1. My daughter is 3 years old now. I want to give her proper guidance from childhood. Please let me know what can i do for this.

2. I read in your past answers that kids born with celibate parents are intelligent and spiritually inclined. How can i guide my friends/relatives who are yet to become parents. I am not sure If I should tell them about this because I'm also at initial stages in this path.

Answer
1. If the husband and wife practice virtue & spirituality, with a Yogic life to realize the self, children get educated by themselves. Do this much for now; all other things will be taken care of.

2. Do your Sadhana and be quiet. Nothing more is expected of you.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhananjay,

It's been around 3 months of physical voluntary brahmacharaya. I had a wet dream about 18 days ago, but so far, due to divine grace, I've kept physical voluntary brahmacharaya. For some reason, I am getting a lot of stares at work from other coworkers and my boss, and whenever I look back at them, they immediately turn away their face and continue with whatever they're doing. I don't know if this is caused by my natural personality or its caused by brahmacharaya. Sometimes people treat me quite well, and otherwise, are quite aloof with me.

I actually don't care about events outside of work, but inside the workplace, I am fearful about what others think about me for my career prospects and the fear of getting fired. To be honest, I am fine with getting fired from work, but I don't want it to be caused by faults in my personality or by reasons where I don't put enough effort into the tasks. Kindly help me, sir. This is bothering me.

Answer
Do your duty calmly and efficiently and be quiet. What others think is not one's business. Our's is to do our Dharma and be at peace. All things are then taken care of by the higher power, in the way required.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Respected sir,

Is it ok to practice bhramcharya with a friend until we do not share any experience. Practicing it together means, encourage each other to follow the strict schedule and going to yoga classes together, since we live at same place.

thank you

Answer
Going together to a Yoga class poses no problem, as long as one maintains silence. It is talk and discussion regarding the subject, which are to be avoided. What is required is practice, contemplation and silence.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
i was topper in studies from my childhood. i was such a razor sharp that my lecturers used to shock at my intellectual skills. i got state rank in my +2. On entering b.tech, because of a bad company of a friend, i had come to know masturbation. since that time(age17) I've been masturbating. now I'm crossing 25. Even i realised at the age of 20 itself,, i couldn't stop it. clearly i can see the effects of it now. my brain is not as sharp as before. but still enthusiastic in studies .Please Guide me how to stop that habit so that I'll get back my past health. and i was fully disappointed by my past.

Answer
The methods to be employed, to maintain Brahmacharya are available in past answers. Go through each and every past answer, absorb the essence and apply it in practice. The issue will eventually get resolved.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Sir,

I started to practice meditation after being a brahmachari for some months. During meditation i took the name of a religious figure in this case "Jesus Christ" and I repeat this name mentally and repeatedly many many times. I felt after some while the arms and shoulders like jumping and then felt the body very refreshed as with cold water. Sometimes i see like a white light with the eyes closed during meditation when i let go. Is this a sign of advandcement?

Answer
One can take these experiences to motivate oneself further. However, one should not get caught with these experiences of the mind, which are only illusions. Till one reaches the state of the self in the self, with no mind, irreversibly, one should turn a blind eye to all these unreal visuals.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dhananjay,

The practice of brahmacharya is aided by a guru. However, what is one to make of a guru whose personality changes with time from pleasant to sour and brusque?

I have seen your old answers on this very forum, expressed cheerily and with motivation. They were long and detailed.

Now, your answers seem to be made out of irritation. Your mantra seems to be "do your sadhana and be quiet". That much practitioners know themselves; they ask you questions because they wish to learn from someone who is further along this sacred path.

I, for instance, asked you how karma works in the case of a billionaire with 300 rolls royce. You claimed the question was out of purview yet it is very clearly ESSENTIAL to understand. The cycle of samsara is a constant in the lives of all but the realized and understanding the process of samsara is necessary to understand how to break out of it. Why is it wrong to ask something like this?

As long as doubts persist and questions are not answered, true liberation cannot come. In the same way that sense pleasures must be experienced to fully overcome them (with the very rare exception of highly advanced jivas), understanding answers to doubts is essential.

Of course, I do not expect you to give me a different answer herewith. But I thought you should know 1) how difficult it is to practice this path as a young man in a highly lust-filled world 2) why aspirants come to you with their questions and 3) I am immensely grateful for your advice and could not have advanced 10 % if I had not read your answers. I prayed to have a spiritual guide who was genuine about this practice and the almighty gave me your forum-for that I am always thankful to him.

regards,
SR

Answer

1. Right instruction ends at where to look, not what to see. That is to be realized through direct experience, with unbroken Sadhana, carried out honestly, uninterruptedly and patiently, over years, decades or lifetimes, as the case may be.

2. Knowledge of the truth is not attained through any amount of instruction, discussion, elaboration, reading the scriptures or other theoretical means.

"The truth is realized in SILENCE, when the mind is merged into the Atman (self)" .

3. Instruction ends at description of the means required merge the mind into the self. The rest, one has to do by himself, through unswerving effort, with surrender to God. Then alone does one get knowledge of the truth and eventually becomes the very truth himself.

4. The result of merit and demerit, which is the cause behind worldly accomplishments or non-accomplishments have been addressed in past answers, to the extent required. Merit and demerit, concerning the Ego, have no connection with realization of the truth. Hence, the topic does not come within the purview of 'Atma Sadhana', and hence does not necessitate elaboration.

5. What is 'being quiet'? To merge the mind into the self, so that nothing but the self remains, yet indulging in one's Dharma at the worldly level is 'being quiet'. Mere external silence, with the mind full of turbid wants and desires is not quiescence. He who masters the art of 'being quiet' becomes the truth himself.

6. To whom are the 'doubts'? As long as the one who has doubts exists, there will be no end to doubts. Doubts cannot be cleared through debates, lectures or discussions, which all come within the purview of the mind. Doubts disappear forever, only when the one 'doubting' (Ego) is eradicated forever. Then, one transcends the mind & pure consciousnesses alone remains, which is of the nature of knowledge-being-bliss. It is the fountain of all knowledge, which is right within. All doubts are then gone forever & no doubt remains. This is the method.

An aspirant once went to an Enlightened master, asking for realization. The master asked him to wait under a tree, telling he would be back. It became evening, and there was still no sign of the Guru. The aspirant continued to wait. It soon became night and the weather became cold, with the place swarming with mosquitoes. Without even a bed to sleep on or cover himself, the aspirant slept on a slab of stone under the tree, bitten by mosquitoes. By the next morning, there was still no sign of the Guru. The aspirant continued to wait, sitting in meditation. Days passed, but there was no sign of the Guru.

Days soon became weeks and weeks became months. The Guru had still not appeared. Passer's by gave the meditating disciple with some food, water and minimal clothing and he continued to wait, spending his time in meditation in the harsh conditions. Soon, it was a year and there was still no sign of the Guru. The disciple continued his Sadhana, meditating day after day in wait of his Guru. Soon, years started to roll by. There was still no sign of the Guru.

The aspirant was still patient and had full trust in the words of the Guru, who had told him to wait, saying he would be back. So he continued to do his Sadhana, his body ravaged by the harsh elements. Knowing nothing about his future, not knowing if the Guru would ever come, not knowing what would happen to him, he continued to wait in silence. Sometimes, people left some food before him and sometimes, there was no food. The aspirant, turning a blind eye to all external conditions waited patiently, trusting the words of his Guru. Such was his longing & commitment for self-realization.

Twelve years passed in this way, and one day, the Guru appeared. He blessed the aspirant with a single touch, asking him to utter the Mahavakyam "Soham" (I am THAT). Upon uttering the same, the aspirant experienced full realization and became a 'Jivanmukta'.

The 12 years of hardship had burnt all the negative karma which was in store. The life of austerity, frugality & simplicity became 'Tapas' & had dissolved all 'Moha' (attachment) which the disciple had as regards the world and its comforts. Contemplation & meditation on the Supreme had burnt all past Samskara-s in totem in the course of time, resulting in dissolution of the Ego. This was the Sadhana prescribed by the Guru, without any further elaboration.

The disciple had full faith in the words of the Guru, for he had been told that the Guru is God himself in blood and flesh. When the Guru said "Wait, I will be back", the disciple waited. Period. Such was his trust in the words of the master. It was unconditional. Not once did the disciple question why, when or how. The Guru had given an instruction to wait and that was the end of the matter.

Do you see the kind of longing, love, devotion & unfailing commitment the disciple had for 'Kaivalya' (self-realization)? The determination, zest and unconditional surrender to attain the objective? The complete surrender and trust in the words of the Guru? It is such intensity which is required. Such intensity alone has the power to break through the shackles of ignorance. Crossing this 'Samsara Sagara' (ocean of trans-migratory existence) is not an easy task. Only those very devoted to the ideal succeed. Only those whose devotion supersedes the pull of desire for the world emerge victorious on the other side. The rest fail and have to try again.

There was no one in person to clarify his doubts. None to give him elaborate lectures. All that was realized was realized in the course of Sadhana alone, from within, for real knowledge comes from within and not from outside.

One is always the Satchidananda Atman, the embodiment of knowledge, bliss and pure being. All that is required is to overcome identity with the 'Anatma' (non-self-Ego), following which pure knowledge springs forth like a fountain, from the infinite self. It is endless and pure, like the infinite sky.

The purpose of this portal ends at instruction on the methods required to merge the mind into the Atman (self). The rest, one has to realize through direct experience, through arduous Sadhana, by merging into THAT. Different aspirants are at different stages of evolution. Therefore, the answers to the same questions vary. That which is deemed necessary, to the requirements of the particular individual is advised. The means, methods and style of advise do not need justification.

He who follows the complete set of instructions given in past answers meticulously & regularly, with full surrender and trust in God, will eventually attain the objective. This is certain. Patience and trust in Sadhana should be unconditional, with no expectations. It may take years or lifetimes. One should still be undaunted. The Lord does not grant knowledge of the Atman to those who approach HIM with terms, conditions & dictates. It is only when one becomes completely humble, letting go of the Ego with full surrender, that the truth is perceived. He who does so alone realizes the truth and attains to silence.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

respected sir,

i am practising brahmacharya for 6 months now i would like to ask you 3 questions kindly guide..

1.i am planning to start rajayoga with my practise because the transmutation process whcih i am doing is not much effective.. as all the sitting positions are turning out difficult because of some spine/muscle injuries .. is it okey to practice in vajrasana ?? which is turning out to be most comfortable ..

2.i have a case of dry skin disease which is genetical in nature, is it also due to energy imbalance ?? is it a hindrence??

3.before 3 years i practised trataka about 3 or 4 instances, after that my forhead area becomes activated with energy even if i never did it again ,is it bad or backfired ??

with regards sabari .....

Answer

1. Yes, one can practice in Vajrasana.

2. No worries. Ignore the condition and continue with practice.

3. Various reactions occur during the initial few years of practice. Do not worry about these minor reactions. If the methods suggested in past answers are followed completely with a Yogic lifestyle, all these vacate in the course of time, leading to stable health and well being.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello sir,
Sir actually I want to start Anulom vilom pranayama but due to my busy schedule I can only do it at night 2 am before sleep.I dont have any other time for it.So is doing anulom vilom at 2 am harmful,as trees exhaling co2 at night or it is possible to do it.

2)Is sleeping 6 hours enough for a human being.

I Will really appreciate your answer
Thsnkyou

Answer
1. Pranayama and other Yogic practices can be performed at any one of the four Sandhi Kala-s (Just before Sunrise, 12 Noon, at Sunset, 12 midnight).

2. If the quality of sleep is sound and deep, six hours suffices.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

Although you have been quite clear on some of the below subjects, I just can't seem to manage to overcome them.

My masturbation problem is due to past childhood karma and harm done to (an)other(s) thereof.

The main trigger of a strange masturbation session is irritation and hatred. I try very hard to overcome this problem but I just don't succeed.

1) How should I react when another person greatly irritates me either by some action of his or even inaction? Hatred remains strong even when not contemplated, despite attempts to bar it.

2) Can raw green chillies be consumed with food?

3) I can't do more than one or two of the suggested asanas due to obesity. I am more inclined towards prayer (it is also overwhelming due to its sheer bulk, incapacitating me to practice yoga). I will be taught sandhyaa with pranayama in a year. Is success still possible?

4) Meanwhile can running at the gym be sufficient? I need to lose a lot of weight which requires strenuous cardio.

Answer
1. Drink a glass of water, count to twenty very slowly & walk away from the place, diverting the mind into some other constructive activity. Then drive sense into the Ego through reminder of the fact that negative emotion kills and destroys the one who indulges. Resorting to negativity is the resort of the foolish, who suffer and repent at the end. Forgiving, by holding on to one's true nature of divinity is the way of the wise.

2. Green chilly in small quantities does not pose trouble.

During the initial few years of Brahmacharya, it is advisable to follow as bland a diet as possible, as past Samskara-s are very strong and can cause sudden loss of equilibrium when they surface. Highly spiced food has a higher chance of causing such triggers. For this reason, a low spiced diet is advised. After one one becomes an Urdhvareta (further to mastering Savikalpa Samadhi), food does not cause much trouble as many of the troublesome Samskara-s have been annulled.

3. Practice to the extent possible. Never give up. Follow the path shown by destiny. The Lord makes different people take different approaches, based on their individual constitution. When one's efforts for liberation are genuine, success eventually comes.

4. Yes, strive to lose some amount of weight.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhananjay,

I have several questions:

(a) My relatives, usually close parents, and extended relatives often harass me. My parents are extremely worldly and foolish in many regards, and to be honest, did not raise me properly, and often insulted me for my spirituality and my aloofness from association with worldly people. To be honest, they want to drag me down to a worldly life, and their very company causes me great misery. How should I handle them? What should be my interaction towards them? Whenever I talk to them or think about them, I feel pain. They are useless to me in many ways and do not offer liberation.

(b) Whenever there is a sexual thought in my head, and I divert it with holy thoughts or divine chanting, there is a rush of energy or prana as if it is moving from one part of my body to another. What is this? What exactly is happening here?

(c) I am willing to wait for years or lifetimes, if necessary, but out of curiosity, how long will it take for attraction to women to die in the waking state? So, when I walk in the streets, and I see a "Pretty" girl, there isn't a single sexual thought, and I feel nothing? (as Sivananda would say--established in Brahmacharaya?)

Awaiting your response.

Answer
1. Every circumstance one finds himself in is designed to help the Jiva move towards liberation. Situations where one has to deal with people of a dissimilar temperament help develop 'Titiksha' (endurance), by ultimately making one give up identification with the Ego. Hence look at the world as a dream, the 'I-ness' (Ego) as unreal, and hold on to the self in peace, whatever be the attitude and reactions of the world & its people, for that which is getting affected is the Ego and not the self.

A sense of respect & duty must always be maintained as regards one's parents, as one is forever indebted to them, for having served as the mediums in bringing him to this world.

2. Divine thoughts move consciousness towards the Sat (real), away from the Asat (unreal). The same is correspondingly observed as regards the movement of internal Prana also.

3. That state becomes natural and effortless, when further to long practice of 'Nirvikalpa Samadhi', the Yogi eventually reaches the last and final state called 'Dharma-Megha Samadhi', beyond which there is 'Kaivalya' (irreversible residence in the infinite and endless ocean of the self, also called self-realization).

Then, the 'Guna-s' (traits), responsible for cropping up of the Ego (and therefore the sexual impulse) are fully roasted and deactivated. The Yogi is then like a painted flame, always appearing ablaze, yet there being no trace of fire. He is the complete extension of the Supreme Lord, with no trace of the Ego.

Till then, the senses are under control, but the relish for the objects of senses remains. Downfall can occur even in very advanced stages if one is not careful. The relish is completely gone only after merger into the Supreme. The Yogi is then a Jivanmukta, liberated, while still occupying the body.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello; It's almost 2 years that I'm practicing brahmacharya. I learned about it first here then I read Sivaananda's book. My question is about meditation. I used to practice meditation for almost 10 years but I went through some distress and family strife and the result was an unrest mind so that I was not able to sit and meditate anymore, and after a while I lost all interest in meditation, and gradually forgot about it at all. Now it's almost 8 years that I haven't had meditation time, but recently I started praying. I started praying and through (what might someone call) scientific prayer I started to find faults and shortcomings in my character; bad behaviors and false attitudes. What I'm trying to ask is that can these two, prayer and meditation, be compared to each other? Can through prayer I gain my equilibrium once again to get back to meditation? Can meditation hide our faults (ego-related faults)from our site, but prayer bring them to our notice? Thank you for your answer and the efforts you put on disseminating knowledge of brahmacharya to people who are looking for purity.

Answer
1. Start with prayer, with devotion to God. When the devotion becomes intense, one automatically goes into meditation.

2. Meditation is the final and most advanced activity that can be performed by oneself. It supersedes prayer, for in prayer, one wants something; while in true meditation, one wants nothing. The Ego (which has wants) is set aside and the self alone shines, real meditation occurs.

All defects are ultimately burnt through meditation on the Supreme and true knowledge

(from the self) shines forth, further to long practice of correct meditation. Therefore, all that is to be known, can be known through meditation.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Hello Sir,

I am a 38 year old who has thankfully realized the error of his lustful ways, and who feels very grateful to know about Brahmacharya from your kind instructions.I am 2 months in to the practice, and feeling truly blessed with this life saving information.

My question is regarding important life decisions such as resuming study at university for example.I realize that in the first few months of Celibacy(and probably much further into it), one's ability to make intelligent decisions is severely compromised, and that one ought to simply take care of the basics(food, shelter, etc) first, and delay important decision making until one is better situated.Does this sound reasonable to you?

I am not working at all at the moment, although I am volunteering at a couple of places to keep in touch with people.Whenever some one asks me to take up this or that project, I immediately shrink from it, as though I simply don't want to take any extra stuff on.Is this feeling natural, and is it best to honor that feeling in the early days?I used to leave the country, take up courses that bored me, and generally not be able to sit still in the days before I came across brahmacharya.Now it feels like I need a good rest.

Thankyou very much for your response.

Warm regards.

Stuart.

Answer

1. All abilities (including decision making) improve further to the start of Brahmacharya. The truer Brahmacharya becomes, the better are one's faculties (be they mental or physical). There is no need to delay anything.

2. Do that which is required to earn your living and focus the rest of your energy in establishing Brahmacharya, along with the complete set of Yogic practices and lifestyle. Meditate often, striving to merge the mind into the self. With patience, perseverance and regular efforts, everything will stabilize by HIS grace.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

repected sir,

its been very kind of you to answer previous question

i have read all your answers on the site and still have some doubts, kindly guide..

1.i would like to bath after warm up exercises and before morning practises is it okey to do that ??

2.you prescribed 10 asanas on a previous answer, how many times an asana should be performed ?

3.should nadishodhana be performed before bandhas ?? or pranayama ?
4.you said that all the three bandhas combined become mahabandha , how can we practise in mahabandha pls explain .. and how many times ??
5.should one only practise dhyana in siddhasana or padmasana ?? i like to follow sivanandas siddhasana(right leg heel on guda and left leg heel on the begining of genital) is it okey ??
6.the sivanandasana instruced by you is same as ardha matsyendra asana ?
7.is ardha paschmothanasana the same as janusirasana ??
8.is it okey to start third eye meditation with this ??
9.when one go on with this practise should he increase the time span of the practise or should he continue with the practise the same time span with two times a day ??
i beg your pardon for asking too many question one time coz there is no one else, and apreciate your good nature making time for guiding..
with regards sabari..

Answer
1. The correct approach is to bathe after getting done with early morning Yogic practice & meditation. However, since in the case of beginners, 'Tamas' (inertia, the cause of sleepiness) may be high early in the morning, having a bath and then commencing practice is recommended.

Once the aspirant sits for practice, it is not recommended to get up and divert the mind (and therefore Prana) on other things.

2. Once, by maintaining the final and correct pose for a few seconds.

3. Asana, Bandha, Nadi-Shodhana, Pranayama & Meditation (on the formless Supreme, no different from the self) is the order.

4. The three Bandha-s in conjunction are called 'Tribandha'. The method of practice, in detail, is available in past answers.

5. There is only one 'Sidhasana'. The left heel is placed under the perenium and the right heel above the genitals, with both the calf muscles in between the thumb & second finger of the opposite feet.

6. No.

7. Similar but not the same.

8. Meditation can be practiced in a seating Asana, which one finds stable, comfortable and leading to equillibrium of the body & mind. The spine, neck and head have to be be in the same line. Sidhasana, Padmasana, Vajrasana & Sukhasana are most preferred. 'Sivanandasana' can also be employed for meditation, after one masters it.

9. Same span, same Asana-s & at the same time.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
i am a 28 year old guy. due to over masturbation i am having osteo arthritis in knees and other joints. my questions are:

1. in tao they say that while doing sex the sex fluid and sperm can be redirected to the channel in spinal cord so that it reaches brain by having control over PC muscle. is this true.

2. how long does it take to recover from weak joints.

3. human life span normally depends on prarabda karma alotted for this life. does loss of semen lead to death even before prarabda karma is completed.

Answer
1. Taoism does not say so. One should not make loose statements of any path, further to childish reading of some fabricated material, written by immature and irresponsible minds, without thorough knowledge, practice & direct experience.

If the vital fluid could have been so easily redirected into the spinal chord, and thereby sublimated through sexual activity, everybody would have attained Enlightenment through frequent sexual relations. There would have been no need for Sadhana, Tapas, Vairagya and Yoga.

Real sublimation occurs only when the past Vasana-s & Samskara-s blocking flight towards the self are annihilated. It is neither possible, nor feasible to fully sublimate & transmute sexual energy by controlling some muscle, for the body is inert and lifeless in truth. Real sublimation occurs further to Gnyana (knowledge of the truth), which is attained by Sadhana and Vairagya.

2. It is not possible to define time frames. Do the Sadhana suggested in past answers sincerely, with devotion to the Lord. It offers the highest chance of recovery, if anything will.

3. The degree of loss of semen is also governed by Prarabdha, which includes all, including life span.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,
Recently, we relocated to a very hot (35-40 C) and humid place. Prior to this, we were in a cold place.

While practicing Asanas (especially, sarvangasana) and pranayama, nadi shodhana, the heat and lack of wind becomes unbearable, and it is very uncomfortable (difficulty in breathing, due to no breeze). The windows are open, but there is almost no breeze.
I try to wake up early, but at the moment, only manage to start the practice by 5:45.
I do not use the AC. Is it okay to switch on the fan? Please guide me.
Thank you very much.

Answer
1. Try to practice outside, at 'Brahmimuhurtham'. It will take some time for the body to acclimatize to the new surroundings.

2. No fan during Sadhana and no AC ever. Air-conditioning is the foremost cause of ill-health. Sweating is a natural phenomenon which is to be allowed. Rub the generated sweat back into the body. In the course of time, the body will find no trouble.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

I've been following this forum from more than 2 years now, and have learnt the true objective of human life. I sincerely want to practice regularly, but there are so many obstacles. They can be overcome, but I am not able to do so.
I feel very depressed, that despite knowing this beautiful path, I can't follow it. I am not able to establish my practice.
Only Guru Kripa can help me. Sir, please help me. Please tell me, what could I do to receive Guru Kripa.

Thank you very much.

Answer
1. 'Guru Kripa' (grace of Lord, who is the real Guru) is already there, which is what made you start the practice. It is the same grace which is making you persevere and the very same grace will eventually dissolve the Ego, following which the self alone remains. All that is required is to be silent and let the grace of the higher power function as it should.

2. Impediments and obstacles are most common in any practice. Impediments are eventually removed by the Lord alone, though it is necessary for one to strive to his best extent, as long as identification with the 'I-ness' remains.

3. Perform the suggested Sadhana cent percent, incorporating the required lifestyle, without breaks and without fail. The rest will be taken care of.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

When the mind is excited/agitated due to some happenings at home/work, it directly affects the practice. It is difficult to concentrate on the asanas, and the mind is in its own world. As a result, a lot of the precious early morning time gets wasted, and the practice is incomplete. Kindly advice, how to overcome such situations.

Thank you very much.

Answer
1. The first step is to avoid agitation and irritation by reminder of the fact that the world is a play and one is an actor. The next step is to hold on to Sadhana by the reminder that Sadhana is the only means by which one overcomes identity with this dream.

2. When this much is done with awareness of the unreality of life situations, one takes everything lightly and is not affected by happenings or non-happenings. He does his Dharma without attachment and eventually develops 'Vairagya' (dispassion). The mind then automatically gravitates towards the Atman (self).

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: So The past 3 years or so of my life were incredibly rich and I have been working towards full brahmacharya for the whole 3 years, almost 4 years but could never go more than a few months with out a nocturnal mission or a slip up, about 9months ago I started to masturbate again with porn on an average of once every 2 weeks I would say, I thought I met a cool girl and it made me want to rekindle my sexuality tho I never had intercourse with her and it felt good at first but then I started to have anxiety attacks and depression come in again that I hadn't felt for a long time so about 2months or so ago I tried to start full brahmacharya again... Note that the past few years of my life have been highly spiritual and I felt so close to spirit, now I feel very diminished and more heavy and physical... Anyway I tried full on brahmacharya again and made it a whole month with out virtually any thoughts and no fluid lost however towards the end of the month I started to get horrible migraine headaches and low energy it was like I wasn't getting better at all just worse the farther I would go.. So anyway I broke again and started going a week to 2 weeks between every ejaculation, now I feel very strange pressure in my back and head a good portion of the time.. It has been a week since I've ejaculated and today I woke up with so much nausea and anxiety I couldn't really eat the whole day... I know I need to kick this habit but the last time I went a month how I felt towards the end was very discouraging.. I'm usually not the type to ask advice about things like this but here I am trying to humble myself yet again! Haha thank you for any advice u may have, this is a very hard battle!

ANSWER: Unless desire for the path of 'Abrahmacharya' (incontinence) is not given up, the issue will not get resolved. Rather, it will aggravate into something very serious. Strive honestly in the path of the self, with the methods required, however tough be the revival. The other path is not for you.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Thank u.. Also I'm curious after so much work is done is it more dangerous to relapse? It seems weirder now than before maybe just because I got so used to the higher vibrational state that being back here again is just harder to tolerate? I just could never go back to living this way it just doesn't feel good, I don't ever remember feeling so bad all the time when I was younger and losing my seed daily..

Answer
Once initiation into the path has started by the will of the higher power, one should never revert to the old ways. A multitude of serious problems will arise if one does not comply. Persevere honestly, going by HIS will. All will be well.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Dhananjay,

Thankyou for your reply to my last question.I have a couple more to ask.

1. I am practicing meditation and sometimes there are images of past viewed porn coming strongly into the mind.There is a often a strong sexual charge felt in the body, an erection and strong desire.At these moments i have simply been observing the sensations arise and pass on with equanimity; all the while keeping my breath deep and even; and sure enough the erection subsides, and the image fades.This process feels as though the old impressions are being cleansed and gradually losing their sting.However the mind is still very interested in the images, and sometimes i feel as though i am indulging in mental masturbation albeit for short periods of time.At the times when i have felt particularly strong sensations surfacing, i am aware of a small discharge of lubricating pre-ejaculate from the penis.This alerts me to the fact that arousal is quite high.When this fluid is noticed, have i crossed a line and entered dangerous territory, and should i stop the meditation before it gets to this point?Please could you clarify this for me.

2. Do you have any recommendations for an aspirant living in a very cold climate, in regards to early wake-up and yoga practice.
I know that a cold, stiff body is not very responsive to yoga.

Thankyou very much for your response.

Answer
1. One should nip these thoughts in the bud, replace them with thoughts of reality (that the body is a foul bag of flesh that eventually rots away and is never worth losing one's vital fluid over) and establish wisdom, by immediately reverting the mind back to meditation on the formless Supreme/self.

Do not fight with lust. It is not possible to win over Maya through reasoning. Such is the nature of cosmic illusion, that it cannot be wrestled with and won over. Maya is annulled only through destruction of past Samskara-s (impressions) & Vasana-s (tendencies) through long and patient Sadhana, following which consciousness identifies itself with the ever pure self and shines with luster.

2. The climate poses no trouble if Brahmacharya is maintained in totem with all the Yogic practices. Proper transmutation of the vital energy increases 'Yogagni' (fire of Yoga), through which the body can be maintained warm, even in freezing temperatures. The aspirant can easily develop the ability to withstand extreme cold, as his core constantly radiates the fire, which is a byproduct of transmutation.

To kindle this fire, one must not use excessively warm clothing, but rather allow the body itself to produce the required heat, with normal clothing. Then, in due course, the objective will be achieved.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
sir.
i am suffering from chronic digeatipn problem which suffers me in doing asans..

you please reply as soon as..
as i am unable to do asans

Answer
Proper application of the Yamama-Niyama-s, with 'Mitahara' (moderate diet), warming up exercises and an active lifestyle will gradually help overcome the issue. Persevere gradually in performing the Asana-s, with determination and a strong will.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello sir,

Much appreciate you taking the time to answer questions. I've been practicing brahmacharya for a little over a year. So much has changed with my body since then. Mentally, I feel incredibly sharp and my memory has improved considerably. Physically, I always have an abundance in energy and feel lithe and quick. Even my voice and face have changed, surprisingly. But despite these physical benefits, I've also been dealing with some strange illnesses that started several months ago.

I've been to different doctors many times, but they're unable to detect anything. I've read through past answers and perhaps it could be karmic illnesses being burnt up? Perhaps it could be me not transmuting properly? I don't meditate often. I'm striving to become a writer, so much of my energy is directed towards that. Is it okay to practice brahmacharya for the sake of a creative pursuit? There's a famous musician, and I could tell simply from the tone of his speaking voice and manner of walking that he has much seminal energy stored up.

Sorry if the questions are a bit messy and unclear. Any advice is greatly appreciated.

Answer
1. It is important to take up the complete set of suggested practices, so as to ensure effective transmutation. Not doing so can result in stagnation of energy, causing various problems and eventually a break.

2. He who practices unbroken Brahmacharya in thought, word & deed using the Yogic methods suggested, with surrender to God, does not require any doctor or administration of external medication. Many of these illnesses are such that they cannot be diagnosed through external means. However, all of them will be completely routed out if the practice is unbroken and honest.

The karmic illnesses which surface en route are to be borne, so as to evacuate the source karma. The stored 'Ojas' will eventually eradicate the toxins responsible for the illnesses. The vital energy in the honest Brahmachari is more than sufficient to help him bear all such illnesses, which surface whilst cleansing of the three bodies, during the initial years. Simply persevere with correct practice, turning a blind eye to these temporary deviations in health.

3. If the practice is proper, with devotion to the Supreme, abundant energy will be available for creative pursuits. One might follow any such pursuit. However, one should not develop attachment and craving for the same, but always be detached, as an actor playing a role.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello dhananjay my age is 16 and I want to practice brahamcharya for 12 years can u give me some tips for beginning plz

Answer
The methods required are available in detail, in past answers. Go through each and every answer slowly and thoroughly from the start, absorb the essence and apply the same in practice.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Hi Dhananjay,

I have been keeping absolute Brahmacharya for more than 200 days.Something strange happen, the slight thoughts of women will cause some sticky liquid to spill from my penis.

Previously, this never happened before. My thoughts of women remain non-sexual, however these sticky liquid still leak. Is this sticky liquid semen ?

I would also like to say that i have go quite far in practicing Bramacharya and sexual thoughts over the past few months have decrease drastically.

Thank you very much

Raymond

ANSWER: 1. That is discharge of the 'Cowper's Fluid', further to mental stimulation. It is not conducive to Brahmacharya. It does not occur, if Brahmacharya is practiced in thought, word & deed.

2. Apply the suggested methods in totem and strive for complete sublimation, with devotion to God. Do not indulge in mental fantasy; else a break will soon follow.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: What is cowper's fluid and how to strengthen metal control ?

ANSWER: 1. Cowper's fluid is the lubricating fluid.

2. The required methods are available in detail, in past answers.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Does one pointed concentration required in achiving the absolute truth?

Is it true that the reality is like a mirror that reflect the real self ? And by changing internally the external change as well ?

Does one have to drop all attachment in order to gain insight of the absolute ?

As one progress in bramacharya, does one get dispassionate about relationship?

I feel that ojas in my body is moving in the lower spine, but it never move up . What cause such blockage ? I feel there is a lot of stored sexual energy but i am unable to turn them upward .

Answer
1. Yes, concentration on the Atman (formless self).

2. The world is an illusion which is reflected on the self (screen of pure consciousness). By merging the mind into the self, everything else (world etc.) also merges into the self.

3. If the practice is proper, the absolute truth gradually shines forth and attachment to the external drops by itself with time.

4. One gets closer to reality and therefore slowly loses attachment to the unreal (be it a relationship or something else)

5. It is not for you to worry about the internal processes. Your duty ends at honest efforts with surrender to God. If this much is done, there will be no stagnation. Do that much and leave the rest to HIM.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Hi after practicing Bramacharya for more than 6 months, I notice a increase in my physical fitness, mental strength and wealth.

Will these attribute continue to increase or is it just a coincidence of my life ?

ANSWER: Based on the honesty, sincerity and regularity of practice, the best results will shine forth in the course of time, with an increase in their magnitude. One should however stay focused on the objective (realizing the self) and not get carried away by these rewards.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: How long does maturity in bramacharya take ? I am not worried about the duration but I wish to know when one will be consider mature enough in bramacharya to be consider "safe" in life.

Does one have to reach the absolute to be safe ? Or the maturity of one gradually increase with practise , the longer one practise bramacharya,then the safer and more mature his is in term of progress .

Answer
When one no longer strives to practice Brahmacharya, because the one practicing no longer exists; When there is nothing left to practice; when Brahmacharya becomes natural, effortless and one's default nature, the practice is complete. This occurs after the self is realized and not before. Till then, one is always a student, who is to be vigilant.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi,i have been trying to follow this practice for 1 year but i fail it everytime. Brahmcharya is to be followed by keeping thoughts pure and non sexual but i can't improve my thinking. I tried a lot to keep my thoughts pure but it gets impure some how. For example i was seeing a movie yesterday and suddenly a sexy scene came and i got aroused, then i thought that i must ejaculate as my prostate has produced semen in gross form and i have to move it out. So i unwontedly masterbate which screws up everything. My prostate juice becomes my greatest excuse of masturbating. Please suggest me a solution. I can get aroused very easily. PS I AM 19 YEARS OLD

Answer
The methods suggested in past answers are not being applied in totality. Go through each and every past answer and apply the complete advice without exception for a year. Not one instruction should be missed out. We will then discuss the matter again.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello
I want to thank you for helping me to focus on studies.Thanks to u I have scored 95% in 12 board exams however it is getting difficult to maintain my vow.I slipped a lot in last few days .I would like to have my motivation back. Please help

Answer
1. One should not get caught with the euphoria which follows the abundant influx of power, which comes further to diligent practice.

2. The Ego, which is forever waiting to resort to the senses, will forcibly draw one into downfall if one identifies with it.

Surrender the benefits, success as well as the power gained by the practice to the Lord with the thought - "The I-ness (Ego) does nothing and is not capable of anything. All the strength, brightness, luster, energy and superlative results which are being experienced are from the Atman (pure self), who is none other than the great Lord. It is by HIS grace alone that these traits are being manifest in action. Therefore, the credit goes to the Lord alone and not to the Ego."

With such an attitude of humility, surrender and non-doership, by reminding himself that he is a mere witness, the Yogi must stick to regular and unbroken Sadhana, content with whatever comes in his destiny, always intent on realizing the self alone, ever vigilant against the senses. As long as he keeps the Ego snubbed under the feet, there is no trouble. Trouble arises when identification with the Ego is set in motion and one beams in pride with the thought - "I am the doer and very great" and loses his vigilance. Always keep this 'I-ness' (Ego) trampled under the foot.

Take up the complete set of suggested Sadhana, with 4.00 A.M wake up etc. in a regular and unbroken manner. Not on a single day should one miss out on the Sadhana. Even if one cannot sleep, cannot eat or do other things, one should never miss waking up at 4.00 A.M and performing Sadhana. Such should be the commitment.

When along with such regular practice, the mental attitude and techniques suggested earlier, as regards dealing with the world are applied during the course of the day, practice gets established in the course of a few years and the boat called Brahmacharya slowly helps the Jiva cross the dangerous ocean called 'Samsara'.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear sir,

I have been doing Yoga practices (as you outlined) for the past 6 months. (1. Asana(30 minute),2. bandha(3 mnt), 3. Nadisodhana(5 mnt), 4. Pranayama(10 mnt)with 32 sec retention 5.Meditation (30 mnt)

Related to asanas, I have been following the below sequence
1. Padmasana(1 minutes with both legs seperately X 2 times)
2. Vajrasana(3 minutes)
3. Ardha paschimottanasana (with both legs 10 seconds each X 2 times
4. Paschimottanasana (20 seconds X 2 times)
5. Halasana,(20 second X 2 times)
6. Sarvangasana (3 minutes)

I have 2 questions,

1) Padmasana: Initially I was doing padmasana in only one way (right foot on left thigh (first) and left foot on right thigh),
Recently I started doing padmasana in 2 ways (left foot on right thigh(first) and right foot on left thigh): Is this ok?

2.I used to sit in padmasana(right foot on left thigh (first) and left foot on right thigh) for doing pranayama and in siddhasana for doing meditation. (by the time meditation is over I feel severe knee joint pain, is this normal?

thank you in advance for your kind comments

Answer
1. Right foot on left thigh (first) and left foot on right thigh next, both pulled in tight, is the correct method.

2. Yes. It is normal to feel some numbness and pain after long seating for the beginner. There is no cause for worry, as the same disappears after getting up and stretching.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhananjay, thank you very much for selflessly sharing your invaluable knowledge.

Contemporary Western teachers like Eckhart Tolle, Adyashanti, and Mooji have helped many people around the world, by opening their eyes to the existence and nature of the spiritual path. Nevertheless, I never hear them talking about the importance of celibacy, and as far is I know, they are not celibate themselves.

Nevertheless I still find these teachers' words very helpful and in my eyes they are clearly much more spiritually awakened than I am. I think the fact that they neglect or ignore the subject of celibacy can mean any of the following things:
- They have very light sexual vasanas themselves, so they haven't experienced sexual desire as an important obstacle. But that still wouldn't fully explain their level of awakening without (I'm guessing) being continent.
- They are 'stuck' at a certain level of awakening themselves, until they realize the importance of celibacy and practice it.
- They are aware of the importance of celibacy, and maybe even practice it secretly, but don't mention it to their students for fear of alienating many of them.
- Maybe sex and loss of semen is much less of an obstacle if it's practiced without emotional attachment to the physical desire, in other words, when sex is a celebration of love and not lust.

What do you think?

Warm regards,
David

Answer
1. Efforts applied to merge the mind into the Atman (self), so as to vacate the Ego and merge into universal consciousness is spirituality. All religions ultimately aim for this objective and not anything else. This cannot be achieved by the one who goes after sexuality, which is 'Asat' (unreal). There is only one truth and hence only one spirituality. It is neither contemporary nor ancient, but the means to realize the truth.

Sexuality is one of the greatest illusions and completely unreal in terms of the absolute. Therefore, no spiritual progress is possible unless one maintains Brahmacharya. It is the foundation for spiritual progress.

2. Brahmacharya is striving to reside in the self as the self, by giving up doership, through surrender to the higher power. He who does so honestly will not lust after recreational sexuality.

The purpose of the sexual act is procreation and not recreation. Extending its purview beyond its rightful purpose ends in suffering. Immaterial of whether the fact is spoke or not spoken, accepted or rejected, the truth does not change, but remains the same.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Is it true that waking up at 4 am will help prevent night fall?? Plz tell me another methods to prevent it because its the barrier for me while undertaking celibacy.

Answer

1. Waking up at 4.00 A.M and performing Sadhana helps absorb certain hormones which are released at this time. Absorbtion of these hormones and secretions is very conducive to both Brahmacharya and overall health. Through such activity, the chance of a nightfall gradually reduces in the course of time.

2. The significance of wake up at 'Brahmimuhurtham', with the complete description of the processes which occur further to Sadhana at that time, is available in detail, in past answers.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

I wish to know if this world(external changes) is influence by internal changes ?

or

This world is a illusion laying/projected on what is really real/White/truth ?

Answer

To whom is the illusion? It is to the Ego. The Ego gets presented with a world which is a mirror reflection of itself. Thus, based on past karma accrued by the Ego, the world appears favorable or unfavorable to that degree. Therefore, the world is a reflection of one's own Ego and nothing else. In reality, the Ego & world are both unreal, for they have no existence of their own in terms of the absolute, which alone pervades everything.

The Atman (self) which is ever pure and ever untouched by good or bad is always unaffected, being the mere witness. He who transcends the Ego rests in the self as the self, is unaffected by the illusion. To him, there is nothing external or internal, for all is Brahman (Supreme), full of bliss, unchanging and eternal.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Hello,

I am a 20 year old male and am currently celibate. It is my intention to practice Brahmacharya for the next 10 years in effort to redirect my sexual energies creatively and also to strengthen my character, which has been less than a strong one for the former portion of my life. This was due to lack of confidence caused by usage of pornography, masturbation, etc. I do not intend to remain celibate for life but will wait until marriage for sexual encounter.

My question is one of whether you can recommend a specific physical practice to help me balance the mental and physical element. I've noticed that I feel insecure around men who are muscled and strong. As a young male my innate response would be to build muscle because i want to feel strong. But is this not superficial and merely masking a weaker spirit on the inside? This is why my tendency is toward yoga and strict celibacy in order to kindle a fierce inner shen (spirit) and fire.

I need assistance and will appreciate all and ANY help. Thank you and blessings.

Da'ud

Answer
The specific methods required to attain to unbroken Brahmacharya through a life of Yogic practices is available in past answers in detail. Go through each and every answer slowly, meticulously and absorb the essence. Then apply the advise in practice, regularly, without fail. The objective will be attained without doubt.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Respected sir,
After practising for 6 months and 5 days there happened to be a break in the practise in the form of a wet dream, I suppose it must be due to bad company of people who talks about things which is not good for practise.. I never did yoga also, and i remember you saying one can't get far without the help of yoga..
I wanted to start yoga practise and take things seriously but some things i can't locate on your answers pls provide links if you don't mind.. pls guide..
1.How can one practise tribandha and how many times ?? pls provide details ..
2.Very soon i am going to shift to middle east on professional grounds.. They must be using a/c inside buildings and early mornings are not so cool as in our country..
3.How many times one should practise in a day ??
4.The company in I am may compell to work till 8 p.m. so how can I practise in evenings if one has to practise yoga and pranayam twice a day ??
thank you for your help dhanajay sir i really appreciate and look forward for your answer..
regards sabari...

Answer
1. It will not be of real help to you if the links are provided. True benefit comes only when all past answers are assimilated and applied in day to day life.

Sustaining a life of Brahmacharya is not as easy as attending a crash course and getting an idea of a subject. It takes year and lifetimes to master the subject. The very fabric of one's nature has to be altered, gradually yet efficiently, so as to dissolve the Ego. The gamut of past answers cover all those aspects, the lifestyle and mindset one should develop to become a Yogi in the quest of the truth and sail in the boat of Brahmacharya successfully. Hence cover each and every answer, bookmark the pages which contain the particular Yogic practices and apply the same.

2. Perform 4.00 A.M practice, whatever be the place of residence. The second practice can be either at 12 noon, before sunset or at midnight, based on one's convenience. If the intensity is strong and genuine, the Lord shows the way.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Thanks for answering my previous question. I am a bodybuilder. And to satiate my daily protein requirements i ought to eat eggs daily. I do not eat meat, fish etc. But eggs i do. For brahmacharya it is advised not to eat eggs. My question is that if we can harm trees and herbs for our food requirement then why can't we eat eggs from hen. Both are living beings. If its permitted with respect to plants then why not eggs??? I have just asked this because for me, on behalf of body builder it is mandatory to have eggs. Plus i want to undertake celibacy. So i am confused to have eggs or not... Plz help me. thankyou

Answer
1. Eating food for survival, be it vegetarian or non-vegetarian does not constitute 'Himsa' (obstructing evolution of another life). Every creature is urged by various factors in nature, to eat the kind of food necessary for its survival and well being.

2. Different kinds of foods produce different kinds of reactions. Meat & eggs being 'Rajasic' (activating) in nature, have the tendency to agitate the mind and make one aggressive. This poses a higher chance of stimulating one's base nature. In the beginner Yogi, the base Samskara-s (impressions) and Vasana-s (tendencies) gathered from his past are still very strong and heavy. Since these types of foods can stir those base tendencies and cause a downfall, the beginner, in general, is asked to try and avoid these foods during the initial years of Brahmacharya. There is no other reason.

In case of the advanced Yogi, the type the of food does not matter much, as most of the base Samskara-s have been dissolved. He can eat a little of whatever is available, based on the nature of his activity and yet stay unaffected.

3. For now, eat eggs to the extent required for the physical exertion involved. Practice Brahmacharya and Yoga in the way advised. The higher power will eventually make the necessary changes required in both food and lifestyle, based on the activity and level of advancement.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Dear Dhananjay,

My only parent has died suddenly and young. I have no one now. I am devastated.

1) Will he come to pick me after death?

2) I mistreated him sometimes but we still joked and loved each other all the time.

3) I have regrets. Does he love me?

Please answer directly. I am finished.

ANSWER: 1. One can neither come earlier nor leave later. Things happen as they are destined, by the laws of Prarabdha. The entry, stay and exit of every Jiva is fixed by the laws of karma, as directed by the higher power.

2. Death involves the physical body and not the Atman (soul) which has no birth and death. When the scope for evolution in a particular body, under a particular set of circumstances is over, the Jiva is made to exit the body, so as to prepare for entry into another body, under another set of circumstances, to further its evolution.

3. One should not grieve and lament at death. Death is a joyous occasion, where the Jiva, having finished its work in this body, is graduating into another body, so as to evolve and progress further, as per the will of the Lord. Grieving and indulging in sorrow confuses the departed Jiva, hindering its movement and further progress. It becomes an impediment in its journey.

4. The proper conduct is to wish it well and help it quickly move towards its next destination by maintaining a positive, bright and well wishing atmosphere at home. One can perform the after-rites, as prescribed by his religion, with a well wishing attitude. No effort should be made to get in touch with the departed soul or lament continuously out of bondage & attachment. Such behavior causes immense distress to the Jiva.

Let go of all the confusions plaguing the mind and do this much with love and respect to your father. The best outcome is then assured.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: 1) He used to do Lord Shiv Puja, yagna and Gayatri Japam from 3.30AM daily without fail. He also did free puja for people. He did his evening puja and died suddenly. How does this influence his outcome?

2) Please tell me if I will meet him after death. We had the deepest relationship.

Answer
1. A preferential and noble birth awaits the Jiva, which took the relationship of your father. Knowing it to be such, wish him well and let go of the attachment. Excessive attachment will work against his free release into the next plane. One who loves another should not come in the way of the other's progress.

2. My dear child, as stated earlier, one should not try to contact or wish to get in touch with those who are done with their stay in a particular body & circumstance. As a loving & dutiful son, your right ends with performing the after-rites with an attitude of well wishing, respect and detachment.

If you do this much, all that is to be done from your side, for now, is considered done. Do this much and continue with your Sadhana, realizing that the body is unreal, impermanent, a covering and only an illusion. Attachment concerns the unreal Ego, which mistakes the body and another Ego to be real, while the in-dweller (Lord) who resided inside was alone real.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Dear sir

I have read quite a lot of your Answers and highly respect your opinion.

Two of the statements you have made in past answers have been the following-

1 - For semen to get fully reabsorbed into the body, it requires continued periods of celibacy in thought, word and deed beyond three to four months.
2 - The first three to four months of celibacy do not involve re-absorption to a large extent but consist of non-production.

My questions are the following:-

Question 1
What is the process by which a person can re-direct his Retas into Ojas. The answer to this question would be highly appreciated. Many sources talk about this "Re-Direction" but nowhere can I find a direct answer as to HOW this is to be done.
Most sources just give very vague answers.
As I understand it this is not something that happens automatically and needs to be "instigated" by the practitioner.

Question 2
I have been celibate now for +- 1 month and would also like to know WHEN should I start concentrating on re-directing my Retas energy to Ojas. Should I be starting immediately or only after 3 - 4 months?

Thank you so much for this valuable service you are doing freely for humanity.
Your answers would be Very, Very highly appreciated.

ANSWER: 1. Indulgence in sexuality is fueled by past Samskara-s and Vasana-s accrued in that direction. These in turn make one indulge in the present as well, thereby fortifying them further. By the process of Yoga, one gradually negates these seeds of past deeds, maintains purity of thought, word & deed in the present and also performs the practices required to revert semen back into Ojas. This helps one gradually overcome identity with the Ego, so as to get closer to his Atman (pure self).

The Yogic practices described earlier, along with the required mental attitude are specifically designed for this conversion. The complete set of methods to be adopted are available in past answers.

2. Apply the complete set of Yogic practices immediately.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Dear Dhananjay

Thank you so much for having taken the time to reply to my answer.
I really appreciate your time.

If you expect me to go through ALL your questions and answers from 20-March-2008 to the present to find the information that you are referring to it might take me a very long time to do that.
There are just over one thousand answers given by you from that period of time. I counted them!

It has taken me a very long time to get to this point where I am now able for the first time to subdue my lower nature for just more than a month, but I do realize that if I don't get help from someone to tell me HOW to re-direct this energy it will be of no avail.

Am I right in saying this is not an automatic process, and that I need to DO something in order to redirect this energy?

I do realize that it's impossible for you to keep replying to the same repeat questions elaborately over and over again, so I won't ask you to repeat yourself on my behalf.

But can you please just give me the dates for the answers to which you are referring to? Then at least I won't have to look for a needle in a haystack. I am also not really sure to which yogic practices you are referring to so even if I go through all your answers I might not recognize it when I see it.

This matter is very important to me and would be very highly appreciated if you could just point me to the dates of the answers to which you are referring to.

Thank you again for this great service you are doing to steer people in the right direction.

Have a lovely day.

Anthony

Answer
1. Yes, absorb the essence of each and every answer, so as to get the complete picture. The path of Brahmacharya cannot be successfully implemented with an answer or two. Read a few answers every day, marking them from the start. In a year, the entire set will be completed.

2. http://en.allexperts.com/q/Celibacy-Abstinence-3564/2011/5/Pranayama-Yoga-Brahma
http://en.allexperts.com/q/Celibacy-Abstinence-3564/2011/12/thribandha-khechari-

These contain the basic framework of the required practices. However, success comes only after the rest of the answers are absorbed and applied.

3. Refer past answers on meditation for information on how to meditate on the formless self.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Hello,

As someone from India, how would you define the indian concept of Kundalini energy? Is it related to the sexual instinct? It says that if kundalini doesnt awake, there is no enlightnment.

Thanks

ANSWER: It is only by the grace of the Lord that man realizes the truth about himself (through Enlightenment). The manifestation of this grace is called by various names, for the sake of understanding. The 'Kundalini' energy is nothing but the representation of this grace in the world of man and matter.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Thanks

But about the kundalini energy there is much talk in yoga and other schools like Tantra which say that this is a very esoteric and secret thing only for few people. SO thats why I asked, in general can we say it is the equivalent of the holy spirit in christian tradition?

Answer
1. Till the grace of the higher power is not directly manifest as regards a person, as in realizing the knowledge of the truth, he/she will have no inclination and no aptitude to think and move towards the self. So in the layman's terms, this is objectively described by the statement -"Kundalini awakening is not for everyone".

When the Lord bestows HIS grace, the very same person gets the mind and inclination to slowly give up attachment for the world and go in quest of the truth. The same person is then termed by the world as belonging to "The set of few deserving people". So it is all HIS play, which one eventually follows, for one is ALWAYS the Atman (self) in truth, separateness only being an illusion, the effect of 'Avidya' (ignorance).

2. The Supreme, also the Holy spirit, in manifestation, as energy responsible for taking man towards realization is what Kundalin1i is, call it by whatever name one may.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
DEAR SIR

Hi. Everytime i try to meditate for a long duration. My leg will get numb as the numbness continue i have to stop the meditation. Please teach me how to handle numbness on both leg.

Thank you very much.
BEST REGARD
AL

Answer
As the body gets purified by 'Yogagni' (the fire of Yoga), through the means suggested, the tendency for numbness will gradually reduce in due course and one gets comfortable in maintaining the posture.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,
What is the equivalent of a wet dream in a woman.
How can a woman know if there has been any progress in the practice.
Thank You.

Answer
1. A wet dream in a woman manifests as a sexually oriented dream in sleep, which is correspondingly accompanied by loss of 'Prana' (vital energy) on waking up, with a feeling of weakness. While there is no loss of physical fluid, as in the case of men, the energy lost is however the same, through the 'Linga Sharira' (astral body), which then manifests as weakness in the 'Sthula Sharira' (physical body).

2. As one comes closer to his/her Atman (self), one gets less taken over by the world and sense illusion and more centered in the truth. Residence in the self, as the self, being unaffected by the happenings around oneself, be they pleasant or unpleasant is the true sign of progress.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello, Thank you for your valuable answers. It really helps a lot.

I have a strange question. My inner guidance sometimes comes in the form of symbols. Twice now, my attachment to sensory pleasure has been symbolized by a centipede-like creature. In my latest vision the creature was crawling down my spine. Have you ever encountered this symbol before, either personally or in scripture and such? This is not an important question, feel free to ignore it, I'm just curious.

Best regards,
David

Answer
Different people go through different kinds of visions and experiences during the initial stages. All these however are only in the realm of the mind and do not concern the self. They can be taken as encouragements, but should not be given undue importance.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhananjay

Yesterday I have a wet dream , for the first time, i felt pain in the lower region. I have heard many time from the previous post that wet dream has a minimal impact on bramacharya.

Yesterday, i loss my seed on the mental level. I felt that a loss is still a loss and wish to know the impact on wet dream on the body,mind and Spritual level.

I practice bramacharya for 9 months and this is the first time i experience pain. I am not proud of such loss and are now working hard on this situation.

Answer
1. Strive to maintain purity of thought, word & deed in the waking state.

2. Always perform regular and uninterrupted Sadhana (with the complete set of practices & lifestyle).

In the course of time, wet dreams will gradually taper. They disappear when the Yogi becomes an 'Urdhvareta'.

A certain drop in Prana occurs further to a wet dream, which is reversed in a week to two, if proper care is taken. Do not worry about what has happened. Working towards future prevention is what matters.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir,

Recently, I have been feeling a large level of bliss and peace within myself. Should I feel contented and happy with my progress? I feel a false sense of complacency.

Is this just merely the benefits of several months of celibacy? Or is this not generally seen in aspirants after simply 4 months of celibacy?

Also, I plan to do yogic practices a second time after dinner (because of my work schedule), which means I'll be doing it from 7:10-8:50 after eating dinner at 6:50? Is this alright?

Answer
1. The first phase of tranquility and bliss appears after some duration of practice, further to weakening of the first layer of past Samskara-s (impressions) & Vasana-s (tendencies). Then, a new layer of past impressions surface, causing a different kind of turbulence and unrest, trying to break practice. This process goes on for several years, layer after layer surfacing, with varying duration and intensity. These are like the hurdles faced by an athlete, with phases of free run in between.

One should not get carried over by the euphoria (which is unreal and illusory), for it tends to swell up the Ego, making one commit mistakes.

Just as an athlete on the track never relaxes his efforts till the last hurdle is overcome and the race is won, the Yogi should maintain a sense of humility, caution, unfailing effort and a level head for years or decades, as the case may be, till 'Kaivalya' (self-realization) is irreversibly attained.

2. The evening practice should be before dinner or at 12.00 mid-night.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Hi this might not be one of your normal complaints but for me its very serious.I believe I am suffering from the condition spermatorrhea for the last 2 years.Any person I go to seeking medical advice for this problem thinks its completely natural and nothing to worry about.nobody will believe me.just think why would I even dream of going face to face with someone on something so embarrassing if I didn't 100% think it was the cause of all my problems. researching on this condition and the ill effects it causes every single symtom matches my case.gradually waning eyesight,knee pain,overall generall weakness and fatigue,unable to concentrate or think clearly,no muscle mass,no enthusiam and stuck in a bout of depression.the odd few times I do not have wet dreams for about a week or so my energy begins to rebuild itself again and although its not a massive improvement my mind is definetly noticeably clearer in thought.i probably have wet dreams on average 8 times a month.on average my age group of 18 year old people have it at max two times per month.please help me i know western medicine does not classify it as a disease anymore but i would be forever greatfull if you could give me any useful information on alleviating the frequency of these emmisions.even if you don't believe they cause any harm id love if you could give me some helpful tips on how to stop them.im after having them 3 nights in a row and i literally feel dead l,groggy and unable to complete any physical or mental work.i know i sound desperate but it is recognised in eastern medicine as a problem.the common cause said to lead to this problem is over masturbation which weakens the parasympathetic nervous system.also by excessive masturbation when your reproductive system hasnt fully developed yet,ie when puberty hasnt struck is another cause for it.i began heavily masturbating since 12 years of age and stopped at the age of 16.i feel hopeless .i wouldn't go to all this effort of writing all this out if i didn't think it was the reason behind all these symtoms.im really not expecting anything by writing thidbut ill give it a shot.yours faithfully john

Answer

1. Adopting a life of Brahmacharya in thought, word and deed, supported by the complete set of Yogic practices will completely cure the issue.

2. For this, the entire lifestyle, thought process and attitude towards the world/life has to be reoriented to that of a Yogi.

3. Start going through each and every past answer in this portal from the very end, assimilate the essence and apply the same in practice. The complete set of methods required to address your problem and overcome it are available in detail.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

You say in previous posts that waking up at 4'am daily will help prevent nightfall.is this really feasible as we all generally need 8 hours sleep.at what time would be best on going to bed at night then also?

Answer

1. Mere waking up at 4.00 A.M will not prevent nightfall. The wake up should be used to apply Yoga Sadhana, with commitment to Brahmacharya, so as to transmute semen back into Ojas, following which nightfall tapers and disappears after many years of unbroken practice, when the Yogi becomes an 'Urdhvareta'.

2. 9.00 P.M. Seven hours of sleep suffices for the Yogi.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Sir,

Here is my question

1) Is the reality of a ignorant person a reflection of his ego ?

2) what happen to the reality/illusion if that ego is dead.Does it continue?

3) For one to progress, his ego and his reality must both merge to Brahma ?

Answer
1. The sense of separateness, which makes one assume the world as an object, and oneself as the subject is the result of an active Ego. That everything is pure consciousness alone, there being nothing which it does not pervade is reality.

2. What happens after one comes out of a dream upon waking up in the morning? One is conscious about his waking reality and realizes that the dream was a mental illusion of thoughts and images. However, as long as he was in the dream, it was very real.

The same occurs after self-realization. The sense of 'I', 'You', 'Others' and the 'world' are all realized as the events in the life-dream. THAT pure consciousness which one becomes after Enlightenment is realized as the absolute truth and the only 'reality'.

Just as one who comes out of a sleep-dream no longer gets affected by the happy or sad events he experienced in the dream, the realized sage is not affected by the pleasant or unpleasant, happy or sorrowful happenings of the illusory world. Knowing these to be the effect of 'Maya' (cosmic illusion) and completely unsubstantial, he remains as a mere witness, always in his state of bliss and pure being.

3. After the Ego merges into the 'Brahman' (Almighty Lord, who resides as the 'Atman' [pure self] within), that which remains is the reality. Then there is nothing else remaining. It is of the nature of silence.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

You have use cosmic illusion many times.
Please give us your definition of cosmic illusion?

What causes cosmic illusion?
How to stop cosmic illusion ?

Thank you.

Answer
1. All that is perceived by the mind and the five senses (sight, smell, taste, hearing & touch) is nothing but cosmic illusion. The world of mind & matter are its constituents. They are all unreal in terms of the absolute. However, it is the absolute itself, on which all these appear as images, just as moving images appear on the cinema screen.

2. Who is perceiving the illusion? First find that out and negate that entity. All other queries will get answered on their own.

3. The illusion disappears upon realization of the Atman (self).

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

I was reading today that a neat and tidy living environment is a support to stronger meditation. I have also heard frequently that a person's environment is a reflection of their mind. In my entire life, and I am over sixty years of age, I have lived in a messy, disorganized environment. Except for very brief periods, despite committing to do otherwise, my room quickly descends again and again into chaos. The only time I kept my room neat was many, many years ago when I became very angry with my parents and decided to cut off contact with them for the remainder of my life (I did not stick to this decision). During that time, when I felt independent of my family and on my own, I kept my room for that month or so, neat. Could you shed some light on this condition?

Thank-you,

Ron

Answer
1. A Yogi should strive to maintain cleanliness & tidiness, both internal (of the mind) and external (of the body & its surroundings), for this helps keep the energy field around him orderly, organized and conducive to health, peace and well being.

How does mess get created? It can happen when one lacks the discipline to keep things in order. It can also happen when one possesses more than what he/she needs, and these very objects eventually become a bane.

2. The wise Yogi maintains a few, necessary possessions, required to sustain his body & mind and directs his energy in the quest of the self. Objects in one's possession, which are outside the purview of requirement become a bane. Much energy has to be focused, merely on their upkeep. Besides, there is always a chance that one gets attached to them and suffers when they are damaged, lost or stolen.

Filter the possessions to the bare minimum, donate the rest to those who may need it, making it a point to replace things in their respective places after use and be at peace.

Tidiness and neatness will become a part of your life henceforth.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Sir,

I will explain my definition of Lack of Brahmacharya to you and please correct me if you find error in my definition.

Physical Level- One lacking in Brahmacharya get angry/agitated/depressed easily,the thinking will mostly focus on the world,possession.Because of the loss in semen, the body will look else way in the body to compensate such loss. Perspective will mainly focus on what one have, and one will crave sensual pleasure. Sex remain an active topic in one who lack Brachmacharya. As one grow older, sign and symptom can be seen. Such as low energy, joint problems(knee), back problem but the craving for sexual activities still continue. When one reach 55-75 years old sexual craving decreases because their semen is mostly used up and one body deteriorate and die.

Mental Level-One who cannot remain celibate on the mental level will crave sex. They will crave women and as they sexual urge develop they will develop fetish. This fetish will escalate to even one own sex.

Spiritual Level- One who never develop brahmacharya will stuck at this world, the world of illusion, thinking life is nothing but pleasure and that old age will not get them and they can remain in their youth forever.

Child- One who give in to sex and enjoy frequent sexual/sensual pleasure will give birth to "low quality" child. Then how does one give birth to a "high quality" child ?

When one who "give" for the sake of it. When one who" give" ,know all the consequences of life, when one who give know the truth behind all things and still proceed to have a child. The child born will be bless Dhananjay- Please correct me if what I wrote is wrong,I am still learning and wish to know your view.

Thank you

Answer
1. Yes, these are some of the prominent signs of 'Abrahmacharya' (lack of Brahmacharya).

2. When a man and wife limit sexual relations only for procreation (of a wanted child or two), devoting the rest of their life to the quest of the self, with a life of Brahmacharya, the best results follow. The child thus born to a couple leading a life of virtue will be a spiritually elevated, noble and evolved soul, and will uphold the virtues in the future as well.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Recently i came across a post of yours

"God is working through those mocking you to unnerve and kill the Ego, while they themselves do not know it. "

Can you describe more God way of helping one kill off one ego .

Thank you so much

Answer
This entire creation, with all its occurrences, involving the world of people and one's Ego is itself a classroom to bring one closer to his self, via destruction of the Ego. What does one describe or not describe? All events which occur in one's life, directly or indirectly lead to this goal alone. Such is the Lord's play.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Should one avoid act that strengthen the ego and focus act which weaken one ego ?

ANSWER: One should focus on the Atman (self) and not anything else. The self is realized in meditation, and once one has had a taste of the self, he can meditate even while indulging in external activity, as an actor acting in a drama. Focusing on the self is what matters. To him who does this effectively, the Ego gradually dissolves by itself.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Does bliss indicate that the self has been obtained ?

Once self has been obtained then instead one playing the role , one watch how one play his role?

Answer
1. The realized soul is always in bliss; while those who experience bliss need not be realized. Bliss itself does not amount to realization. Residence in the self as the self, unaffected by anything else is alone the truth.

2. The realized soul also plays his role, as long as his 'Prarabdha' remains. However, there is no personal identification with the role, unlike the normal man who takes it for real.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir,

Today I think of some funny concepts.

Let say one is devoted his life to Brahmacharya and never ever consider of getting married and having a child.

But Brahma want to give him a child and get married.

What is the possible outcomes?
Can he go against Brahma and continue his Brahmacharya.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Answer
That which the higher power wills alone happens, try how hard one may, to do otherwise.

That which HE does not will does not happen, however hard one might attempt to do it.

Knowing it to be such, the wise Yogi functions as a chisel in the hands of the sculptor (Lord) remaining a mere witness, accepting that which HE wills, all the time holding on to the self. Free from the bonds of attachment for this or that, he sports like a free bird in the ocean of consciousness.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Can one see the Atman within a women when one real a advance stage in Brahmacharya ?

What is this Atman referring to ?

Answer
One who resides in the truth see's the Atman (self) everywhere, in all beings and non-beings. It is one, it is many and it is all. What is there other than the Atman? Everything is in it, for there is nothing other than it.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I want to know if there is any relation between prostate problem and the practice or not practicing brahmacharya.
Like for example, a person may have attained to a certain state of physical brahmacharya and control but may be slipping on the mental front due to various distractions of the modern life, his own weakness, etc.
What will happen in such a case? Does that create health problems like prostate problems, etc.
Please let me know your opinion and also how to get out of such problems...

Answer
There is no such relationship. Prostate troubles occur to those who continue to live in the sex plane, after having given up sexual activity due to old age or some other reason. Mere physical abstinence is not Brahmacharya. One should not mix the two.

If the practice of Brahmacharya is correct (with adequate efforts in the physical, mental and spiritual planes), no problems of any kind occur. Problems, which might have existed from before the start of practice also disappear further to diligent efforts.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
1)Is it true that a person that loss too much semen get angry easily?

2)The more semen a person lose, the more he is dissatisfy with the world? The greater his greed, the greater his sensual needs ?

These statement come from my observation, i would sincerely like to hear your opinion on these.

Thank you

Answer
1. Loss of semen results in loss of vital energy, leading to overall weakness of the body & mind. A weak mind is more prone to anger and irritation than one which is strong. It also makes one associate himself seriously with the Asat (world illusion), thereby taking the illusion very real, resulting in strong reactions to external developments.

2. Yes.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay Guruji, I really appreciate you taking the time to answer our silly questions, as they do come from the foolish ignorant ego who has no business other than to react to situations without thorough understanding and objective contemplation. Unfortunately, these questions also come from my ego and I've tried long and hard to transcend these worries and abandon such ego driven concerns but it's been a long time and it still remains to be cleared. I have suffered heavy loss of prana due to abrahmacharya.

(1) When an aspirant approaches the supreme state of atma consciousness, do their prana levels increase towards the infinite nature of the atma? I tried seeking the answer in your past posts and you did infact mention that an enlightened man who resides in the atma has access to infinite life force energy but then I saw other posts where you mentioned that the amount of prana a jiva will receive is preordained and the prana which is lost is lost forever. If you could explain the dynamics of prana levels when one begins his ascent towards the atma that would be great! I would really like to see past the illusory nature of this fear and press forward with my sadhana.

(2) Also, I have been noticing repeating signs in my life that a relationship with a woman is in my foreseeable future and I would just like to know before hand what the nature of the karmic exchange should be in a spiritual relationship between man and woman in order for it to be conducive to my quest for self realization. In other words, what should a man seek or learn from the female energy so he can transcend duality and unite as a whole within himself? This is a concern because I fear any relationship with a woman for me will be rife with lustful temptation on my behalf which will cause me to plummet back into the tangles of Maya. How can I find God in a woman, rather than Maya?

Answer
1. To whom does presence or absence of Prana concern? It concerns the body and the mind, which one is not. The Atman being the source of Prana is beyond cause and effect. So as regards the Enlightened soul which has merged into universal consciousness, there is pure consciousness alone (in the state of Samadhi, where the body & mind do not exist), therefore, the question of Prana does not apply to one in that state, which is of the nature of infinite.

However, as soon as the Enlightened soul manifests in the world through the 'Nirmana Chitta' (constructed mind & Ego, playing a role such as say a Guru), consciousness temporarily functions through the constructed Ego & mind, so as to communicate and deliver instruction to the disciples. Then, the question of Prana applies to that body & constructed mind. So even Enlightened sages eat a little food, drink water & breathe air, so as to help the body sustain itself, based on the activity it is subjected to.

The question of semen does not apply to the realized sage, for his body long stopped producing semen while crossing the state of 'Urdhvaretas' itself, which comes much before self-realization (where it got stabilized into 'Soma' [the subtle most form of 'Bindu' or the universal cosmic seed] at the Ajna chakra). The physical body of the realized soul is not like the ordinary physical body of the common man. It is in a very high frequency of vibration, of the nature of the cosmos itself. It is similar to a body made of light, though it appears as though made of flesh.

In case of the normal man whose consciousness associates itself with the world, body & mind as reality, the infinite cosmic power, represented as 'Bindu', lies in its gross most form namely Semen. Since such a Jiva perceives itself as separate from the universe, the amount of Bindu is also limited, as long as such perception exists. With this limited Bindu itself should the Jiva sustain its life activity and strive to realize the self, so as to eventually overcome the sense of separateness via self-realization.

Loss of semen via recreational sexuality results in loss of Bindu. A Jiva which loses much Bindu this way, will not have at its disposal, the enormous amount of vital Pranic energy necessary to propel itself into 'Samadhi', so as to realize itself.

2. Relationship with the opposite sex as man-woman should always be within the bounds of lawful marriage, taken to its purpose of progeny at the earliest. Then, man can refocus on his life of Brahmacharya, to realize the self, further to the birth of a child. Any other kind of relationship is not conducive to evolution and ends in suffering. If marriage is destined as per the will, of the higher power, it will transpire without doubt. Focus on your Sadhana and leave the rest to HIM, who takes care of everything.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
One should follow the heart to know which path one take.

Can one talk/communicate to the inner self on the path one take in the future?

If yes, i would like to know the method to speak to the inner self .

Thank you.

Answer
When the mind is made thought free through Yogic practices and the required life perspective/lifestyle, as described in past answers, it merges into the self which is pure consciousness and pure being. That itself is meditation and that itself is speaking to the inner self. When this is perfected, the one who speaks or communicates also merges into that infinity, which itself is one's true self - Atman and the self of all, also called the Almighty. Then, the speaker, speaking and spoken, all disappear. Silence....

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

1) I would like to know if practice of Brahmacharya actually make one senses more acute, more sharp ?

2) What is the problem one faces with a sharper senses ?

3) I believe that sharper senses lead to higher pleasure which I want to avoid.

4) I realized that my environment play a role/assist in the growth of my Brahmacharya. What is your view between a person environment/surrounding and Brahmacharya.

5) I realized that my responsibility never decreases, even i practice Brahmacharya.

Instead, it started to grow more and more. How can i be free if the responsibilites i carry, given to me by my surrounding never decreases ?

Answer

Let go of these multitude of thoughts and practice the path honestly for a few years. He who does so does not get bothered by the above questions. The issue here is impatience and fantasy in logic and theory, with inadequate practice, which is not of any use.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Hello,

You know i made the vow of brahmacharya and the vow of just drinking water as a liquid for the rest of my life. For years ive been drinking Coca COla and artificial drinks always. I almost never drank water on all those years.
Do you think the body is toxic now because of all those years? Can the body become purified with brahmacharya and a life of meditation? Im 29 almost 30 now. Thanks

Answer

Follow a life of unbroken Brahmacharya with a life of Yoga & meditation as described earlier. Shun artificial drinks & fluids. The body does not require anything other than water to hydrate itself. The body will slowly detox in the course of time.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Hello brother,

I hope u are fine...I want to know the power of truth...in many books i read that truth is more important during sadhana.. it is necessary to speak truth..Why...?? How speaking truth help us in progress of sadhana??

Answer
Truth is the representation of 'Brahman' (Almighty - who resides as the self within). Truth is 'Sat' (the only reality), while the Untruth is 'Asat' (falsity). Therefore, he who leads a life of honesty gravitates towards his self, does not accrue negative karma and eventually becomes the embodiment of the Lord, while he who does not do so degenerates himself. Truth & honesty are the pillars of Sadhana, for without honesty, one can not be true to his Sadhana.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I have taken many vows to go the brahmacharya path but have failed all times. This has led me to severe depression. I have always gone back to my old self of porn and masturbation and disgusting fantasies such as incest and others.

I am 31 and not married and my esteem and confidence has always been at rock bottom as far as I have known. Despite all these, the pleasure of porn and masturbation is still enslaving me. I sometimes masturbate even when I do not want to. I am even having intentions of having affairs with married women just to fulfill my life. Ironically, I am still a virgin and have not been romantically involved with anyone.

Despite being a qualified professional, I do not feel happy or confident. I feel like a low life form.

All these years of porn and masturbation has made me diabetic due to neglecting exercise. I feel suicidal. I have went through your steps. It looks long winded and I do not feel any effect.

Does this mean that my sins of masturbation and porn are so heavy that God has forsaken me?

I know its lame to ask but will committing suicide be an atonement for all these sins I committed?

Answer
1. Had God forsaken, the desire to come out would not have existed. One's very wish to come out of the trap is the effect of God's grace.

2. When past karma is strong, it takes time to dissolve. One should not lose hope and never give up on practice. Unfailing efforts from one's side are required to break past karma.

3. Suicide only complicates the problem further. Would you like to add heavy weight to the already existing karma, thereby carrying this state and more suffering to future existences? It is not the way of the wise.

Trust God and apply the prescribed Sadhana with devotion and commitment. The urge to break free from the trap has not yet reached the stage where unswerving Sadhana will be taken up; like how a drowning man holds on to another with the strength of ten elephants, to save himself.

When the urge for escape reaches that state, Sadhana will be taken up, no matter what and progress will slowly dawn.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Dear Dhananjay,

You will remember that two months ago, I promised to contemplate for a few months without asking questions and revert to you.

Over this period of time, I have experienced highs and lows, mentally and physically, although I have not broken physical brahmacharya and have also (nearly) maintained full mental brahmacharya.

I have a few queries following this period that I would like to ask you.

First, is it necessarily the case that a pure brahmachari will becoming fully courageous and not experience fear? The great Swami Vivekananda was a proponent of boldness and fearlessness and I assume brahmacharya was the key factor; for, when one learns the truth about the ultimate pervading reality and the transience of this material world and physical body, there is truly nothing to fear and fear simply becomes a byproduct of the ego. However, I still feel resentment and fear when I view death. To build up my mental strength and overcome fear, I have seen pictures of mummies and other bodies but my efforts at conquering fear are futile. I am haunted by these images. Why should I be concerned with such false images? One does not get disturbed upon viewing the corpse of another animal, such as an elephant. Does this signify some sort of impropriety or inadequacy in brahmacharya practice? How can I tame all fears?

Next, I have noticed that as I have practiced brahmacharya for longer and longer (it is now 6 months, but it feels like much longer; I await for the day when it becomes natural) I have started to care less and less about my education, prestige, achievement, etc. While I work hard in a field that I am naturally inclined to work at, my ego is not as hurt or wounded when I receive criticism or when I learn about those who are smarter or more successful than me. Is this a normal development? Will it further continue?

Third, despite only 6 months elapsing, I have been prone to more and more mental lapses of brahmacharya of late. I do not want my will power to dry up. Although I fully realize the false nature of the world, I ever more desire companionship and an intimate relationship (not necessarily physical) with a female. Do I have to supplement my daily pranayama/nadi shodana/dhyana practices or is there some other factor at work? How difficult it is to fully eradicate lust! When one thinks it is disposed of it pops up, just as the satisfied gardener returns to see weeds each morning!

Fourth, why is it true that worldly satisfaction (health, money, etc.) come to the true brahmachari? In this day and age, filled with feminist women who do not respect men, is it possible to find a suitable partner who will understand that I need companionship but not a physical relationship and also wishes to progress in this path?

Lastly, I know that engaging in activity for procreation is within brahmacharic bounds. I also believe that one must proceed through the Varnashrama system to truly become a Yogi; unless a Jiva has tremendous spiritual imprints from the previous birth, most Jivas will need to experience worldly pleasures-artha and kama-in order to fully renounce them. Else, cravings may occur during the stages of Vanaprastha and Sannyasin, which is highly detrimental. For an individual who does not wish to have children, is it acceptable to engage in physical romantic activity for a short while (such as 9 months to a year) such that future cravings do not arise? Only difference here is that children are not produced.

With the pursuit of brahmacharya, does one eventually gain 'clarity' in life? I am not referring to job satisfaction, relationship/family satisfaction, or anything else like that. Rather, I am referring to universal understanding and being comfortable with one's position and role in this world. As a brahmachari I attempt to play all my roles displaying external emotion and effort but staying in the bounds of the self on the inside, not letting external results affect me. However, I sometimes still find myself doubting why I pursue this path, why I am in this universe, how the human race will continue in this Yuga, and so on and so forth.

If I could ever have a glimpse of the supreme truth, the Atman, my worries would be put to rest. I will dedicate myself in this manner and proceed.

I realize this is a very long message, but I had much to share with you after several months of sadhana and contemplation.

Regards,
Jakob

ANSWER: 1. When one resides in the self as the self, irreversibly, it is permanent and natural Brahmacharya. Then there will no longer be any fear. Such residence comes upon realizing the self.

2. Yes.

3. Hold on to the suggested Sadhana till the one who lusts is fully decimated.

4. The concept of time and age does not exist in reality. That which is due comes, at the right time, by HIS grace, be it a life partner or other things.

5. What is termed romance is also sexual activity. Sexual activity is valid within procreative objectives only, with one's lawful spouse, for the one who is in the quest of the self.

6. Everything will become clear, with time, in the case of one who holds on to regular and unbroken Sadhana, with surrender to the Lord. That which is to be known will then be known.

Continue the efforts patiently, without expectation and desire. One's right ends at effort. The results, HE gives, when the efforts becomes ripe.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: I will definitely continue the efforts.

A few minor points, which are somewhat troublesome:

I do not know why, but I sometimes get a severe, unexplainable craving to enjoy the male organ of reproduction. I am confused and bewildered when this craving arises and have struggled to vanquish it for months, to no avail. Is this the effort of past samskaras? The main object of lust that I have focused on vanishing is women, for it is toward them that my natural biological orientation goes, but I cannot explain this other development. I will do Hanuman japa to hopefully eradicate it in full. I am very disturbed by this.

In addition, I would like to know if it is permissible to do daily meditation and dhyana with open eyes. I am a naturally paranoid person and I have mental hallucinations. For example, when I close my eyes I think there is a corpse or deadly person next to me. I am always suspicious of closed doors and cannot sleep peacefully unless a family member is nearby. How can such a pathetic, fickle state of mind be resolved? Oh Dhananjay, such problems must be rectified immediately if I am to further progress on this thorny path, as Swami Sivananda puts it. For without absolute strength of will and thought to resist such small temptations, how can once resist an overwhelming wave of lust or passion?

Answer
With regular and unbroken Sadhana, all these issues which are the result of past Samskara-s will gradually dissolve. If Asana, Bandha, Nadi Shodhana and Pranayama are practiced rightly, the mind will naturally go blank, and becomes conducive for merger into the self. Sit blank for a minute, with the eyes open [without any other thought] and eventually close the eyes for meditation on completing Pranayama.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Radhe Radhe sir
here I am showing my impatient and anxious mind, for please forgive me. You know if one shares one's painful feelings, mind gets a bit relaxed. The following queries may not important for you and our dear practitioners but you please cooperate me with your answers.
According to destiny each and every soul goes through pain and pleasure. At present I am reaping my impious activity because I am in pain. What brought me this painful condition is what I did terrible mistake in last year. It was like terrible curse acted upon me by my own very impious deeds. Sir my good days went forever after that incident. Sir what happened, more than one year before when I completed 10 months brahma chary, due to impatient I broke it by musterbating carelessly for 3 months. The main reason for this terrible act was that my intolerance towards the beahaviour of my parents scolding and others. At that time what I thought heros like sharukh,salman and heroine and other cricketers,football players indulging day and night sex still their opulences increase day after day. But I, inspite of going through a lot of pain of 10 months of celibacy at mental level, am not getting any opulence like intelligence passing in CA exam and others. In that year one of my friend got pass in PO of SBI without brhmacharya and my sister got pass in SBI cleark also without brahmacrya. Sir the main reason of my terrible musterbating activity (more than 50 or 55 times) is success of others without brhmacharya and my dissatisfaction towards my intelligence level even after practicing 10months celibacy. After this long period I had almost forgotten what is musterbating and achieved a lot of mental purity. I had full control over musterbating. The main reason of break is written above.

Sir my good times gone. Let me know you I became very strong physically after the practice. But due to frustration and failure in exam I musterbated more than 50 times excessively for 3 months. And now I am going through weakness in all over body, severe pain in waist area and my spectacle power increased greatly. Now inspite of practicing celibacy I am not experiencing fruit like previous brhmacharya. I am feeling I don't have veerya like before. I am going through terrible destiny. had I known this before, I would not have musterbated so badly. It is true destiny can not be sidestepped. But still please help me Sir. now I am 26 and half months and things are improving very very slowly inspite of my level best practice at present. I am gone forever becoz God will never come to return my previous hardearned previous strength and veerya. I have to wait till my next birth to fulfill my desire like brhmacharya, intelligence and strength. All these are not related to self-realisation and doing things without desiring result but still ignoring my ignorance, put your valuable attention towards my painful condition. Once you said earlier expectations are impediments before strict brhmacharya. And this terrible break due to academic failure has put me in a well of great pain. How can I come out of this well and where is my previous fruit of brhmacharya and I also don't find god'grace after such long practice of celibacy at mental level. Thank you.

Answer
Those who have been let into the practice by HIS grace should not return to recreational sexual activity. It goes against divine decree. The divine fruit called Brahmacharya is not given from above to all, and those who receive it should guard it more carefully than they would their own life. It is not something to be treated callously.

The aspirant should always make efforts to ensure that this temple called the body & mind are kept clean, pure and divine, from perfect practice, so as to provide residence to Brahmacharya [which is nothing but the manifestation of the Lord]. The gem called Brahmacharya, which is the divine power of powers will not remain in a mind and body which become inauspicious. It will go away.

Let go of comparison with others and let go of expectations for the fruits. It is not in one's right to expect fruits. One's duty ends at effort alone. The gracious Lord gives more than what one will ever want, when one proves himself worthy of such fruits.

Now that the mistake has been realized, take up honest practice with the required lifestyle as described earlier, taking care not to repeat the mistake ever. Sadhana has to be regular, proper and very meticulous. When the karma accrued is nullified, things will slowly stabilize.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

By God's grace and through guidance of all pure hearted ones including you, brahmacharya has been going pretty well for the last 8 months.

I am facing problems in a different area, namely anger. There was a period during 4-6 months of brahmacharya, where I did not get irritated at all, and even my family members commented positively on it. But lately, I am getting irritated quite easily and it also leads to some verbal outbursts. Things die down pretty quickly and it doesn't affect my internal peace, but I am a little worried about this behavior. It's usually worse when I have physical pains, that's when i get irritated easily as my awareness is lower when body's in pain. The time I devote to spiritual practice has reduced from several hours a day to just few hours a day, and that may be partly responsible.

When anger arises, the ego convinces me that my position is right, and the other person is behaving incorrectly, and so it says my action is justified. Later I feel deceived by the ego after afting out on those thoughts.

Can you please Please give me some tips on how to effectively diffuse those kinds of thoughts without causing any outbursts or internal hurt?

thank you so much,
God bless you

Answer
1. The phase of a few months of calmness gets replaced by phases of emotional outbursts when the next layer of past Samskara-s surface. It is important not to let such tendencies become active, if Brahmacharya is to be maintained correctly. Else, it will eventually become an impediment to Sadhana and cause a break.

2. Through 'Vichara' (inquiry) as to whom anger concerns (Ego) and reminding oneself of the falsity of the Ego, which itself is Maya, one should quickly displace anger and replace it with the peace of the Atman (self). When such efforts are applied with strong Sadhana in the background, 'Viveka' (wisdom) gradually dawns after many years of unbroken Sadhana, following which such incidents slowly taper away.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Dhananjay,

I have a few questions thankyou:

1.I have come to the two month mark in my practice, and im feeling optimistic.One thing however that has surfaced recently, and which my ego is taking a tough stand on is the subject of the traumatic procedure of infant circumcision which in the egos view is tantamount to genital mutilation, and sexual assault, usually performed without anaesthetic, without the childs consent, and which has many reprecussions down the line.Having been circumcised as an infant, all of a sudden there is a desire to know all about it and perhaps even to ask my parents why it was done, and to have a conversation with them about it.

My question to you is that is this just the ego sensing that it is under threat, and trying to create a new drama in order to keep itself alive and unhappy.If so what is the best way to proceed.My intuition is saying that revisiting childhood trauma will just strengthen the ego, but might having a conversation with my parents be a way of bringing something dark and unspoken- of into the light?Your insight would be appreciated on this matter.

2.Would you ever recommend basti(enema) either with sesame oil to lubricate the colon and calm vata dosha, or with dashamoola to help remove excess vata(nervous tension) from the body, or even a coffee enema quite popular in the west as a means of releasing toxins from the liver.

3.I read somewhere that some men are unconsciously attracted to celibacy for the following reason-
That they were 'mothers boys' in their childhood and played the role of surrogate father due to their fathers emotional non-involvement with the mother.Their role in childhood was a protective one, and in adulthood they feel they cannot relax because they feel their mother isnt being taken care of by the father etc.So they feel that being with another woman is betraying their mother, and thus eventually come to a life of celibacy so as to avoid this betrayal.Please comment on this Dhananjay.

Thankyou very much for your response.

Answer
1. Different paths employ different approaches. Based on one's past karma, the body gets subjected to different experiences in the current existence. Do not worry about the past, but focus on the future, through honest Sadhana. The best outcome is assured. One is not the body or the mind but the Atman (soul), which has no birth and death. Everything else is an illusion.

2. To him who takes up Yogic practices along with Brahmacharya and a Yogic lifestyle, no treatment will be necessary.

3. The Male Jiva is closer to 'Purusatvam' (Essence of the Atman), than the female, which is closer to 'Maya' (illusion & the resulting desire). Therefore, it is easier for men to tend towards Brahmacharya.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi, to attain enlightnement does it take 12 years of brahmacharya literally? And does the physical body becomes like a spirit after 12 years of brahmacharya? Thanks

Answer
It might take 12 years or it may take longer, based on one's past karma & the will of the Lord. The changes which occur in the body further to years and years of unbroken & honest practice, employing complete transmutation, perfect the 5 elements of which this body is made of, thereby resonating them with the cosmos in totem. This creates a frequency of very high vibration, akin to light, though the body is still made of flesh.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaste Mr. Dhananjay,

Due to the grace of Lord Hanuman my practice has been successful for the last 6 months.

Yesterday, a sudden wave of passion and fantasy arose and swept me. I had thought that my lustful samskaras had been burned, but as you mentioned in a previous answer, it appears that as one layer gets destroyed, further layers emerge and threaten to disturb practice.

The fantasy involved a woman who secretly pleasured her husband's boss so that her husband would receive a promotion at work.

A few questions:

1) After the wave of passion swept over me, I started vigorously chanting Hanuman Japa and slowly regained confidence in the mind, eventually realizing the pathetic nature of such a physical exchange. Why would such a sudden thought come to me in the first place?

2) Unfortunately, after 4 months of no nightfall emissions, I had a very mild emission yesterday accompanied by mild imagery. Is the working of the subconscious mind? By the time I went to bed, I had thoroughly forgotten about the aforementioned fantasy, so how does one prevent such occurrences going forth?

3) Although I had nightfall, I still feel completely fresh and unperturbed! In my pitiful former days (6 months ago) when I would voluntarily spill seed, I would experience pains, demotivation, etc. but it appears that this nightfall has done the opposite-I feel refreshed and even more determined to upkeep my sadhana. What is the difference here?

4) Apart from this nightfall, I have had no nightfall in the last 4 months. From what Swami Sivananda has said, I understand nightfall is to be expected once a month or so accompanied by no imagery. I am worried about why I have not experienced this type of harmless nightfall, for I fear that the excess seminal energy stored within will cause health problems if it is not expelled. Will it cause agitation or will it transcend up the Nadi and turn into Kundalini shakti?

Many thanks for your clarifications on these queries,
Bajrang

Answer
1. Past Samskara-s (impressions) ingrained in the Jiva from millions of past existences are innumerable in number. They can surface at any point of time, causing disturbance.

2. Through unbroken Sadhana, until Brahmacharya becomes natural, effortless and constant, all the time and beyond time. It may take a few years, decades, few lifetimes or hundreds of lives. The Yogi has to persevere, till this state is irreversibly attained.

3. All these ups & downs are not of substance. Let go of theoretical analysis and perform the suggested Sadhana for a few years in an unbroken manner. The answers will come by themselves.

4. The one who made you take up the practice will take care of other things as well. Nothing beyond practice is in your purview. Do your Sadhana, let go of fears and be quiet. Things will get taken care of as they are supposed to.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: One follow-up question from my previous correspondence:

It is said and known that Yogis pursue the path of Yoga and self-realization for it leads to eternal bliss, as opposed to the fleeting, transient bliss of the sense world.

But here is my doubt-In the case of a Yogi, who is feeling the bliss? When all is said and done, if there is one who still feels the bliss, is the Ego (ahamkara) not still present?

Likewise, Swami Sivananda was known to be a gourmand and tremendously enjoyed pickles! (As evidenced in this video of the great jiva, whom I sincerely respect:http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=GoC5lA9-YCc).

Who is enjoying the pickles?

Likewise, Swami Vivekananda was a perennial chain smoker and meat consumer. I do not judge individual jivas, but in the case of those who are self-realized, how is it possible to be addicted to something like pickles or cigarettes when the one who is capable of enjoying is gone?

Or is it the case that when a yogi lives in the material plane he will experience the addictions of a common man?

Lastly:

Swami Sivananda and other realized sages often had foot-cleansing ceremonies (Pada Puja) done by their disciples. Would an enlightened individual not have reprimanded such rituals and celebrations given the false and fleeting nature of the body?

Sincerely
Bajrang

ANSWER: 1. The aim of Yoga is to realize the self and reside there permanently, as pure being (Atman). This alone is the complete reality. Bliss is not the objective of Yoga. Bliss is a byproduct of the Atmic state. 'Atma Sakshatkara' (Enlightenment) is truth, pure existence and eternal bliss, free from suffering forever.

The one who experiences bliss is the Ego. That occurs to the Yogi, for example in the state of 'Savikalpa Samadhi'. Here the Ego is still alive and there is still the seer, seeing and the seen. Hence that state is not permanent (for these three parameters eventually vary, are transient and therefore impermanent, unlike the 'Brahmi-sthiti' [state of the self, which is unchanging, eternal and the only truth])

As long as the one who desires bliss remains, it is not Enlightenment, for, after Enlightenment, there is none to desire bliss as well. The seeker of bliss, bliss and enjoying the bliss all merge into the Atman after Enlightenment. What then remains? What is the use if there is none to seek or enjoy bliss is a question which one may ask. In reply, it is to be stated that it was the Ego-identified consciousness, which, being unaware of its real state (as the Atman), assumed itself to be the individual Ego and therefore constantly sought bliss (the state of the Ego being suffering). Further to complete dissolution of the individual Ego, consciousness identifies itself with itself (as the Atman, which itself is truth-being-bliss) and therefore does not seek bliss.

2. There are two kinds of 'Vasana-s' (tendencies carried forward from previous existences). One is 'Bandha Vasana' and the other is 'Bhoga Vasana'. Bandha Vasana-s are those innate tendencies which act as impediments to realization of the self (ex. the desire for recreational sex, tendency for jealousy, greed etc.) A Yogi cannot attain self-realization as long as Bandha Vasana-s exist. They are to be completely burnt through Sadhana.

Bhoga Vasana-s are innate tendencies which do not act a impediments to realization of the self. A Yogi before Enlightenment may have preference for salty food, while in another Yogi, the preference may be for sweet food. Further to realization, both the Yogi-s become completely detached from all kinds of sense enjoyment (the sense of taste also being one). However, the 'Prarabdha karma' (of which the Bhoga Vasana is a part), which remains even after Enlightenment, till the body exists is still working out. Hence that experience which is a part of such Bhoga Vasana will still be externally seen through the body of the Yogi, as though real, (though the Yogi remains completely detached and unconcerned with the experience, be it pleasant or unpleasant).

An example for Bhoga Vasana of material luxury and wealth is King Janaka. Janaka Maharaja attained complete Enlightenment and was a Jivanmukta. Yet, his past karma was such that a life of immense riches and luxury was a part of the Prarabdha. Prarabdha, be it pleasant or unpleasant cannot be sidestepped. Hence the body was subjected to a life of luxury externally, while in reality, he did not differentiate the least between a piece of gold and a lump of earth. Internally, he was completely detached, though externally displaying the demeanor of a king.

3. The actions and tendencies of a man prior to taking up the path of Enlightenment are not of any value, however noted the people may later become.

4. The realized soul does not have any addictions, for there is none to be addicted. Those who are addicted or have some desire are not realized. However, those Bhoga Vasana-s which might make one appear as having some preference, do not interfere with residence in the self, in case of the realized sage. A common man looking at such a sage might feel the reverse; but the truth remains that the Enlightened soul looks at pleasant and unpleasant experiences with equal indifference, though, externally, it may appear otherwise.

It is to be known that such an external display is only the result of past Prarabdha which dictates the presence of such an experience by the body and the created Ego (manifest to the world) and not one carried out seriously through the senses, as in case of the unenlightened Jiva.

5. Who is Enlightened and who is not is a question to be answered through direct experience, after one experiences Enlightenment himself and not before. The Enlightened being neither accepts nor rejects, for there is none to do so on a serious note. He merely carries out his job as an actor, in the drama of the Lord, doing that which is required, as a mere extension of the will of the Almighty. He is completely dissociated and unattached to happenings and non-happenings, be they pleasant or unpleasant.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Thank you for your replies. I am clear now.

The one part you did not address was Pada Puja and why self-realized saints experience it. Is it that this a role they should play? Do their students derive happiness from washing the guru's feet? What is the rationale? Would an enlightened, having the least regard for the body, not condemn such displays of worship?

Answer
1. An Enlightened being does not want anything, be it material or some other thing, for there is no one to want it. Those who expect something or desire something at the personal level from another are not Enlightened.

2. This having being said, Enlightened beings create a 'Nirmana Chitta' (constructed Ego), so as to complete the Prarabdha as regards the world, which may involve giving instruction to disciples or say some actions for the welfare of the society.

Why is an Ego constructed after destruction of the personal Ego through self-realization? A temporary mind is to be created, if the Sage has to interact with others at the physical or mental plane, for, in his true Atmic state, there is no mind, no world and only silence. The body of the sage who is in that Atmic state (Samadhi) becomes dead to the world, silent, immobile and uncommunicative.

So, to aid the objective of the remaining Prarabdha, realized beings create one or more temporary Ego's, which then act as mediums of communication. When the remaining Prarabdha works out through such a constructed mind and body, it appears as though there is still someone with a mind and individuality, while there is really none.

3. As stated, the realized being does not want anything, including worship from disciples. So such sages do not encourage people offering worship to their physical form. However, if it is in the Prarabdha that the body should undergo the experience of worship from a few disciples, the same cannot be sidestepped. The sage remains a mute witness to the experience, without the least reaction from within.

If there is the least want or desire from within, for receipt of such worship from a disciple, then the person is not Enlightened.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
hello Dhananjay,

Thanks for your terrific work on this site.I am coming up to month three of brahmacharya, and im starting to slowly break through the fog of material bewilderment.My questions are as follows:

1.Through the practice of brahmacharya, it seems to me that gradually energy finds its natural equilibrium in the body and we feel a sense of 'wholeness' once again.Obviously this can take some time.With this sense of wholeness, it would be reasonable to say that the body would find its natural healthy state, and ailments that had troubled a particular jiva would resolve.

Ive always been wary of the medical establishment, due to the 'treating the symptoms not the cause' approach, but with this in mind what would be the best attitude to health related concerns for one who has not yet achieved the perfect state.Should one merely attend to whatever arises with detachment.For example the dentist is telling me i need a couple of root canal treatments and i'm quite hesitant to go through with them, feeling that if i just establish myself in the natural state, there will be no need for the dental work.I think Christian Science has this approach to healing.Your thoughts would be appreciated.

2.When i am spending time with my family, there is often alot of talk about the past.How 'cute' i was, how great i was in this and that school play.How i broke my arm when i was 10 etc etc.In other words i feel reduced to a child again, and i sit there and try to respond kindly, but this talk makes me very uncomfortable.Perhaps i am still 'thinking i am the person' and that's the image that i'm projecting.Any thoughts?

I hope i haven't gone off the topic too much.

Thanks for your response.

Answer
1. Brahmacharya will gradually prevent the incidence of new, further health issues. An established Brahmachari who maintains proper dental hygiene will not be prone to tooth decay (as the entire system including teeth become very strong further to a life of transmutation and therefore less prone to decay)

Problems which are already in bloom, due to the earlier mode of life (such as an infected tooth which requires root canal work - being a terminal stage for the tooth) should be attended to with the required dental treatment, without delay.

2. The Ego colored mind goes through various oscillations on the past, present and imagined future. None of these are of any substance.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaskaram Dhananjay garu,

I hope you are doing great,

I have learnt yoga asanas from a Spiritual guru. I would like to detail them in short.

Patang Asana for 2 minutes, Shishupal Asana for 2 minites, Nadi Vibhajan 3 times, Sukha Kriya for 7 to 8 minutes (Pranayama), OM Chanting for 21 times, Breath flattering for 2-3 minutes, Mula Bandha as long as one can hold his breath (Holding Anal and Stomach muscles) & Breath Watching for about 6 to 7 minutes. Kindly advise whether the above practices are ok to merge oneself with God apart from Brahmacharya in Thought, Word and Deed?

How many times one should meditate. It is said one should only meditate on Empty Stomach. As you know we eat 3 times a day and it takes 4 to 6 hours for digestion process to complete, please advise as to how many times and at what time one should practice meditation. I am a family guy 32 years old blessed with a 7 years old kid. I would like my kid to practice Yoga and Meditation, please suggest some basic steps for her. My wife also want to follow my path and together we want to strictly get into the path shown by THE SUPREME.

Dhananjay,

The most impediment to my daily practice of Yoga and Meditation is my Shift timings.

I work in night shifts and i am feeling very sleepy when i come back home. How to get rid of this situation. At this stage, i am economically backward and i have to earn for our livelihood and to fulfill some basic needs in this competitive world (Ex: My Child's education and savings for her future). It would surely take another couple of years for me to settle financially but still i want to come of it. I am unable to get rid of this Vicious cycle called Night Shifts. I want to strengthen my practice of Brahmacharya. Your help on the above issues will be much appreciated. God Bless You..

Regards,
Ravi Krishna

Answer
1. Include Nadi Shodhana and the Pranayama described in past answers.

2. One should practice Yoga and meditation at any one of the 4-Sandhi Kala-s (described in past answers). The ideal time for practice is before Sunrise and at Sunset. The Yogi who masters the art of merging the mind into the Atman (self), whereupon no thought remains, is in meditation all through the day, whatever be the nature of external activity.

3. When the husband and wife lead a life of Yoga & Brahmacharya as described earlier with all the requisite practices, a spiritual aura engulfs the entire home. Children who grow up in such an atmosphere of divinity, where the husband and wife do not look at each other sexually, but only with a divine perspective naturally get attuned to a life of spirituality.

For now, make the child perform a few simple Asana-s, early in the morning, followed by chanting OM with closed eyes in Padmasana, on a daily basis. This will take care of everything.

Take up unbroken Brahmacharya with the wife, with surrender to God, to realize the self alone (asking nothing in return). All problems including those of finances will go away in the course of time, to be replaced by health, peace, prosperity and well being, along with marked progress in the spiritual plane.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Respected Sir,

I am 18 year old normal boy, I came to know about the greatness of Swami Vivekananda when I was 16 so I started reading about him, but I was very slow, I just read little, now from the last 15 days I have read alot about him, his views on sex,celibacy and marriage, I left masturbation and lost interest in wealth and lust and left jealousy and learnt that we should love everybody, I also read your article on celibacy and I was more motivated to carry on my practice of no masturbation, it has been 15 days since I have masturbated so I had wet dream thrice, right from the age of 13 to 18 I have masturbated alot, saw porn alot, lost my semen almost once in two or three days.
Now I m looking for enlightenment, can I achieve enlightenment? I am ready to sacrifice everything now.

Answer
Everybody is here only to realize the self. There is no other purpose of the human existence. Even other objectives ultimately lead to this end alone, immaterial of whether one knows it or doesn't. Go through each and every past answer and apply all the said practices in totality, in an unbroken and regular manner. This will help progress towards the goal.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir, it has nearly been 150 days of brahmacharaya. Currently, I am practicing 40 second retentions through Pranayam but there are problems.

In the beginning of the 40 second phase, I could easily do this without any problems. However, whenever, I practice 40 second retentions, I get a slight, recurring head pain and stomach pain after the practice. I do not know the cause. I do not want the head pain or the stomach pain. Should I stop pranayam or reduce the seconds of retention?

Is there any cause for alarm? This is quite strange because I've been able to practice 40 second retentions quite well in the beginning, but now there are problems.

Answer
1. Reduce the retention period to the one which does not cause discomfort.

2. There is no cause to worry. Practice lower counts till application of higher counts does not cause any discomfort. The body should gradually be eased into the practice, however long it may take.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi brother,

I have been suffering from this bad habit of masturbation. Even though I know it's bad, i cannot leave it. It's like, I am addicted to it somehow. I do it like several times a day. After doing it, i feel very bad. Bhai, I am suffering from nervous weakness because of this.I have problem of intrusive thoughts. I have fear all the time, that I will say this or that and in turn the other person will harm me. I got this mental weakness all because of this bad habit. I am only 23 and i dont know, how i am going to deal with my life in future. Kindly please show me a path of recovery. If possible, kindly share with me the previous questions/posts which could help me. Thanks

Answer
Go through each and every past answer from the start and apply the said methods in practice. The techniques to be employed are available in detail in past answers. Applying them with commitment and surrender to God will gradually help overcome the issue.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear sir

The supreme being, the almighty, the god exists in every living being?
Sri Ramakrisna told swami vivekananda that god exists in every human being.

But Sir besides these, do god exist?
All my life I have been a atheist, now reading about spirituality I find the use of the word god, the almighty,the divine mother who has no image, exists.
So I want to ask that behind the existence of the almighty in every living being, is there a separate existence of the supreme being sitting somewhere far away and watching all of us?

One more question, should we worship idol?
If yes than why,why to pour milk to a stone regarded as shiv ling rather than giving it to a poor.What are your views sir?

Answer
1. There is not such a place anywhere where the Almighty does not exist. All which is seen and perceived is within the Almighty and not the reverse; so where can one search for the Almighty? The very thought has no substance. The question of oneself and a separate Almighty concerns the Ego which itself is an unreal illusion, just as a bubble on the surface of water has no existence without the water on which it rests and has come from.

The Lord exists within and without all beings. He is here, there & everywhere. When the power of the Lord manifests as life force through what is called as a physical body, it is termed 'Life'. When the same is not manifest in those terms, it is termed 'Death'. In reality, there is neither life nor death, but THAT alone, which pervades everything and within which everything is contained. There is neither far, nor near, none to watch and nothing to watch in the truth. The truth is all enveloping and not-enveloping [for what is there to envelop but itself?]

2. Even when one worships an Idol, he worships the Supreme alone. One might worship the Supreme in any way he likes, for the concept of worship is a personal one. It concerns the worshiper and the one who is being worshiped. So the question of right or wrong is invalid. As long as devotion to the Lord is honest and genuine, one might worship the Lord through form or formless, as the Yogi does in meditation.

Those who see the Lord through the 'Siva Lingam' can offer milk to the lingam. Those who see the Lord through the needy, can offer what is deserving to the needy. All these things concern the doer and not the observer. It is not in anyone's business to comment on this or that, for the issue of worship concerns the worshiper and not the observer. The observer should do that which he finds appealing and not poke into what someone else does, for there is no right or wrong here in terms of truth.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir,

You are replying to many queries from different aspirants. You are giving us all so much knowledge about Brahmacharya and yoga. Yet there is no detail about yourself. We are all curious and interested about this. We the followers of your advice want to see you in a photograph at least and know some details about you as the person. Sir, I understood that you are not interested in publicity for getting famous... but for our sake, can you do this?

Answer
That which HE wills happens. If adding a photograph is so willed, it will happen. The same holds good as regards details about the entity, which is the medium for these answers. What can be done and who can do it? HE decides everything, everywhere, as always.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
sir
i want to practice brahmacharya but due to tensions in study masturbation eases my tensions and practising brahmacharya for 1 week increases tensions i cant understand this it disturbed my study whether masturbation or brahmacharya is good show me the right path

Answer
This is the first impediment at the start of practice. The body & Ego which are used to a life of unwarranted sexual release, pull the aspirant back into downfall, every time he tries to come out of the trap. Masturbation is the first step to degradation. He who spills his seed degenerates without doubt, while he who retains & transmutes it shines in the brightness and luster of the Atman (self), like a star, eventually achieving all that is due and going to the state beyond sorrow, forever.

One should firm up the mind and take up the suggested Sadhana, with determination to achieve unbroken Brahmacharya forever.

Strive as suggested, carefully applying each and every method detailed in past answers. In the course of time, with consistent efforts and Sadhana, the goal will be attained.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
For one who have practice Brahmacharya in thoughts,words and action. Do he need to practice mediation ?

I view mediation as a supplement to one already existing Brahmacharya.

Brahmacharya to be the core.

What is your view on this ?

Answer
Without meditation (merging the mind into the self, whereupon no mind exists) one cannot practice Brahmacharya in thought, word & deed. On a parallel, he who practices Brahmacharya in thought, word & deed is always in meditation, whatever be the nature of external activity. True Brahmacharya is achieved only when the above is accomplished.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Hi brother,

I've been practicing Brahmacharya for the last 400 something days and my health has been getting considerably worse. I get random heart palpitations throughout the day that leave me with slight anxiety, but they go away and I feel normal again. I've also been getting strange joint pain and stiffness, yet I'm only 25 years old. I remember the first six months into my practice I felt better than I ever had, but slowly by slowly my health has been getting worse it feels. I've also read about sexual repression and the damage that can cause, so now I'm at a point where I've considered breaking brahmacharya just in order to see if some of these health problems will be alleviated.

Thanks for your help.

ANSWER: There seems to be repression and not transmutation. Proper transmutation improves health (barring the illness one temporarily undergoes during cleansing of surfacing toxins), while repression of the sexual urge physically (while mentally indulging) causes health problems.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: What is the best means of transmutation? It's difficult to find time everyday for sadhana due to responsibilities.

Thanks

ANSWER: Wake up at 4.00 and perform the complete set of Yogic practices suggested earlier. Develop a life perspective, as has been elaborated earlier. In the course of a few months of such efforts, transmutation will slowly activate.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Thanks for your answers. Just one last question.

What would be effect of someone sexually transmuting their energies into some sort of artistic/creative passion?

Answer
The transmuted energy may be channelized towards any creative pursuit, be it material or spiritual. When directed towards worldly objectives, there will be excellence in that concerned field and when focused to realize the self (as in case of the Yogi desiring liberation), the same is eventually attained.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
OM Sir,

I am in a miserable ad pathetic state, as a result of constant sin and lapse (failure in brahmacharya) an depletion of the semen I am left utterly weak and have no desire to do anything.

I have almost non-existent confidence levels, am in a constant state of anxiety around people, cannot communicate properly with them etc
To make all this worse, as a result of this addiction to masturbation I become enraged at the slightest of things, a person merely looking at me can drive me to severe anger, in short all the typical symptoms one suffers when he fails in Brahmacharya/lives an evil life of sexual indulgence etc.
I feel like the lowest slime and have begun to hate myself, my life has become devoid of joy and I am unable to properly implement the correct spiritual practices -- and have little desire/will/ambition for them -- due to constant depression as a result of continuous sin and failure.

I wish to be totally free of all sex urges and desires, I have asked God to completely take them away, but it seems I still have them...
My life has become a miserable hell, and it is simply not worth living, I realise this is due to my own mistakes and sins etc., but I just cannot seem to break free of the addiction to masturbation, whatever techniques are possible/available I would try them to overcome this evil vice.

Much of this I believe stems from boredom, as I am unemployed and thus have very little to do; a viscous cycle.

Any advice you can give me to completely free myself of the sex desires I am very grateful for.

Answer
"God helps those who help themselves". Without applying unswerving efforts, however daunting be the obstacles, one cannot progress. It is the higher power alone which does everything; however, one has to merge his mind into IT (which is called surrender), so as to allow the higher power to take over and work from within. Else, life becomes one endless battle.

Apply the methods suggested in past answers by going through all the answers completely and work with the thought - "I do nothing. The Lord works through this body & mind and HE will take care of the matter". With such an attitude of submission and humility, apply the Yogic lifestyle advocated. Obstacles surface due to the presence of strong past karma. They will eventually dissolve as regards the one who perseveres.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear,

Miser and the accumulator of material goods as we escape and effect substitute the "generosity" and "charity" which would escape and substitute effect for illicit sexual desire?

I thank you,

kind regards,

Jorge Diogo (Rio de Janeiro - Brazil)

Answer
Recreational sexual desire does not subside with charity of material goods or money, for, such charity is again done with doership - "I am giving these things and helping people", which eventually leads to bloating of the Ego. That which is done to oneself or others, expecting something in return does not give Brahmacharya. Brahmacharya (which is the state of the self) comes only when one performs 'Nishkama Karma' (actions performed with surrender to God, expecting nothing in return).

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Hi,

This is an interesting thing. WHen I meditate i learnt to close the eyes and move the eyeballs upward to the forehead and then the mind get more concentrated in one thing and the lower part of he body(legs) feel more refreshed, not so tense. As if one turn the eyeballs upward one could forget the body easily, what is your opinion?

It happens that after some time even with eyes closed and in that position, one start to see white lights and get refreshment in the body. Those white lights in circles or on all the eye vision is the prana energy going upward? More one practice brahmacharya more strong are the effects? THis trick helped me more in meditation than all others methods like breathing and others.

Thanks

ANSWER: 1. The 'Thrikuti' (region between the eyebrows) is the confluence of the three 'Nadi's - Ida, Pingala & Sushumna. When one performs meditation through focus at this center, the left and right energies represented by Ida and Pingala merge into the Sushumna, leading to complete equilibrium of the energies. This is a pre-requisite, if the mind has to be merged into the Atman (self), by overcoming body & mind consciousness, so as to attain 'Samadhi'(super-consciousness)

2. Lights and visions which crop up in the process, as regards the beginner are distractions and impediments. They are not of any value. One should not divert his mind, seeking such experiences, but should ever be steadfast in merging the mind into the Atman, where there are no lights, no sounds, no thoughts, no body or mind awareness, but only silence of the nature of infinity.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Thanks Sir.

I ask you because you are the only one who know this. When i meditate and become aware of the sleep process, the body starts to feel heavy in the bed after let say 20 minutes of meditation. After that some parts of the body starts to move in a jumpy way like the arms without me exercising any pressure and i feel sometimes little pain in the nails. After this sometimes its when i see the light all white and those moment are refreshing for the entire body and i feel very light and the heaviness disapear. this is purification right? If i repeat this everyday the body get purification?

Answer
Focus on merging the mind into the Atman and do not aspire for anything else. That which has to happen (be it purification or something else) will happen on its own accord, to him who attains to Yoga. Your aim should be to destroy the mind and merge it in the truth and not worry about the body, visions, lights or purification (which all concern the non-self)

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Sir

I wish to ask how lack of Brahmacharya affect one knee joint ?

I am young and run a lot.

I believe that knee problem in old people is mainly cause by semen depletion in long run 10-15 years.A lack of brahmacharya cause more damage to the knee than what aging can cause.

I never see people who pratice yoga complain stiffness in joint or knee problem even in old age. I also believe through yoga pratice, yogic fire improve the strenth and flexibility.

Please kindly share your view.

Answer
1. The entire system, including bones and joints degrade further to loss of the seed, in the course of time. The first signs of excessive loss of seed (which eventually occurs in all those who commit to a life of recreational sexuality) is seen through drying up of the 'Synovial Fluid' which is necessary for healthy functioning of the joints. As this fluid dries up, the joints turn stiff, accompanied with increasing pain. Flexibility and litheness deteriorates. Eventually, they degenerate completely and become nonfunctional.

2. The human joint is not designed for much running. Doing so will also cause joint problems in the course of time. Brisk and fast walking is the better option.

3. 'Rethas' (semen) transmuted into 'Ojas' (subtle vital energy) keeps the entire system healthy, efficient and full of vitality, as it was during youth.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namastey Sir.. I have been practising brahmacharya since a month. My question is- Does mere chatting with girls on whatsapp break my celibacy?? Provided the chat is just friendly and not at all intimate..

Answer
It will eventually do so, for idle talk stimulates the senses in course of time, leading to loss of focus and thereby a break in Brahmacharya. Those serious of establishing unbroken Brahmacharya should maintain mental & verbal contact with either gender and especially the opposite gender to the minimum and cut all unnecessary interactions.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaste
happy janmasthami,
i was watching a video on YouTube in which sadhguru ji was saying that shambhavi mahamudra makes our brain better ... Is there any special effect of shambhavi mahamudra or practice suggested by you is enough for brain.

Answer
'Shambhavi Mudra' can be used as a prelude to meditation, as it involves focus at the 'Thrikuti'. The meditation suggested in past answers on the formless Supreme, wherein one tries to merge his self into it, assuming it as no different, does not require any mudra to be applied in particular as this meditation directly works at merging the mind into the Atman (self).

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello, you say that brahmacharya gives oneself vitality even in old age. But its not always the case. Ramana Maharshi suffered many illness in his 60ths. There was an italian monk who supposedly had superpowers too called Padre Pio in late 1960 and suffered many health problems and didnt live long. Francis of Assisi didnt live 50 years old. In my opinion brahmacharya helps some people health but not others. Why those people suffer athritis and all kind of problems, when brahmacharya is supposed to give oneself many health benefice? ANd many vulgar person reach 90-100 years old.

Answer
1. Just as the arrow shot by a hunter will hit its target, after release, even if the hunter decides otherwise and repents for his action, illnesses & diseases which are a part of 'Prarabdha karma' (that karma which is destined to be worked out by the body & mind in this existence, due to previous acts) cannot be sidestepped.

Even in the case of realized souls, the same laws of karma hold good. None are above the laws of karma. Realized souls prevent the formation of future unwanted karma, after losing the sense of doership, further to attainment of 'Gnyana' (knowledge of the absolute). Such a being does not commit any mistake. However, the karma accrued before the attainment of such Gnyana (be it pleasant or unpleasant) cannot be sidestepped. It has to be worked out. If there are past acts which necessitate suffering of the body through a particular illness or disease, then the same comes to fruit at the destined time. Also, this being their final existence on the earthly plane, such beings have to settle all dues and clear their karmic account once and for all, before final release. The same does not apply to the common man who has innumerable future existences pending.

2. When a man has a large sum of money, it appears as though any amount of expenditure does not lead to poverty. However, this is not the case in reality. With time, further to continuous expenditure, even the richest man eventually becomes a pauper. The same analogy holds good as regards those who have earned some merit, that supports health, in previous existences, despite an apparent lack of Brahmacharya.

Brahmacharya promotes health, happiness and well being, while lack of it does the opposite. In case of those who live to a ripe old age despite lack of Brahmacharya, it is to be known that their past karma is such that a life or two of health is supported. Once this past, supporting merit has been exhausted, such people find themselves in an existence devoid of all health and happiness and have to also face the results of their recent actions.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Revered Sir,

In one of the previous posts, the upper age limit for men to start the practice of Brahmacharya is said to be 32-34 years.
What is the upper age limit in case of women?

Thank You.

Answer
Is it in one's hands to know about Brahmacharya or to decide and take up the practice? All this is decided by the higher power, who alone controls everything.

The age of 32~34 mentioned for men is only a general, physical yardstick and nothing more. When one is physically younger, he or she has more energy at their disposal to focus on uninterrupted Sadhana, which requires one pointed application of Prana (vital energy).

One should commence the practice of Brahmacharya as soon as they are let into its knowledge by the Almighty. Based on one's past karma and divine will, different people get to know about the same at different stages of their life. Again, different people are able to take up the practice thereupon with varying degree's of success. One should turn a blind eye to all these factors and persevere in honest and correct practice with diligent effort, despite obstacles or downfalls. This is all that is required, for all Jiva-s are equally dear to the Lord, who does not discriminate with things such as age, gender or other illusory things.

When this much is done and honest practice taken up with longing surrender and love for the Supreme, the best results shine forth, whatever be one's age or gender. If a man or woman get to know about Brahmacharya, say in their 40's, then that too is a part of divine will, which has decided that they should henceforth commence the practice, their past karma for a life of recreational sexuality receding or having been exhausted, and a life towards liberation having started. There is nothing more final than divine decree. When HE decides, it is final.

Do not worry about the numerical age, but simply persevere in the suggested direction. The best is assured.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

1. During meditation, should the eyes be closed?

2. For focussing on the Trikuti, should the eyeballs physically look at the Trikuti? or should the eyes be closed and the attention is to be fixed on a point? When I try to fix my gaze at the Trikuti, there is a slight pain in my eye after some seconds. What could be done to fix my gaze on the Trikuti for longer duration?

3. Kindly give me some advice on the meditation technique.

Thanks a lot.

Answer
1. When the practices preceding meditation (Asana, Bandha, Nadi Shodhana, Pranayama) are rightly practiced, as described in past answers, the mind turns blank & the eyes automatically close in meditation.

2. There is neither the need to physically look at the Thrikuti, nor the need to fix the eyes to a point. What is required is proper application of the preceeding methods suggested, in an unbroken manner, for many years, following which the mind merges into the self and unreal things such as the body, eyebrows, mind etc. no longer exist.

Detailed description of the required meditation on the formless Supreme are available in past answers. Go through each and every answer from the start and slowly absorb the essence, applying it in practice.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I have been recently suffering from Crohn's(intestinal ulcers) and the resulting bleeding/malabsorption made me anaemic, severly malnourished on a lot of vital parameters.
Even though I denied blood transfusion,the doctors advised eating egg(for recovering from hypo-albuminea(low-protein) problem) and also another drink, which may have some fish extracts in it, apart from other medicines.
I am a strict vegetarian since birth and even though I am not able to relish these items, I had to take them with great difficulty since some days.
So does this pose a problem for the practice of brahmacharya and induce a break..
So what best can be done under such circumstances?

Answer
Let go of the unwarranted feeling of guilt. There is no harm in eating any kind of food, be it veg or non-veg, for sustenance of the body, as long as the need is warranted. Vegetarian food is prescribed for the beginner, as meat & products have a higher chance of stimulating the senses. The same does not apply, when taken to rejuvenate, during times of ill health.

The type of food never matters to the advanced aspirant, who eats a little of whatever is necessary, absorbing just the Prana.

Eat that which is prescribed, thinking it to be the medium of cure sent by the Lord, wholeheartedly, and get well. There will not be any break.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhananjay,

Thanks for your response, it was very helpful.You answered my question regarding dentistry, and I would like to ask you if that extends to all medical practice.For example my doctor tells me 'you have an under-active thyroid, you must take medication to rectify this problem.Should a skilful response be to 'accept what comes, and respond in a detached manner and take the medicine'?

I realize that in the early stages of brahmacharya the body will feel quite unhappy at times.There will be tension and aches and pains, and mental disturbances.The mind tries to find a solution to the bodies distress, reading this and that health book for an explanation and remedy.It feels like a wild goose chase though.Should I be seeking answers to health in this way?Or is it largely a waste of time?

Thanks for your response.

Answer
If transmutation is correct, with unbroken Brahmacharya, involving 4.00 A.M wakeup & all the practices described earlier, the thyroid gland will harmonize into perfection in the course of time. There is no need for medication.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Sir,

Do creative expression increase when Brahmacharya increases?

I mean creative expression in term of Art,music and literature.

I understand to realise the self is the ultimate objective. Do one have to forego all these creative expression to reach the self ?

Answer
1. If the aspirant applies efforts in that direction, with proper practice, the expression becomes better and moves towards exaltation.

2. All those things which one wishes for {within the bounds of his destiny), will come to fruit at the destined time, through honest and committed practice, to realize the self. It is automatic. One will not be made to forego those things. However, one should focus on the self alone, expecting nothing in return. Then, these other things come on their own, just as passing villages appear en route to the main destination.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
sir
i want to knoewhow to attain mental celibacy doing our duties i am a student of graduation but cant follow this path because freiends claassmates are always distracting.they make a fun if someone goes to tell brahmacharya then how to folloe this path?
plz answer this next i have practiced this for a one week but found some thing strange i dont know how to deal this situation and so i lost plzzz suggest a method for me.if answer in your previous question then give me the question no. or link

Answer
1. Who asked you to inform your friends about the practice? Brahmacharya is a personal state concerning oneself and God. One should not mention or discuss the same with others.

2. If you wish to establish yourself in Brahmacharya, go through each and every past answer, absorb the essence and apply it in practice. 'Brahmavidya' (knowledge of the Supreme) cannot be attained by studying bookmarked links, chapters or paragraphs. It is not like the study of a subject in academics. The aspirant has to understand the process involved, reorient his very life and apply the same diligently for years, decades or lifetimes as the case may be, following which the knowledge comes from within, and not from any link or site.

Past answers contain the methods and mindset to be adopted. All of them should be slowly and steadily absorbed and applied. Then, establishment gradually occurs, by HIS grace.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Sir,

1)I wish to ask if transmutation of semen also elevate one creative force/ Creativity?

2)Semen hold the ability to create life, also hold the key to all creativity in man.So can I say a man lack of creativity also lack the proper preservation and transmutation of semen?

3)Can i assume that if such force properly channel lead to growth on the mental level and expression?

4)However, I also understand that Creative Expression such as Art,Music and literature has its limitation and only by meditation such force can channel beyond.

I wish to know how if one focus on Brahmacharya alone, other attribute such as Art,Music and Literature will grow by themselves ?

If yes, then i wish to know how can such skills grow if one never practice them.

Answer
Simply practice as suggested, with utmost honesty and surrender for some years in an unbroken manner, with patience. All that which has to come will come. Now let go of these bundles of theoretical queries and focus energy on proper practice.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

Why it is so important to wake up at 4:00am for someone in the path of enlightnement? To get the most benefices for the mind during meditation is it important for the body to feel tired or sleepy so the mind could detach from it easier?

Personally i try to relax during sleep so the body could get sleepy while maintaining the mind awake and then I wake up in my own sleep and couldnt move the body but at the end I failed to move with the mind too, i woke up after some time. Ive read in a little pratical book that the mind could use that state and move to another space. It says the physical body too enter another space float,or become invisible if someone could take advantages of those stages of sleep.

Answer
1. The significance has been addressed in past answers.

2. If the 'one' who is 'trying to relax' exists in sleep, it is not sleep. Sleep is that state, where there is no one to 'try' anything.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello sir, I have got three questions

1. How long does it everyone that takes up the method you suggested to everyone to stop getting nightfall. I have night fall randomly. It is a very vague question but i will try and be more specific. I'm 20 years old and I don't indulge in any activities with females. I keep away from then as much as I can. If I take the method you suggested,from the feedback that you may have received from other teenagers or from any other experiences, when will I start getting results. Withing weeks or months or years?

2. I know the fact that the more you eat at night the more chance of nightfall. Is that true? and Does Veerya(semen)get produced from fruits? If not, what kind of food does it get produced from?

3. Does drinking lot of water before going to bed increase chances of nightfall?

Answer
1. Nightfall tapers further to correct transmutation. It stops after the Yogi becomes an 'Urdhvareta'. The time frame differs from person to person.

2. Food taken at night should be the smallest meal of the day, for health and well being. Veerya is the ultimate essence of all that is absorbed by the body.

3. Drinking much water before retiring to bed does not promote deep sleep. It can also increase the chances of nightfall.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Hi Dhananjay,

I am at a juncture of 7 months of unbroken brahmacharya currently and have a few pressing questions that I would like to raise.

First, I am noticing adverse mental and physical effects. I am feeling mentally tired (e.g. my outlook on everything this material world has to offer is growing dimmer and I begin to contemplate the very purpose of existing on this dreary worldly plane) and physically, I have not seen great strides in my cognitive ability or strength. While I do not expect these, the absence of such worries me that I am not engaging in the proper form of practice. Are these common occurrences after this period of practice (6 months to a year) and will they accordingly go away in due course with proper sadhana? I feel this will be of benefit to know for others aspiring sadhus as well.

Next, I have studied the difference between stula, linga, and karana sharira. Linga sharira is the mind, composed of the conscious and sub-conscious. Does the mind also consist of the ego? For me, the mind and ego are distinct-The ego is that entity which perceives to control this body, mind, etc. while the mind is simply the agent which conducts logical deductions, thinks through decisions, etc. I hope this is accurate. In addition, what is the jiva composed of, with regards to these three shariras? How much control does a jiva have over them?

Finally, I often despair that my ahamkara has not been silenced further to practice. Yesterday, one of my former acquaintances, who manipulated me and is a cunning fellow, launched a very successful small business and I foolishly felt pangs of jealousy. Rationalizing the impermanent nature of the leela vibhootam (play world in which we are) does not seem to alleviate the concern. Must one think, or simply do sadhana? Contemplation is useful but there seems to be a limit to its capability.

Finally, I would like to know if the following summary is accurate for an aspiring yogi: the right path is to engage in meaningful and moral conduct while performing duties of roles and doing that which one is inclined to do, without worrying about fruits, while being cognizant that desired material fruits will manifest in due course.

As an added question-Is it morally correct for the yogi to use his charisma from ojas transmutation toward attracting other people and charming them to succeed in business or consulting or other professions?

I do not know where this practice is taking me. After 6 months, I remain...confused. I try my best. I maintain brahmacharya. However, the pleasures of the material world still tempt me. I often wonder, "why should I pursue such a path when seeing no results when the sensual pleasures are right nearby" (of course, I will not indulge, but just giving you a quick glimpse of what the mind seems to think).

Regards
Jakob

ANSWER: 1. Oscillations (both physical & mental) of various kinds are to be expected, for these concern the Ego and the body, which go through various experiences, on account of 'Prarabdha'. The Yogi should focus on Sadhana, transmute to the the best extent possible and remain silent, not getting taken over by these.

2. The mind is nothing but the representation of the Ego. Based on the past Vasana-s (tendencies) and Samskara-s (impressions) which make the Ego, the mind fluctuates accordingly, via inputs from external stimuli. The 'Karana Sharira' (causal sheath) is the final repository and source of these past seeds, and acts as a barrier between the mind and the Atman (self). As this sheath gradually dissolves over many years, decades and births of Sadhana, the mind comes that much closer to the Atman and eventually merges into it irreversibly. This is termed Self-Realization.

3. The 3 Sharira-s surround the Atman, whose consciousness, when apparently individualized through these leads to the concept of a 'Jiva' (separate entity). The Jiva has as much control as it is real (and therefore has no control in terms of the truth, the Jiva being an illusion).

4. One should do his Dharma righteously, with surrender to God, not asking anything for himself. The actions of such a man automatically align to righteousness and his actions are those of God (for he does not commence anything for personal gain). That which has to come will then come on its own accord.

5. Be patient and do the requisite Sadhana, without expectations. How long it takes is not one's concern. One's duty ends at effort.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Thank you, a few follow-ups:

1)If it is the case that the mind is the ego, how are enlightened yogis like Ramana Bhagawan and Swami Sivananda documented to have engaged in question-answer sessions with disciples and generally conduct themselves in life? The mind is needed for logical conduct, decision making, and so on for practical applications, is it not? Is it because they created an ego (mind) to interact in the worldly plane?

2)Is the Linga Sharira actually the mind? If not, what exactly is it? I understand that past vasanas and samskaras come from the karana sharira but does that mean that the linga sharira is a product of the karana sharira?

3) One question regarding practice itself: You have mentioned those who are initiated into brahmacharya are done so by divine decree. Why do people not ascribe breaks in brahmacharya to the will of the almighty? Is it not the case that whatever the almighty wills will happen, thus even breaks and abrahmacharya are condoned by him? How do I counter such refutations? The same goes for evil actions-If an aspirant is to commit harm to another jiva, is it not possible to rationalize such as the will of the almighty?
I wish to answer such a point and refute it decisively.

4) I spoke with a vedic pundit who told me that there are actually three worlds: leela vibhuti (the playful earth plane), an intermediate tier, and nitya vibhuti (The plane of the almighty). He claimed that when an aspirant is enlightened in this birth, he/she can only ascend to the intermediate tier but not nitya vibhuti. Is it not possible to do so? Also, can souls in nitya vibhuti come to leela vibhuti for benefiting mankind (e.g. the 10 avatars of vishnu?)

5) On this earthly plane, I am intensely lonely. I, although an aspirant, desire companionship. My spiritual guru of long deserted me cruelly as I found out that he was none other than a lustful man who abuses women. That broke my heart and made me question the viability of practice. My parents started getting involved in serious marital conflicts. Loss of mental and physical energy has depleted my parents. I feel as if I have no one but my young sister to look after. I pray to bhagawan ramana and swami sivananda but I do not know if they answer my calls. How should I support my sister and overcome this longing for earnest companionship?

Answer
1. Yes, Enlightened beings create a temporary Ego (Nirmana Chitta) and thereby a mind, so as to complete their pending responsibilities and work out the remaining Prarabdha. However, there is no personal identification with the same, these beings merely acting acting as extensions of the higher power.

2. Yes. The 'Linga Sharira' springs from the 'Karana Sharira', as a manifestation of the seeds present therein. However, the mind itself does not make the Linga Sharira. It is made of the Manas (mind), Buddhi (intellect), Chitta (consciousness) & Ahamkara (Ego). The Linga Sharira in effect functions as the energy body.

3. When Sunlight passes through a red glass, the emergent light appears red. Who is responsible for the red light? The red glass or the Sun? While it is no doubt the Sun whose light is passing through the glass, resulting in red light, it must be realized that it is the redness of the glass which is responsible for the same and not the Sun, for his shining is not producing red light elsewhere. The same holds good as regards success or failure in Brahmacharya, at the individual level.

Breaks occur on account of factors not supporting Brahmacharya (residence in the self) within the Karana Sharira of the Jiva. The higher power is not asking one to commit a break. It is one's own inadequacy which is making one fail. These breaks are pointers for the aspirant to strive further in Sadhana, so as to overcome the seeds of the non-self. Hence, while everything occurs by the will of the Lord alone, the correction required is within and not outside.

4. To whom do these worlds concern? They concern the Ego which one is not. Therefore, deliberations and elaborations on such planes is only wasteful fancy. When one is yet to know who he is, of what use is it to talk about planes which concern that which one is not? Such theoretical, verbal indulgences/debates as regards other planes (which are illusory and unreal, just like the mind) are resorted to by the unenlightened and not by the knowers of truth, or those who are in the quest of the truth. First know who you are; you may later try and know about the other worlds (if they still exist)

5. Your self is the only companion which is of substance, being the truth. All external relationships are illusions, which will one day change and fade away. Therefore, persist with proper Sadhana to realize your self. You will eventually cross this ocean of Maya and set food in the land beyond sorrow. It is only by the Guru's grace that the urge for the truth within you is is motion. Realized saints (who are HIS manifestations) work in silence. Not hearing or seeing them does not amount to their absence. That which is to be done is being done, as a part of his plan.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

In yoga the hand mudras are important for the energy of the body i think. I would like 2 questions because i dont understand what is the real science behind the hundreds of hand mudras. They are like to strengthen different chakras or to call gods? They say the Kubera Mudra is dedicated to Kubera, a demi-god of wealth according to Hindu mythology.

And last question. What mudra do you recommend to help reduce legs tension?

Thanks

Answer
1. The Mudra (seal) is basically a tool to chanellize energy flow.

2. The Yogi desiring knowledge of the self, for liberation adopts the 'Chin Mudra' (also called 'Gnyana Mudra' - The Mudra of the absolute truth), wherein the tip of the index finger is joined to the mid-phalange of the thumb and the other three fingers extended outwards.

3. The little finger represents the 'Sthula Sharira' - Physical body.

The ring finger represents the 'Linga Sharira' - Astral or energy body.

The mid finger represents the 'Karana Sharira' - Causal body.

The index finger represents the 'Jivatman' - Soul.

The thumb represents the 'Paramatman' - Supreme Almighty.

4. By extending the other three fingers down, one is letting go of his identification with these three bodies, which he is not.

5. What now remains is the individual concept of the soul and the Almighty. By joining the thumb and the index finger, one is uniting the individual soul with the Supreme, signifying liberation.

6. This Mudra is most conducive during meditation or even at other times for the Yogi. It is the most comprehensive and superior of all the Mudra's, for the Yogi does not ask for anything other than liberation here, thereby staying with the path of 'Nishkama Karma' (efforts carried out for realization alone, as a part of Dharma, without expectation for the fruits). This inturn promotes 'Saranagati' (surrender to the Lord, accepting whatever he gives).

7. The Sadhana suggested, when carried out will root out all that is to be relieved, including leg tension.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Sir,

I have a cold or some kind of illness that prevents me from practicing proper pranayam or nadi shodana. I also feel weak and cannot hold asanas, and my body feels stiff. I am wondering whether it is possible to give up Nadi Shodana, Pranayam and Bhastrika for the next few days until I feel better.

Answer
1. An on and off blocked nose is common during the initial few years of Sadhana, when the 'Vishuddha Chakra' purification is not yet complete. It is the result of ingrained karmic and bodily toxins, which take many years to vacate. The very blocking is a sign that these toxins are surfacing whilst being vacated, while being pushed out by the Yogic Sadhana.

2. Lethargy and an apparent physical weakness is another common effect. During the initial years, Prana is not yet harmonized into equilibrium. At one time, one feels full of energy and at the other, he feels as though he cannot do even simple tasks. This is the effect of 'Tamas' (inertia) which also makes one sleep when he sits in meditation.

3. The Yogi should turn a blind eye to these symptoms and persist with all the required methods (without omission), despite these obstacles, to the utmost extent possible. Then, all these issues gradually taper and go away in the course of time.

4. When after much unbroken Sadhana, the Yogi attains to the 'Divya Sharira' (divine body completely purified by the fire of Yoga), which occurs just before entrance into 'Nirvikalpa Samadhi', the body glows with luster and perfection, free from all imbalances, with Prana in a perfect state of equilibrium. Till then, one has to relentlessly persevere & surge with determination.

Do the suggested Sadhana in completeness, however difficult it be. All issues will go away in the course of time.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,
Sometimes, there are unavoidable breaks in the Sadhana - like, traveling, guests at home (during the Sadhana time), which cause a break in the Sadhana in the morning/evening. Will they have bad effect on the progress?
Thanks a lot.

Answer
1. One should try one's best to adhere to regular and uninterrupted Sadhana, keeping it as the prime focus.

2. While an occasional miss in practice, due to unavoidable circumstances does not cause much of an impediment, the same, if made into a habit will negatively affect progress.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Sir,

I am writing this because I need your help to guide me on Brahmachaya. I have been practicing Brahmacharya for quite some time for around 40 weeks.

There is improvement in my mental purity and previous suppression has greatly reduce. My main concern is that i do not practice mediation .

This cause a huge problem for me and in recent few weeks, I have not meditate at all. There is also a drop in my passion for spiritual pursuit.

As for other passion, there is a drastic drop. However, my devotion, passion for meditation also decreases.

I am also aware that I lack proper foundation for mediation .I hope you can assist me in getting a proper brahmacharya foundation.

Thank you

Answer
Meditation is very important. Apply the complete set of Sadhana and lifestyle as described in past answers, adopting the required life perspective, with surrender to God. Things will gradually turn towards the better.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi, is the devil, mara and the ego the same? In ancient stories many sages like Buddha, Jesus were tempted by the devil or Mara before enlightnment. In the case of Buddha it was with lust and Jesus it was material wealth. Was not the devil in those stories their own ego's problems? This duality between good and evil comes in my opinion from the departure of the mind from the source.

Answer
Yes, the devil is nothing but one's own 'Ahamkara' (Ego), while the 'Atman' (one's self) is God. To overcome identity with the Ego, so as to merge into one's self is the aim of all religions and spiritual practices. Then, the self, which is no different from the Lord, alone remains. It is of the nature of truth, pure being and eternal bliss.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaste friend, you have answered several of my questions pertaining to the practice before and I thank you. I have one further question which has been pondering on my mind.

I am a 20 year old man who formerly lost much ojas, jing, etc. due to masturbation and pornography. Even after I stopped it left me unconfident and unsure as to my masculinity. Brahmacharya and strict celibacy is obviously the practice I have turned to in order to remedy the damage done.

I have thought at times that becoming physically stronger would help me in effort to feel stronger on the whole as a person. Yet at the same time I feel that it could still potentially leave me insecure and not knowing the self. Would Brahmacharya and yoga be preferable, and stronger than physical strength? I am looking to merge the mind and the self, and make the ego dissolve into the true self which is the strong one, the one who acts.

Thank you.

Answer
En route to merging the mind into the Atman (self), through the described Yoga Sadhana, all that is auspicious as regards the body such as health, vigor, vitality, strength, luster & well being will be attained. These results are automatic. The Yogi need not particularly strive for them, as they come by themselves.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Dhananjay ji,
First of all thanks for your precious replies to my previous questions. I feel very blessed to be under your guidance. Due to the whole set of yogic practices suggested by you I have realised its benefits both physically and mentally. Due to this yogic schedule my mind has become more clear while earlier it always used to be cloudy and confused. Now, I am able to do meditation too. Yet I am facing some problems in my practice and I seek your holy guidance for these :-

1. The first problem is the continuos breaks in my brahmacharya practice. I always get in contact with some adult material on internet on my smartphone due to my curiosity. I have used filtering the search results earlier but when any opportunity arises I always end up changing my search settings to view any sort of these materials and finally breaking my brahmacharya practice. Due to these continous breaks my sankalpa too has suffered. I feel very frustated over myself. Please suggest me something that i can never see any sort of adult content on internet.

2. I know that each anga of yogic practices i.e. asana, bandhas, nadi shodhana, pranayama and meditation each one have their own importance and must be practiced. I perform this whole set in the morning but due to lack of time (getting only 30-45 mins) in the evening (sometimes in the morning too) I skip asanas and do only bandhas, nadi shodhana, pranayama and meditation. Is my approach correct or should I just do meditation while being short on time?

3. What should be the ratio of puraka and rechaka in nadi shodhana as it is 1:4:2 in pranayama?

4. I am not able to find link to download the book "God talks with Arjuna :Bhagvadh Gita". Can u please provide with the link.

Thank you very much

Answer
1. Through Sadhana and determination, one has to reach a level of commitment, where he will not seek porn, even if offered. Such should be the devotion to practice and surrender to God.

2. Perform as much as time permits, when there is a deficit.

3. There is no ratio. Follow the method of Pranayama described earlier.

With unbroken efforts, Brahmacharya eventually becomes natural.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
hello
recently I am finding difficult to maintain my vow since I have to stay in hostel. The people around me are not much interested in spirituality. I am afraid that I too might fall in to their ways and become more materialistic. So please help

Answer
1. Seek within and not outside. He who takes the world seriously, gets affected and loses hold on the self.

2. Work as an actor, playing your part, yet never becoming the character in reality.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Hi,

The teachings to achieve the self existed in early antiquity or it came with time and human evolution?

The specific teachings of Tantra which bring the highest rank of enlightnement and which explain the chakras and kundalini didnot exist in early antiquity but came later as an evolution of what previously existed. In remote antiquity the teachings were with stories and myths like Gilgamesh but no sadhana or moral teachings.

ANSWER: 1. The teachings have existed ever since man became evolved enough to take them up.

2. There is no rank in Enlightenment. One is either Enlightened or not Enlightened.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Thanks.

I dont want to post this message because it can offend people. In my own views, the monotheistic religions like islam and christianity they put too much emphasis in empty rituals and dogmas that bring someone nowhere. At least the jewish have mystical teachings which is accepted among theimselves. Which doesnt mean that there was no teaching about ego death in the 2 other religions but mystics and saints while alive were and are not well accepted, often ignored and even persecuted by the ones who have authorities in those religions.

Religions are often there to extract money from worshippers, and influence among politics and in the case of islam is even worse, it gets politized very easily. What do you think about institutionalized religions?

Answer
There are as many paths as there are individuals. A path which suits one need not suit the other, for whom there is another. The gracious Lord makes all come to HIM, though the roads be many. Knowing it to be such, one should let go of analysis on this path or the other and choose that path which will help him know his identity. Any other debate or discussion is only wasteful fancy, which is not of any use. The wise do not resort to such.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Pranaam gurudev,
It's been nearly 3 years since I started my journey of brahmacharya. Its all because god came into my life in your form. Please accept my gratitude.

I had one doubt. Is the secretion of lubricating fluid as debilitating as expelling semen as in case of masturbation? Is it considered a break?

Regards
Shiv

ANSWER: 1. Secretion of lubricating fluid is the effect of a mental break.

2. It results in a partial physical break, which will eventually result in a complete break in practice if the activity which caused it is repeated. Hence, one should maintain perfect Brahmacharya in thought, word & deed. The true Brahmachari does not expel any kind of sexual fluid.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Pranaam Gurudev,

Please accept my gratitude for listening to me.

I too was taken aback and felt very ashamed of this incident as this has happened to me after around one and a half year.It just happened in a moment due to a certain movie scene on TV which was related to my sinful past.It was as if I went back to the time I used to indulge in this poisonous habit.But this has made me to come out of it more strong and now I'm feeling that nothing can shake my brahmacharya as now I've recognised my weakness and have started practicing more vigrously.

I still had some queries,gurudev-

1.Has this incident placed me backwards in my sadhana or it was a 'prarabdh' which worked out?

2.Also,I wanted to confirm whether it harmed my sadhana like a full physical break or was I just saved from it,just in time, by god's grace?

3.Whether I can be forgiven and my sadhana can still be counted continued from here as there was no expellation of gross semen?

4.Also,am I in a better position than I would have been if I would have had a full physical break?

Regards

Shiv

Answer
1. All incidents which are the result of Prarabdha are designed to help one emerge wiser. One should learn from them and not repeat.

2. A mental break is the beginning of downfall, which completes through a physical break if not careful. Since there hasn't been a voluntary physical break, it is not a complete break, which resets practice. Hence avoid the same in future and persevere properly.

3. Yes

4. The body loses some Prana and vital power further to a partial break. As long as the same is not repeated, the effects will reverse in a few months.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello, I am in my 2nd month of brahmacharya an I am still experiencing some intense depression and withdrawal symptoms such as weird pain/pressure in my back, headaches, lack of appetite.. I'm wondering if you or anyone else u know who is a successful brahmahari experienced these symptoms as late as into the 2nd month and if u have any word on when they may clear up?

Answer
Oscillations of the mind and body can last years and decades. One need not worry about these, as long as there is proper transmutation through adequate Sadhana.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

Please clear these doubts of this aspirant in the path of the self.

1. How does one know he has met his Guru? What are the signs of a real Guru. In this world 99% of people promoting Yoga and spirituality are out for money and some gain or the other. The others are not self-realized and hence have incomplete knowledge. So what is the way?

2. What will a self-realized being reply if someone asks him "Are you self-realized"?

Thank you for the guidance sir.

Answer
1. When one suddenly feels deep devotion & respect for him from within... When one feels immense peace and calmness in his presence or his teachings... When the mind lets go of all other desires and simply wishes to hear his words with utmost attention and commitment... When after hearing or seeing him, one feels unexplained bliss & joy... When one knows "The time has come" and there is nothing more important... When one no longer feels any anxiety about life but only wants to apply his teachings honestly, as though everything else will be taken care of... When one feels an unseen, yet very powerful force guiding him to do that which is necessary... When one cries with tears of devotion, like a child, for no reason and wants to practice virtue, truth and Brahmacharya, with an urge that cannot be explained... Then, it is to be known that the Guru has been found.

Then, it is to be known that the Lord has shown his grace, in transferring one from a life of 'Bhoga' (sense pleasure, which ends in suffering) to the path of 'Yoga' (Union with the Supreme, which confers liberation). There is none more fortunate & blessed than one who has found his 'Guru', who is nothing but the manifestation of the Lord in flesh and blood. The chosen aspirant should then onward take up the practice with utmost honesty, never failing the Lord, who has been kind enough to shower HIS grace, as the Guru.

2. Who is to answer? The one who sought realization (Ego) is gone... Who is there? There is none to answer. THAT alone remains in that body. So there will be no answer; only silence.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Respected Dhananjay ji,

Please accept my humble obeisances at your lotus feet.

I am very grateful to you for putting in so much effort in showing us the right path of Yoga.

A question arises in my mind as to how can twisting the body into various poses lead to good health.

Kindly throw some light on the fundamental principle behind Yoga asans. What is the relation between tensing muscles, nerves, prana, breathing, kumbhak etc.?

Thank you very much,

Swapnil

Answer
1. The physical body by itself has no life of its own, merely being a lump of flesh, bones and nerves. It receives life energy from the 'Linga Sharira' (astral body), and is thus sustained.

2. These Asana-s (bodily postures) have been formulated to stimulate and harmonize the energy centers (Chakra-s) in the 'Linga Sharira' (astral body, which surrounds the physical vehicle). The Linga Sharira receives energy from the Atman (via the Karana Sharira, the causal medium), .

2. When a particular posture is attained and maintained for the required duration, conditions favorable to receiving adequate Prana (harmonized from the corresponding chakra) are set in motion. The receipt of free flowing Prana in the required magnitude inundates the physical vehicle with harmonized and balanced life energy. Then, that physical medium shines with health, vigor and vitality.

Both the physical and astral mediums in the normal man are toxic due to past actions. They require purification to achieve the above state. Asana, Bandha, Nadi Shodhana and Pranayama, when practiced in the proper manner, for many years, gradually dissolve karma in the 'Karana Sharira' (causal body), detoxify both the physical and astral mediums, thereby enabling Prana (which has the Atman as it source) to flow as required into all these mediums.

In the Yogi who has attained the 'Divya Sharira' (body purified by the fire of Yoga) which comes prior to entrance into*Nirvikalpam* , the body is completely purified and free of bodily toxins. Prana flows free, unrestricted and unhindered in such a body, resulting in health and well being of a high degree.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi, about samyama on different objects. For example samyama on a particular object means that one view that object with his mind and then? WHat is the relation to siddhis and object?

Answer
Perform Samyama on the Atman (self), as suggested in the method of meditation, in past answers. Samyama on other objects, for Siddhi-s does not come in the purview of quest of the self.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dhananjay,

Practice of brahmacharya has been steady for the last 8 months with only minor visual and mental breaks that I will also try to resolve.

But a bigger problem now is fear.

I thought of the terrible ways in which people have been killed (Due to recent brutalities conduced against journalists). Specifically, being slowly beheaded or pelted with rocks. And I cowered with fear.

What is going on with me? I tried to fortify myself with the champion words of Swami Vivekananda and told myself to be brave. I will ask my eternal guru for guidance. But I am weak. My hands are limp. The mind, although on a path to always inquire the nature of the self, suddenly focused on the material world and considered the brutal pain these victims must have suffered.

Many aspirants ask you about lust-related queries. But what to make of this? This is just as much a problem to me.

The worst part is considering that such circumstances may befall one's loved ones. And oneself. Please guide me in the right direction. Only your true words will show me the proper manner to compose myself.

Answer
1. Fear is unwarranted faith in the negative. It is an illusion and a fancy of the mind, devoid of substance.

2. That which has to happen will happen no matter what and that which is not destined, won't happen, try how hard one may. Knowing it to be such, let go of fears and do your Dharma (to realize the self). He who does so is not affected by any occurrence or non-occurrence and develops the strength to remain indifferent to happiness and sorrow, which are both illusions concerning the Ego.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Greetings,

Sir, I have went over/read literally all of your past answers and have previously asked you questions, just so you know this, and I thank you for this great service to mankind.

I have two questions:

1.)How can I stop being bothered by the presence of women when on the rare occasions I am amidst the people/in the public?

Without thinking negatively of them or degradingly?

Since you have made it clear in past answers that this is the work of 'maya' then it is obviously a struggle to deal with them at times while one is still somewhat under its influence...

2.) How do I develop indifference towards what others perceive and think of me? I still somewhat struggle with this.

Many thanks for your time Dhananjay

God bless

Answer
1. When one learns to hold on to the self, realizing the falsity behind the allure of flesh, which is ageing every minute and prone to decay, one will no longer feel bothered.

2. Who perceives and who wants to be indifferent? It is one's own Ego and the Ego of others. Both these are unreal. He who holds on to the self reminding himself of this truth neither gets affected by what others think nor by one's own Ego.

How does one hold on to the self? One can hold on to it, after getting a glimpse of it, further to honest Sadhana. All objectives are attained further to long and unbroken Sadhana alone.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello, Swami Sivananda did wrote a small chapter that during meditation scary visions could appear about beings with deformed bellies or strange faces with terrifying forms he called Bhuta-Ganas. He wrote that one should develope courage and should be able to continue with meditation. Can they hurt someone who is in meditation? In my own experience i never had such visions but since i practice concentration and meditation it happened one time at night around 2-3am. in bed i heard like if someone was talking to me in my hear when i sleep on my left side. Maybe its because the heart suffer pressure and then that illusion happen.

Answer
1. All these visions are illusions concerning the mind, devoid of substance.

2. One should turn a blind eye to such imagination, which is nothing but meaningless fancy and focus on the self.

No harm comes to him who holds on to the self, for all these concern the non-self which is unreal.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Dhananjay Sir

I Have alot of problems and i know only you can solve them.
In case you have answered any of my question in the past answer,i request you to specify the date of that answer,as before asking all these problems,i knew it is my responsibility to go through the past answers first,but when i began i saw there were more than thousand questions answered,congrats for this achievement,coming back,i started reading the oldest first,i went through 25-30,but after that i knew i will not be able to go through all of it,so i decided to trouble you,i know its selfish but i really want to get rid of these problems.

EARLY LIFE : when i was 12 yr old,most of my classmates were 13-14 yr old,they masturbated even in classroom,i can't explain the hideous environment i had in my school,they suggested me to masturbate,they told that its full of pleasure and excitement,so one day when i was alone at my house,i think i was of 12 yrs and 10 months and i put some adult channel on TV and masturbated..i had ejaculation..i lost my VEERYA....since then i started masturbating everyday..even three times at a strech many times.....due to which i lost all my mental and physical powers..my memory was more weak than a 90 yr old man..i could not remember nothing...nothing at all..my parents always yelled at me for this "forgetting" habit of mine...even in academics i did not understand anything teachers taught....nothing..not only this...i also became a extremely socially awkward person..willing to go nowhere in public...these all problems still exists in me..i m 18 now.

PROGRESS IN CELIBACY : On 1st july 2014 i started my spiritual study,On 22nd July i took a vow of celibacy i.e i left masturbation...till 22 August i was not a pure brahmachari..as i still tried to satisfy my passion by looking at girls...but with the help of grace of Almighty and your teachings and answers..From 22nd August..i dont even bother to SEE a girl with lustful eye...but i love and respect them as they are manifestation of the divine mother.
My progress:
1. complete brahmacharya in thought and deed,very soon in word too.
2.sleeping on marble..just a bedsheet between me and marble surface..and using a pillow
3.waking up at 3:00 AM
4.bathing with cold water
5.avoided junk food,fruits in breakfast, chapati,rice,vegetable and daal in lunch and dinner.

PROBLEMS:

A.LOST SEMEN:Sometimes i feel like i have lost all my semen...and there is no way to attain self now..i become dIscouraged to carry on sadhana.

B.WAKING UP AT 3:00 A.M : i wake up,i bath, i practice nadi shodana...but i feel lazy and yawn when i close my eyes.According to your sequence..bandha should precede nadi shodana..but i dnt knw how to practice bandha..please refer me some links or answer and i m also confused at nadi shodana..swami vivekananda says to inhale through left/right nose fr 4 sec..retain inside fr 16 sec..and exhale in 8 sec..but on internet i see no retaining..please suggest me the right way.

C.MEDITATION: after nadi shodana...i meditate on Almighty...i imagine a lotus above my head..and imagine intangible light inside the lotus as Almighty..as suggested my swami vivekananda...but i never able to form a constant image of that light..it keeps moving..should i meditate on something tangible or on some internal part of body?

D.STUDIES: i am unable to concentrate on my studies..i feel sleepy and if not sleepy than boring to study and i rather start waiting for time to be 7:30 A.M as i have scheduled to sleep frm 7:30 to 10..because i feel extremely sleepy at this time.I have some important exams in last week of october ..its close..i have not prepared anything till now.

E.SADHANA WITH STUDIES : Sometimes i am unable to decide whether to carry on sadhana or postpone it till october..becoz i feel like i should rather study...what should i do?

F.LONELINESS: After waking up at 11 A.M...i start feeling lonely...i live away from parents in another city...alone in a room..i could go to a P.G...but opted for room for sadhana..i also had a girlfriend earlier...it was a long distance relationship...i never had sex with her or anyone..but i didn't loved her...i actually used her to satisfy my fire of lust..nothing else..but she genuinely loved me and trusted me blindly...undoubtedly i broke her heart..i broke up 2 months ago as it was against my spiritual interest..she understood it..and went away.
But now i feel lonely..i feel like i need some girl to talk with.

G.FRIEND GROUP: This is my major problem...as i m on this path now..i want everyone to be in this path...when i listen someone talking about sex & money..i feel like.."how stupid they are?..running after momentary satisfaction"...and i just keep giving lectures on spirituality and celibacy to my friends..and they make fun of me...even when i knw that i will be made fun...i still go ahead and keep teaching them...as i want all of them to lead a spiritual life.what should i do..as they talk of sex ..should i leave their company to a good extent...even after knowing that all are manifestation of God.

H.HEADACHE : my head is prone to take tension..a little computer operation,going out in some crowded place,travelling,studying long,when someone scolds e.t.c.....strikes my head..and it starts aching..i showed up in a eye hospital...they measured my eye muscle index...it was 4...normal is 35...so for one week they called me for some exercise and taught me some pen exercise to do for 3 months..after one week of machine exercise i had index of 34..i became happy and never bothered for pen exercise..after a month i was back to 4...undoubtedly this was due to tension and masturbation..what should i do?...do that pen exercise or brahmacharya is enough to heal?

I.NIGHTFALL:since my vow..i had a frequency of twice in week of nightfall...now its once in 10 days...why is it happening when i don't even bring a thought & sleep on hard surface & take cold bath..i remember dreams where i see the images of porn i saw earlier...and i feel like i have power to accept or reject..whenever i wakeup..i regret that why i accepted this in dream...i feel like it was my choice to go on or leave in dream...and i willingly did this...last night same happened...but i rejected..but in morning i saw a drop of liquid on my underwear..although it was very less.

J.SLEEP AND THOUGHTS : last but not the least..this is the most dangerous problem in me....earlier i used to sleep almost 11 hours...this is ridiculous i know..from 1:00 am to 12:00 p.m...now reducing this time is hard for me...when i go to sleep at night at 10:30...i don't fall asleep till 11:30...just thoughts keep coming and coming in my mind...not evil thoughts...good thoughts..i don't know why i have this desire in me to teach all people spirituality and celibacy and see everyone adopting the same..i know a yogi should be desire-less,but i have this desire...i have no material desire..nor i want fame...i just want everyone to adopt this.anyhow i manage to wake up at 3:00 am...i had slips thrice in last ten days in waking up...again wen i sleep at 7:30..i decide to wake up at 9:30..set the alarm...alarm rings..see the alarm..willfully cancel it ..and sleep again and wake up at 11.should i change my sleep timings..if possible suggest me a schedule.

So this is the end,i know it is foolish and childish of me to put up such questions and almost dictating my entire life to you....BUT..this is my problem...i just annoy people by asking them so many questions..i know u are also annoyed...any human can get annoyed by me...so its up to you..u can opt not to answer.
i will go through all past answers after november and get the answer myself without bothering you,but if you could give it now,i could apply it now.

I will pray to God for no re-birth of you,absorption of you in God even though i know that will happen without my prayer also due to your invaluable service to aspirants.

THANKS

Answer
1. It is natural that the beginner often feels sleepy when he sits for practice. 'Tamas' (inertia) takes many years of Sadhana to be brought under control. One has to persevere with grit and determination to overcome the same. Further to such effort, HIS grace shines.

2. For the benefit of aspirants, the required links are given below:

METHOD OF YOGIC PRACTICES:
http://en.allexperts.com/q/Celibacy-Abstinence-3564/2011/5/Pranayama-Yoga-Brahma

BANDHA-S: http://en.allexperts.com/q/Celibacy-Abstinence-3564/2011/12/thribandha-khechari-

3. Perform meditation on the formless Supreme, as described in past answers.

4. Wake up at 4.00 A.M, perform Sadhana till 6.00 and then sit for studies.

5. Do your Sadhana and be quiet. It is not for you to advice others or proclaim regarding personal practice.

6. Performing the suggested Asana-s, with the other practices will restore normalcy of the eyes.

7. Nightfall gradually tapers over a period of time. Past karma dating back to many existences is not annulled in a few months or years. Do the Sadhana and be patient.

8. Sleep before 9.30 and wake up at 4.00. Do not sleep later in the day.

Question
QUESTION: Namaskar Dhananjay.

1) Free service is being enjoyed from you. There are many other sources of free information and education that are being utilised on the web. The individuals and organisations providing these services have different personalities and dispositions. Please explain the karmic implications of the above mentioned on the individual.

2) Are gifts and money given in return for authentic vedic rituals legitimate sources of income?

3) Is it okay to accept gifts/money (where no work has been provided in return), just to avoid insulting the donor and subsequently giving the FULL amount or object out in charity? Does that still cause a karmic connection between the INITIAL donor and INITIAL recipient that is not of the nature desired by the INITIAL recipient?

Thanks.

ANSWER: 1. He who performs 'Nishkamakarma' (actions carried out without doership, as the Lord's will, not expecting anything in return) has no karmic implications. Karmic implications concern those, who commence an action, with some expectation or return in mind.

2. Yes, as long as one is content with that which comes by itself.

3. One should not take that which does not belong to him, or is not a justified receivable.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: 1) So what should one do when he/she receives a gift of money where acceptance does not enable it's transfer to the recipient for eg. by Airtell money or direct deposit?

2) So one using the Internet with a sense of doership is bound?

3) Is inheritance a legitimate receivable?

Answer
1. By accepting cash or kind or credit which one does not deserve, or has not been earned, one becomes indebted to the donor, which will later have to be repaid. Hence the Yogi practices 'Asteya' (not taking/receiving anything which he is not due for or does not have a right over), even though the one donating might not mind it.

2. One can accept that which comes on its own, from lawful inheritance (given by parents or other ascendants etc.) One should however not demand the same or be after it.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
DO you think self realization is attainable by people who have no particular religion in today's world? Is there self realized beings in Africa or native american with no official religions, at least not recognised as the big religions?

Answer
1. Religion is one step of the Ego in the journey to the self and not mandatory.

2. Yes, there are Enlightened beings who did not belong to any religion earlier.

After Enlightenment, there is nothing called a religion for realized beings as the one who assumed belonging no longer exists. Such a being does not have a gender, caste, creed, religion or other classifications. Pure consciousness alone functions from the body, till the time to vacate it arrives. Then it is absorbed into the universal cosmos, without trace.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Sir,
It is a real pleasure to have the opportunity to ask a fellow such as yourself questions about something that I have so much passion for.

I am a 31 year old male.
My brahmacharya started around 75 days ago and since starting I have had 4 nocturnal emissions including one last night.. Taming my mind has been getting much easier as time goes on, and I have had little to none sexual thoughts indulged upon for anything longer that a split second, If one enters my mind I release it right away now.
I use to have many bad habits but I felt a strong desire to stop and to purify my body, so starting in 2012 I have given up all consumption of alcohol, meat, marijuana, and masturbation. I no longer watch any television, I only drink water and boiled-spiced milk, and I rarely leave the farm that I live on. Eating large quantities of food including lots of junk foods have always been a big part of my life, but I have also recently given that up as well. I now eat a very sattvic diet with 3 meals a day.
I feel lots of benefits to my new lifestyle, and I am able to tolerate the ignorance displayed by those regularly around me much better now. My calm and understanding has been growing.
I have read much of your past answers and they have helped my success greatly.

My first question is on nocturnal emissions. In the beginning of my fight with masturbation the wet dreams seemed different if I remember correctly. I did not pay too much attention to the substance that was released so my memory on this is not extremely clear, but due to current releases in sleep it seems that the substance has changed. It seems that the substance had become much less sticky, less thick, and less of a white color. It is more watery now, much more thin, and more transparent but still has a whitish color to it. My dreams are not of sexual nature when these occur anymore, the last one was me swimming down a fast river, and the one before that was me riding on a fast motorcycle.

1. Can you tell me what is occurring inside of my body for the fluid to be changing like this, and has this become a fluid other than semen now?, like prostatic fluid as mentioned in another persons question.

2.How much does this set me back? I do not feel the huge energy losses like I used to when I masturbated of had a sexual dream. I just get a depressed feeling, and feelings of loss of motivation to practice.

3. I ONLY get these nocturnal emissions while sleeping on my stomach, and have not had one while sleeping on my side of back yet. Most of the times I am aware enough if I move myself onto my stomach while sleeping and correct my position, but other times I don't realize this and I wake to a depressing mess. What do you recommend to make sure I do not turn to my stomach?

4. Last night I also put nutmeg (jaTI phala, mada zauNDa) spice in my milk for deeper sleep, could this have helped cause the emission?

5. Mula Bandha - I perform this after my asana practice, and before my NADI SHODHANAM. Is it correct for me to exhale completely, perform Mula Bandha and hold, perform Uddiyana bandha and hold, and perform Jalandhara bandha and hold all three together for as long as possible? I usually do this and give myself 10-30 seconds breaks in between each for recovery. Am I performing this correctly?

6.In meditation, must I touch the tip of my tongue to the back of the roof of my mouth as far back as it can rest? Or is anywhere on the roof ok? Recently, It feels as though food gets stuck in the upper portion of my throat and I was wondering if the cause is my new tongue positioning in meditation. Could this position I am now using be causing this by building the upper throat muscles that I never had before?

7. I have been taking vitamin supplements for many years (over 10), but was also masturbating. Now that I am retaining my semen and practicing brahmacharya, can I stop taking most nutrient supplements?
I suppose that my body no longer has the demand for nutrients like it used to because I am now retaining my essence and eating healthier, although I am still having occasional nocturnal emissions.

8.I was also wondering if the beginning stages of brahmacharya is a good or bad time to be taking aphrodisiac herbs like ginseng, Ashwagandha, amalaki, or shatavari?

Thank you so much for taking the time to help us all, it is of the upmost value and highly appreciated sir.

Answer
1. As one conserves & transmutes, more of it is absorbed & less of the vital fluid is expelled in nocturnal emissions. The little that remains is then thrown out with prostatic fluid during an involuntary sleep emission.

2. While a nocturnal emission is less debilitating that a voluntary release, there is still a certain loss of Prana. With honest and regular practice of the said Yogic methods with surrender to God, wet dreams gradually taper and eventually stop when one becomes an Urdhvareta.

3. It is natural for the body to periodically change its position in sleep. The cause of a wet dream is past Samskara-s and not the body position.

4. No.

5. All three cannot be performed at the same time, as Mula Bandha is held in 'Antar-Kumbhaka' (breath inside), after Puraka; Uddiyana Bandha is held in 'Bahya-Kumbhaka' (Breath outside), after Rechaka and Jalandhara Bandha is again achieved by snapping the head down on reaching 'Antar-Kumbhaka' (breath inside), after Puraka, with the throat locked. However, the three can be performed successively in continuation, which is then 'Tribandha'

6. One should not do any such things in meditation. One should meditate on the formless self, as explained in past answers, with the body completely relaxed. Controlling or flexing the tongue back is not meditation. If there is any physical or mental activity, then it is not meditation. Merging the mind into the self, so that only the self remains is meditation.

7. No supplements are required when one practices proper Brahmacharya with 'Mitahara' (a balanced and nutritious diet)

8. Why will a Brahmachari require Aphrodisiacs? Those are for Bhogis and not Yogis, who sustain on the power of the Atman. None of those are required.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

We feel better progressing along the path of Brahmacharya.

Suppose say, we managed our life up to until 60+ of age as healthy as possible, and also managed to have a good profession. If we end up having no close relations to look after us, how are we supposed to handle last days of our life?

Please let us know your thoughts about how to handle our life towards the end when we are single.

regards,
RK

Answer
1. Who arranged for your entry into the Earthly plane? Who placed you in the womb of your mother? Who took care of you there, when you had no awareness of who you were and knew nothing? Who takes care of the millions of chemical and biological processes which occur through the waking, sleeping and dreaming states within your body? Are you performing all these?

Man eats, works, senses and rests thinking he is the doer. Even while performing these activities, he has no control over what is happening within his system, just as he has no control over what happens outside. A remote power is running the body, automatically, in the exact way required, by coordinating all the vital organs and the brain. The same power is also taking care of the external world, in the way necessary.

2. The higher power which arranged for your entry into this plane & which is currently taking care of your sustenance will take care of your well being in the future as well. There is no change. HE who has brought you here and is sustaining you here will also take you away from here at the right time and again place you in a new existence, to ensure evolution.

Worry about the future is the resort of the Ego, which is assuming it is doing all things and taking responsibility, while the reality is that nothing is under it's control.

When the Ego is displaced through surrender to the higher power, this query will no longer exist and things continue to be taken care of, as they have always been, by HIS grace.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi dhananjay,

I want to ask if one progress in brahmacharya, will one suddenly experience a sudden outbreak of lust ?Is it cause by previous suppression that a sudden outbreak of lust come in double the force?

By the grace of the lord I have not make any physical break and I manage to suppress this lust by my will and with increases physical exercise. However, I know I am not safe, as lust still exist on my mental plane.

I know if Brahmacharya at mental level is not achieve, it is not perfected. Other than practising more meditation is other methods available ?

I also discover that physical erection can be control by emptying our lung and diaphragm.By removing/due reading breath one can cease or even remove sexual thoughts.

I wish to seek or opinion on my methods .

Thank you
AL
Om Nano Narayanaya

Answer
1. The seeds of past Samskara-s (impressions) dating back to many existences, cause the appearance of the particular emotion they represent, when they surface (be it lust or other traits).

2. Meditation (merging the mind into the absolute) is the final and most superlative methods, beyond which there is nothing. All other Yogic practices are the means to achieve this state and not anything else.

3. Breathing techniques calm the mind to a certain extent. The calmed mind is then to be aplllied on meditation, which as stated above is the superior most.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi dhananjay,

After practising Brahmacharya for quite sometimes, I discover I turn into a more generous person. Now my attachment to my wealth decreases and I am more ready and willing to part/give away.

Is generosity an attribute that develop along with Brahmacharya ?

Answer
As one progresses in Sadhana, the tendency of 'me' 'mine' gradually reduces and one begins to see the larger picture, as life being a drama. This makes one more generous and less serious about one's own existence.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,
My humble obeisance,

Before i start asking questions sir, i would like to give a glimpse of my life and the past happenings.

I am a boy 22 yrs old. About a year ago i was not spiritual and led a life of masturbation,smoking and marijuana. However some bad occurrences in my life led me to become a loner and slowly i started yoga.
While i was still in that bad phase,I found out that people around me can hear thoughts,not sure about other persons thought but especially mine,. Maybe they have reached a certain level of realisation, may be not. I would notice people laughing at me when i passed around them as my thoughts were audible to them..even some children. While others would look at me with disgust, and yet some others who would comment at my thought ,though in no sense it was helpful, rather it felt like intrusion of privacy and i got really perturbed. Later I entered into relationship but later broke up on account of infidelity on the partner's part. After some months I began the life of Yoga and have been following it ever since without any physical break though mental breaks do occur,albeit involuntarily on account of hearing people talk about sex in debasing manner and subsequently my past tendencies flaring up. Now I begin my questions hope you be so merciful to answer them.

1. I experienced bliss after following roughly 1 month of perfect brahmacharya(in thought,word and deed). {As per the knowledge obtained through reading past answer,this is the case with one layer of sanskaras having been burnt way}. Then after a few days this bliss subsided and I started feeling normal again. However i noticed that my mind was prone to getting influenced by impulses again. So my question to you is that :Will my mind be always prone to influences when one layer of sanskars dissolve and another rise? Especially prone to a greater degree..in other words :will each succesive layer of sanskaras constitute stronger vasanas as compared to the previous one?

2.With regard to people with telepathy, or my case with uncontrolled telepathy and people hearing thoughts, I have seen that :1 Whenever I do mental japa while walking to the point of actually beggining to smile due to japa's influence...ladies stare in my direction some with seriousness, some with amusement, some with a look as if watching an animal speak(that is to say looking as if me doing japa(mental) is something new and bewildering). that makes me feel self conscious, apprehensive and my head gets lowered as if i had committed some crime. Other times , i would start expressing my anger through my looks, as to why do you care if I am remembering my lord. So my question is what to do in such circumstance..obviously i want to continue with my japa, but their look makes me feel as if something is wrong with me.What is the correct reaction?

3 Again two instances related to this thought reading or being read problem(After entering brahmacharya). Once i was going to fetch some food ...looking down on the ground and silently chanting Lord's name, when all of a sudden I automatically looked up and noticed two girls staring at me, i looked up feigned anger,the two girls looked away and i resumed my walking while looking down,japa however,having been disturbed because of becoming self conscious. Later when i returned home i recalled that incident ,I remembered that their bodies were shining brightly as in golden. My question here is:were they spiritually advanced beings sent there to help me, or devas or Krishnas representation as I was chanting his divine name? Sir with all due respect, I know that these things are mere distractions even if they are devas ,and dont worry I wont fall into their temptations as i remember Patanjali saying that one should deny invitation from the celestials if offered. I just wanted to have your opininion about the nature of these persons.

Secondly, the day my first session of brahmacharic bliss ended, and new sanskaras were surfacing, I had a very high fever and went to college thinking it to be my duty to do so, ignoring pain and pleasure, however on reaching the college another mind reader friend of mine, said it is not wrong to have sexual feelings about one's own mother in this age, it happens to everyone. Ofcourse those days i was trying hard to attain brahmacharya by trying to focus only on the job at hand like study, however sometimes i would accidently glance at or would notice the bare feet or calf muscles of family members and a stirring would start which would be brought back in control in no time with vairagya and viveka.And 4 years earlier i had stumbled upon a stash of incest porn on internet and used to watch it a lot. However this had been taken care of much before the advent of my yoga practice. My only question here is what was the purpose of that person to mind probe me and comment on some aspects which had been taken care of and cause mental disturbances and waves again?? of course i cant ask him,for he will straight away deny any possibility of mind reading and label me insane.

4. Many of these mind readers talk openly about sex going so far as to encouraging it and saying one who refuses sex cant get anything in life. Ofcourse to me it has no effect ,and have learnt to distance myself from these people somewhat..even though these people are helpful to all, but i m thinking about those people to whom these teachings are preached might be lost to spiritual life. It is as if I am living in the region of Uttar Kuru ,which as per mythology is the place where free love(i.e sex) is sanctioned by the ancient rishis.
  What to make about these people, not in a judging way ,but as to being partially realised(here mind reading on me and communicating mentally with others) and teaching others about sex, benefits of masturbation and encouraging to look at women's curves etc.??
5. Since i am practising yama and niyama .Sometimes little ants get trampled beneath my feet and i feel sad, both out of compassion and at the loss of my determination to perfect ahimsa. Though the main problem starts when near college entrance ,there are many ant hills, and i have to look down to avoid trampling sometimes stoop my back even,when suddenly i feel conscious and notice people staring at me.. then my ego wants to look up pretending i do not care about the ants,whereas i want to keep looking down hoping people wont care.This battle b/w me and ego tears me up. Also when mom asks me to kill a mosquito which has wandered inside the mosquito net , i pick it up and throw it outside the mosquito net, without harming him, receiving taunting in return. Pray tell me what to do in such situations both near the college, while on road, and at home inside the net.

6. I read in your recent post that this practice is to be kept a secret,and telling someone else leads to a fall. In my case the person who I was in relationship with called me and desperately asked me to go back to her, after refusing her some times,she asked me for a valid reason as to why I would not relent. So i told her that I have taken a lifelong vow of celibacy for attaining God. Later she rang back at my phone and tried to dissuade me from practice saying god is just to make one feel optimistic and what not . But I stayed firmed to my decision and didnt budge. She then asked me that who do you see god in...referring to the fact that once I had attributed her to having been sent by god to make me realise about the transient nature of relationships.(Yes...via mind reading ,but she interpreted it incorrectly) My question here is sir, Will I fall from grace on account of having divulged about my vow, even though it was done keeping in mind the yama of truth i was following and also in hopes of that she wont trouble me on hearing this from me?? ..as celibacy and religion and spirituality according to her are archaic and she wouldnt ,thus,would like to associate with me in the future. True though after the last mentioned talk with her ,she hasnt tried to dissuade me or asked me to come back.(This was during the stage the second layer of sanskars has emerged..which I beieve I still am in.)

And my last question ,O gurudev, would be if there is a difference between Dhiryaretas and Urdhvaretas in nature or is it simply the difference according to previous acts.In one semen has never been spilled(Urdhvareta) whereas the other person had been a prey to lustful thoughts. Though I know that both will reach the same final stage i.e. self realisation at perfection of sadhana.

My humble gratitude to you for taking out the time from your life to aid Spiritual Aspirants seeking self realisation,such as me.

Note: I hope you do not consider me to be wasting time here on account various references to telepathy, which does not occur in the day to day lives of most people.

Saadar Pranam!

Answer

1. Each successive layer of Samskara-s are subtler, as compared to the previous layer. They move from gross to subtle. The intensity depends on their strength and may vary. The Yogi should turn a blind eye to all these things and persist in unbroken Sadhana.

2. Prayer should be internal and not external. It is enough if one mentally holds on to the Lord, surrendering all actions to him alone, with a sense of devotion.

3. Let go of such illusory mental imagination and focus on your work. Such occurances have no substance, being a depiction of one's inner desires.

4. No one is mind reading. It is one's own mind which is monkeying around, snowballing imagination.

5. It is not practical or feasible to walk looking at the ground, avoiding each and every creature. What is necessary is to maintain a general attitude of harmlessness towards all beings and creatures, wishing them well. Do this much and be at peace.

6. Make it a general rule in future, not to mention or divulge details to others, concerning Sadhana.

7. Both are stages in the journey of the Jiva. A Jiva which attains to the stage of Urdhvaretas very early may have gone through the stage of Dhiryaretas in previous existences through hard Sadhana. None of these things are to be worried about. One's Dharma is to strive to the best extent, to merge the mind into the self, now, in this existence. Technical titles or states are not to be worried out.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Dhananjay Sir

Its been two months of my brahmacharya practice, I live alone in a room, and nowadays I feel very lonely, I just keep sitting or sleeping or searching on internet.
Earlier when I used to feel lonely(it was rare though because I was in a P.G), I saw movies and porn, but now I feel its not worth watching.

Q.What constructive activity I should do when I feel lonely, I do not like studying these financial subjects, nor I m able to meditate, but I am interested in reading the Vedas and The Bhagvad Gita, I would have gone for it but people say its difficult to understand without teacher.
Which book should I go for as a beginner?

Thanks

Answer
1. Biography of Milarepa, the realized saint of Tibet:http://www.cosmicharmony.com/Av/Milarepa/Milarepa.htm

2. Yoga Sutra-s of Pathanjali http://www.yogastudies.org/wp-content/uploads/Science_of_Yoga-Taimni.pdf

3. Upanishads http://www.hinduwebsite.com/upalist.asp

Read these materials in the above mentioned order. Do not jump and do not be in a hurry. Read matter is to be thoroughly absorbed and implemented in real life.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Dhananjay,

I have a few questions regarding the health of the skin.I have been practicing brahmacharya for a few months now with many benefits.Skin health may seem off the topic but it keeps on coming up for me.

My main concern is dry skin on the face.In the west, skin care is huge business and i have accepted the idea that the skin needs to be moisturized.But it never feels supple and healthy and rather dry and tight.I realize there are many factors that contribute- diet,climate,water intake etc.The face is not something i want to concern myself with too much, i already feel this has led me to unnecessary vanity and identification with the body.

Please could you tell me, 1. What is the most healthy and natural way to look after the skin.I realize that being starved of prana my also contribute to lifeless skin.
2.How much do the omega 3's contribute, and water?Which nuts and seeds do you recommend that dont lead to a feeling of heaviness in the body.
3.Would a yogi use anything on the face.
4.Any other recommendations.

Thankyou Sir.

Answer
1. The Yogi, who transmutes through unbroken Brahmacharya does not require moisturizer or soap, under general weather conditions. The body remains hydrated, naturally, through Brahmacharya. Such independence gets set after a few years of practice.

Commercially available applications are chemical in nature and toxify the system. They cause skin damage in the course of time. It is not advisable.

2. In very cold climates where the beginner may feel the need to hydrate skin, one can apply the cream of milk or a natural oil of olive or coconut in the morning and wash it away while showering. This removes excess oil and leaves a thin film, sufficient to prevent dryness.

A balanced and nutritious diet, as applicable to the concerned geography, containing all nutrients suffices.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Just for information there is a video in youtube,http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=SnLj8DMqaC8 which show a tibetan monk in Nepal who is doing a real levitation. This is incredible, no trick. Its worth watching, very encouraging for spiritual searchers.

Answer
Siddhi-s should neither be the aim, nor can be the means to spirituality. Siddhi-s concern the non-self and not the Atman (self). They are therefore another event in the life-dream of the Ego and not the truth. Development of Siddhi-s does not in any way contribute to spiritual evolution.

The wise Yogi remains indifferent to Siddhi-s, which are nothing more than distractions and works at merging the mind into the self; the state beyond sights, sounds & words.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Sir,

I read the story of Milarepa and I wanted to ask you a few questions about Milarepa and our current spiritual path.

Milarepa cleanses his karma and is given meditation instruction from his master, Marpa. This results in success in meditation and Milarepa achieving a certain level of knowledge.

Does this compare to us nullifying our karma to a sufficient degree so we can embark on the path of brahmacharaya and succeed in meditation?
....

Later in the story, Milarepa enters into Samadhi after seeing the bones of his mother. Is this saivikalpa samadhi or the the results that usually appear to a brahmachari after 2 years?
.....

And finally Milarepa opens the scroll given by his master and achieves Nirvana samadhi. I assume this is the state where Milarepa achieves full realization?

Answer
1. There are different means to cleanse karma. Each Jiva is made to take a suitable path by the higher power, who is the real Guru. Yoga, based on Brahmacharya is one such path. The path which applies to one need not apply to the other who has a different magnitude and nature of karma. All true paths lead to merging the mind into the Atman (self), which itself is meditation.

2. The samadhi referred to at that point is Savikalpa Samadhi. Time cannot be a yardstick, as progress varies, based on various other factors. A Jiva might be born very close to Enligntenment (due to past efforts), while another may require hundreds of births.

3. That is entrance into 'Nirvikalpa Samadhi', in which one is not aware of the mind, sounds, sight, smell or other sense perception while meditating. It is however still far from self-realization, for the Yogi, though experiencing the 'Brahmakara Vritti' (mind having taken form of the absolute), has not yet roasted all the seeds of past Samakara-s and Vasana-s, which will establish him in 'Sunyata' (void) forever. Therefore, he is still prone to the action of the three Guna-s (traits) after he comes down from Samadhi, back into the Earthly plane.

On long practice of Nirvikalpam, one reaches the Dharma-Megha state, which is where these seeds are deactivated for ever. It is only here that one crosses 'Turiya' and goes into the 'Turiyateeta' (beyond Turiya state) forever, which is termed by the names Nirvana & 'Kaivalya' (self-realization). He is then a complete 'Brahmaswarupi' (complete manifestation of the absolute), always.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
DOes the Avatar and the ancient greek concept of demi-gods living in earth means someone is self-realized and born by a celestial birth (no sexual intercourse)? There is no virgin birth in the scientific era, modern holy people are normal human beings, not aliens, born as everyone else.

Answer
1. An Avatar is the Absolute, manifest in flesh in blood. It is therefore always realized (even from birth), being the Supreme.

2. Demi-Gods are Jiva-s at a higher plane than the normal man. They are not self-realized and therefore are not free from suffering, birth and death.

The nature of birth is not a deciding factor.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Sir,

Today I would like to know more about blood from you. I know this may not relate to Brahmacharya or the topic you like to share.

I am asking because the mystery of blood puzzle me.

I would like to know if practice of Brahmacharya change the quality of blood in the human system ?

If there is such changes, does it enhance one health?

Also ojas is the final form of blood. What happen if one lose too much bloods ?

For normal human , Blood signify Life.Can blood tell one personality/Life ?

Answer
Knowing Brahmacharya gives the best results as regards the body, mind and eventually overcoming identification with these, which one is not, focus on honest practice. The aim of the Yogi should be to overcome identity with the non-self and become the self and not get caught in fancies about what happens to the blood or bones or some other thing concerning the impermanent body, unreal covering called the body.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Dhananjay Sir

How are you Sir
With the help of your grace, its been two months of my brahmacharya practice.
Please help me on my doubts.

1.I am really having problem in meditation, after pranayama,I do meditation in Sidhasana posture,

A.I am confused regarding what to meditate on, usually I follow swami vivekananda teaching,which is "imagine a lotus above your head, in the centre of lotus is the Almighty, the Intangible surrounded by effulgent light" but I am unable to do it, I am confused regarding what to see, how to see something intangible, so rather I keep concentrating on light and the light keeps moving,I am unable to concentrate on light also, I have seen your answers too, you suggest to meditate on formless supreme but how to meditate on something which is formless, this is exactly my question, how can we imagine which have no form, light also has form, so we should not meditate on it,should I concentrate on the point between my eyebrows, or imagine some deity, I feel I can do it, so my question is, on what should I meditate?

B.After 10-15 minutes of meditation I try to feel my right leg, which is stuck in the middle of the left leg in Sidhasana posture, I try to feel that circulation has stopped there, and I break my meditation unwillingly, padmasana is much more difficult for more me, as soon as I sit in this posture, again I feel my right leg, trying to get out of that position, as circulation stops there.

2.Till today I thought we can tell people about our vow, but reading past answer I knew that we should keep it as a secret.
Till now I have said to only my ex-ggirlfriend about it but along with this after knowing the adverse effects of masturbation, I am nowadays recommending every friend to stop it and telling them that I have stopped and u also must stop, should I stop this or keep telling them?

3.I read one answer, you suggested to perform sadhna facing north or east, so my question is what is the significance of direction in sadhna, is it astrology, do you believe in astrology?

4.Sir, have you had Samadhi during meditation?

THANKS

Answer
1. What to meditate on and how to meditate is available in past answers, in detail.

2. Maintaining the pose is difficult initially. The same becomes easy after a few years of honest Sadhana.

3. Do your Sadhana and be quiet.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Dhananjay Sir

I have a very weak concentration power due to which I face problems in meditation, Japa can improve concentration.

1.So at what time should I do japa, in morning and evening or both, or any other time and where should I put It in the sequence which is bandha followed by pranayama and meditation?

2.Which mantra should I Japa?

3.How long should I do Japa?

Answer
It is evident that the past answers have not been gone through. The when and how of Sadhana is available in detail. Read the same, assimilate the essence and apply in practice.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

i was reading paramahansa yoganandas, autobiography, in that i have seen kriya yoga as his main yogic technique.

Is kriya yoga same as pranayama, i would be grateful if you can throw us some light on this

thanks

Answer
1. Kriya Yoga is a method to realize the self, just as other forms of Yoga.

2. Pranayama is an 'Anga' (component limb) of many forms of Yoga such as Kriya Yoga, Raja Yoga etc. Pranayama, therefore, by itself is not Kriya Yoga.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

1) Are the accidents (physical, mental or emotional level) or mistakes that happens (or one commits) in one's life also the play of God purposefully inflicted upon the individual?

2) Do you think the fate/destiny will be changed by our sheer will power and dedicated efforts, or is it eventually we are just following the fate?

In short, is it the case that for an individual his fate is already destined and one moves according to it no matter what, and whatever he does is pre-planned whether it is an accident/mistake, or a dedicated will power and hardwork.

regards,
RK

Answer
1. Experiences (pleasant or unpleasant), are the products of one's past karma. Through suffering, one realizes his errors and slowly disinclines from repeating them. Suffering is the means to 'Gnyana' (knowledge of the truth).

2. To whom does fate concern? It concerns the Ego & body, which one is not. Hence control over fate is an illusion concerning the Ego and not reality. Things happen as they have to, as destined by the higher power.

3. One is only an actor controlled by the director (Almighty) in this play, scripted by HIM. Hence things happen as per HIS will and HIS will only, try how hard one may to do otherwise.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I am in support of celibacy due to religious perspective but here on this site many other groups some experts are supporting masturbation causing damages due to fear and guilt after masturbation so please sir guide me.

Answer
Guidance comes from within and not outside. Just as the effects of many years of masturbation are known from experience, the effects of many years of Brahmacharya will also be known through experience, further to such practice. One can then decide for himself, which gives what, based on direct experience. The Atman (self) within is the real Guru.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

Namaste. I live in South America and was one of the victims of media, friends and "sexual education" encouraging women to masturbate and explore their sexuality. Despite I have found God early in life and the Lord became so important to me, I only came across an enlightened Guru who taught me the importance of celibacy, continence and transmutation of sexual drive as a way of life later in life. Since then I learnt some practices to sublimate sexual drive and avoid masturbating, which I found out to be demeaning and really low practice that could even drive me crazy and I am not exagerating, because after months of sublimating I fell and consequences for mind and sould were terrible afterwards.

So I am trying to master over myself and not fall never again in my life. It is not easy as I have to pass over long periods of purity followed by a few sad falls. I learnt to practice Kundalini Yoga and some pranayamas but still I get in trouble when menstruation comes out and mine lasts too long, even 6 or 7 days when I can not sublimate and hormones drive me and badly arouse me with no chance of sublimating. I dont have a couple and wont have sexual relationships until a good man who wants to practice Brahmacharya comes to my life. Or maybe I wont have sexual relationships again and thats fine to me.

Also it is so sad that most advice related to sublimation or Brahmacharya is directed towards men as if women were not suited to this task. Please, give me some advice on how to help myself when I am menstruating and if possible, recommend me books and reading on this sensitive matter, on how to help women get Brahmacharya and purity, also when a women is menstruating.

Thank you so much and please forgive my English

Beatriz

Answer
1. The process of Sublimation as regards women, has been addressed in detail, in past answers.

2. Go through the Yogic life and Sadhana suggested in past answers and apply the advise cent percent. Sublimation will activate in the course of time. Proper and unbroken practice of Brahmacharya, as suggested, with surrender to God will resolve excessive menstruation without doubt.

3. Books to be read have also been mentioned in past answers.

Go through each and every answer very slowly & carefully and absorb the essence. Then apply the said methods in practice. The phenomenon of transmutation, the lifestyle to be adopted, and the Sadhana to be applied are the same, both for men and women.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
namaste sir
i want to became brahmachari but i cant came from masturbation as it releases some stress suddenly i have now fall after 15 days tap now i am get hopeless can you suggest me what to do after getting masturbation how to regret it?

Answer
Gradually increase the periods of Brahmacharya to 20 days, then 25 days, then a month and so on. Apply the suggested Sadhana honestly with devotion to God. Once three months of unbroken practice have been achieved, one will not like succumbing to the tendency to spill the vital fluid, and even if he does so will regret. Brahmacharya will gradually gets established in the course of time as regards the one who puts honest efforts.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Sir,

Prevously I have ask you about anger issues. Today I would like to know more about anger in relation to Brahmacharya.

1) What happen if one is in constant anger when irritate by small issues ? How does it affect one growth?

2) How does anger affect one spiritually, mentally and physically ?

3) What is your suggestion to help one cope with anger issues ?

4) How does anger cause a impact on one surrounding ?

5) In my opinion, one who can't control one emotion lack self-control. Desire is even harder to control compare to one emotion.
Can I say that one who hold no control over one desire, also hold little control over one emotion ?

Sir I am asking all these question because someone I know is having anger issues, I would like to know more about anger and see what I can do?

Thank you
AL

Your Sincerly

Answer
1. Anger takes one far away from the Atman (self). He who moves away from the self loses all and finally himself. The same applies as regards to losing oneself in other emotions, that are based on perceptions of the Asat (non-self).

2. Hold on to the self (through proper Sadhana) and be quiet, at peace, looking at the world as a play where oneself and others are actors. There is nothing more benefiting & auspicious.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Sir,

I have read about your previous post and I need more explanation regarding this paragraph.

You say that anger and lust is 2 of the same things, does it also mean that when one is remove the other will be also be removed?

Anger can express as lust and lust can be express in anger ?

"Anger is lust and lust is anger. Each is another form of the other. The presence of one always leads to growth of the other. It is God who is the doer and not us. We are his mediums alone. How can anger or jealousy grow when one reminds himself of this fact at the time of weakness?"

Answer
One has to dissolve the seeds of past karma, from which arise anger, lust and other base emotions. Then, further to dissolution of such past Samskara-s (impressions), the Manas (mind) takes the form of the pure self and eventually dissolves into the Atman (self), as salt dissolves in water. That is the infinite state, where one occupies the entire universe and more. It is one's true state. For this, one must perform honest and unbroken Sadhana.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Guruji, By the grace of the almighty, I have seen an increase in vitality in the spiritual, mental and physical facets of my existence further to maintaining celibacy and continence. However, when ever I put my self in the meditative state my prana surges upwards as expected, but recently the heat being generated is a little too 'intense'. So much so, that it throws me out of my meditative state. I have switched to cold showers but this is proving to be a short term solution. Your advice would be much appreciated.

With Humble Regard,
Sahil

Answer
Twice a week, soak the head overnight with coconut or olive oil and wash the same away in the morning. This will releive the body of excess heat.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I started the practice of celibacy from the 10th of July this year. I was happy with my progress, but I gave in to the demon of lust yesterday (30th september) and masturbated after watching porn. Now I am feeling very low. I want to observe celibacy till I get married and don't ever want to indulge in such sinful activities, but I am shattered by what happened yesterday. Why doesn't GOD destroy lust in me once and for all. I will be starting over again, hope I never indulge in such activities ever again. Do you think the seminal loss yesterday must have reduced my aura? How long before I heal it again?

Answer
1. It is because God wants you to come out of the trap that HE has brought you into this path of the absolute truth.

2. It is one's own past Samskara-s (impressions) & Vasana-s (tendencies), the result of past deeds, which make one break the practice. Hence it is for oneself to strive and negate these through Sadhana.

Take up honest Sadhana with the required methods and persevere as needed. Things will become, as they should

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello SIr, in ancient taoist and zen texts they say that to cultivate spirituality and realization of the self what is needed is brahmacharya (discipline) and emptiness meditation. If one during meditation is able to reach and maintain a empty state of mind they call Tao, the 3 energies will sublimate by themselves and one reach the self that way. Do you agree or this teaching is false? WHat is the main difference with indian yoga?

Answer
When one merges the mind into the Atman (self), it is meditation. There, there is no body, no mind & no awareness of the world and its phenomenon. Pure consciousness alone exists, infinite, complete and of the nature of bliss. Calling it emptiness or something else or not calling it anything at all makes no difference.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
This is in continuation to your answer to a query from some one about handling last days of life, which triggered amny questions and doubts...
First of all, to attain that high state of surrender may be possible for 1 in some millions of people(Is this the state of sanyasa)
Till then doesn't one have his duties, such as not becoming a burden to others, taking care of his children, dependants, etc.
Even these duties seem to be coming out of fear,uncertainity and expectations for a common man, for eg, parents may want to have children so that they will take care of them during old age,etc.
So what should be the duty of a common man, who may not have attained such a perfect state of mind, or falling short of it. or even assuming that he may have a long way ahead to attain such a state.
One suggestion I have is doing ones duties(which is again very hazy and changing with time and situation) along with his sadhana. Would like to hear your opinion and further comments on this.

Answer
1. The Ego is always bound by its duties (as dictated by Prarabdha), even after self-realization (to the created Ego), till residence in the body & mind remains. So the advice applies to all, independent of spiritual attainment.

2. To whom do these responsibilities, fears or anxieties apply? They apply to the 'Ahamkara' (Ego), which one is not. So the way out is to indulge in Sadhana, Vichara (inquiry) & Vairagya (dispassion) along with honesty in one's Dharma (duty), and constantly remain detached from everything non-self, by holding on to the self. As this technique is come to terms with, one does not get affected by the happenings or non-happenings of life, just as an actor does not grieve in reality, further to playing the role of a grieving man in the drama.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
My humble greetings to you sir

I have lately been feeling miserable as i have failed to make any decent headway in the path of Brahmacharya, every time the semen leaves after i foolishly masturbate hell is manifested in every way possible into my life. So now my motivation is nigh non-existent, and i struggle with the most mundane of tasks. (I have been trying seriously now for roughly a year at Brahmacharya, i cant seem to go much longer than a week, which is humiliating and deeply embarrassing for me to admit.)

I have tried to apply the lifestyle and practices you have mentioned in past answers, but i live in a very busy, crowded and noisy place, which means that it is almost impossible to mediate or practice the aforementioned lifestyle changes.

How can i remedy this?

Coming to my main question, what is the point of life/existence?

I am approaching this from a non-religious perspective, sir, you see I was raised as a Christian, but do not really follow it any more.

My path to Spirituality and subsequently Brahmacharya began when i had a realisation, I realised that God was all and i had a deep love for the Father (I personally refer to God as the 'Father') and then had a deep longing to be one with Him, and abandon all the false worldly distractions.

Sadly this has faded over the roughly 1 year since i began or had the experience of desiring to dedicate my life wholly to God.
Now i am wondering what the point of this illusion is and how to get back to the blissful state.

Please, sir, can you offer advice and help to me so that i can get back to the correct path?

Thank you very much, i offer my humble gratitude.

Answer
1. To realize oneself as not being the one with objectives; to realize oneself as not being separate; to be complete and content in the self as the self; to be oneself as oneself, which is the self of all selves... irreversibly & forever is the purpose.

2. The path will be known, in the course of time, further to unfailing efforts.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Dear Dhananjay,

There is a strong link between the sexual tendencies that manifest in an individual with his/her previous births.

1) What about the people we are associated in this birth? Our parents, siblings, relatives, friends, enemies, strangers who helps/troubles and so forth, were they somehow connected to us from previous births but we are not aware of it?

2) Is it the case that we meet someone in our life to fulfill a specific aspect, no matter whether it is positive or negative to our life?

regards,
RK

ANSWER: 1. Yes. Most present relationships are the result of past karmic connections, with those Jiva-s.

2. All events (including contact) are designed to help the Jiva realize an aspect & evolve, in way or the other. The world runs on karma and he who negates all past karma and does not form new is not born again.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Thanks for the reply. I needed clarification with few more points.

1) Are we affected by the karmas of immediate previous birth only, or are we trying to negate the karmas of many number of previous births?

2) Consequently, the Jivas we are associated in this birth are karmic connections cumulated from many previous births?

3) Do you think it is meaningless to worry about someone who was very dear to us leaves us forever (death is one example, even otherwise people leave for misunderstanding, etc), and they came and left us for a reason predestined?

Please let us know your thoughts about this.

Answer
1. One works out the net cumulative of past karma, which can involve karma from previous existences also.

2. They may or may not be.

3. Yes. One should accept that which occurs as the will of the Lord and focus on realizing the self alone. Chewing on past events or relationships is fanciful waste of time and resources, which does not do any good.

The wise focus their energies to liberate themselves from this unreal dream, not wasting their resources on anything else.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Maharaj Prostration to the light dwells on you....
Recently i started practising brhamacharya and progressing on my 20th day...sometimes i feel like i have the brain of swami viekandnda, i feel like i am dissolved while reading book , for the past two years i feel that there is always something inside me trying to say something and its saying me become a monk , i have no desire , nothing ,all i want to know my real nature in this birth, this time am not taking any decision or liking this monk life..thre is something inside me giving me a mental push ,i always want to be a loner , always meditating , reading only spiritual books ,my mind is fully filled in attaining freedom by this birth itself., i avoid friends , whatever i did with lastly drinking ,cinema , waste talks all seems to wear out from my consciouness, i avoid all of them, i told my parents that i cant be with them ,and live in this material world , i want quiet solitude place ..why is it happening so ? is it my previous karmas ? am not at all spirritual three years before...but last one year i am visiting himalyas,nepal many spiritual monastery..my friend who was with me throughout this spiritual journed ordained as monk in ramakrishna math,belur..but i cannot go there, am so much pulled towards the buddhas teaching and wants to be in the order of buddhist monk, and its easy for me to engage myself with buddhas noble paths..i believe that in my past life i died without realizing my nature , in this live its shaking me to practie sadhana and be liberted...please advise

Answer
What is required is to merge the mind into the Atman (self) and hold on to that state of stillness. Then, whether one lives alone or with people, calls his path X or Y, does not matter, for all paths lead to that state alone.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Ive read in lot of websites that a spiritual person does not eat meat and dont drink alcohol which is a lie. This is not universal, reading the sacred texts and looking more carefully not all religions and sages say the same thing.

There are many sages eating meat for example in actual times the Dalai Lama (even if buddhist) and the Pope eat meat. Muhammad ate beef and lamb but no pork or alcohol according to Quran. Jesus and Moses, being both jews, were without doubt drinkers of wine and even encouraged their followers to drink in weddings and christian or sabbath as a form of blessing from god, almost as an offering. There are denominations of Hinduism (shaktism) which permit meat eating and offering of alcohol as a form of worship to a god as well.

"The Lord gives us wine to make our heart glad," David tell us. (Ps 104:15) Wine was a gift from God (Deut. 7:13, Ps. 104:15) and at the end of time, it would be provided in great abundance. (Jer. 31:12; Joel 3:18, Amos 9:13-14)

Why some religion prohibit one thing the other one prohibit another and permit what the other prohibits? Those individuals were founders of religions or great spiritual leaders.

Answer
"The Lord gives us wine to make our heart glad," David tell us. (Ps 104:15) Wine was a gift from God (Deut. 7:13, Ps. 104:15) and at the end of time, it would be provided in great abundance. (Jer. 31:12; Joel 3:18, Amos 9:13-14)

1. The wine referred to here is not the physical alcoholic liquid, but 'Soma' (the sublimated nectar that condenses at the Ajna Chakra), further to years of unbroken Brahmacharya and Samadhi meditation. Soma confers bliss & well being.

"At the end of time, it would be provided in great abundance." - When the Yogi enters 'Nirvikalpa Samadhi' (complete super-consciousness), the stage which is the end of his worldly pursuits (and therefore time), Soma nourishes the body in abundance, helping him remain suspended in Samadhi for days, months or years without food, water and air.

Alcohol is the toxic byproduct produced by fermentation of yeast. It toxifies all vital organs of the body, reduces their efficiency and burns 'Ojas' (transmuted vital life force). The mind gets cloaked under a thick veil of 'Tamas' (inertia), which in turn increases 'Agnyana' (ignorance).

Under the grip of ignorance, the foul appears sweet and the truth becomes repulsive. Alcohol is the easiest step to get caught in the tentacles of Maya, which always ends in suffering. Various foolish & sinful acts, which in turn produce negative karma will be committed, leading to further unwanted karma.

The wise Yogi does not resort to such mindlessness. Those wishing progress in 'Brahmavidya' (knowledge of the self) should never consume any form of alcohol. 'Madhya' (alcohol) is for the 'Bhogi-s' (those after sense pleasure) and not 'Yogi-s' (those after the self).

2. Food is governed by one's activity. A man toiling for hours in hard physical labor requires meat for the same, which his body digests, effectively, without leaving a trace.

A Yogi spending hours in meditation, with little or no physical activity does not require meat. Under light physical activity, meat does not digest thoroughly and turns into 'Aama' (bodily toxin). The presence of much Aama in blood makes the mind aggressive, passionate and easy irritable. The system becomes unfit for Brahmacharya and meditation. The body, which is being purified by Sadhana turns toxic once more. For this reason, it is generally advisable for the beginner to shun meat.

Food does not affect much the advanced Yogi, who eats just a little of whatever is available for sustenance (be it plant or animal source).

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Sir, I am trying to practice brahmacharya since 3 years but have not been able to cross more than 3 months at a stretch. Currently i am on my 39th day and will try my best this time. Also, i am trying to follow other suggestions given in your answers.

I started working in office without much show off and concentrated only on my work. I also didn't ask for promotion etc as I thought my work will speak and I'll get whatever i deserve. Last few months were worse in my professional career. I didn't get my visa stamped from my company as I didn't insist on it and also i didn't get promotion in spite of working very hard. I know our job is to make effort and nothing else but sometime I think the word is so cruel that you won't get justice until you fight for it. Other people take you for granted.

As you have cleared all my doubts in the past answers, I had made up my mind to not ask any more question until i follow your advice and do some significant progress but I'm very much disturbed by the sequence of events. I consider you as my guru and have no one else to seek advice. Please help.

Answer
Persist in honest practice, with surrender to the Lord, without expectations. That which has to come will come, at the destined time.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
It is say that during the life of Swami Trailinga a day he was put in prison for being naked in the streets but then escaped physically and miraculously as if teleported. In some unexplained story this even happened spontaneously to common people like a filipino soldier called Gil Perez (its documented, even by authorities) who awoke in Mexico and was put to jail accused of being witch. One apostle of Jesus was put in prison by a jewish king too and some angel appear in his dream and he ended up outside the cell even if he had chains. Is this real or scientific, do they travel a wormhole or move by an unknown dimension of nature?

Answer
It is a Siddhi (occult power), wherein, the Yogi de-materializes his body at one place and re-materializes it at another. It is beyond the understanding of modern science.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Sir!

Sri Krishna in the Bhagawad Gita says that 'Abhyasa' and 'Vairagya' are the two weapons to deal with the fluctuations of mind,does 'Abhyasa' here means 'Practice of Yoga' or 'Practice to keep the mind detached'? Please Enlighten us on this.

Thank You!

Answer
'Abhyasa' refers to the net sum of all those activities carried out, to merge the mind into the Atman (self). 'Vairagya' refers to developing detachment towards the world and sense pleasure, knowing them to end in suffering.

Sage Pathanjali describes the means to Yoga (Realization) as - "अभ्यास वैराग्याभ्यां तन्निरोधः" - "Through such Abhyasa and Vairagya are controlled the modifications of the mind, which eventually leads to self-realization".

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: hello! so yesterday early morning i saw a picture of a topless woman and kept revisiting it until eventually i had a pretty much involuntary orgasm/ejaculation without really touching. yesterday i couldnt eat much and today i have slept for almost 14 hours and have barely eaten anything.. i am feeling intense.. I know this will pass but, my mind keeps on filling with pornographic images all day today and i find that the more pornographic images fill my head the more i feel like i am on the verge of a major anxiety attack or something. what do i do now that my brain has filled up with all these pornographic images and there is all this pressure.. should i sit down and calmly masturbate to no thoughts or what? this is scaring me, i have been on a 3 month streak of almost full brahmacharya.

ANSWER: 1. Are you applying the complete set of suggested Yoga Sadhana ?

2. First put a complete stop to accessing stimulating material on the net.

3. Subject the body to moderate physical exercise, along with the Sadhana and meditate. Do not masturbate. Keep the mind busy with constructive work/activity. The situation will pass.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: i havent been doing any Yoga Saddhana and am trying my hardest to get a moderate exercise.. it is very hard for me right now because i am having trouble eating as well.. i eat mostly vegetarian but i just never have an appetite anymore... food doesnt taste good like it used too.. im in a pretty intense depression right now.. weird this is not like me.. before when i was on brahmacharya i was doing better than ever... back then i would meditate at least an hour every day some times up to 3 hrs.

Answer
Follow the suggested advise properly. There cannot be transmutation without Sadhana. Without Sadhana, it becomes mere abstinence (suppression) and forceful abstinence causes dangerous repercussions.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
i just asked a question a little bit ago about my broken brahmacharya but i left out one thing... last night after the initial break i was having a strange sexual kind of dream and upon awakening it felt as if i was surrounded by entities that were trying to push me back into full blown pornography addiction.. is this true are there actual external entities pushing me towards that or are they just a manifestation of my own Samsaras that are trying to make my brain revert back to the old way... this is kind of scary i instantly started with Om Mani Padme Hum and trying to stay connected to higher energies in everyway possible even calling on jesus... this is an intense journey.. would it help to Sage and Cleanse my sleeping space?

Answer
1. The result of past Samskara-s manifests in different ways, through ones imagination. There is nothing more to it. Ignore and persist in Sadhana.

2. Yes, you may call on Jesus or chant "Soham".

The cleansing required is within and not without.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaskar Dhananjay,

Although I've read in ur past answers that our body produces whatever it requires on it's own provided we tread on yogic path continuously.I was still confused whether I can consume Patanjali's Chwyanprash(Baba Ramdev's) as a supplement because what concerns me is that besides many other health benefits it is said to provide, it enhances the libido as well, which i belive could be detrimental to my progress.My intended purpose for consumption is just to put good things in my body, which would strenthen my organs.

Also if you could generalize it to other things like multi-vitamins, Whey protein..etc.It would give a complete insight.

Thanks for your selfless service.

Answer
Do not take supplement powders, chyavanaprash, processed whey protein or other external foods which claim to be natural health boosters. Avoid commercially prepared external supplements such as those mentioned above and stick to a balanced and nutritious diet, comprising of home food only.

Include plenty of greens, fruits, dried fruits, dairy and fibre in the diet. That will suffice.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Sir,

I wish to know how long term -smoking affect one spiritual growth or mental state ?

Previously you have discuss about alcohol and meat, I appreciate your answers to these question.

I would like to ask about smoking via Bramacharya because I believe it should not left out

Thanks
Al

Answer
Smoking makes the entire system toxic and gradually kills the living cells. 'Ojas' gets destroyed further to such toxification, degenerating the entire system and especially the brain. As living cells get destroyed, the body slowly loses immunity and becomes prone to various illnesses & diseases. Internal decay sets in motion, fouling both the body & the mind.

Any kind of addiction impedes attainment of the natural Atmic state. Addiction to smoking causes constant unrest, agitation and a sense of dissatisfaction, which the addict tries to relieve through more indulgence. This further devitalizes the system, pushing the person into a vicious cycle. Those wishing well being should get free of all forms of addictions, especially substance abuse such as tobacco, alcohol & drugs.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

1) Why do some babies die inside mother's womb itself? Are they really blessed souls or the other way around? How this is viewed in case of someone willingly doing abortion?

2) Why are some people born with defects (physically/mentally challenged). How does this type of birth associated with the parents?

3) How does helping the special people in the name of charity contribute towards negating our negative karmas? Are there really concepts like blessings and curse exists in the realms of ordinary human beings?

regards,
RK

Answer
1. The nature of 'Prarabdha karma' in case of that Jiva, for that existence is limited to life in the womb and not more. Past negative karma can manifest this way.

Those who willfully abort, or cause to abort an unborn child, intentionally, incur the severe karma of 'Brunahatya' (killing the fetus), for which, they later have to bear the consequences. Induction of life into a womb is divine decree, which man has no right to interfere with.

2. It is again the result of one's past, negative actions, which demands such suffering from birth defects. The parents may also have some negative karma, which makes them suffer the pain of living with and seeing a child with birth defects etc.

3. One can offer help, but without doership (I-ness). Helpful actions done with doership cause merit, to experience which, one has to be reborn again. Causing harm to others causes de-merit to experience which also, one has to be reborn again. Merit and de-merit do not cancel each other. Their results will be experienced separately.

Hence the wise do not indulge in meritorious actions with doership (but think "The Lord is doing this through the body & mind. I do nothing") and do not indulge in de-meritorious actions, which bring negative results.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
There are said to be two types of pranayama namely hatha and raja yoga varieties. Can you please explain in detail as to what these differences are, and which pranayama is which exactly?

Answer
There is only one Pranayama. It is achieved when there is neither inhalation nor exhalation of breath, but natural suspension. All others are only the means to reach it. That which does not eventually help one reach the above state is not Pranayama.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Dhananjayji,

First of all I would like to thank you whole-heartedly for providing us insights into this wonderful journey of brahmacharya. I am 30 years old unmarried man and have given ways to my lust at several occasions in the past thus depriving myself of the great benefits of celibacy. I was able to observe physical abstinence for close to 75 days but felt very intense urge to masturbate last night, which I did. I now feel guilty and also am worrying whether I can follow brahmacharya as a lifestyle. This incident makes me feel like a loser and also make me think whether I can master my lust or not. You have mentioned in your previous mail that you need to practice brahmacharya by following various aspects and ask the seekers to go through the previous mails to understand these. It would be very kind of you and helpful if you can provide the links to the previous answers for readers to navigate easily and also can I have your contact no. I would like to speak to you and set my foot firm on this wonderful journey.

Once again, thank you so much for your insight and guidance.

Answer
All the past answers are to be gone through without exception. Brahmacharya is not a science which can be studied chapter wise, looking at the index. It requires reorienting one's life, with a change in attitude towards oneself and the world, through surrender to God.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello, what is the opinion of hinduist religion and yoga about homosexuals? In those last years, for example the TV, music industry, media, have many gay and lesbian people such as many famous pop singers, Lady Gaga is a bisexual. This is because the establishment want to influence or change people's mind in those subjects. I know that some politicians, judges or media owners which are also members of secret societies (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Grand_Orient_de_France#Separation_of_Church_and_Sta) with hidden agendas want to make religion and morality invisible in social life.

Answer
Sexuality is an illusion concerning the Ego and is itself unreal in terms of the absolute. However, the concept of sexuality has its rightful purpose, for procreation, in this Leela (play) of the Lord. Since homosexuality does not lead to procreation, and therefore goes against the laws of nature, it is a perversion experienced by the Jiva, further to past karma, just like various other deviations from the course of nature.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi,

1 Questions :D

"Spiritual Growth without Bramacharya is impossible" ?

Share your view :)

AL

Answer
Residing in the self, as the self is Brahmacharya, spirituality or whatever else one may wish to call it.
Is there any difference between the two? True spirituality results in natural Brahmacharya and the true Brahmachari is spiritual.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear sir,

I am an aspirant for celibacy but it has never fructified so far. i became an addict of masturbation from 14 years of age. now i am 34 and married with a child and family still tend to masturbation on and off. As usual it is a routine cycle i resolve not to do and be sincere in my efforts for avoiding masturbation. but unfortunately is has been a struggle for the past 20 years and i have not succeeded in maintaining celibacy. i do maintain it for some periods the maximum for an year and half just before my marriage but again i am a victim of viewing promiscuous websites in the internet and falling a vicitm to masturnbation. whether i am living with the family or staying away from them for work i tend to do masturbation. i pray to god to have mercy but it is not coming from my heart. I want to cry and call lord for help but i feel some how i am not doing the right type of prayer. I knew even superhuman effort cannot overcome kama and krotha and we need His mercy to overcome this tyranny of masturbation and the desire for sex.I am now entering adult dating site too now and then. But i do visit brahmacharya sites as well when i am sober, but this bloody lust has made me a prey. i even tried taking my life when i was young at 20 because of this masturbation habit but god saved me and i am again in the same plight. I wish i stay continent form now on, even today morning i broke celibacy by pillow masturbation twice after one week of celibacy. I really like to be a honest and perfect brahmachary but i am not able to do even an inch of the aspiration, now i have fallen so much i feel i am not able to achieve what i want to achieve that is my gut feeling. kindly help and save me from this plight. hari om help me please.....Are there any hope for hypocrites like me? Kindly tell me how to make for the loss and how to get proper control...

Answer
Do the suggested Sadhana honestly, with a strong urge to come out of the problem. Sadhana should be unbroken and heartfelt. The Lord's grace comes to those who strive as required, with patience, for a long time and not by wishful thinking.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
dear sir,

Kindly can you tell me is there any hope for people who take to brahmacharya and fall a victim to lust again and again. Is there a place for them in Lords heart or he is left in pathala? Also after a voluntary seminal loss is there a slogan to regain some strength to pursue brahmacharya/ kindly reply..

Answer
The Jiva eventually realizes the fallacy of lust, knowing it to always end in pain, and takes stringent efforts not to indulge. This gradually leads to Sadhana, which in turns burns past Samskara-s & Vasana-s, thereby delivering the Jiva into residence in the self.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello sir, Dhananjay,

Should or should we not take multivitamins with our meals?

Much due respect,

Answer
Under the normal course of things, in the case of a healthy and vigorous person, a balanced, wholesome and nutritious diet, containing all the necessary ingredients should suffice. There is not the necessity for multivitamin supplements.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Sir,

Swami Sivananda has mentioned that a woman's heart is unfathomable and impenetrable. What does this mean? He says in "Parables of Sivananda", "the impenetrable heart of a woman, that gives her love the magic of magnitude, without the least real substance in it!"

I see the words unfathomable and impenetrable oft used to describe the nature of love with a woman. What does this mean? I fail to understand what is meant by heart and what is meant by unfathomable and impenetrable....

Nonetheless, I do not care about love with a woman, and I want god and universal, cosmic love to develop within me but I am just curious. Perhaps it will allow me to reinforce Dispassion and Discrimination.

Answer
Since the nature of a woman is governed by Maya to a large extent, the statement has been used to describing the nature of Maya (cosmic illusion), whose nature is beyond logic & reason. To whom does Maya concern? The Ego, which one is not. Maya poses no trouble when one holds on to his true self (Atman).

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Sir, the shambhavi mudra (direct the eyes towards the middle of the eyebrows) that still the mind, could be practiced without any danger?

Answer
Shambhavi mudra can be used as a prelude to meditation. However, focusing at the 'Thrikuti', with the eyes closed, mind merged into the Atman should alone be the final objective and not merely looking at the mid eyebrow or tip of the nose.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Is it true that having long hair or facial hair enables one to collect and store greater amounts of cosmic energy/prana/chi from the universe?

I ask because I've heard from many different religions and ancient times that growing a beard or having long hair makes you a stronger human being, physically and mentally. & most hindu masters, kings, Vikings, Jesus, all had long beards.

I just wonder how legit this is. I have been practicing celibacy now and just now started letting my beard grow out and noticed an increase in my stamina was really good during my workouts & runs. This is so weird. Ive never felt like this before having a full beard. I nev never felt so masculine but more humble and calm at the same time.

I just need to know what your take on this is or experience.

Answer
Yes. The ability to retain the vital force is greater with uncut hair/beard. Details on the function and benefits of hair are available in past answers.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
hope you are doing fine.i'm a 29 years male.i asked you some question before.
since january 2011 i have been trying to observe the vow of brahmacharya after reading your site .primarily i was experiencing too much energy within me and there was a glow or aura on my face. but now those aura and high level of energy has gone. i'm also doing some pranayama. i am an unmarried person and i don't find a suitable partner till now. sometime i suffer from stress and feel uncertainty.what to do?

Answer
Always apply the complete set of suggested Yoga Sadhaha, with the required practices for proper transmutation. Lack of proper Sadhana does not sublimate the sexuaL energy, which can have adverse reactions. The sign of proper transmutation is the development of a bright attitude, like that of a child, full of cheer.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Beloved Dhananjay,

Is there a period of digestive rest that my body needs before exercising after my full morning Yoga-schedule?

Thanks,
Erik Messick

Answer
1. A tall glass of water on waking up, followed by a glass of milk before Yoga and another milk beverage after the Sadhana is recommended. One can give a half an hour break after the morning Sadhana and eat breakfast.

2. One can sit in the sitting-leaning position for a while if a need for rest is felt. It is best to avoid sleep during daytime. Keeping the body & mind active (without sleep) during Sun up ensures deep, sound and interruption-free sleep at night, which confers health, strength & well being.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Bhaiyya,
I have a query.
Sometimes, when I listen to spiritual songs or do any such contemplations or even feel inspired, I feel a weird electric like sensation from my spine going upto my head and face. It is actually very pleasant sensation and filled with warmth and I feel a lot more energised and filled with love.
This has been there from childhood and has become a bit spontaneous now.
What is it?
Please throw light upon it.

Thank you

Answer
'Pranothaana' (upward rise of Prana), along the spine causes such a feeling. Application of proper Sadhana with unbroken Brahmacharya will regulate the same, making it harmonic, stable and smooth. This will aid spiritual growth.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello, In a previous posts you said that the physical body of a sage is made of immortal light even if it appear physical made of flesh and bones. Maybe im wrong but I imagine the meaning of the Trinity of the father (God), the son (body in the form of Jesus) and holy spirit (kundalini) as states of the same element. Like ice, water, vapor, transforming according to cold or hot temperature, this is easy to understand. But what is the real reason a body can change in light? When some religions say its God, it doesnt explain anything. There is a video about this in youtube, http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=s7U1jSiXBvA

Answer
While there is no doubt a covering of flesh, even as regards the realized sage, the constituent elements of that body [Akasa-space, Vayu-air, Agni-fire, Aapah-water, Prithvi-Earth] are in complete resonance and equilibrium with the very same elements in the cosmos, without distinction. Therefore, the body can be de-materialized by merging the constituent elements back into their source.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Since a couple of months I have been failing practising brahmacharya. I would abstain for about 8 to 10 days and then again fail. This is happening with me since this two months. I want u to provide me certain tips. I masturbate once after 8 to 10 days then repent and then start once again. This cycle is continuing and thus I am not making any progressive changes within me. I want to live a life like Swami Vivekananda but fail due to lack if proper guidance and support. So I want u to guide me. And tell few things about how to extend the period to 12 years stepwise. Plz do motivate... Plzz .. I never quit by the way.. So plz help me achieve my divine dream...Plz

Answer
Apply all the suggested methods of Yogic transmutation & gradually increase the period to two weeks, then 20 days and so on. Mere abstinence is not of any use. What is required is proper transmutation of the vital force through the Yogic Sadhana.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Beloved Dhananjay,

You are like the Trinity to us. Practicing quietness (quiescence) has helped my Clear Senses gift much so, as well as non-judgement. People catch onto my breathing while in another room. People observe my thoughts and problem solve based off of what I do.

I have come a long way in honing this gift thanks to your advice, but my agitation is in me because I want to know if people have the gift that I have. How can I tell or do I even want to know? Why not?

My gratitude,
Erik Messick

ANSWER: Who is oneself? Realize the answer to this truth by being internally quiet, then it will be known that what one terms 'others' is nothing more than a fragment of the Ego's imagination. All else is an illusion.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Beloved Dhananjay,

I must query again. I believe that you're saying that there is a possibility that i'm schizophrenic paranoia. I know that I hear them. They're in people's breathing. I can even hear someone far away or my loved ones, at times, who live an hour's car drive away. I'll practice this though. Thank you. Are you saying that they are not there and that my conscience makes them up for me to hear? Or that my ego decides to hear them?

Sincerely,
Erik Messick

Answer
Based on the nature of one's past Samskara-s (impressions), the mind is made to go through various illusory experiences, under the force of the Ego. One should turn a blind eye to such experiences, which have no substance and hold on to the self through Sadhana. Nothing more is required.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
sir,

Kindly guide on

a) Correct sequence of morning activities.

sequence 1
bathing
morning sadhana
moderate physical excercise
bathing(becomes necessary due to sweating)

Sequence 2
morning sadhana
moderate physical excercise
Bathing

I've tried both sequences but taking a bath twice in the morning doesn't seem good in winters. Pls suggest correct way.

b) Does yog asanas sustitute physical excercise for taking care of physical sublimation part of semen.

c)Benefits of pressing the perenium by heel during asanas. should it be done.

d) can one do simulataneus moolbandha for the entire duration of morning sadhana.

my humble regards

Answer
1. Waking up at 4.00 A.M and performing sequence 2 is the right way, with physical exercise, Asana preceding the rest of the practices. Sequence 1, where one has a bath immediately upon wake up is useful for those who feel too sleepy to continue without a bath.

2. Yes, as long as they are performed right.

3. The perineum is pressed in Asana-s such as Sidhasana. It helps channel energy upwards.

4. No. Bandha-s are to be applied, only for the required duration, as explained in past answers.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Dhananjay?

Should I tell others about this website and Yoga? I want to let as many people know about it as possible because you are such a Guru. I want to help the world.

Is it wise to work, exercise, or even do intellectual work during digestion?

I turned a blind eye to a very many voices today. I enjoyed my day very much in the meantime, especially after giving testimony of Yoga in church, relating it to Christianity. There was a sort of power in not giving them attention. Also, I note another voice. He's directly in my head, toward the rear, and it is unlike any other. He doesn't come as often, but he did usually when I was about to do the right thing, after I did the right thing, or in order to prove the right thing to me. "Never second guess." Might it be my conscience? Maybe my God (or my Father in Heaven)!? There was a possibility of me being His Son, yet I'm not yet!?

Erik

ANSWER: 1. Do your Sadhana and be quiet.

2. Digestion occurs all by itself, in parallel. Not indulging in strenous physical activity for a while after a meal is advisable.

3. To hold on to the Atman (self) and be quiet is what is required. Everything else is to be ignored.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Sir?

This morning after my sadhana, or actually after my pranayama, I have been controlling my breath via my diaphragm ever since. I have been breathing less and I have had more concentration that I am actually widening as I go about my day. It's only been 3 hours. I feel that this is natural as according to your past instructions. I have been breathing less and am in more control of my body and mind. It seems that I use less oxygen and make use of the oxygen better. Is this closer to the atman?

My breathing is kind of tight, but I'm learning to let go of the tension as I still control it with less muscles.

Erik

Answer
It is normal for the breathing to slow down after Yoga Sadhana. Slow breathing takes the mind closer to the Atman. In Samadhi, breathing stops, as the mind is merged into the self.

The slower breathing becomes, the more still gets the mind, helping one merge into the truth.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhananjay,

One of the most difficult periods during which to control lust is the time immediately following physical tiredness. Suppose one has played a basketball match or finished a grueling exam. When the mind and body are tired and one looks to relax, the sexual urge becomes highly appeallingy and very hard to control, leading one to want to look at pornography or indulge oneself sinfully.

I would like some sure-fire ways to help the mind and body recover when they are exhausted. The logic is simple: WHEN I AM ALERT AND AWAKE, I am fully conscious of all impressions and can resist maya easily; however, when tired, this control diminishes.

How can these periods of tiredness be dealt with? Should one sleep or take a short nap in the middle of them to prevent a break?

Thanks
Jakob

Answer
One can take a brief nap and relax, till one feels refreshed. It is also useful to practice slow, deep breathing, with the mind kept blank, so as to keep away from lust.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir,
Aging is the result of loss of prana from the body.

My question is.
Is it that with age the amount of prana produced by the body every month decreases ? or that the prana is consumed in removing the toxins accumulated with age, that little is left for the regenration of cells of body....that the body becomes weak.

Answer
1. "शीर्यते इति शरीरं " - "To constantly degrade is the attribute of the body". It is in the nature of the body, which is 'Asat' (unreal) to age and eventually fall apart. This process is at minimum intensity between birth and teenage. The degradation gains an upper hand from the onset of puberty [whereupon the vital energy (Veerya), which had been retained for optimal growth for more than a decade or so in the child, starts its downward journey, and gets expelled frequently, hastening 'Jara' (weakness & decay leading to ageing)]

2. A Yogi who has realized the significance of Brahmacharya, through 'Shama' (self control), 'Vichara' (inquiry), 'Vairagya' (dispassion) & 'Sadhana' (unbroken practice), strives to transmute the vital force, whose downward gates have been opened further to puberty, by sublimating it upwards. This gradually helps him break even the force of degradation of the body, and maintain its health, so as to effectively focus energies towards 'Atma Sadhana' (efforts towards self-realization, the purpose of the human birth)

The chief cause of ageing is the loss of 'Bindu' (seed of life), represented by Veerya (vital force), whose gross most form is Rethas (semen). Therefore, the practice of Brahmacharya is beneficial to maintain health & well being.

It is to be remembered that the body is an 'Upadhi' (medium) to work out karma, impermanent and unreal. One is not the body. Therefore, one should never be attached to the body. The aim should be to maintain health and well being [so as to effectively carry out Atma Sadhana, for ill health makes Sadhana difficult] and not get caught in the Maya of possessing physical beauty.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Hi, ive remarked that when someone masturbate or lose his seed too much, he becomes shy when talking to others, or even less sociable as if somewhat restless in a given situation. Why is this so? Is it because he fear judgement of others or just an appearance? On the other side, if someone practice brahmacharya he doesnt care about anything really, what other says is of no importance or a waste of time. Both situations happened to me.

Answer

Brahmacharya takes one closer to the Atman (self), which one is. Abrahmacharya takes one away from the self, which one is not. The Atman is the source of all power. Going away from it is distancing oneself from life force. Therefore, lack of Brahmacharya saps one of life force, which is in turn seen in the form of lack of confidence etc.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

en such a responsibility, one would be unable to acquire a physical body to work out Prarabdha karma. Without working out karma, realization of the self is not possible. And the Jiva which has not realized the self is ever unhappy & incomplete, not being itself.

Therefore, one must always see the Lord functioning through one's parents, and show respect, with a sense of duty and a feeling of Love, whatever be the individual nature of the father and mother.

2. It is one's own past karma, the result of Agnyana which stands in the way of realizing the self. There is not such a force, with form or formless, anywhere, outside, which stands in the way of realization. The issue is within and not without. When one negates the ignorance within, realization occurs all by itself.

Self-realization is not attained by learning something new. It is the result of letting go of identification with what one is not (the body & mind). Hence, none are to be blamed for lack of it, for it is an internal matter and not external.

3. Marriage or the lack of it has no connection with the state of Brahmacharya or self-realization. It is not that all those single succeed in Brahmacharya, nor that those married cannot achieve the state.

4. If one's parents are not supportive to his practice of Brahmacharya, it is one's own past doing, which has taken the form of nonsupporting parents. Hence, it is for oneself to win them over with dedication, love and understanding.

5. Even if one's parents as individuals exhibit base traits, it is something concerning those Jiva-s, the karma of which they will have to answer. Why should you reciprocate at the same base level, thereby polluting your state of being, when one's true state is that of Love, forgiving and silence? He who knows the code of conduct and yet indulges in hate is lower than those indulging in base thoughts/deeds without knowing the code of conduct.

There is a higher power, which is running the show, watching all, knowing what should be done, to whom and when. Do your Dharma and be quiet, remaining free from hate, anger, disdain and bitterness. All Jiva-s are progressing towards the self, at their own pace, in the way required. It is not in one's business to be judgmental about other's when there is much work unfinished, inside.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: In the world, there are many who try to manipulate the Jiva. Manipulation, domination and cunning are necessary for worldly success and simply surviving in the world. Parents try to manipulate me as well; my father, for example, wants to take my salary to pay off his expenses and take a vacation. He used the excuse of "I am your father. I raised you and deserve your money." Everyone in this world seems to use rhetoric and bogus moral causes to get what they want from others. My parents use the vedic injunctions and various codes to manipulate me and prevent me from pursuing the self. Everyone is the world is a wolf that tries to kill others to get what they want. Indeed, the world is a jungle and one must constantly guard himself. No one can trust anyone else.

You seem not to understand the nature of others. One cannot win over his parents for the practice of Brahmacharaya through love, dedication, and understanding. First of all, love is bondage, do you not understand that? Love for parents is anther word for attachment. Second, showing my parents love will not win them over, it will further bond them with me, and increase their amount of worldly influence in my life. One must use cleverness and diplomacy to survive in the world for the sake of yoga; not doing so will lead to others, specifically parents, manipulating me. Trusting parents is like a lamb trusting a lion.

If one is about to be manipulated and will be exploited to a point to where yogic practices may be threatened, can one use worldly cleverness to survive?

ANSWER: Realize the truth first. The meaning of love will later be known.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Hi Sir,

1.) Can one show an external reaction of anger and confrontation in normal interactions? That is, is it alright for one to be externally aggressive but remain internally silent on the inside? One shows a fit of anger, but feels no anger on the inside. I normally have an aggressive personality.

2.) It is very difficult to control these feelings of disgust, disdain and hate towards my parents. My mind highly dislikes them. You say one must show respect and duty towards one's parents. What does this mean?

3.) I keep convincing myself that I must deal with these parents so my remaining karma can be worked out. Is such an attitude fine?

Eagerly awaiting your response, sir.

Answer
1. One should enact the role as required, with the necessary external reaction, as warranted by the situation. One should however remain internally calm and completely detached, without the least anger. Also, one should not harm or hurt another.

2. The one feeling disdain should be gradually annulled.

3. Displace the Ego which is the source of negativity, through residence in the self. All will be well

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Dear Dhananjay,

In Brahma Sutra, Chapter 4 - section 2 (Ref : http://www.swami-krishnananda.org/bs_0/Brahma.Sutra.4.2.html), there are discussions about the death of ordinary men, liberation of knower of Saguna Brahman and the knower of Nirguna Brahman.

Knower of the Saguna Brahman liberates through the Sushumna Nadi, and for the ordinary (ignorant) men, the exit happens through other than Sushumna Nadi. The body is left back in both these cases.

Adhikaranas 6 to 8 explain about the knower of Nirguna Brahman.
Could you please comment on the following queries:

1) What will happen to the body of the knower of Nirguna Brahman, and how the exit happens for the same?

2) What is the difference between the liberation of the knower of Saguna Brahman and the knower of Nirguna Brahman?

regards,
RK.

ANSWER: 1. The term 'Knower' of Nirguna Brahman (formless Almighty, without attributes) in the Brahmasutra-s denotes a Jivanmukta, who has attained full blown self-realization. Therefore, he is at 'Turiyateeta' (always effortlessly in the state of pure consciousness or Sahaja-sthiti) and hence does not entertain the perception of the Loka-s (worlds/planes which concern the mind) or those of a Lord limited to shape, form and structure.

At the time of final departure, through 'Videhamukti' (complete, irreversible liberation), the apparent Jiva merges into Supreme consciousness seamlessly, as water contained in a bottle, lying on the ocean floor, would merge into the ocean, if the bottle were to be broken. Is there any distinction between the water that was in the bottle and the sea water after the merger? Can the two be separately distinguished? Such is the merger into the Supreme, at exit.

What happens to the physical/astral/causal bodies is not of any value, for these are non-entities in terms of the absolute and therefore, eventually go back to their source, namely Prakriti.

2. The knower of 'Saguna Brahman' (Almighty worshiped through form, with attributes) has a perception of the Loka-s (worlds/planes which concern the mind) or those of a Lord limited/depicted by shape, form and structure. Therefore, there must be a mind to perceive the same. The presence of the mind infers the presence of an Ego, however small it may be. Hence, such a Saguna Sadhaka goes to an higher astral plane (concerning the mind) after releasing himself from the body through the 'Sushumna Nadi', via the 'Brahmarandhra' (at the crown of the head), where he performs further Sadhana in the 'Sukshma Sharira' (astral body) and finally attains Videhamukti into the Nirguna Brahman, who stretches into infinity.

Such advanced Saguna Sadhaka-s are also sometimes given other portfolio's by the Lord, as regards 'Lokasangrham' (welfare of mankind), which they carry out till their final exit (such as say guiding certain other Jiva-s in the path of the self).

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Thanks for the reply.

Could you please tell us whether the mode of liberation of the knower of Nirguna Brahman and in one of the previous post in which you discussed about the ability of yogi to dematerialize the body are related somehow?

In short, is it the case that the knower of Nirguna Brahman just disappears by de-materializing the body and the atman gets merged with the parabrahman, in contrast to the knower of Saguna Brahman where the body is left behind?

Answer
1. Materializing or de-materializing of the body has no connection with attainment of 'Gnyana' (Enlightenment). It is a Siddhi concerning the body & mind (which are both unreal) and hence has no value in terms of the absolute.

2. The final release may involve de-materialization of the body (if it is so destined), or it may not. It is not that the bodies of all knowers of Nirguna Brahman de-materialize. The Sutra only refers to the complete merger of the Atman into the absolute, then and there, which is the point to be noted. What happens to the body is not of importance, for the body is an illusion and unreal, in terms of the truth.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaste sir,
i am in currently tenth day of my brahmacharya practice,this time i am practising it sincerely at physical and mentle level,but i have a fear that i can lose my semen in wet dream. yesterday i was reading an article on wikihow titled as'how to stop wet dreams'in this article i like a method very much i want to repeat it below
''some monastics who abstain from sexual behaviour change their sleep pattern by sleeping only a few hours at a time and waking up frequently throughout the night to meditate or pray briefly before returning back to sleep,reducing the risk of involuntary ejaculation'' sir if this method is effective according to your view,if i can also apply it in my practice to prevent any risk of wet dream.
thanks

Answer
1. 'Nidra' (sleep) should always be sound, deep and uninterrupted. That which has interruption is not sleep. Lack of uninterrupted sleep will lead to ill health and a break in Sadhana. It is not that waking up often will prevent a wet dream, for wet dreams occur when the Jiva comes back into the Astral plane in Swapnavastha' (dream state) and never in 'Nidravastha' (sound sleep, where there is no perception of the 'I')

2. The cause of wet dreams is certain past Samskara-s and Vasana-s. Wet dreams stop, when, by ardent Sadhana, the aspirant burns these and becomes an Urdhvareta. Not before.

The right method is to take deep, uninterrupted sleep and wake up early in Brahmimuhurtham to apply Sadhana.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello, Ive read the stories of the 84 mahasiddhas of the Tantric school. Many of them attained sagehood but were not moral or lived moral life, as we can read. They ate meat, fermented wine or lived with prostitures. They didnt care much about moral rules. WHy?

Answer
Who has written these stories? Do you know who these Siddha-s were? What did they actually do? What was their level of spiritual attainment? What is meant by Sage-hood? Whether they ate something or didn't, whether they did something or didn't, in what way does that take you closer to realizing your self? Does that in anyway change your misery here?

Let go of what someone did or didn't and do that which will help you realize who you are. That poses a bright chance of knowing that which is to be known. All else is only fanciful debate, which has no substance.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
The so called siddhi power obtained by the sages/saints/shamans. Do they come because they have been cultivated or because when someone attain self realization, they possess them as a by-product? Such siddhi are levitation, bilocation, prophecy, control over nature, etc. At the same it is said that siddhi are an obstacle to self realization.

Answer
Siddhi-s, like everything else, come because it is so destined, as regards that Jiva. Even then, these come to the extent proposed by the higher power & not more. Some of these come en route to realizing the self and are hence termed byproducts. Attachment or desire to any kind of Siddhi is an obstacle to realizing the self.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
How can we explain that state?

I always wondered as many other people if when the mind suddenly awakes in the middle of sleep but cant really move the body is a sort of meditative state or the start of an out of body experience. When awakening in this state all look very vivid and we are fully concious and one did nothing to have it, this state comes without one's willing it.

Answer
It is neither a meditative state, nor an out of the body experience. Inability to move the body at such times is the result of lack of coordination and transmission, further to a temporary break in the link between the body & mind.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Sir

You suggested to have lunch atleast by 1 p.m followed by a banana or two.
I have been following this but what I noticed was that my lunch was digested & i had pressure in the evening before 5:30, I mean my stomach was clear before 5:30, so after being light I did sadhana in the evening.

My question to you is
1.Have you suggested banana for this purpose only I.e to clear stomach to do sadhna

2.Can I do nadi shodana and/or pranayama in the evening with a unclear stomach,
If I didn't ate banana?

Answer
1. The banana is a good digestive, which aids easy digestion and elimination. It is also a good source of energy & other nutrients.

2. One should do full Sadhana at the proper time. The bowels will clear themselves, when possible, when this much is done. One need not worry about their state, be they clear or unclear, or whether one has had a banana or not.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Hi Sir,

I have a serious problem. I cannot interview well anymore.

Before I came into spirituality, I was naturally a good interviewer because I would tell people what they wanted to hear, and did not really care about the "truth" as long as it's my job. I was SO,SO good at playing a role and interviewing with people to get a job offer. In fact, I would get an offer in every single interview that I had.

Now I have several problems:

1.) I appear very nonchalant and laid back, so whenever I interview, I sound like I simply don't care about getting the job
2.) I can't interview well at these firms
3.) I can't tell people a "lie;" PEOPLE can see right through my acting now, and my acting is now completely useless, and doesn't help me interview well. Anyone can see my lack of enthusiasm and my artificial expressions and say, "this kid actually doesn't care." Even though I try and do as you say, "act in a certain role," my nonchalance easily comes through

I DON't KNOW why God took this skill away from me, but without it, I will not be able to get a job despite my resume. It's like God is purposely screwing up my interviews and making me answer in stupid ways.

Please help me....

ANSWER: Your limits end at honest effort. Do that much and be patient. Things will happen as they have to, at the right time.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Is it alright to lie in these interviews or must one tell the truth all the time?

ANSWER: A lie does not take one anywhere. It only ends in more lies, which will all be eventually found out, putting one in a much more troublesome situation than the one in which he lied. One can avoid or remain silent in situations, where speaking the truth may cause harm to oneself or others, but should not lie.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Also, sir, it seems that the way I behave now attracts a large amount of disdain from males. Males usually treat me with disdain and disgust while females treat me with intense attraction. When I'm networking, I cannot create the same impression on other people and people don't enjoy being around me. It seems like my career is falling apart around me and I don't know if I can do anything more. Even if you're a genius, if you're not close to other people or well liked, you can't do anything.

Answer
1. Your focus should be on Sadhana and not on what others think or don't think about you. One should reach the state where he is not affected by acceptance or rejection.

2. One's attitude should be -"Let that which happens happen. I will always remain true to the Lord, having surrendered to HIM, via Sadhana, being true to the tenets of Yoga." Then, it will eventually be realized that, that which was being affected was the Ego and not the self.

One's career does not fall apart because of Sadhana and Yoga. It is the Ego which falls apart.

2. All these are events in the dream to make the Jiva realize the fallacy and non-substantial nature of the Ego, which is getting affected by the reactions displayed in the world drama. When one learns to hold on to the state of the Atman and be at peace, the world no longer poses trouble.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello there,

Is it true that we as humans only use %10 of our brain?
Or do we already use %100 of our brain?

If so, how do we unlock the rest?.

What happens if we gain access to the rest of the percentage? (%100)

Would celibacy be the answer?

Answer
Yes, only a fraction of the mental potential is made use of under common conditions. Mere celibacy does not help unlock the potential. What is required is unbroken Brahmacharya, which involves transmutation of the conserved energy into higher planes, following which one's faculties slowly improve over a period of many years.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaste Dhananjay,

After several months of earnest vichara (albeit with mental temptation) a few fundamental questions have arisen. Would be eternally grateful if you could shed light on these.

1) I can easily understand now, that I am not this body, prone to decay and inevitable devolution. But am I the soul (jiva) who controls this body like a puppeteer controls his puppets? Of course I realize that any capability of the jiva itself arises solely from the atman. But when, like Ramana Bhagawan, contemplates that he is not the body nor the mind, what is...left? This vacancy makes me very uncomfortable. How can realized sages claim that they are NOT the mind when they use their cognitive faculties to think about philosophy, respond to the queries of their sishyas, and so forth? The mind is very much real. So is their brain, IQ, etc it seems.

2) Is intellect (truth-realization) not the same as intelligence? I know many men who are much smarter than me (IQ-wise) who still crave for every form of sense pleasure. I suppose no amount of IQ, book knowledge, or wealth correlates with the desire to understand the supreme Reality.

3) Kindly clarify the karana sharira, or causal sheath. It carries the 5 klesas/kosas (please clarify, I am ignorant on the specifics) and carries past impressions to future births, it is said. In other words, does this mean that EVERY jiva is pure (a derivation of atman) but appears to have different dispositions (e.g. angry, lustful, shy, etc) due to the karana shariras?

4) My dear guru Swami Sivananda graces my heart and physical residence and came to me in the most unexpected of places right when I was on the verge of a vital BREAK in brahmacharya. Is a soul (jiva), upon exiting the physical body, capable of creating such occurrences? Is it only for self-realized jivas?

5) Often, when I have doubts, I look at the loving face of Sivananda and crystal-clear answers pop into my head. Is this simply my own mental rationalization or is there any link between me and my guru by which he is helping my shatter the avidya that binds me?

6) I engaged in the strictest form of brahmacharya for two months, during which people routinely commented on my intelligence, women viewed me with desire, and so forth. However, I started to slack in my practice afterward (no physical breaks, but mental lapses and occasional viewing of online material) and my former luster disappeared. Do I take this as either 1) a positive since it proved that the external world is fickle and unsteady or 2) a negative since my "powers" were lost?

For you, these may be simply answers, but to a practitioner and aspirant, they are the words of one's guru being conveyed through a divine medium in the form of you.

Most respectfully yours,
Sreyas

Answer
1. The Jiva (individual Ego) is different from the Atman (soul- an indivisible part of the universal). Who contemplates? It is the Ego. When through such contemplation, the mind becomes completely still, it merges into that source (Atman-true self), from which it has arisen. Then there is only pure consciousness, infinite, full of peace and bliss. There is no thinking or doing in that state. It is..is.

Does the Sun consider himself the red glass, just because his light passes through it producing red light? Is the music player itself the singer, just because a voice is coming through it as the song? The cognitive senses of the realized sage are used to communicate with the external world, so as to do that which is to be done, to people, as dictated by the remnant Prarabdha karma of that Jiva. To whom is the mind, brain and body real? It is to the perceiver and not to that from which these spring forth, just as light emanates from a torch, producing different images that appear and disappear, while the torch alone remains as reality.

2. Intellect concerns the ability to understand what is apparent, as perceived by the mind & the senses. Intellect cannot understand the absolute truth, which is beyond its purview. Intellect is a product of the Ego, and the absolute truth is beyond the Ego. Hence intellect concerns the unreal and not the real.

3. The 'Karana Sharira' is another body surrounding the physical and subtle bodies, which is the repository of the seeds of past karma. Hence, for the purpose of understanding it is said to house the Ego, which is the final barrier between the Atman and Paramatman, which are only the Paramatman.

4. That which is wished by the Lord transpires, be it through the physical body or otherwise, through those from who HE wills so.

5. The great Lord works through form and formless. HE helps every Jiva, in the way required, for evolution. The Guru is one such form through whom HE guides.

6. Getting slack is letting the Ego take the upper hand, which will eventually end in a break and take one far away from his self. One should make the mind still, surrender to HIM and rest in the self as the self. Nothing more is required, for it is the truth and the only reality, all else being an illusion.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I feel somewhat disengaged and depersonalized after sadhana in the evening. It's quite peaceful, but I have trouble with self-expression and being engaged or caring about conversation at a dinner table with recent acquaintances. Might this be due to meditation?

I ask this because I notice that I have quite a blank face after I meditate.

I am adhering to brahmacharya as recommended in every shape and fashion.

Can you explain why I feel this way?

Answer
It is normal to experience inner quiet and silence further to Sadhana, which gradually displaces the Ego. One should cultivate this inner silence, developing the thought free state, by holding on to the self. External interaction then gets limited to the extent required, to necessity & not more.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Beloved Dhananjay,

I can hold my breath for 18 seconds over 6 sets during pranayama. When I am about to finish my exhale after my first few sets, my abdomen and diaphragm jerk a bit, but I still try to control it all the way out. Is this unhealthy?

I smoked cigarettes for 2 years, and I do not anymore. I have a small wheeze. I feel that my lungs could use some sort of yoga technique to speed their recovery and cure my wheeze, which I hear when I force my breath out. Do you have a recommended technique for such a situation?

Thank you,
Erik Messick

Answer
Apply the suggested Pranayama with all the other constituent methods of Yoga for a few years in an unbroken manner. Everything will get right.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Respected Dhananjay,
After lot of struggle I had encountered favourable conditions at my workplace. But very soon complacency set in and I went into the quagmire of breaking into induced carnal pleasure. Somehow the elation of having won over my hardships put me into this stage of pleasure seeking. Somehow there was a constant call from the conscience that what I was doing was wrong for further advancement but I fell in the whirlpool. Then I felt immense pain physically. Now I have realised my mistakes and I am worried if the good situation I have managed to earn will fade away.
Why does it happen that when the times are good for me I enter into state of extreme elation which I can't control and complacency sets in though these moments of success and happiness after very few in my life.
Only suggest what's wrong with me
Regards

Answer
1. It is the nature of the Ego, the product of ignorance, to experience elation at pleasure and sorrow at pain. Till one does not overcome identification with the Ego, this situation of extremes, which is a sign of imbalance exists.

2. The ignorant Ego, constantly seeking external pleasure (not having realized that the greatest bliss is within) flies at accomplishment and falls at failure. It is ever dissatisfied, devoid of equilibrium and the cause of unrest. Hence the wise Yogi constantly strives to get rid of it, so as to reside in the self, as the self.

The Yogi of wisdom, in equilibrium, who resides in the self, is neither elated by happiness nor pained by sorrow. Knowing both these to be unsubstantial, impermanent, fleeting and the effect of Maya, he watches as a mere spectator, completely detached from both, only holding on to the self. That is Yoga, as Lord Krishna tells Dhananjaya (Arjuna) in the Bhagavad Gita:

योगस्थः कुरु कर्माणि साङ्गं त्यक्त्वा धनञ्जय |
सिधयसिद्धयोः समोभूत्वा समत्वम्योगमुच्यते ||

"Forsaking attachment to your actions (or their fruits), indulge in Yoga O Dhananjaya"| Accepting success and failure with equality, this evenness of mind is called YOGA || - Chap II/48 - The Bhagavad gita

Hence one should turn a blind eye to happenings and non-happenings of this dream world, do one's duty and remain steadfast in Sadhana to realize the self alone. That is the path taken by the wise seekers of liberation.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Sir,

I wish to ask if someone is incline in music or art.

Does it mean that his chakra has/have open in a higher plane that enable creative expression to manifest.

I wish to ask if art/music or any creative pursuit has anything to do with Brahmacharya.

Best Regard
AL

Answer
1. Inclination towards a particular activity only means there are past Samskara-s (impressions) supporting such activity. The extent of blooming of a particular chakra may or may not be the case.

2. Through Brahmacharya, one has better vital force at his/her disposal, which may in turn be channelized towards constructive activity, efficiently.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

What is the logic behind one praying for the welfare of others (parents, siblings, wife, children, friends, etc)? Does it have any value in terms of changing others life? How does it effect us eventually?

regards,
RK

Answer
It is enough if one develops a well wishing and harmless attitude towards all, be they relatives or unrelated. Prayer, in particular, is not necessary, to the one who see's all with a divine perspective. The Lord takes care of all, in the way required.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Sir - Hope you are doing well !

I have a query on which I would like your guidance. I have been searching for a girl for marriage from past 3 to 4 years. I have never been excited about the prospect of marriage. So during initial 1 - 2 years I frequently had fights & arguments with my parents. Finally, I relented and thought that if i am destined for a marriage then I cannot run away from it and like all other duties should accept it humbly. But from last 2 years though I am trying to search seriously for a possible partner I am unable to search one. I have been rejected by many gals.This has not affected me though (because i do not have aversion / like for either states - married or unmarried) but I do face a lot of mental turmoil because of family & society pressure. Tomorrow I am going to meet a new girl and I have 2 queries in this regard:
(1) When should I state my wish for a celibate marriage. Should this be made clear in the very first meeting or should this be revealed after marriage (last time I told this to some other girl in our second meeting and I was rejected but I still don't mind telling this to a new girl in our first meeting tomorrow)
(2) Also, one more thing, that bothers me greatly is that, what if after marriage, if a girl find its difficult to maintain this vow of celibacy and walks away if I am not ready to break it. Sir, i am desiring 100 % sex free marriage but I am not sure if the incoming gal would be able to manage this lifelong. This thought that what if someone divorces me after marriage because of celibacy is making me nervous

Sir, please advise.

Answer
1. Sexual relations, with one's lawful wife, for progeny, does not go against Brahmacharya. It is in the course of nature to bring man and woman together, for offspring, so as to continue the race. One can give up sexual activity, further to the wife conceiving and then focus on unbroken practice. Knowing it to be such, the question of a celibate marriage is not necessary.

Go through the process of marriage and progeny in the natural way, if it is so willed by the higher power. Things will happen as they have to and the same higher power will make you both take up Brahmacharya, at the destined time, if it is so willed. It is not for one to decide for or against progeny, but accept the will of the Lord, letting things shape up naturally.

2. Let go of the botheration, let go of the decision and let things proceed naturally. If a celibate marriage is willed, it will happen. If it is not willed, it will not happen. One should not decide this or that, but accept that which happens as the will of the Lord, as long as his actions are within the bounds of Dharma. It is not in one's purview to bother, when HE decides and takes care of everything.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

ABout kundalini. I understand the practice of brahmacharya but after that, to awaken kundalini and make it go upward do you have to visualize it or bring it to the head using your will and imagination during meditation? Are they other easier methods?

Answer

Why do you want to develop the desire to awaken Kundalini? Desire is the first impediment to realization. Do the described Sadhana, follow the lifestyle and mental perspective suggested earlier and develop quietude. All that has to come, will come to such a one. Nothing more is required.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

QUESTION: Hello, a long ago i wrote you asking if some countries are less moral than others and you said only that races are in different stages of evolution. Is this related to morality, to a race or culture? I never understood that. Sorry, by morality i mean brahacharya but other things as well.

ANSWER: What is morality? Doing one's Dharma properly is morality and nothing else. He who does his Dharma right practices Brahmacharya, without his own knowledge, automatically. There are those who do so and those who don't, in all countries. It all boils down to how evolved (closer to his self) one is. There isn't any generalization here, in terms of race, caste or creed, which are all superficial things and not real.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Ok thanks very much but is it irrespective of gender too? Do lust works the same in men and women? For example women are more morals and live more years than men everywhere but at the same time the cause of lust in man is the woman. The years of life difference is not because of wars as some say because this happens in countries that never are at war like Canada, swiss...

Answer

1. While it is much more difficult for women to develop 'Vairagya' (detachment), their nature being influenced by 'Maya' to a larger extent, gender has no connection with morality or realization of the self.

2. The cause of lust in man is not woman. It is his own 'Agnyana' (ignorance)

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Is it okay to use running(like training for the Olympics) as a tool for meditation to burn off karma because of the strenuous training.

I wanna get up to 100 miles per week. Is it healthy for long term?

Should I take on a sattvic diet even if I'm an athlete?

I'm 22 years old.

ANSWER: 1. Physical activity is beneficial when it is moderate and not extreme. Strenuous physical activity does not in any way help meditation. Rather, it becomes an impediment.

2. No. The human body is not designed for that. It will not be beneficial in the long run.

Eating meat does not pose a problem to an athlete, as long as there is commensurate physical activity in the form of training or practice to burn the same.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Okay. What if I reduce the 100 miles per week and made all the running easier and still got faster in the long run, would you support that?

My goal is to run a mile under 4 minutes, and I'll(with God's help) do it within 3-6 years or more, as long as I take the runs easy I'll be meditating at the same time. Doesn't this go along nishkama karma?

Also I thought eating meat wasn't good for karma because we're eating a living being.

Sorry if the questions seem lame.

Answer
1. Running, if carried out, should be moderate and within limits. Pushing the body to extremes is not conducive to Sadhana. The human knee is not designed to withstand fast and strenuous running over a long period of time.

2. Working without attachment for the fruits of one's action is 'Nishkama Karma'.

3. The universal life force is working in all beings, be it plants, animals or even inanimate objects. The law of creation is not bypassed, as long as one consumes that which is required, just to the extent necessary for his sustenance, based on the nature of his activity.

Eating meat is not advised for the beginner aspirant as meat is highly 'Rajasic' (activating) in nature and thereby increases the chances of aggression, passion and unrest, which can cause a break. The past Vasana-s (impressions) are still very strong in the beginner, making him vulnerable to downfall.

Meat requires large amounts of physical activity to be properly digested and assimilated. A Yogi spending much time in meditation and Sadhana, in a sedentary manner hence does not require meat, which can become toxic under such low activity conditions.

This does not apply to an athlete indulging in high frequency physical activity. However, excessive physical activity will not leave much energy left for Sadhana. One should hence be moderate in all things, so as to conserve much energy for Sadhana.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

India,China & a few other asian countries have witnessed a genocide level of infanticide of the female gender.Asians mostly have a predisposition towards a male offspring.As of 2011 60 million women are reportedly missing in india in purview of a balanced sex ratio.The future looks grim as no govt. effort is working.

I have 2 questions as below:

1)Is abortion for reasons like gender selection/handicap/deformed foetuses a crime as per vedas/shashtras/dharma.

2)Why such a fate has befallen women in asian countries.Is this nature's way of putting a barricade to the exponentially rising human population.

I ask these questions on this forum as I believe without a balance of purush & prakriti in society many individuals in future will have lopsided personalities & thereby won't be able to reach a state of brahmacharya.

Answer
1. Aborting a fetus is incorrect action, which results in accrual of much negative karma.

2. The why and how of things is a matter concerning this world dream, based on the past karma of individuals.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: I read about your experience during your first two years of Brahmacharya on having frequent bouts of illness and some very severe. I've been sick a few times during my first four months without having any slips. But I am taking medications(some lower sperm count) from doing schizophrenic activity in the past. I've started to exercise(running) since this past week, but I've improved quite dramatically as before I wasn't practicing Brahmacharya.

I've pretty much eliminated desire for a lot things including a relationship/friendship with a girl. I always keep my thought in check if the desire reappears(this happens a lot right now).

I also feel that I'll pay the price if I get attached to enjoyment of any of the five senses(indulging in foods that taste good, listening to soothing music, etc.) Since I've started running again I've just been eating salads with no dressing, drinking only water and milk, and fruits, and a bag of candy(once a week).

I always thought that Brahmacharya could help anyone achieve a task that seems impossible(physical or mental).

It seems like all you have to do is perform your sadhana on daily basis, and the rest will get taking care of. But I always thought we're suppose to suffer to burn off all the happiness we had in the past. It's like the "no pain no gain" saying. I thought we should create our own suffering but do it slowly.

What type of challenges(we should create our own challenge) occur in the later stages of Brahmacharya?

ANSWER: 1. Nothing more than performing honest and unbroken Sadhana, with surrender to God is required. To him who subjugates the Ego, remains humble and has perseverance in applying the Yama-Niyama-s of Yoga, all situations get tided over.

2. One should not become overconfident, thinking he has achieved invincibility, just by a few months or years of Sadhana. He will soon be humbled by the next layer of Samskara-s, which surface with enough turbulence to unsettle him, as a leaf get thrown about in a whirlwind.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Is there a book for how long we do the asana practices(they look impossible to do).I'm very inflexible and I have chronic pain in my hip when I get further in my running training.

ANSWER: Asana-s are to be applied, for as long as comfortable. The duration gradually increases with practice, in the course of time.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: I found a book on amazon called Asana Pranayama Mudra Bandha. It has over 400 practices(poses). Should I spread all these practices throughout the week/months and become a master within 3-5 years?

Answer
It suffices if the Asana-s suggested in past answers are applied, in the way advised. One's aim should be to perform Asana-s to help easen the further practices of Pranayama, Pratyahara & meditation, so as to attain Samadhi and not become an acrobat performing physical poses. This much and not more is the significance of Asana-s. The mind should focus on merging into the self. That should be the focus.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhananjay,

It seems my words have a great deal of charisma. Ordinary people are quite magnetized and taken by my personality. It is said a sign of "Ojas" is powerful charisma, and powerful influence over worldly minds. However, it has only been 8 months of brahmacharaya. Are these signs of sublimation into Ojas?

Answer
1. Why are you concerned with with others think? This is the first sign that the Ego is being glorified, which always ends in a downfall.

2. That which comes, comes from HIM. Nothing comes from the 'you' (Ego) which is experiencing these things. So work at overcoming the false self first, not getting caught in the web of Maya.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Sir,
I have read Swami Sivananda's book on Brahmacharya. I have seen his list of forbidden food items which include onion and garlic. However I am unable to avoid onion as it is a frequently used ingredient in our family recipes. Also, within a few months, I will be trekking at the Himalayas, where fresh food is difficult to get (Swami had strictly advised not to eat food left over for days) and I have been advised to eat garlic as it is in an extremely cold region. Should I still avoid garlic? These are my two concerns. If necessary, I am ready to cancel the trip.

Another query: How do I get good sleep? Every norning I wake up, I don't feel energised. I have to get up and go to college. I never feel active throughout the day.

Answer
1. Those are general pointers, to be applied when possible. When one ventures outside, it may not be possible for strict enforcement of the same. Hence beginner Yogi-s are advised to venture out only when necessary.

2. If a life of Yoga & Brahmacharya, with all the suggested Yogic practices is applied, with 4.00 A.M wake up and 9.00~9.30 P.M sleep, deep sleep will come in the course of time.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

The focus of the glorious practice of brahmacharya is to irreversibly realize that one is the atman and that one alone is real. A few queries as I embark upon my 9th month of unbroken celibacy with the grace of the almighty and the soul who realized him, Swami Sivananda.

1) Attachment to the body or feeding the sense pleasures is said to be something to be avoided. I understand this and accordingly try to limit my palate a few times per week (by eating plain curd rice with little or no side dishes). However, sometimes one feels compelled to treat the body because the body is like a vehicle-impermanent, yes, but nevertheless requiring maintenance to be useful for a long life, which is also why we do yoga asanas and such. Is it wrong to satisfy cravings for certain sugary foods or tasty foods once in a while? Is it wrong to receive a massage after a long football match which leaves one's body enervated? Is it wrong to take a strong dose of headaches tablets when one has a cold? I do not know the right perspective to take with the following.

2) I have in the past mentioned to you of one fellow, a cunning genius with malintent, who has bad-mouthed me to my community. I became aware that this nonsense has only continued to spread of late and it is plaguing all my relations. What is my duty here? Must I explain to others about him? I fear that will only backfire as he is much more cunning and intelligent and will leverage these statements into advantage. At the same time, quietude has seemed to do nothing. In the real world, doing one's duty and remaining quiet seem to be two different things. Kindly advise.

3) A second fellow I know of is "oily"-He recognizes that I understand people well and has consequently, out of jealousy and insecurity, attempted to make me look foolish on various occasions. Once again, I wonder whether it would be advisable for an aspiring sadhu to calmly teach him or tell others about him, or remain quiet and hope all this passes by?

4) I often feel that every event in my life has shown me that my destiny is to eventually be a full urdhvareta yogi. I have realized that the women body is nothing more than a mass of decaying flesh due to my childhood interests in studying anatomy. Various cunning geniuses have attempted to seclude me (As mentioned above) or make disparaging statements about me. My niece, who had so long lectured me on brahmacharya, ran away a few weeks ago to live a householder life in an illicit relationship with another man.

5) Kindly explain why ONE soul should go through so much torture? Sometimes I want to cry. I have no true friends because people sense that I merely play roles and do not get attached. Cunning folks have attempted to seclude me. All I have left are a tenuous promise to Swami Sivananda and faith that following this path will lead to bliss. But will it? The doubts linger. I look at others partying. I look at those in intimate relationships. Etc.

How can one strengthen one's faith to be as strong a rock, impervious to doubts? I constantly doubt and doubt. All I have are your answers on this forum and Swami Sivananda and Krishnananda's teachings. I don't trust many other yogis because many are charlatans.

Awaiting your response with much gratitude.

Jakob

Answer

1. There is no restriction as regards eating the food one likes, as long as it is done in moderation and not extremes.

Massage by itself is not advisable to the beginner as there is an intermingling of Prana-s in the process. If taken, it should be limited, under hygienic conditions and only from a member of the same gender. It should never be taken from the opposite gender.

When it becomes unbearable to bear a cold or the like, one will take recourse to some form of medication automatically. It is a natural process.

2. Simply hold on to your Sadhana, do your duty and be quiet. All things will get tided over.

3. To be quiet, calm and do ones Dharma cheerfully is what is required. Jealousy concerns the one who indulges in it and who will reap the resultant karma. Why should you worry about it? Be quiet and be in peace.

4. One should do his Sadhana with surrender to the Lord and be quiet, accepting that which comes in destiny. What others do should not be one's concern.

5. To make one realize that the Atman (self) is the only truth & the only friend, this Leela is being enacted. All that which is perceived by the senses and conceived by the mind is unreal and will hence fade away one day.

It is natural for the Yogi to be put in harsh conditions, in the course of destiny, so as to make him realize the truth. Suffering is the way to realization. To the one who perseveres, light eventually shines at the end of the dark tunnel, leading to residence in the bliss of the self. One need not worry, doubt or fear. Those who surrender to HIM completely, are always taken care of.

Do the suggested Sadhana with even more zest and commitment and never deviate. The time will come when there will be no doubts, fears or worries, further to merger in the Atman (self). That strength is without a second and complete.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I have read an article on 'Why many people who practice meditation shave their head?'. It was written that when we cut our hair, our body energy flow towards our head in large amount to restore hair which were lost. So, that extra energy helps in meditation.

And this is the reason why they shave their head on shivratri, a night before amavasya when full moon's energy and body energy coz of shaved head can be utilized for meditation.

But You suggest to have long hair?

Answer
The body (and therefore hair) are impermanent coverings around one's Atman (self), which will one day ripen & fade away. Those instances, where people shave their hair on a holy day or some time during the year is only a symbolic representation of letting go of one's attachment to this body (Asat) which one is not. Man is attached to his looks and body appearance, through Avidya (ignorance), and as a result takes great care to maintain the body and its parts attractive, through 'Dehatma Buddhi' (erroneous assumption that he is the body). This attachment is a hindrance to realization of the self, for attachment to the unreal always ends in suffering.

Donating hair to the family diety or at a holy place such as a temple (by tonsuring the head) is also performed for the very same reason. God has no use from receiving a devotee's hair, nor does he bless someone just because that person shaves his head & offers hair at the holy place. The activity is only an opportunity for the common man, who is engrossed with the unreal things, to develop some 'Vairagya' (dispassion), by aligning his mind towards God and letting go of something which he is attached to (hair).

The Buddhists also shaved their head for this reason alone (to develop detachment) and not any other. There is no benefit in terms of energy, through shaving hair. Shaving hair does not improve meditation by any extent. Meditation is achieved through merging the mind into the self, further to displacing past Samskara-s and Vasana-s and not by other means.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Why does society portray men as lusty beings and women as being chaste and pure? It is utter balderdash isn't it? Women are also as lusty as men. They also watch porn, fantasize, masturbate and indulge in sexual activity, yet it is men who keep on getting blamed.When will society understand this simple truth that lust doesn't see gender or age, it attacks every human being on this planet. Even Srila Prabhupada had called women lustier than men. During ancient times also the belief was that women were more lustier than men.

Answer

Whether women are more lustful than men or not, whether the society says so or doesn't, in what way does that improve your well being and take you closer to knowledge of the Atman (self)? An honest aspirant should have his mind fixed on Sadhana and not on how the world reacts to different issues.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Hi Dhananjay.

A very good day to you. I have a few questions to ask if you do not mind.

1) It is vital to let go of one's ego. I believe I am selfless person, but even this statement can basically conclude that I am indeed selfish & acting on ego. How can one forgo ego completely? I often care what other think of me; this is not about feeling proud of myself; but I fear I might have hurt them in any way; that makes them to think and act as such towards me. I wish for a harmonious and peaceful relationship and I often care about what other needs and feels. Does this still concludes if I am acting/thinking based on my ego?

2) I have read on Atman, Brahman - and the concepts (Tat Tvam Asi, Aham Brahmasmi). But I feel loss and hopeless when I indulge in sexual activities. I understand that the ultimate reality is that everything is Brahman and the body/relationships/material we possess are merely Maya - that Atman are the product of the Brahman. I however wish not to lose the relationship I have; would I still be able to experience Brahman i.e. the Almighty (the energy).

3) I am in a relationship with a sex worker. I am 25 whilst she is 20. She is forced to do so as she is a single mother & it is poverty driven. I love her as she does on me. I understand her work & her life completely. She states that she will stop this work when we are married. Is it a sin to get married to a sex worker who indulges in sexual activity every night? I have also read that a person who sells their body (divine shell) have their souls tainted. Is there any way that she can recover from this if she has complete remorse?

4) Based on my understandings, to feel God, one has to be in a peace & relaxing state; with emotions in check and the senses in control. However, I read that some states the senses should not be rewarded. For instance, listening to good music. However, I find mental peace & the ability to concentrate when I listen to soothing music (rejuvenating). When I concentrate and relax (mental & emotional peace); I feel happy and I feel I should keep others around me (other Athma) happy; this includes animals and plants. Kindly clarify me if I am moving in the wrong direction of feeling God by rewarding my senses i.e. listening to a good soothing music that alters my thinking. For your information, is it wrong that I think by others (soul/Athma) being happy; I am feeling God's presence & energy.

5) Is there any particular food that could enhance the Ojas production? Does exercising & eating protein (soy made) depletes the Ojas? Does protein (natural or man made) contribute towards Ojas production or depletion?

6) Could you recommend me where I can find a personal Spiritual Guru that could guide me on the ways of experiencing Brahman? Some say that the Guru will find me instead when I am ready. Some recommend me to go to yoga & meditation centres. I am however sceptical about this. I would love to learn about this myself; but I feel of getting trapped with my own ego.

7) At times my selfishness (thinking of personal benefits) are triggered when I have negative emotions or when someone act negatively against me (forsaking/sacrificing me) for their benefits/enjoyment. I have tried thinking if they are happy, I can be happy too. But this gets detrimental that they eventually starts bullying me making harsh joke out of me. Is there any way for me to go around this?

I look forward humbly with great enthusiasm for your reply. I hope best that your answers could enlighten me. Some of the questions above has been haunting me from leading a productive lifestyle.

Answer

1. The Ego is to be overcome through Sadhana & surrender to God.

2. One gets married to that Jiva, which is destined to be one's life partner. There is nothing more as regards this.

3. No profession is lower or higher. However, certain professions make a deep dent in one's well being, at the physical, mental and karmic levels. The way out is to fix one's mind on God, perform Sadhana and indulge in actions without attachment.

4. While there is no harm in listening to pleasant music, one should not get overtly addicted or attached to the same, for the beauty of music also comes from HIM alone and not merely from the music or the singer, who are all mediums.

5. Ojas increases with an increase in the time spent at merging the mind into the self. Not by other means.

6. Perform the Sadhana shown to you by the Lord. The Guru will be known at the appropriate time.

7. Being quiet, in the inner silence is the way out, for all situations.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Beloved Dhananjay,

How many sadhanas (Asana, Bindhus, Nadi Sadhana, Pranayama, Meditation) can I do per a day? I am doing 2 a day; one during Brahmimuhurtham and the other before dinner at 6.

5 minutes in Nadi Sadhana is recommended, but should we move up in the amount of time we practice it in each session? I feel that 5 minutes is short.

Also, there is scientific evidence that our testosterone cycle runs on a weekly cycle, climaxing after 7 days of abstinence. I can see this having a incredible impact in my life on the 6th and 7th days of every week that I keep Brahmacharya in the form of strength, mental focus, personal power, etc. Can you give us insight on why this happens?

Also, can you give us your insight on why it is said in the bible that we should rest on Sabbath days in order to give our bodies and minds rest? Surely we shouldn't rest from our Sadhana though, right?

Might my 7th day of the cycle by my true Sabbath day? Sunday is the day for church.

Thank you,

Answer
1. Yes, that should suffice.

2. No.

3. Do your Sadhana and focus at merging the mind into the self. What happens internally, as regards the body & its hormones is only fanciful curiosity, which is a distraction. That which has to happen will happen, by the will of the higher power, who has been running the body as required, ever since birth, when you knew nothing about it.

4. Sadhana should be as regular as sleep, food and other activities. One's self is itself the Lord. How can one rest from prayer, which is worship of one's own self?

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I won't be working anytime soon, so I'm left with free time between the asana yoga sessions that are done twice daily.

Besides sleep, what can I work on throughout the day?

Should I focus on doing the asanas you provided in earlier answers all day? Will it speed up the process of getting to perform pranayama?

Answer
1. Yoga Sadhana is to be performed twice a day, at the suggested times.

2. One can perform any kind of constructive activity, at other times, as may be necessary, with the mind free from expectation, in a cheerful and happy manner.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Since i practice brahmacharya and meditation I tried to change the life of some close friends which go to church by teaching them about spirituality and even the Bible according to this point of view. I told them the Bible teachings from the first to the last book is to "rest in the presence of God" which is by practicing meditation. But the only thing they replied to me was "what, what?". So this is totally alien to them. I explained them for example the psalm of David which is a popular book was almost all about states of mind and meditation, this is clear. The only thing they say is what you are talking about. So how could you change somebody? Those serie of quotes are all about the practice of meditation.

Psalms 4:5 Commune with your own heart upon your bed, and be still. –
Psalms 16:7 I will give praise to the Lord who has been my guide; knowledge comes to me from my thoughts in the night.
Psalms 23:2 He makes a resting-place for me in the green fields: he is my guide by the quiet waters.
Psalm 46:10 He says, "Be still, and know that I am God;
Psalm 131 - I Have Stilled and Quieted My
Now the Lord is the Spirit, and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is freedom. And we, with our unveiled faces reflecting like mirrors the brightness of the Lord, all grow brighter and brighter as we are turned into the image that we reflect; this is the work of the Lord who is Spirit. —St. Paul, 2 Cor. 3:17-18
The center of the soul is God. — St. John of the Cross, Carmelite friar, The Living Flame of Love
The highest of all things desired is to become God. — St Basil the Great (4th century)

Answer
First achieve irreversible residence in the self, naturally, at all times, which is itself the Lord. You may then decide as regards advising others.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
When you talk about brahmacharya and methods to realize the absolute, for the inteligent person it doesnt mean religion itself is the only way right? isnt better to go beyond religion? If you said all religious path could bring someone to the absolute then the absolute is beyond religion.

Many of the wisest individuals that ever existed in this earth like for example the Buddha himself, the Buddha was not religious but a spiritual philosopher, he never believe this or believe that, same thing with Plato and his succesors in the platonic school, all of them were philosophers and spoke about "philosophy" http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Platonism#Philosophy to attain the absolute, it was not religion of worshipping gods or spirits. It was a philosophy without connection to a particular set of worship. This philosophy is perhaps the only one in the west that goes to the essence of things. The essence then is wrapped in religion and sects.

Answer
1. What is religion? It is a path, a lifestyle and a set of mental perspectives which one follows, so as to eventually align his mind into the Atman (self), away from the Ego, which is ignorance.

2. All religions in the true sense advocate self-realization and nothing else. That is the only objective, whatever be the name given to the religion.

3. Therefore, all those who strive to realize the self are religious about that objective, which itself is a kind of religion. Hence, there are as many religions as there are people, each following a unique way to reach the self.

So the question of being religious or not does not exist.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

I feel like I have lost the capability to make important decisions and move forward in life.

Presently, I need to find a job ... I am jobless for 1.5 years now and my family is becoming concerned, I dont still know where to go, what to do and even where to ask for guidance. My legs feel heavy when I try to move even an inch and there seems darkness and an invisible wall in any direction I see.

Also I broke the faith of girl who trusted me knowing that I cannot be sure if I would be able to ultimately marry her or not and therefore should keep away until god makes a decision.

Yet they are no directions in sight, trying to make a decision feels heavy and I feel like im not doing my duty properly. Im stuck at the crossroads ... It feels i have let everyone down.

PS: I do sometimes feel oneness with universe but living in physical world is becoming harder and harder. I guess my real question is whats preventing spirit to illuminate all my life and not just few moments once in while. Im unable to encompass beingness in daily living.

Answer
Do the suggested Sadhana, to realize the self, with unconditional surrender to God, asking nothing in return. It is that boat alone, which will help you cross the ocean of darkness, following which light will shine by itself.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

I have a question regarding the 'astral tube' that gets established between a man and a woman during intercourse. You have written that it takes a minumum of twelve years for this astral tube to dissolve.
What should I do when I have had intercourse with a girl in my youth (we had a relationship for about six months)eight years ago and I want to marry in the future? I didn't have intercourse with a woman since then, though I masturbated for some time. Should I wait another twelve years from now on before I marry? Or should I count twelve years from them time I had intercourse with this girl (I was twenty one then) When I marry I don't want the astral tube with my former girlfriend to interfere, like you described in a earlier post.

Many thanks,

J.

Answer
Atma Sadhana helps dissolve such connections faster by getting one closer to his self. Do your Sadhana and relax. The rest, HE takes care.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Dear Dhananjay,

I desire to follow Yoga Sadhana in adherence to correct principles. As I have mentioned before, I have now been a physical celibate from several months although mental celibacy is not yet fully attained and I committed a few visual lapses which I wish to never repeat.

1) My first question is on the nature of the ego, mind, and body. I would really appreciate your explanation of how these are interrelated. As per Ramana Bhagawan's teachings, I engage in the constant inquiry "Who am I? or Naan Yaaru?" as he said in Tamil.

But I would like to clarify where the mind rises from. I know that this body is occupied by a Jiva with 5 klesas and kosas, which constitute the karana sharira of past impressions from past births. Is the mind formed when this Jiva uses this physical body and brain to interact with the environment? How does the ego arise? I know the jiva is the pure atman enveloped by the impurities of the karana sharira, but I would like to know where the mind and ego arise from to combat them effectively. Please, please explain this in detail. I read through all relevant past answers but the explanation eludes me. I know cognition of the truth is not the same as realizing the truth, but I want to know that my pursuits are directed appropriately.

2) In order to combat desires in further stages of sadhana, I wanted to experience desires now so that longing would not arise. I accordingly prayed that I would experience a sexual scene in my dreams and this led to a wet dream. Surprisingly, this did not quench my thirst for material pleasures but only amplified them and taught me a huge lesson. Would it be right to say that satisfaction from material pleasures only comes when we will this and develop self-content but satisfaction from brahmacharya occurs automatically with HIS grace?

3) One obstacle I keep facing: After a few weeks or months of strict brahmacharya, the mind becomes "bored" and tells me "hey aspirant, you have been austere for a good amount of time, why don't you enjoy with some visual stimulation or physical stimulation".

The second obstacle: After a few weeks or months, the mind tells me "hey aspirant, why do you bother with all this when you have no idea if it is true? what if life is only about sense pleasures? there are so many bogus swamis out there. maybe there is no such thing as self-realization and maybe it is only for those who are incapable of achieving material success"

Raga-dvesha is to be avoided but I truly hate both of these thoughts. They are like Mareech and Subah who sabotaged the yagna of Viswamitra and Lord Rama.

I trust Swami Sivananda's words that all paths of yoga lead to the same end goal as one realizes they all merge into the ultimate truth-bhakti, jnana, karma, and raja yoga all ultimately parts of the same reality and I will strive to develop all. However, the jiva which occupies my body seems to progress most enthusiastically when the path of jnana yoga is followed and this is why I have such inquiries.

Gratefully,
Jakob

ANSWER: 1. The 'Ahamkara' (Ego) is the effect of the seeds of past karma, stored in the 'Karana Sharira' (causal body)

The mind exists independent of the physical body. It can function even when there is no awareness of the physical medium, as in a dream.

The how and why are to be realized and not heard. One has to do his Sadhana and realize it for himself.

2. Everything occurs by HIS grace alone, for there is none. One's right ends at efforts to unify with HIM. He who does so need not worry about anything else, for all that is taken care of by HIM.

3. These are common excuses of the Ego driven mind, which all aspirants encounter. Keeping faith in the words of the Guru (that attachment to sense pleasure ends in suffering), one has to let go of the same, hold on to Sadhana and cross the ocean of Maya.

4. Different Jiva-s are drawn to different paths, based on their past Samskara-s and the will of the creator. One has to persevere in the path shown by the higher power and not rest till the objective has been attained.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Thank you.

You mentioned before that from the ego comes the mind, from mind comes the senses, and from senses come the body.

This would mean that winning over the ego would mean...the non-existence of the body. What do you mean by this?

Also, when you refer to the "mind", are you referring to the brain/cognitive functioning areas within the body or some other entity?

ANSWER: 1. Yes, once the Ego is fully annulled, as in case of the Enlightened one, there is no rebirth in any kind of a body, be it physical or mental.

Even when alive for the reminder of life after Enlightenment, such a one merely occupies it as one does a house, without self identification.

2. The brain is a physical organ and not the mind. The term mind refers to the process of flow of thoughts, which occurs on account of the 'I-ness' (Ego). When the Ego is merged into the Atman (self) in Samadhi-meditation, no mind exists. It again springs forth on coming out of meditation.

The 'Atma Sadhaka', using the power of Ojas conserved through Brahmacharya, frequently merges the Ego into the self, over a span of months, years or decades as the case may be. This makes the seeds of past Samskara-s which constitute the Ego, gradually fragment and break down, rendering the Ego weak. Eventually, the Ego collapses into non-existence, following which the Supreme force residing inside alone remains. That is the true self. The resultant state is termed Enlightenment or self-realization.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Ah! This is why I can partially achieve a few minutes of pure bliss in meditation but once I enter the world once more, the mind starts to roam, feels emotions, insecurities, etc. It is truly a herculean task.

Without a brain, a person cannot think, feel, or do anything else. Why do you then insist that the ego is the chief culprit behind buddhi, chitta, ahamkara, and manas? The brain allows us to interact with the world, no? The mind arises and protracts like the web of a spider (As Ramana bhagawan put it) when we come in contact with the outside world. In addition, the brain allows for "buddhi" and sensory perceptions "consciousness or chitta" as well. So, the "jiva" is the sum of the body + 4 anthakarnas (including ego) + causal sheath.

What am I supposed to be doing in meditation!? Merging the ego into the self is easy in words but what does that actually entail? I am confused and frustrated. I try to focus on Hanuman and the Atman but it is really an uphill struggle to keep concentration for more than half hour.

However, I have thankfully realized with the grace of the lord that "intellect" or "buddhi" or "acquired knowledge about the world" which comes from chitta and manas is NOT the same as the "atma gnana" or true realization. This is why many highly capable men, much smarter than myself, find themselves ensnared in the throes of sensuality.

Answer
1. The brain is the medium and not the source. It is the source (Ego) which is to be incapacitated.

2. What is to be done in meditation is elaborated in past posts concerning the same.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi dhananjay,
I m 22 year old and practicing witnessing the breath meditation from last 1 and half year and from that i have got a calm,stress free state of mind and developed my awareness but i can't go to the NIRMALA STHITHI(no breath and no thought state) so i started practicing celibacy and from your information i m doing it fine. So i want to ask with a few more years of strict celibacy and meditation can that state be attainable with this technique.

Answer
The desire free mind, when merged into its source, the Atman (self), results in 'Nirvikalpam'. For that, the one who is exerting should himself cease. This occurs further to unbroken Sadhana, surrender to God and strict adherence to all the 8-Anga-s of Yoga.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: sir,

I am wondering if I should continue pranayama. It seems all progress has come to a standstill. I am still at 32 second retentions despite nearly 9 months of brahmacharaya. I should be close to 64 seconds but I am nowhere near that close. What is to be done? Am I unfit for pranayama?

ANSWER: Judging progress or failure is not in your purview, which ends at effort. One should hold trust in Sadhana and practice unceasingly, even if it were to take ages or many births.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: As a beginner yogi, should I avoid travel as much as possible, and avoid worldly mixing? Sometimes, I'm forced to do this because of these job interviews/networking occasions.

Answer
Those are general pointers. If your devotion, commitment and trust in Sadhana are complete, everything is taken care of by the higher power. Such is the road offered by HIM to the unswerving Yogi who wants nothing but HIM and who trust HIM completely, as a little baby trusts its mother.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Dear Dhananjay,

I have been practicing brahmacharya for around 8 months now. The first two months were punctuated by a physical stimulation that nearly ended in voluntary spillage but thankfully I have realized my mistake. I now conduct regular vichara and sadhana in hopes of attaining HIM.

First though, some pressing queries linger.

First, I have ambitions. I want to be one who influences thousands. I want to be rich. I want to help charity. The "I" thought is strong in all of these. Therefore, I decided to merely play roles: I would perform the role of an influencer, the role of one who strives to be rich, etc. But who am I feeling? There is one who desires these things. Is it OK to have desires and preferences? Even in the path of self-realization, one has to WANT the supreme knowledge, is it not? Kindly clarify how I can pursue ambitions while never losing sight of the fact that all comes from HIM, the atman. For example, Prime Minister Modi is a shining example of brahmacharya transmuted into intelligence and magnetism-however, he still seems power-hungry and has definitely not attained realization of the self. I am quite confused here.

Second, it seems like we must create egos in the present world and the yogi will never attach himself to the ego, merely playing a role instead. I create egos based on my desires to attain wealth, influence others, and give to charity. But WHO, WHO has these desires? Do these desires stem from past karana sharira or from our lives, which we are moulded and influenced from a young age as to what is good and bad?

Third, while I have now realized the disgusting nature of most of the sex acts, I am still occasionally severely tempted by the idea of oral sex. I do not understand this-the mouth is a dirty place and a barren one. I ask you this: I am not a married man. My desire to realize the self is true. In order for these desires to be extinguished, should I explore them with a married partner and then discard them OR will entertaining them only make the desire burn more and more?

Fourth, who defines duties? I know instinctively that I have a duty to help parents or a duty to help others or a duty to get goods grades as a student, but who ever defined duty? Could they not be arbitrary? E.g. in some country it could be one's duty to murder others or something. What are the duties I must follow?

Fifth, Sivananda once told Krishnananda "Stay here till death, I will make kings fall at your feet". The statement seems a but ego-driven for such a great saint, does it not? Also, does this mean that following the brahmacharya practice one will get influence and power to help others?

Awaiting your response,
Gars

ANSWER: 1. The primary focus should be on realization of the self, asking nothing in return for the performed Sadhana. When this much is maintained through unbroken Sadhana with surrender to the Lord, those desires which are to be experienced will be sated, in the required manner, at the destined time.

2. Desires concern the Ego and not the self. They stem from the seeds of past karma. He who remains honest in the quest of the self has his desires fulfilled, as destined by the higher power.

3. Do your Sadhana to realize the self, asking nothing else in return. HE will decide which desires are to be fulfilled and which are to be annulled, so as to not trouble you.

4. Each's duty is unique to him/her. The honest Yogi will come to know his, as a by product of his Sadhana. One needn't worry.

5. The intention and purpose behind a statement cannot be known through textual reading of the same.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Unbroken sadhana will undoubtedly be performed, but we must make decisions on a day to day basis as to what we will do. E.g. do I study business or biology? When making these choices, one realizes that due to the causal sheath there are definitely vasanas liking certain things.

Although I will do my sadhana, can I pursue these things I want? For example, I will have to make some money to support myself and my parents. I want to be influential. etc. Is it OK, in other words, to pursue what one is inclined to doing?

My hope is that with 1) sadhana and 2) unexpected performing of things I enjoy I will eventually shave the mind and have no moha to anything. Is this the right path?

Answer
1. One can pursue any creative activity that one finds himself inclined with, but without attachment or expectation for the fruits, in a detached manner.

2. Yes, Sadhana and surrender to the Lord, accepting that which he gives cheerfully, alone free's the aspirant from suffering, which comes in the realm of the mind.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

I know you say not to share experiences during meditation until final liberation. But this has been bothering me for a while and I am not sure how to deal with it properly.

Sometimes times during meditation it seems like the breath almost stops and it feels like there's a force sucking me into void. But right as when it's about to happen, I have a vision of someone, and it looks so real that I get distracted. Like the other day, I was meditating, and it seemed like the mind had come to a thoughtless state and my mom yelled my name loudly from her bedroom. I got up to check on her, but it turned out to be a hallucination and my meditation was disturbed and I couldn't get back to thoughtless stat. Another time I was meditating as I was going to sleep, and my breath totally stopped and I was getting slightly excited and again my mom appeared and started a conversation with me. I knew from other days experience that this was not my real mom and just a hallucination, so I ignored her and kept meditating but my breath had resumed but very slow. The vision of my mother tried to pick a fight with me and said "I am going to get you married to this girl.." and kept yelling and came close. I was afraid that she would touch me and disturb me out of meditation, so I imagined a force field around me and imagined that Goddes Durga and Lord Hanuman are protecting me. Then as I continued meditating....a flock of pigeons appeared and surrounded me. The came really close to me and I knew that the forcefield was not working. One pigeon came and ticked me under my armpit and I couldn't stay still from tickling sensation, so I moved and suddenly all vision disappeared and then I couldn't get back to breathless state. Thing like this has happened at least 4-5 times where visions disturbed me. Can you please give me any tips on how to stay focused when such visions appear?

thank you very much,

much gratitude and love,
K

Answer
Persevere in proper Sadhana, as described earlier patiently. With time, the past Samskara-s which manifest as these visions will gradually break down and vacate, following which meditation becomes steady.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

Thank you for your continued guidance. I just finished one year of brahmacharya. First 9 months was a lot more successful than previous 3 months. Lately I had some visual and mental breaks and even stimulated myself a couple of times but thankfully I realized what I was doing and stopped before having any discharge. So thankfully, it didn't lead to a complete break, and when I would come back in senses I wondered why I was so stupid to almost lead to a full break.

When I analyzed it, three things led me towards circumstances that make me seek out visual and physical stimulation.
1. Due to work stress and change in place, my sadhana was affected, and I hadn't been meditating as regularly and as long as I should.
2.I started playing video games on my phone. For some reason, whenever I played the game, I became more irritable and restless during rest of the day. Sometimes I was so restless at night that I couldn't sleep and as a result there was added stress.

3. I started talking over the phone with a female friend of mine that I used to fancy many years ago. She married someone else and I completely lost attraction towards her but we remained platonic friend and occationally chat over phone or communicate on email. But lately due to others things going on (reduced sahana combined with work stress) I started fantasizing an affair with her, especially on the days she called me on the phone and chatted for hours. Sometimes she would also complain about her husband and life, and this will further fuel my fantasy although I ever told anything about this to her.

After a close encounter with a full break, I have realized my mistakes fully and have resumed Sadhana and stopped playing video games completely. I am wondering what to do with the female friend. Should I stop all communications with her? Or Should I talk to her with Matru bhava, thinking of her as mother. I think I have fantasized so much about her during the years I was not successful in Brahmachrya, that those thoughts are returning now when I talk to her. With most other women I seem to be able to keep mental brahmacharya just fine. Do you think I should completely cut communication with her? What about other female friends in general as far as observance of brahmacharya is considered?

thank you very much,

may God bless you,
Kannan

Answer
Maintaining such contact will undoubtedly end in a break. One should let go of such contact, both mentally and verbally, if Brahmacharya is to be maintained.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhananjay,

I would like to know how an aspiring sadhu is to handle the following professional situation:

I was in a team to present an energy construction project to a board of government agencies. My team was unresponsive the entire project and one of the members was useless, who was incapable of contributing intellectually and was a drain. I pulled much of the project together.

However, on the day of the presentation, I mistakenly wrote down the wrong time and missed the presentation. My group was understandably mad. However, all everyone remembered was the fact that I forgot to show up at the right time.

My action: I sent a sincere message to everyone saying this was my mistake and that I had checked with the government agency, and no one would be penalized for my absence. Despite this, some group members did not even respond to urgent messages I sent out later. We have to finish the rest of the project now.

1) Was my action of taking responsibility appropriate?

2) How does one not get mad with buffoons?

3) Why are people not quick to forgive and forget?

4) How is an aspiring sadhu to handle the rest of the project? Despite knowing that the world is the play of the lord, why do I still have guilt and anguish for no reason?

Answer
1. To err is human. It suffices if one realizes his lapse and takes steps not to repeat.

2. The Ego driven mind gets caught in the unreal and holds on to unreal concepts such as vengeance & non-forgiving. One should do his duty in a detached yet efficient manner and give a wide margin to the undulations of other's behavior. The truth always shines in the course of time and sets everything right.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Good day, sir.

I think it's been roughly about a year and a half since I took to Brahmacharya, or celibacy in my case. Since that time, I've experienced several changes, some of them quite drastic. I feel my capacity to achieve has increased tenfold, and there have also been positive physical changes. However, I've also been dealing with a severe illness, which I am recovering from at the moment, thanks to the help of a herbalist I've been seeing for the last three months. If it hadn't been for you, I think I may have broken brahmacharya, not knowing what to expect in advance.

One has to hold a job in society. Although I dislike my current job, I've also been pursuing a vocation that I'm passionate about and also consider to be a noble occupation (writing). I see it as a means by which one can serve God. So many of my desires have fallen to the wayside during my practice of celibacy, except for the desire to write, which has been all-consuming.

There's also expectations from family and friends, who expect you to do certain things. I feel as my relationship with God grows, my relationship with others is of not much value. I don't have a specific question, but some guidance on what to do and what to expect from here on out would be much appreciated.

Answer
1. It is normal to go through bouts of illness during the first few years of Brahmacharya, when embedded toxins surface and vacate. He who holds on to unbroken Sadhana with surrender to God, overcomes all issues in the course of time.

2. One can pursue any constructive activity that one finds appealing. Adhere to proper transmutation as suggested earlier. Everything else will be taken care of, in the way it should be by the higher power.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

I have a doubt for a long time regarding moksha or mukti..
1)We are all nothing but one Paramatma due to ignorance appear as separate one.My question is why do we appear separated from god at first when we were in a blissful state

2)If we attain moksha at some point of time will that be a permanent state or during the next cycle of creation our karma slate is cleaned and we are born again with another identity.

Sorry if my question appears silly..

Answer
1. To whom is the concept of separation? The answer to this query is arrived at when that one is negated.

2. Who attains Moksha? To whom do cycles & karma concern? Permanent to whom? Who is born and who dies? It is not the self which experiences these things. Hence the question does not exist.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I am 24 year young guy faced lot of problems and resolved by past life regressions (some emotional blockage removal) and I have strong feelings on practicing brahmacharya since from past 6 years but I failed many times , I have couple of questions
1) brahmacharya benefits are psychological effects or really it benefit us to elevate in spirituality ??

2) after some days of (20 to 30 days) of celibacy I feel I developed intuition and my meditation become stronger and I vibrate and rock too n fro in meditation , is this illusion or I am feeling reality ???

Thanks in advance

Answer
1. What is the meaning of real? One should first experience what is real. Brahmacharya takes one's self identification towards the Atman (self), which is the only truth. All else is unreal. That movement is itself spirituality.

2. Practice unbroken Brahmacharya with devotion to God for a few years, ignoring all these signs. That which is to be known will gradually be known.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
When dissolving the mind, how should one perceive it?
Is the mind like a cocoon? Does the atma slowly realize that the inside walls of the cocoon are not the true reality and eventually breaks out of the mind, discarding it, by releasing itself through a small window into the true reality? Or is the mind more like hardened carbon charcoal surrounding the diamond (atma)? Does one have to chip away at the rock breaking down every impure fragment until the resplendent diamond itself appears in absolute purity? In other words, does the mind have to be broken down completely or can it just be discarded relatively whole(via detachment and realization)? Maybe both analogies are accurate and/or inaccurate. Maybe both perceptions apply for different stages of realization. Maybe there is a different way to look at the process of mind dissolution.

If possible, could you walk me through an in depth description of the different stages of mind dissolution? If you have already done so, please say so. I will search for it in your past answers.

Thanks,
Sahil

Answer
1. The Atman is always realized. It does not perceive or conceive anything. It is the mind which is concerned with perception of concepts.

2. Through Sadhana & life experience, the mind gradually realizes its unreal nature, gives up the struggle and merges into the Atman.

3. The seven stages of the mind, in the journey back to its source (Atman) have been elaborated in the past answer titled - 'Seven States to Self-realization'

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

I must ask you about a few queries which I truly believe are difficult to answer and bring me to an undesirable state of mind.

1) The realized sage constructs a temporary ego to interact on the worldly plane, you have mentioned. As a result, when this ego is activated, will he have pain, pleasure, preference, and desires? The presence of an ego creates a mind, which is bound to interact with the body and sense stimuli. Please be practical in answering this-i.e. I cannot believe that when a yogi operates on the physical plane he treats pain and pleasure of the body as the same. Imagine excruciating physical pain-No human with a mind would prefer this to a neutral state!

2) Swami Vivekananda often complained of severe pains and lack of sound sleep and had numerous illnesses. My point in query 1 stands.

3) What is the extent of a realized sage's patience? I feel THERE MUST be bounds. Swami Sivananda was said to be unruffled at slights made at him by others and treat dietetic simplicity with the most ease. This I CAN believe. However, if a realized sage witnesses a crazed lunatic fatally harming his loved ones or committing egregious acts of violence toward the sage himself, will he TRULY not harbor ill-will toward the wretched party? I struggle to believe this. Pain on the worldly plane is pain indeed, is it not?

4) Is the ego the entity which pops up like a thief when one insults it? Is it confidence and high self-esteem?

5) For now, I certainly have not gotten rid of the ego. In my daily interactions with individuals, how must a spiritual aspirant act? I believe that fostering high self-confidence and a strong core resistant to criticism is necessary. How must one take negative feedback from outside if it comes from an undesirable party (i.e. one who is morally depraved or lacking)?

Answer
1. To what extent does an actor playing the role of a suffering man suffer? Such is the involvement. One not in the state of realization cannot function in that manner with complete detachment, as regards the body & the mind.

2. Who experiences pain? It is the body & the mind identified consciousness. Even if there is an external indication or response to pain, through the body & senses, there is no internal involvement as regards the one who is residing within, as regards the realized soul.

3. When the one who experienced good will or ill-will no longer exists, who is there to experience the same? That which is willed by the higher power occurs through that body & mind even then, as at all other times. Situations touch it not.

4. Confidence or its lack of, self-esteem, pain-pleasure, happiness-sorrow and all other states of mind (which have no substance in terms of reality), are those which concern the Ego alone. The Atman (self) is not associated with any of these dualities, always being in its state of Ananda (Brahmic bliss of the cosmic being).

5. One should play his role as an actor, external appearing completely involved in the script as an actor does, yet in complete detachment internally, holding on to the Atmic state. When such forbearance is practiced in tandem with unbroken Sadhana, the Ego fragments and dissolves in the course of time, following which THAT alone remains.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir,

An aspirant must focus his or her energy into constructive activity, which includes moderate physical exercise and intellectual tasks.

Sensual pleasures range from the lowest of the low, which include sexual tricks and orgasm, all the way to classical music, which may be regarded as a refined sensual pleasure. These pleasures must be shunned by the aspirant.

Several questions, sir:

If the sex pleasure is so terrible to the Jiva, and binds the Jiva terribly, and ruins the Jiva at the physical, mental and karmic level for the level of pleasure it affords the Jiva, why does the Jiva so blindly follow a pleasure that leads to destruction on all fronts?

I am trying to pursue intellectual pleasures during my break, but the mind is so weaned to sensual pleasures (such as music) that it is difficult to cultivate interest in intellectual pleasures. How to cultivate interest in intellectual pleasures and maintain concentration in intellectual activities? I believe this, combined with regular physical exercise, for me, along with yoga and meditation twice a day is proper transmutation. Currently, I am using the force of my willpower, which is not terribly strong to stand against the agitation of the senses. The normal motivation for intellectual activity is desire for worldly achievement (for more sensual pleasures), but because I do not care about what I achieve in the world, I have no great desire for intellectual pleasures or activity.

Also, if a man's wife cheats on him or elopes with another man (and there is no legal consequence), can the common worldly man kill his wife or the man she sleeps with? Is that within religious norms? I know vengeance is not allowed for a yogi, but for a worldly man, is it permissible under certain circumstances (as he is still under the influence of his own ego)? Will the man bear negative karma for doing so?

Answer
1. Avidya (Maya) makes the Ego run after sense stimulation, further to lack of identification with the Atman (self), which itself is bliss.

2. There is no harm in listening to music occasionally, as long as the music is not sexually stimulating, one reminds himself that the beauty of music also stems from the Lord & does not get attached to the music itself.

3. Sadhana becomes strong, when practiced for a long time, in an unbroken and consistent manner. One should be patient and persevere tirelessly, without expectation. Then, stability starts to trickle, after a long time.

4. One does not have the right to kill another for personal reasons, be it a Yogi or a non-Yogi.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

I have a question relating to the virtues of character prior to the practice of yoga.

Some fellows often have many virtues (such as humility, purity, modesty and kindness) naturally and these virtues have prevented them from engaging in a life of recreational sexuality or masturbation, and have protected them from the wiles of lusty and bad women, and they have pursued other things. Swami Sivananda says that virtue brings a Jiva closer to self realization. However, many of these virtuous souls do not pursue the self and their character remains constant.

Before the practice of the self, I was not virtuous, I was willing to get money by any practice if society approved of it, and politics and societal thought ruled my actions to a greater degree than consideration of ethics. However, I did have an inclination for the self and did struggle for brahmacharaya. Why did I, a fellow with selfishness, cruelty and a lack of virtues, pursue the self when far more virtuous souls do not pursue the self? Some fellows on this forum pursued the self even though they have slept with many different girls and their character has completely changed soon after pursuing brahmacharaya. Do the actions and behavior of a saint prior to the path of the self indicate any level of actual spiritual progress of the saint? For example, Saint Augustine was a licentious man in his youth, but then took to the path of the self soon afterward. Yogi Vemana, for example, was a terrible man and was in love with a prostitute before he turned to the path of the self and became a reputed saint.

Also, I know some atheists who do not have bad habits (such as recreational sexuality and alcohol) yet some people who consider themselves religious and pray have many bad habits. Does religion have any connection to character? Why do I see atheists with bad habits and religious fellows who struggle to be upright?

And if I am born again, will some virtues I may develop protect me in my next birth and prevent me from committing immoral acts? Does virtue, really, have any connection with spiritual progress of a Jiva?

Answer
1. One's character & nature at any given moment is the product of his past Samskara-s & Vasana-s. Atma Sadhana starts to gradually annul the same, bringing one closer to purity. The why and how of Jiva taking up such Sadhana is divine will, as is all else.

2. Religion is a path & belief. The inner nature nature of a person does not change drastically, just because he/she follows a certain religion. Nature, which is the effect of the seeds of past karma takes time to alter.

3. Virtue is the positive effect of consciousness coming closer to the self. That itself is spirituality.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,
Is the practice of Raja yoga the only way to realise the self..In bhagavatha purana it is said chanting god's name is alone enough in kali yuga..Also it is said if one dies on some auspicious day like ekadashi or mahashivarathri he attains moksha even if he is a sinner..Does he realise the self at the time of death..Really confusing sir..Please explain this

Answer
1. There are different approaches to the 'Yuj' (union). Raja Yoga is one such.

2. Chanting God's name is also an approach. Those who are inclined towards Bhakti Marga (path of devotion) find it easier to focus on the self through such chanting.

3. When a Jiva is ripe enough to realize the truth, his past Samskara-s having been roasted to that effect, the truth is revealed irreversibly. It may be coincidental that such a Jiva leaves the mortal body on a day of religious significance. Mere death on a day called auspicious cannot change the balance of the seeds of past karma blocking attainment of the truth.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello sir,

Can we say those who follow the path of devotion are generally in a state of ignorance and less evoluate than those who follow the path of knowledge and practice direct methods such as yoga, internal alchemy, etc? I remarked the path of devotion is almost only followed seriously by women or men o9f the low classes but almost never by very inteligent people. Its fact.

Answer
1. Such a statement is itself the sign of ignorance.

2. There are as many paths as there are people. None is higher or lower. Each being takes a path suited to its individual nature.

3. All beings are divine. There is nothing but divinity everywhere.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

1) My belief now is that the process of "playing the roles perfectly while being internally detached" puts one in a half-hearted state in which nothing is accomplished. If one seeks to immerse himself in his roles, as I will now do, there is no possibility of also "being internally detached". Swami Sivananda ate heartily, laughed cheerfully, and kept himself busy for 12 hours each day, apart from seva and meditation. Are my views appropriate?

2) I voluntarily broke my brahmacharya by spilling rethas because I felt no transmutation occurring. I do not wish to ever repeat this again because 8 months of continuous willful brahamcharya were broken in the process. This is ALWAYS the issue; great progress in health, vigor, and intelligence follow the first few weeks of celibacy followed by insipidity and tamas. The desire for a supportive mate still remains.

3) I went to Gunther Von Hagen's Body World exhibition and got a detailed look at what this body really is: A conglomerate of flesh, tissues, and bones. It was very revealing. Yet, all this did NOT get rid of my love for my family and my desire for a supportive mate in the future. Interesting, is it now?

4) My analysis of great rishis of yore has led to the study of siddhis and riddhis. Vivekananda's photographic intelligence, Trilinga Swami's bhuta ganas of control of the elements, and Hanuman's bhutajaya capacity to assume any form are all wonderous. Are these rishis with these capabilities today or does the Kali Yuga preclude the obtaining of these powers? Also, I find it interesting that we have no videography evidence for all!! How does one maintain belief given the lack of visual evidence?

Humbly yours,
Jakob

Answer
1. If there is a halfhearted feeling, then the role is not being played right. A good actor enacts his role heartily, with full conviction, yet always being the self alone.

2. One should first develop patience and forbearance. Let it take months, years or lifetimes.

3. Desire is overcome through experience and 'Gnyana' (knowledge of the truth), for which one must apply devoted Sadhana.

4. To whom do Siddhi-s concern? As long as that entity exists, there is no scope for Gnyana. As long as there is no Gnyana, there is no Ananda (bliss) and no Shanti (peace). He who is in the quest of the truth does not hanker after those illusions.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Ive read the previous post. I wont enter in chronology but it seem for any person who is interested in spirituality nowadays that the age that historians call bronze age, (from the first form of known civilizations until 3000 years ago), was absolutely the era of humankind with the most sages. Its seems that modern sages even with much education and religious scriptures available look very average and normal compared to those of heroic times if we believe ancient stories. It is said that those times people's nature was completely different from now, gods and humans cohabited with one another. If those stories are true, Those sages of the past had herculean strenght like many heroes, strong and global magical powers over nature like Moses or Hanuman. Things that dont appear in later ages, more ancient in the past more unbelievable things occured if one believe stories. In modern times, a sage hardly have a siddhi. This is important because many people today doubt the reality of those ancient stories and take them as legends or myths. What happened?

Answer
Different phases have different characteristics in the Leela (play) of the Lord. Variety is the order of the play and that which HE wills transpires. It does not matter who did what, for action concerns the domain of the unreal. The same holds good as regards display of Siddhi-s, for all these are events in the drama being directed by the higher power, who has his own way of doing things.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Beloved Dhananjay,

I go about my days enduring and overcoming, daily. Although, for the most part, the same events happen day by day, I learn about how I go about things and how illusive the world is. I must surrender daily. I have come to a point where it seems imperative to keep my mind on or in my Self, literally (even my body). If my senses are tuned outward, the world oppresses upon me and it seems like I am oppressing some perspective upon the world. Withdrawing to my Self, which is a very peculiar way of perceiving, is comfortable. I must balance how I express myself and how I perceive on a balance beam between these two "states" of consciousness.

I am telepathic. Therefore, I constantly perceive minds' words when I do not have inner silence. It's like I draw their quick opinions. Minds are very, very unstable/fickle.

1. Am I further deluded by keeping these two perceived "states of consciousness" separate?

2. Is keeping to my "within" perspective, by pulling my senses inward, the right way to go about my daily activities? Is there any special teaching that I could make use of? A specific Yoga for example?

3. When I do pull my senses in, sometimes I feel a physical, subtle energy currents being pulled back to my body, rather than them extending from my body to their stimulus. Am I deluded or what is this energy?

4. When I am meditating, I can just "be". I can also just "do" by giving my full attention to my trikuti. I can also hold a "being" and "doing" by keeping a part of my attention in and working through my Self as well as concentrate my focus on my trikuti. Am I learning how my consciousness works? Is this the third way the right way to go about things? I don't quite understand what I am doing or whether it is worth my time.

You are much appreciated.

Answer
1. One should merge into the self. Nothing more is required. Attention on other things such as telepathy is not to be encouraged.

2. Perform honest Sadhana and learn to hold on to the self, detached from everything external (though indulging in activity enthusiastically as may be required). This alone gives the right results.

3. It is all a play of the mind, which manifests in different ways. He who merges the mind into the source has no issues.

4. When you meditate, the 'I' should eventually go away. There should be no 'I' to describe things as you are now doing. There should be no 'I' which did this or that or felt anything else. When that 'I' merges into its source, the real 'I' (Atman-self) alone remains. That is meditation.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir,

As of late, during the daytime, I am very feeling very, very tired at certain points in the day and I cannot help but resting myself in bed. I know that sleeping in daytime is to be avoided, but I am sleeping from 9 am to 4 pm everyday, yet I feel very tired at certain points in the day. This was not occurring before, or about a month ago. Is this just a problem of willpower or volition and should I resist my best to avoid sleeping during daytime? Or is there something wrong with my body?

Answer
1. It is the play of Tamas (inertia) due to lack of constructive work. Busying oneself with useful activity solves the issue.

2. In case of rest, one should not sleep for more than 30 minutes at daytime.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Hi,

When someone meditates with tranquility then sometimes we feel as some nerves or tendons starts pumping in the legs, shoulders and the neck. Or sometimes we feel like another internal body is gettig desaligned from the body or try to go upward during meditation. Is this related to the astral energy channels inside the body who are purifying and then we feel those symptoms?

ANSWER: It is the effect of the movement of Pranic currents. One should ignore these occurrences and let oneself merge into the Atman (self).

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Those informations about the subtle energies of the body and deep teachings are almost unknown and hard to find in common churches and temples. I never heard the body has current of energies circulating around and connected to breath and mind until recently. In yoga and hindu traditions generally one receives the real grace of God but only after getting the initiaion (gnosis) of the esoteric path or receiving the permision of the guru (as in Milarepa case) or from a recognized lineage of masters. This appear not only in the yoga tradition but in many of the esoteric paths of the world which in general remains hidden from the majority, due to persecution. Do you think reading teachings or books is enough without having a guru or receiving initiations in the esoteric paths?

Answer
HE is the Guru. Nothing occurs without HIS grace. Even the wish to take up Yoga to realize the self occurs because HE has so willed. So there is no question of not having a Guru, for it is by the Guru's (HIS) grace alone that everything occurs. That grace may be transmitted through form (physical Guru) or formless.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Sir,

I have some deeply involved questions that need your insight to answer. I thank you in advance for your patience in answering my questions. Here they are:

1.) When I do intellectual activities, I lose my mind in these intellectual activities and I find it difficult to refocus my mind on god. Also, it is difficult to remind oneself of god when one is performing an activity that requires concentration and continuous thought of one object. If one is reading an in depth textbook on physics, how and when should remind oneself that his intellect and mind (which learn) are instruments of god, and one is serving god for self realization yet absorb and understand the material required?

2.) Also, is it alright to serve god for the sake of realization? That is, should one say "god, I am doing this activity to serve you, so that I may get realization and merge in you."

3.) Who is writing this message to you at the present? Who am I at the moment? You have said a Jiva is body, mind, intellect, consciousness and ego. So in my case, am I the ego? Is that who I am? Is that who is talking to you?

4.) When I identify with the supreme, and say I am Atman, who is identifying with the Atman? Is it the ego? Is the ego identifying himself with the supreme self and allowing the supreme self to control his body, mind and intellect through self surrender?

5.) Should one think of the world as god's will?

6.) Also, beauty, strength, grace and all positive qualities come from atman, but where do negative qualities come from? Can negative qualities, for a beginner such as I, also be attributed to the atman? Or they come from another source? Negative qualities include ugliness, weakness etc...

7.) Also, my pranayama progress is slow. You have said before that my body should get accommodated to the practice. However, progress is very slow at the present. Is that a result of previous karma that I am undoing? And is success in pranayama necessary to merge in the self? And can progress in pranayama (seconds of retention) be used to infer the spiritual progress of an aspirant?

8.) How can one think of himself as an instrument at some times and then believe one is not an instrument but is the supreme self at other times? I find this very difficult. If I am an instrument of the supreme, how can I say I am the supreme at other times?

9.) During meditation, you have said one's attitude should be "I am He." But this implies that there are two entities. In this case, who am I? Who is identifying with "He?"

10.) Is the term Jiva that is often used identical to the term ego?

I am sorry if there are two many questions, but please sir, I require your help and insight to solve this current problem I am facing.

Answer

1. Performing activities without attachment to the fruits aligns the mind into the self. Then one is merged with God, despite external involvement.
2. One should serve God to annul the Ego.
3. It is the Jiva (Ego identified consciousness). When the Ego is annulled, pure consciousness alone remains. That is the self.
4. It is again the Ego. The Ego cannot allow or disallow anything, being unreal. HE alone does so.
5. The world is the Lord’s classroom, where the Ego learns of its non-existence, to merge into the truth.
6. Positive or negative does not exist in reality. The Atman alone is the truth and it is complete. There is nothing positive or negative there, being beyond both these. The concept of duality concerns the illusory Ego, which perceives things relatively, further to ignorance.

The more one distances from the truth, it is termed that the more 'negative' things become, for the sake of understanding.

7. Be patient and persevere.
8. One should always think of himself as an instrument, for as long as there is thought, there is an Ego. When one becomes the self (Supreme), he does not think. He IS… Silence
9. The Ego is associating with the Supreme, to annul and dissolve.
10. The Jiva is the Ego identified consciousness .

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

I know alcohol is evil and drugs even more.
Then why some religious leaders like this pope and the previous one take alcohol and receive bottles as gifts from world presidents and in other cultures the religious leaders (medicine-men) take drugs like marijuana or stronger ones to experience ecstasy? Can it bring exstasy, is there a relation?

Answer

Whether someone takes something or doesn't, the property & nature of the substance does not change.The truth remains as it is. Alcohol is a toxin formed by the fermentive action of yeast. It's consumption is neither good for health, nor for spiritual progress. More so as regards drugs. All forms of external gratification are temporary and end in pain. One should look within and reside in the truth. That bliss is incomparable & alone is eternal.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Hello Dhananjay. Firstly I'd like to thank you for your much appreciated selfless service in guiding aspiring Brahmachari's from all over the globe! May you be blessed!!

I have been practicing Brahmachara on&off for the last 7 months now! In this short time(held it for +- a month @ most) I have experienced elevated states of being I'd never thought was possible before the practice! Everything just seems to go right when I'm committed to Brahmacharya, It just feels so natural! Thus I want my Brahmachara to go on forever & I'm thinking of using hypnosis to be free of sexual thoughts, sexual arousal and lust-so that I can be in an uninterrupted state of chastity. What are your thoughts on this? Should I go ahead with the experiment? What are the the dangers and advantages of such a method?

Please kindly share your valuable opinion, Sir.
Thank you :)

Answer

1. Hypnosis cannot produce Brahmacharya, which is residence in the Atman (self).

2. Brahmacharya is achieved through Sadhana, by gradually annulling the past Samskara-s (impressions) & Vasana-s (tendencies) blocking identification with the self.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
hi sir,

Today, I looked at the picture of a woman to see what beauty existed in her and if I had strength, but I felt lust creeping in me and soon after, I resolved to stop looking at these images, and God saved me, but I had a very strong desire to look at her image.... I assume looking at the photo of a woman to test strength is foolish?

Also, it is about 10 months and I fear losing everything to a break. I'm scared of losing the seed before one year, which would also depress me terribly. What must I do to get over this fear? Please help sir. I'm scared of temptation destroying everything.

Answer
One should avoid all forms of mental deviation, surrender to God and hold on to Sadhana, with surrender to God. Willfully deviating will only hasten the chances of downfall.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

A very simple question:

If I am consciously preserving my semen and focusing my mind on worldly activities like career, book-reading, intellectualizing, basically doing anything except thinking about sex, sexual acts and hence channelling my preserved energy to intellectual pursuits - do you think I will reach the same position or place as one who abstains from sex and does japa, mediation, etc? I mean, putting it straightforward, is it necessary to do japa to achieve brahmacharya? Without japa if someone is completely abstaining from any sexual thoughts or activities is going to be equally satisfying as japa AND brahmacharya?

Answer
1. Conserved sexual energy is to be transmuted through three components; physical, mental and spiritual, in case of the beginner.

2. One transmutes the physical component through physical activity or moderate exercise, the mental through constructive mind work and the spiritual component through Sadhana, resulting in meditation. On proper application of all three, the conserved semen is sublimated and transmuted. Failure to properly apply any one of the three will eventually result in a break.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
as i was forwarding on the path of celibacy i was failed always as i have to use laptop for study but it falls me always i was defeated my past karmas as i want to see every women as devi but still also get trapped
i am a student of b.tech age 20 suggest me how to be celibate while having study and no any harmful effect on study

Answer
Go through all past answers slowly, one by one and understand the concept involved. Then apply the suggested methods. Brahmacharya will get established.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Venerable sir,

For the past six years I have been practicing total abstinence (one year continuously) for religious reasons. I am on guard against lustful thought and am vegetarian, but I am not a yogi or Hindu. Strange chronic problems may be occurring, but I can't be sure whether my problems are related to my practice or separate. My work and other demands prevent me from implementing all the advice an aspirant to brahmacharya ideally would follow. As yours is one of the only discussions I've seen about my challenges, I'd like to know more about what you described in http://en.allexperts.com/q/Celibacy-Abstinence-3564/2010/7/Changes-Urdhvareta.ht and what Sri Swami Sivananda has written in http://www.dlshq.org/download/brahmacharya.htm

1. Why do you say "the Brahmachari must be very, very careful in avoiding more than necessary contact with members of the opposite sex in particular and people in general?" What tends to happen (particularly with members of the same sex)?

2. Why do you say brahmacharya usually causes people not to have bulk or fat? I've always been thin, but my BMI is now about 18 and winter is very hard for me.

3. By "downfall in the form of his semen deserting him," do you mean an involuntary emission during the day?

4. Assuming I maintain enough self-control not to touch myself or engage in sexual acts and I remain aware of my thoughts, what is the danger of drinking coffee while practicing complete abstinence?

5. When semen flows upwards, is it noticeable to people? To me? How? Is there tightness in the pelvis or a changed mental state?

6. Sri Swami Sivananda says, "The semen dries up in those who practice Pranayama seriously." Would this threaten my ability to conceive later, once I am married?

7. Is regular bladder or pelvic discomfort associated with brahmcharya? Why? Can it be avoided?

Answer
1. More than necessary contact with the opposite gender poses a bright chance for instigating the past Vasana-s & Samskara-s, which are still very alive within.

Through excessive talk, interaction and the company of members of the same gender, the tendency to boast, argue and indulge in frivolous discussions increases. This again becomes a detriment.

2. Brahmacharya restores the body to have as much healthy fat as required by that individual constitution and not more.

3. Both voluntary & involuntary.

4. Coffee, tea and other stimulants are preferably avoided in the early years of practice. Later, after much advancement, food does not pose much of a problem.

5. Semen does not flow upwards. It is transmuted into Ojas (subtle vital life energy), which inundates the entire system and manifests as Pranic power, which opens the higher Chakra-s

6. That occurs only in very advanced stages, after the Jiva is done with fathering responsibilities, if so destined. If one is destined to beget a child, it occurs. The Lord ensures that which has to happen, in the way required.

7. Brahmacharya relieves all forms of discomfort. Discomfort of the bladder, by itself, is not connected to the practice.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
For much of my life, my immediate experience has been one of fear, anxiousness, self-loathing, and insecurity. Recently, while I still experience anxiousness, the voice which criticizes me for feeling this way (self-loathing) has been significantly quieted. This has been a relief. Does this experience reflect entry into a new stage of sadhana?

Answer
Through honest Sadhana, consciousness very gradually dissociates from the Asat (non-self), to move towards the Sat (self). This is correspondingly seen through increased positivism and resistance to get cowed down by negativity. Loathing (oneself or others), which nothing but another figment of one's imagination also dissolves.

One will eventually become so divine and serene, that nothing but the Atman (self), which is the bliss of bliss, the peace of peace, indescribable, alone remains.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Master,

It has been 10 months of yoga and brahmacharaya, yet there is a very strong craving for woman and sex and looking at women and enjoying masturbation. I do not know what to do. Temptation attacks me even though I've thought it would go away after 6 months of practice. Temptation is becoming stronger and stronger, and I feel like I may fail in this practice. Why? Am I doing something wrong? Why will god allow me to fail in this practice? Have I not been sincere? There is a very strong desire to spill the rethas and the prana that has been collected over many months and waste it.

Answer
1. First let go of tracking time. Snub the Ego, which has no better work than to say "I have done this many and that many months/years of practice". Let that false 'I' be kept at bay.

2. It is one's own past karma, which manifests as experiences. Hence one's right ends at efforts to dissolve such past karma. The rest, HE takes care. So one has to accept HIS will, knowing all that happens, happens for good.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi, Can samadhi be attained in other positions apart from the lotus posture? Ive seen a video about Yogananda attaining superconciousness lyind down in a couch.
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ZIxNgQ-CwPo

Answer
First attain irreversible residence in the self, which is Samadhi. You may then decide which positions work or don't, if you still feel like. That alone should be one's goal, to realize who he is and not fancy for other irrelevant things.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhanunjay ji.. From my puberty i had strong sexual thoughts and i used to fantasize my beautiful classmates.. i never had sexual intercourse because i used to fear of the god and people and STD's. but i thought that to masturbate is not a problem.. i just used to fantacise till ejaculation and i didnt used my hand .. now i am 26 years and i became weak and my immune system got weak and even i got candidiasis..my mouth will be like unbrushed even i brush..so i didnt get concentration..By the grace of Allah i recently studied swami sivanada's book and i got realised but i have job opening in 20 days and i have to get this job for my dignity.. i took ayurvedic medicine for that problem but by taking it i get sleepy and cant work.. suggest me the ways to be healthy in this time and to acheive job..

Thanking you
Shamil

Answer
Follow proper Brahmacharya in thought, word & deed with the suggested Sadhana. The best possible outcome is through this way and not otherwise.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaskar sir,brahmacharies can have any chance to built sixpack?

Answer
1. One's aim as regards the body should be to be healthy & fit, so as to focus energies on realizing oneself. Meaningless glorification of the impermanent bag of flesh called the body should not be the objective.

2. Such efforts only increase identification with the Ego and body, which one is trying to reduce through Sadhana.

Moderate exercise through Yogasana, a sport or any other form of physical culture suffices. Developing six packs through artificial means is unhealthy & unnecessary.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Ok, so I'll briefly describe my story. I have been masturbating since a very young age, and was even encouraged to and told it was perfectly fine and healthy. So I took that seriously and from about age 11 or 12 (before my body started producing semen) have been masturbating 2-4 times per day. Around age 13 or 14 I began noticing I had less energy, and it even caused me to quite soccer (which I was very good at) and my grades began to slip. Around age 15 I started experiencing increased anxiety (particularly social) and at 16 became quite depressed and develops great worries in my life, from sexual issues, to social issues, and it was a very tough time. Fast forward to today, I am 18 and still experience anxiety and depression on a daily basis, along with low energy, trouble focusing, trouble sleeping, and low motivation. I recently stumbled upon the Hindu concept of brahmacharya all the symptoms in Sri swami sivanandas book on brahmacharya he lists regarding the ill effects of masturbation match mine. Now I am not Hindu, I was born catholic, but will quitting this habit and abstaining for several months restore that lost vitality from my young that I long for??

Thank you for taking the time to read this.
-Pete

Answer
1. Go through each and every past answer and apply the suggested methods meticulously. The issue will gradually reverse further to proper transmutation via Brahmacharya, through Yoga Sadhana.

2. Mere abstinence is not Brahmacharya. The sexual energy cannot be contained, if not transmuted to higher regions. Hence one should surrender to the God he believes in and take up practice in an honest manner.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Salutaion from bottom of my heart Dhananjay,

I consider and surrender to Maha Vishnu as supreme God Head.And i believe not even a blade of grass moves without his intention. I wanted to visit 108 divya desams which are adobe of vishnu(almost every minute of the day my mind thinks of visiting here).I am practicing brahmacharya for the past 1 year.So in one of the question you advised to limit the travel as much as possible.i want to make full utilization of my material body in the service of supreme one.I am requesting your opinion on this.Thanks in advance.

in the service of Sri Hari,

Anjaneyalu

Answer
Holding butter in the hand, why should one search for ghee? There is nothing outside, which is not inside. The body is the temple with the Atman inside itself being the Lord of Lords. All that is required is to merge the mind into that Lord within, through Sadhana, following which, one overcomes the illusion of inside and outside. Then, there is no outside or inside. THAT alone remains. THAT itself is Vishnu. One then realizes that all the Divya Desams were always there in ones own self. The search is then over.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Beloved Dhananjay,

Say I have a pastime that I share with my dad. I drink a beer every weekend, once a day, Saturday and Sunday. I limit myself to one and am fine with the limit that I've set for myself. According to your explanation of the Ayurvedic science, I know that loosing the seed is the most extreme way of losing vital energy. According to your past answers, I know that as long as I drink 2 beers per a weekend (or alcohol whatsoever), I will only reach a certain point in my gaining of samadhi and buddhi nadhi. I will reach a limit where I must turn from my sin. I still drink these beers because I enjoy a drink with my dad every weekend that I come home from college. I'm truly enjoying my progress in my path of Brahmacharya and enjoying this past time. It doesn't seem to hold me back because I am always seeing improvements in my focus/strength in daily life.

My questions are
1. How might these beers hold me back from peak performance in my sadhana/meditation?
2. Is the effect a lot or a little?
3. When and how will I understand when it is time to quit any particular sin? Especially limited alcohol intake? I know isn't just sexual immorality, negative emotions, and lack of Atman that we are to avoid.
4. When I do drink, I get a tingle at the same place on my head about halfway through a beer. Is this because my brain is affected? It sure seems like it.
5. Do you believe that I should stop all drinking henceforth? I can buy nonalcoholic beers, although I enjoy this appointment as it is. I see you as my guru, and I follow your advice to the fullest.

Answer
One who wishes to fly upwards, severs all strings which are holding him downwards. The when and how concern the illusion and not the truth.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I stopped drinking. I always drank but then as I practiced brahmacharya for some time ive remarked myself when I drank i felt like the stronger the alcohol is, the more it attracts the vital energy of the head, legs, to the intestine region where the liquid is and that brings the sensation of being drunk. It slows down purification and impede good energy flow. Even if this is not lust and the symptoms are different, drinking alcohol is similar as engaging in gluttony. In that case one cannot concentrate or meditate well, at least for a common person.

Answer
In addition to the debilitating and toxic effects of alcohol at the physical & mental levels, it increases 'Tamas' (darkness & inertia), hindering 'Gnyana' (knowledge of the truth), 'Vichara' (inquiry) & 'Viveka' (wisdom). Under lack of these three, the body & Ego identified consciousness gets wholly sense oriented, indulges in actions not to be indulged in, adding to the seeds of negative karma. 'Buddhi' (fine, discerning intellect) gets replaced with 'Kama' (desire) and 'Krodha' (anger). Then starts falling apart progress towards the self, ending in sorrow & suffering. Hence the wise stay clear of such indulgence.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhananjay ji,
When we browse on internet we may suddenly see popups of semi-clad women by which we may get temptation.. how to turn away from that strong feeling? please advise us?

Regards

Answer
One should limit use to necessity and keep the mind focused on the goal. The sincere aspirant develops his own ways to stay true to practice.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Ive read the teachings of many religions to understand the occult teachings they possess about the place of sex in their rites and practices.

Generally speaking there is big difference of view in relation to the acceptance of sex rituals (dual cultivation) in the Eastern and Western religions. In the Western religions (Judaism, Christianity and Islam), sex cultivation or the left hand path is not accepted. Even the occultschools or societies which have grades and initiations like mystic Christianity (Rosacrucians), the Kaballah and Sufism, it is not accepted. Only some gnostics accepted dual cultivation as a form of spiritual practice. These views that sex is bad and should be rejected came from the Bible and Platonic or Stoic sources. Many people feel there is something missing (the place of sex) in those paths. In the East, dual cultivtion is well integrated to religion. There is a long tradition of accepted dual cultivation. Taoism recommend sexual practices and have bedchamber arts since the times of the Yellow Emperor, Hinduism have Maithuna and Tantrism, Buddhism as well, particularly in Tibet where lamas of many schools practice dual cultivation. The place of sex in those religions is well accepted and became mainstream and integrated in them.

My own opinion is, if sex was created by God, then how can people believing in God say the creative energy God created is bad?

ANSWER: Every activity has a rightful purpose. The purpose of sexual activity is procreation. Extending it to recreation results in degradation of the body, mind and spirit. Limiting it to procreation ensures abundant energy to meet the purpose of life - 'Self realization'.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: But as you may know, one of the many theories of left hand schools is that a concrete substance (semen) should form and manifest, and only after can it get transmutated in higher substances. If there is no semen there is no energy.

Answer
1. No, that is not the case. The Urdhvareta Yogi does not make semen, which is the gross most form of 'Bindu' (seed). It is retained in the 'Ajna chakra' region as 'Soma' (nectar), which is the subtle most form of Bindu. Soma aids Samadhi. Without Soma, a Yogi cannot attain Samadhi.

2. Sublimation only applies to those in whom Bindu (seed) flows down to form semen, not to the one who has reached the status of Urdhvareta. In his case, it is retained up there and there is no need for transmuation, as long as Samadhi meditation is practiced.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Regarding the aparigraha part of the yamas of the yoga sutra,I would like to ask you what really is aparigraha, the definition given is non possessiveness . However after starting practice I am in doubt how to implement this. After starting brahmacharya along with pranayama, I felt as if I have become a sanyasi, not totally but partially as i no longer cared about anything, not in a negative way like careless, but rather i became carefree, while I performed my activities. This was because of certain bliss like feeling which can be equated to taking cold shower, or rain or like thirst for water being satiated,though even this example dwarfs as compared to the bliss. I wonder if this is aparigraha . Just a curiosity which I hope you will satisfy.

Also there is another doubt, it is said that brahmacharya gives a great strength, and that can be channeled into other activities, I have always thought/pictured it as the strength of a person fighting a life or death situation, with adrenaline rushing throughout the body, or a student studying hard for an exam with millions of competitors(again like a life or death situation) thinking of nothing else and completely immersed as there is no time to think of anything else. Is this an example of brahmacharic strength or is this an example of raga(passion).

The second question has been asked because unlike the persons involved in these examples, I do not feel such strength but rather carefreeness while studying and making efforts when i go wrong, also once during as friendly arm-wrestling competition I did not feel the adrenaline rush but rather I performed it happily.

Answer
1. Letting go of the 'me' &'mine' feeling is 'Aparigraha'. Not developing attachment to anything 'Asat' (non-self) is 'Aparigraha'. In other words, it is being mentally detached and unaffected by everything 'Anatma' (non-self). The Ego, mind, body, possessions, relationships, objects and everything perceived and conceived is 'Anatma' (unreal). The Yogi has to gradually let go of attachment to all these unreal illusions, for all such attachment is an impediment to residence in the self.

2. Being unaffected by anything 'Asat (non-self), without the least effort, cheerfully is real strength. All else is only an imagination of the Ego.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Sir,

Very good evening. Could you please clear my following doubts?

1. In case of Mula and Jalandhara banda, we practice kumbhaka (retention of breath) but in case of Uddiyana bandha, we have to exhale completely. How can we perform all three together? what should be state of breath while performing these together. If I am doing these separately, is it necessary to do these together before starting nadi shodhna?

2. I am practicing kapalbhati and bhramari pranayama since long time but I don't do Kumbhaka. I feel bit tired after doing pranayama in the following sequence.

(i) Bhastrika
(ii) Kapalbhati
(iii) Bahaya
(iv) Anuloma - viloma

Please let me know if I should leave these and start doing Bandha, nadi sodhna and nadi shodhna with Kumbhaka as mentioned in your previous answer.

Answer
1. When each is done successively, in a continuous manner, without break, it is Tribandha.

2. Since those techniques have been performed for a considerable amount of time, Asana, Bandha, Nadi Shodhana and Pranayama may be taken up, as described earlier.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Pranaam Gurudev,

It is due to Almighty's blessings in your form that I've been walking on this path for more than past two years.I had a question.

Last night a strange thing happened.I was in a sleeping to semi waking state and I woke up from a sort of sexual fantasy.I don't even remember what it was.I even don't remember clearly whether it occured during sleeping state or during the transition state between sleeping and waking.I just woke up as if I voluntarily was fantasizing although I wasn't.Also,I remember that I was nearing orgasm but I was conscious enough to apply mula-bandha and no ejaculation occurred but some transparent fluid was there and after that when I went to pass stool,this same fluid dripped from my organ a little.No orgasm was there.

This has happened to me for the first time that I can't comprehend what it was because till now only wet dreams have occurred which I remember and nothing has occurred like this.I'm very worried and disappointed.Please help me.What should I do?Is it a break?

Also,as I'm moving forward day by day in my sadhana,very complex types of wet dreams have started to occur in sleeping-transition state,like the one I explained above,which confuse me between voluntary ejaculation and involuntary ejaculation when I wake up.Due to this I feel depressed the whole day but in a day or two I again feel energized and enthusiastic like before.Why this is happening to me?

Aabhaar

Shiv

Answer
1. It is an involuntary release of the lubricating fluid in the dream state (as in a wet dream) and not a break.

2. Do the suggested Sadhana in totem, without omitting any of the described methods. Things will stabilize.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Q- Is it alright to start meditation during midnight i.e. 12 o clock in night or even 11 PM. At 4 AM lot of sound start coming from temples etc.

Q- What is the significance of full moon and half moon night meditation?

Q- How much water shall we drink in a day, does it help meditation?

Answer
1. Yes, meditation can be practiced after Asana, Bandha, Nadi Shodhana & Pranayama at any of the 4 Sandhi Kala-s as described earlier.

2. To the one aspiring for the self, there is no difference. That difference only applies to those behind the non-self.

3. 6-8 glasses suffice for health in general. One should not drink much water after Sunset.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
dear sir
one week earlier during meditation, i felt some opening in the center of the brain, and simultaneously some loosening in my testes. i found that my sex energy started to lift via spine, it felt pleasing as well as scary at first time. I got to know that it is process of sublimation of sexual energy.

the more i concentrate, the more my testes form vital seed(a fluctuating source of chilling energy) and send that to my brain.
1. what is really happening(my age is 22)?
2. it feels heavy when that seed reaches to the brain, to feel relax i eject that energy from the top of the brain(it feels good). Am i wasting it by ejecting it from top?
3. how often should i make it move to the top? wouldn't it get finished one day?
4. please recommend some books related to this process those i can understand more and follow to reach maximum.
5.please recommend any training center nearest to me, i am from rohtak(haryana), living in chandigarh.
your grateful...

Answer
Simply follow the suggested Sadhana and let go of trying to do this or that. One's focus should be on merging the mind into the self and not on energy movements, which occur by themselves. Such a fancy will only distract oneself and cause impediments.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Sir,

I dont know if its a problem but i dont understand this. Before practicing brahmacharya I was around 74 kg in weight and looked normal because its around my normal weight. After some 7-8 months of this practice with empty meditation, my weight is now 61 kg! (which even small girls weight more than me now) and I started to eat more to gain weight and it doesnt really work. But surprisely I look the same physically as if there was no weight loss, nobody even remarked, its strange. When i walk I dont feel any weight on the legs but more in the higher parts of the body like stomach, upper abdomen and head. Why could weight loss happens?

Answer
There is no need to worry, as long as one takes recourse to a balanced diet, adequate sleep and propeer Sadhana. The body will regulate to itself. Brahmacharya by itself does not cause weight loss or gain.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Beloved Dhananjay,

I take in plenty of calories in my diet. I eat all sattvic food. I also take in about 1600-2000 calories a day, and I am not hungry by the time dinner comes.

Is there any change I should make in my calorie count?
Should I eat less for lunch?

Thank you,

Answer
One should take recourse to 'Mitahara' (balanced and wholesome diet), which is neither heavy, nor insufficient. The quantity varies from person to person, based on factors such as activity, location, age and various others. The indication of Mitahara is that one feels fresh and light throughout, without the lethargy and uneasiness caused by overeating, nor the hungry and weak feeling of starving.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Dear Sir,

I included Shirshasana in my practice since a week. Is it normal to feel slight discomfort in the head, and eye? Can I continue the practice and the discomfort will go away with practice, or is there some thing wrong in my approach which gives me the discomfort, and can something be done to improve it?

Heart felt gratitude.

Answer

1. One should learn the proper technique of applying any Asana and then proceed.

2. The duration should be gradually increased and never all of a sudden. Then there will be no issue.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Greetings sir,

I've spoken to you before. Everything is going well with brahmacharya, but I just cannot get rid of my acne. Do you think cutting out meat and/or dairy would be beneficial? My acne used to be more severe, but I took a medication, which I regret taking because it gave me side-effects. However, I've healed up from those side-effects for the most part, much in thanks to a Chinese herbalist. He told me that my acne was my body getting rid of toxins within, so that's why I got side-effects after taking the medication, because the toxins had no form of release. But now that the side-effects are going away, my acne is slowly returning.

Thanks

Answer

One's mind should be focused on merging with HIM, through realization of the self. That is surrender. Then, HE takes care of everything. Whatever happens to this body or mind is also to be accepted as a part of HIS grand plan to release one from this false encasement. HE knows what to do and when, best. Knowing this much to be the truth, be in peace.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

I have not ejaculated voluntarily for the past 1 year, but involuntary ejaculations were still common. I did proper yoga in order to reduce the frequency of nocturnal emissions. Earlier I used to involuntary ejaculate once in 15 days, but in the last week itself I have had 2 nocturnal emissions. I just want to know whether the frequency of nocturnal emissions is normal or might it be spermatorhoea? Thank You.

Answer
If Sadhana is applied in a proper manner, nocturnal emissions come under control and eventually taper, to go away. There is no necessity to invest more thought on the matter.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hare krishna
Hope you must be fine. Knowing great importance of brhmacharya now I practice brhmacharya. Now I am 27. Since I'm one son of my father I am bound to marry for a child. Loosing a lot of every in my past due to bad habit I am a little weak at present. Due to this reason I am also bound to practice level best brhmacharya in my rest of life.That is why I want to Mary for a child and not for sense gratification. And I will present this intention before legal wife from the very first day.
Now I like to ask my question. Taking above into consideration Let me inform you that I want only one child. And then practice brhmacharya for rest of life. My question is If I practice celibacy mentally for 5years at my level best and marry at the age of 32 then how many intercourse will make me father? I want this answer becoz I don't want to waste my veerya beyond One legal pregnancy of my wife. Sir Please answer me in a elaborate way. Becoz I can't ask this question to anyone in my society where I am living. Sir you know whether see is illicit or legal it separate veerya from body and make you week and It is difficult to do your duty(like serving your father,taking care of your child and wife,giving education and good lesson to your offspring and most important spiritual activity)in weak body. For carrying duty I require body and mind strong. For I have to sublimate veerya from now. That is why I am asking this question that If I carry my practice for next five years and marry at 32 then how many copulation will bring me a child (is 1,2or3 copulation)and How will I come on the track of celebacy after this? Sir taking your valuable time please answer.

Answer
You say Hare krishna and yet have planned so many things. Is there anything in one's hands? What is Hare Krishna? It is to hail Lord Krishna as the Supreme and surrender one's Ego at HIS feet. That which is making all these plans, which has all these worries and which is full of doubt, is the one to be put under HIS feet. Then alone it is Hare Krishna.

Do that much sincerely... very sincerely, surrendering everything to HIM. To such a one, HE takes care of everything. The why, when and how... everything is taken care of. One is free as a bird then. That is Brahmacharya.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Hello Sir,

Is it okay to use leather products or is it violating the yama and niyama (violence)?

Thank You Sir!

ANSWER: There is no harm in doing so.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Thank You very much for your reply Sir.

1.But why is it not considered as violating the yamas and niyamas?
Is it not encouraging the slaughter of poor, innocent animals indirectly? Since now a days leather is no more a by product and has become the main product (i.e., animals are harmed exclusively for their skin).

2.Have read many blogs that conclude that even dairy industry is inflicting harm on poor cattle and they are injected with some substance so that they produce more milk and this milk generated also has some toxin portion (due to injection). So,what should an aspirant do whose aim is to remove toxins from his body? Should he still consume milk and milk products?
Milk is a healthy substance but this barbaric world has made it harder to live.Even fruits are being produced artificially...
What to do Sir, we are left with no option...

Thank You Sir for your guidance to aspirants!

Answer
Unjustified and unwarranted harm to another goes against Yama-Niyama. There is no being in creation which sustains without direct or indirect dependence on another. Therefore, those activities carried out to sustain oneself do not fall in this bracket.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hare Krishna,
Sir many many thanks. Here I try to present everything in short because each and every event of past and present situation of life can not be put into words. So please give your valuable advice taking following into consideration.
About 2 years ago I was like in heaven. From June 2012 to Mar 2013 I practiced brhmacharya mentally at my level best.At that time I was 24. I can remember after 1 Or 2 months of practice I was feeling energy. Symptoms of sublimation was clearly found after everyday practice of brhmcharya.I was feeling strange heat in body and this heat was increasing after launch and dinner. Another most important symptom was I was feeling pain in all parts of body and increasing energy in all organs of my body like back,waist,legs specially thaigh of legs and hands.It was not physical pain due to weakness rather it was pain due to sublimation and terrible feeling. All these symptoms was being found in all parts of body through out the day. And after every day practice I was becoming strong mentally and physically. Mostly physical. After 10 months of this practice I really became very strong and was feeling undying prana in body. And this 10 months mental brhmcharya and symptom was still possible after 7years musterbation and 2years physical celebacy without musterbation.So at that time I was in heaven.

But after 10 months I did terrible and heinous mistake and converted my life into hell. This happened due to looking at others success. What I thought was completely terrible mistake. I thought others are gaining everything like wealth, Govt jobs in spite of not practicing attempts to brhmcharya like me then what is the use of my this 10 months practice. I thought simply I do not require only physical strength but also superb mental strength which was not gained after 9 or 10 months. That is why I started Abrhmcharya like others. I started musterbating 3 or 4 times daily. After 3 months I completely became weak and all divine symptoms was disappeared. After this heinous act I felt exhausted mentally and mostly physically fully.In this condition I felt symptoms exactly opposite of my 10 months brhmcharya. I felt pain due to weakness and sublimation was totally disappeared.Later I repented a lot but It was too late. Till now I am suffering like weakness in body, no symptoms of sublimation inspite of practicing brhmcharya at my level best like before when I was 24 and 1/2 month. Now I am feeling great pain like rich person lost all his wealth and finds no way other than suffering. At present symptoms are not noticeable and very rare. Sometimes I am feeling pain in waist area and back due to short of prana. At present I am feeling this pain due to Two reason. One is I lost my hard earned veerya recklessly. And I lost my purity. At present my character is not like before.It became worse than before.The main reason for failure in sublimation is becoz my mind is now being easily get excited with mere thought of erected penis. This kind of thought is coming so many times through the day and this thought becomes cause of my break.Why I am not able to sublimate becoz I am unable to maintain my mental purity like before when brhmcharya practiced at the age of 24.Since I am male it is genuine I am attracted towards female.but due to over and continuous musterbation I am at present also easily get excited by the thought punish and man. Now I am in terrible condition and weak. Sublimation is very rare difficult and very slow.Now I am 27 and repenting a lot for my mistake. If I was aware of consequences of my mistake,I would have never done this mistake. Due to all these things I put a question of Marriage Plan before you. Becoz I have already lost a lot of veerya , character and I am also weak. At present what to do please give me advise. I am also ready to repent thousand times for my lifetime one of the great mistake and hope to gain my previous potential to practice brhmcharya.Lastly I must say Sir I really lost my heaven of practicing brhmcharya like before.At present sometimes I become happy practicing brhmcharya and most of the times spending time with pain in weakness and sublimation. Please tell me possible course of action to overcome this difficulties.

Hare Krishna

Answer

Do the complete set of suggested Sadhana, regularly, without a break, with devotion to God. The issue will be gradually overcome. If marriage is destined by the will of the higher power, it will happen at the right time. Do your Sadhana and be quiet. One's limit ends there.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Hi Dhananjay,

My question is the following.

I'm the second week into Brahmacharya and I feel a lot of discomfort in the genital area almost everyday. I'm pure in thoughts, do not let a single sexual thought to be, but I find this very hard, I'm constantly horny, even if I take cold showers (room temperature/slightly colder water).

I'm frustrated and all the way have an apathy for everything, I have no will to do something.

Answer
Apply the suggested Yoga Sadhana properly. Busy the body with regular physical exercise & the mind with constructive work. Things will stabilize in due course.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Hi
I have hypogonadism so no testes...no testosterone...just external injections of cernos depot every 3 months but every thing is fine now except that I can't procreate
I had a habit of masturbating a lot
I tried to stop it after reading dhananjay's articles on this site only
Now when I stopped masturbation
My penis after a month started paining inside right at the back end and then I felt like I have to masturbate now and I did and all ok but still that promise to the self is broken once again...now question is why did it happen and how to improve on this? What are the impacts on the health? How to do it ? Tell me the action plan
No theory just ACTION
I m a student age 23yrs
Have to be very successful even at the cost of myself my poor habits like masturbating a lot Lack of concentration etc
PLEASE HELP

ANSWER: 1. Lack of testes does not mean lack of sexual Samskara-s, which are the cause behind recreational sexuality, ending in loss of life force.

2. One has to work at mitigating these Samskara-s through the suggested Sadhana. Else, prana collects in the lower regions, leading to physical and mental issues.

The method of Sadhana to be employed is available in past answers.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Hi...thanks for replying I am very sorry but I am not able to understand...please simplify and explain...i went to hundreds of previous answers to find on sadhana...but not able to understand..its diverse can you pinpoint some particular answer or answers where I can find it
Please

ANSWER: http://en.allexperts.com/q/Celibacy-Abstinence-3564/2011/5/Pranayama-Yoga-Brahma

http://en.allexperts.com/q/Celibacy-Abstinence-3564/2011/12/thribandha-khechari-

1. These links will provide the Sadhana to be employed.

2. In addition, one has to go through all answers, so as to get clear with the mindset and lifestyle to be employed.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: The issue is :
I was angry frustrated that I had no energy..my goals were not working out..lack of concentration....so I just started browsing google and came across an article on brahmacharya which said stop masturbation....save veerya and it will help. It was by dhananjay celibacy expert.
I started doing it...failed a few times but finally I could actually stop masturbation...and started improving on the mental front too. I did it for almost a month.
Then on a night my penis started paining badly and then after an hour or so I became frustrated and ejaculated. Then again rose up and started following abstinence and today again the same thing happened and I had to to ejaculate after almost a month long control not because of desire but because of that pain. One thing is common that every time I had taken milk an hour or so before the happening of it.

Answer
1. It takes time and Sadhana coupled with a Yogic perspective towards life to achieve Brahmacharya.

2. One should not get depressed but persist with honest effort, so as to merge the mind into the Atman (self), with devotion to the in-dweller (Lord). Then, the practice gets established in the course of time.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello, hope you're doing well. I have 2 questions concerning pranayama practice. First, I've read that the important part of pranayama is kumbhaka, the part that we keep our breath, weather inside or outside. Why is that so? what effect does it have that makes it important for practitioner? And, also, I want to know how daily pranayama practice, let's say for 20 minutes per session, can help us in brahmacharya discipline?
Thank you and god bless you.

Answer
1. Breath is the gross most form of Prana (life force). Through Kukbhaka (retention), the Nadi-s (astral energy channels) are purged of toxins. This slowly steadies the body, leading to health and well being. The harmonized energy in the physical & astral mediums then helps one reduce body consciousness, stabilizing the mind and bringing it under control, dissolving restlessness. After many years of such Pranayama, the steadied mind, which is put into meditation, stands out of the way of gradual dissolution of past karma stored in the Karana Sharira (causal medium). This burns the dross at the causal level, following which the nature of the Atman is revealed.

2. Pranayama is therefore most beneficial in bringing the mind into a state of equilibrium. It is only an equalized mind which becomes capable of Brahmacharya & fit for meditation.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir,

I am sorry to ask you about this once again, but I require your help and guidance here once again.

I know you have suggested moderate physical exercise to all, but for some strange reason, whenever I exercise, I become obsessed with it, and my mind fantasizes about combining a diet/exercise plan to get a slim/muscular physique at a low body fat percentage. My mind for some reason, is filled with these desires, ever since I started regular physical exercise. I find myself examining the physiques of others and staring at large muscular actors, wanting to obtain their level of physiques.

I think the cause of all this is starting physical exercise. I find myself with an intrinsic and unstoppable desire to go to the gym and exercise, not moderately, but for the sake of large muscle/strength gains etc...

Every time I see another man, my mind sometimes thinks about fighting him or her, or wrestling with him or her, and demonstrating physical strength. In fact, at the moment, it is obsessed with it. I also find I am much more physically conscious, constantly checking the definition of my abs and my muscles to see if they are in perfect condition. It is like my old days, when I used to weight lift and body build obsessively.

Whenever I walk into the gym, the rajasic and body-attached environment that pervades there permeates into my mind, and I myself become more attached to the body. This is a large, severe problem for me, as I cannot have any peace of mind during the day.

I desperately beg for your guidance. I know you have suggested physical exercise, but in other answers, you have said that if asanas are done properly, that is enough for transmutation. I desperately seek an answer and your guidance on this subject, as physical exercise is bothering me greatly, and all the above problems did not exist prior to not starting regular Western physical exercise.

I desperately seek your guidance and instructions. Hopefully, your grace will alleviate the situation.

Answer
1. One will take recourse to that form of physical activity which his/her Prarabdha dictates. It may be through Yogasana, weight training, sports or some other. Each Jiva differs.

2. When one persists with single minded devotion to merge into the Lord, the path becomes known. It is to be known through direct revelation and not suggestion.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhananjay,

First of all I would like to thank you for your advise in the practice of Brahmacharya.

Now I am trying my best to control my diet.

I would like to know if you have any suggestion for someone who would like to move on to a vegetarian diet and the step he need to take to change.

Best Regard
AL

Answer
1. A vegetarian diet helps during the initial years of practice, when the vulnerable aspirant has to fight down his Rajasaic tendencies and become Satwic.

2. When the aspirant surges with single minded devotion to attain the self, the path that is to be taken by him will be revealed from within. It is as simple as that.

Do the suggested Sadhana asking nothing in return from the Lord and accepting that which comes on its own. HE will take care of the rest.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi, Why some religionns and spirituality view the body or forms as something impure if all comes from God? It is an important part of being a human being in my opinion.

If one read Plato or Aristotle, in their philosophies they referred to the body and forms as the Good and Beautiful.

Answer
The truth, also called God, self etc. is alone real. All else is an illusion, as is a moving image on a screen; unreal and impermanent. Pursuit of the unreal cannot give happiness; it only ends in sorrow.

Man runs after flesh, mistaking it as a source of pleasure. The body, which is nothing but a bag of flesh, ever degrading day after day, filled with foul ingredients is mistaken as being beautiful and pleasurable under the action of 'Maya' (cosmic illusion), by the ignorant mind. To ward away this false concept and instill truth, the body has been depicted as the foul bag of flesh it is, to the one in quest of the truth.

The impermanent body has not been recognized as being of substance in any school of thought.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

I've followed your posts for quite some time and have asked you questions previously. I have a few doubts and I would appreciate some detailed answers from yo with regards to how I should proceed on the path of yoga sadhana. I am an American who became disillusioned with the commercial manner of yoga teaching here and sought to learn from genuine realized souls like Swami Sivananda and Ramana Maharishi and what little I know today is owed to them.

1) My periods of absolute brahmacharya are vigorous but short. The energy required to maintain absolute purity wanes as I face stress in life and I end up, after a few months, foolishly abusing myself and losing veerya in the process.

Would you say that it is advisable for me to engage in my sexual fantasies with women such that I get these desires out of my system (I am a 21-year old virgin)? Every time I embark on a period of sadhana, I get the feeling "oh, I wonder how actual carnal pleasure would feel like" and my sadhana breaks at some point. Please explain the route I should take and the rationale. I feel that if I experience these physical sensations, I can sooner overcome them.

2) Are you a vegetarian? Your past answers have given the impression that perhaps you eat some meat or fish products. I do not like the taste of meat or fish but I do eat eggs, and would like to know if they are relatively sattwic as compared to meat and fish. I am an athlete and strongman (and need to take appropriate food for this role).

3) One terrible health problem that afflicts me is Irritable Bowel Syndrome, which involves terrible bouts of daily constipation, feeling of incomplete bowel evacuation, etc. Are there yogic postures, foods, or sadhana techniques that would mitigate this?

I know that the correct stance is to humbly try one's best and leave the rest to HIM. However, as a pursuant on this path, it would be very helpful to gain some detailed guidance from you.

Answer

1. Sexual relations if any, should be with one's lawfully wedded life partner, which is taken to its natural purpose of progeny at the earliest.

2. Eating that which is required for one's life activity, to the required extent, poses no harm. Vegetarian food is recommended for the beginner, as the beginner, who is very vulnerable to the onslaught of passions, benefits from its Satwic nature.

3. Further to proper application of all the methods of Sadhana suggested earlier, the issue of IBS will eventually go away.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

QUESTION: Is a close and friendly relation with opposite sex harmful?, even though it is just limited to being friends and exchange of opinions, motivating/ educating each other and nothing beyond this.
Does this contribute towards abrahmacharya or adharmic in any way?

ANSWER: It is not harmful in the ideal sense, by itself. However, it will divert the mind off

Sadhana, dilute one's efforts & eventually instigate sexual tendencies, following which downfall begins.

The pursuit of the truth cannot afford any other form of distraction.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: You mean to say friendship with opposite sex is the only thing which diverts the mind and dilutes the efforts in comparision to friendship with friends of same sex.
I mean to ask if friendship (of same gender) is not harmful?

Answer
Any activity which draws one into its fold again & again, causing attachment is an impediment; be it through the same or opposite gender.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhananjay,

I was reading about the negative look in the past answers, but I didn't think it was an actual thing until it happened to me. Could you go into it more, please? I had a man stare at me, and he refused to look away. I don't know what his reason was, but I could definitely some kind of negativity/hostility. I'm aware Brahmacharya leads to luster in the face, and usually when I'm public I just try to find my way to wherever I'm going or have to do, but sometimes it's difficult to ignore someone who is being so obvious with their eyes. It often feels normal when women do it, but with men the entire vibe is different, and I can feel it disrupting my emotions. I also work outside in public, so it can be really annoying when you're just trying to work.

Much thanks

Answer
The method to overcome the issue is to gradually displace the one within (Ego) which has no better business but react to everything and nothing. Then, the Shanti (peace) of the Atman (self) alone remains.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Sir'

I read in many sites including here that practicing brahmacharya gives health and its true. But its true in youngsters or beginners. For the advandced person of any spiritual tradition it seems it doesnt do much difference. Like the sage Ramana Maharshi suffered the same weaknesses that any other common old person. There was a famous monk Padre Pio who could do many miracles of bilocation but he used a wheelchair because of arthritis and an hernia and was not that old. SUffering illness even from his childhoodhttp://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Pio_of_Pietrelcina#Poor_health. SO there is change in youngsters but not in advandced practionner, why?

Answer
That which is a part of 'Prarabdha Karma' (karma destined to work out in this existence) cannot be side stepped, even as regards the realized sage. That remnant effect of past deeds is to be worked out.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
As a muslim and I do respect other religions as different path to reach God but if they respect Islam. I have somewhat high knowledge about Islam which mean surrender to God and the mystical method of prayers as described in the Quran. Now I see much differences between Islam and eastern religions such as Tibetan Buddhism and Hinduism, but not so much difference with the methods of prayer used in other Abrahamic faiths like Judaism or Western Christianity. There are many Tibetan tantric Buddhists during so called Kalachakra and Hindu Brahmins that broadcast in television that speak very negatively about Islam's view on moral questions and say it is a sexually perverse religion. Now referring to sexuality, I ask, but what about one of the most disgusting rites in Tantra practiced by so-called celibate monks. And how come those so-called monks talk about vows, purity of heart and deeds and then criticize muslims for immorality?

In Islam and other monotheistic faiths, never, absolutely never a mix of sex rites and worship of God happened, coitus is only for procreation, no true servant of God will ever say he is worshipping God that way, it would be a disgrace and a blasphemy. If the so-called celibate monks desire to copulate there is enough time for copulation outside prayer time. And what makes the vitality and strenght of Islam is that prayers are offered directly to God, there is no need of intermediaries, there is no offering to anthropomorphic deities (spirits), for these are nothing except creatures according to the Quran and the saying of all the prophets' pbut. For if deities were important, where is the worship (where such sexual rites were practiced) of Canaanite and Babylonian gods found now? They were swept away by God himself. There is only one God and he is the eternal, spirits are only creatures, not deserving any form of worship. Not even the servant of God deserve worship, only God is Great.

Say: "I call only upon Allah and do not associate anyone else with Him." Say: "I possess no power to do you harm or to guide you right." Say: "No one can protect me from Allah [if I should disobey] and I will never find any refuge apart from Him." (Surat al-Jinn: 20-22)

Say: "Have you thought about your gods, those you call upon besides Allah? Show me what they have created of the earth; or do they have a partnership in the heavens?" Have we given them a Book whose Clear Signs they follow? No indeed! The wrongdoers promise each other nothing but delusion. (Surah Fatir: 40)

If you ask them, "Who created the heavens and the earth?" They will say, "Allah." Say: "So what do you think? If Allah desires harm for me, can those you call upon besides Allah remove His harm? Or if He desires mercy for me, can they withhold His mercy?" Say: "Allah is enough. All those who truly trust put their trust in Him." (Surat az-Zumar: 38)

Say: "Who rescues you from the darkness of the land and sea? You call on Him humbly and secretly: 'If you rescue us from this, we will truly be among the thankful.'" Say: "Allah rescues you from it, and from every plight. Then you associate others with Him." (Surat al-An'am: 63-64)

The Prophet Muhammad (saas), who reminded his people that Allah was the only god, also told them that nothing they might set up alongside Allah could ever create anything nor had it any power to harm or benefit any. The verse regarding this:
Say: "Call on those gods you make claims for apart from Him. They possess no power to remove any harm from you or to change anything." (Surat al-Isra': 56)

Answer
The truth, also called God, Supreme, Almighty and many other is only ONE. When man realizes the truth, he becomes silent. The knowers of truth are beyond religion. There is no religion there. That alone is the truth and that alone is of value. Rest is only fancy.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Will you please answer a couple questions regarding the use of healing by an udvareta:

1. Would a yogi (with the power to heal) go around healing everyone and anyone, if he wanted to, by the grace of God and/or would he heal them if it was within their prarabdha/faith?

2. Do they ask for healing and/or would he offer it?

3. Did the yogi stumble upon his power to heal, seek the power to heal, and/or did God grace him with the power in order to use it?

Answer
HE is the director and one is an actor in the play called Samsara. One's duty and right therefore ends at performing, as willed by HIM.

The true Yogi committed to the path of 'Saranagati' (surrender to the Lord) does not impose his will as regards any matter, in this play of the Lord. He remains a willing tool in the hands of the higher power, letting that which happens to happen, as willed by the Lord. If the higher power wills for someone to be healed, using the Yogi as a medium, it occurs.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Dhananjay,

thank you for providing this service.

Two and a half months ago, I (36) practiced Uddiyana bandha for the first time and maybe a bit excessively - and most probably not correctly.

Ever since, I feel dizzy most of the day and it seems as if I cannot move my eyes as quickly as before.
Rigorous physical activity makes the vertigo more intense and it will stay that way for 2-4 days afterwards; if I stay physically inactive as much as I can (except for the normal day-to-day activities), it will gradually decrease in intensity without going away completely.
Walking around in a dimly lit room also makes it worse.
I also feel a pain in the chest area coupled with a difficulty in breathing after doing something physically a little more demanding, which is something I have never experienced before.

Overall it feels as if a valve in my body has been compromised so that too much pressure is let into my head.

Although I do not trust academic medicine, I had to report this to a doctor for work-related reasons. So far my eyes and the inner ear have been tested, and everything checked out ok. Next on the list of tests is an MRI, but I refuse to undergo such a procedure after having read about the horrible side effects some people got from that. As far as I understand, it is just to exclude the possibility of a tumor, which I know is not the cause - explaining that to the doctors will be another story though.

For the time being, I have completely stopped practicing Pranayama.

My questions:
1) Do you happen to know if the damage is permanent?
2) If not, is there anything I can do to speed up the healing process aside from practicing Brahmacharya? (I have physical Brahmacharya for three months now, still struggling with the mental part)

Answer
1. Thee issue will tide away in the course of time. Pranayama techniques should be very gradually applied, as suggested in past answers with a life of Yoga & Brahmacharya, following the complete lifestyle suggested. Overexerting or speeding up the practices should not be resorted to.

2. Do that which does not cause discomfort, gradually and smoothly and meditate for an hour a day. Sadhana will get established in the course of time.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhananjay,

I would like to know the how the practice of Brahmacharya affect one interpersonal skills with others, attitude towards others, attitude towards the environment.

In this forum, we always heard how the practice of Brahmacharya to attain the true self. This time I would like to know if the practice of Brahmacharya can help contribute to others or this society.

THank you.

Best Regard
AL

Answer
Who is oneself and who are others? There is only the self in reality. The self of all is one and the same. There are only different Ego's, minds & bodies in the illusion. As one gradually realizes this through Brahmacharya, one will realize the world and people to be moving images on the screen of 'Sat' (reality or truth) and not real. The world and people are not different to the world and characters experienced in a dream.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
As it is said in yoga and Vedanta for the conciousness of a living being the primordial nature is the true self, Brahman, God, Source, whatever the name used. This is easy to understand when talking about consciousness of a being.

but as for the 5 elements that compose the physical plane of the Cosmos. They combine to form objects like particles, minerals, metals, stars, cosmic forces. In their basic nature they have the same substratum, even if only they are objects? Is God the basic nature of objects?

Answer
The created is an image on God, who is pure consciousness. The world and people are images on the invisible mirror of pure consciousness (God or Supreme). These images are perceived by the Ego through the mind. Hence these are unreal, for the mind and Ego are themselves unreal.

By whom are perceived the physical, mental planes or the cosmos? It is by the individual mind. Where were these in sleep? They were absent, yet you were present. That which was present was the self alone.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Could you be the first so-called "hindu sage" to consider them human beings?

Answer
There is no caste or creed as regards God, who views all equally, for all beings spring from HIM alone. The divisions in caste are based on the minds and activities of people and various other factors. These represent the Asat (unreal) and not the truth.

Both a black cow and white cow give milk which is white in color. The color and composition of milk does not change, based on the external color of the cow. Similarly, the truth within all beings is the same, be they of any caste, race or creed. It is only the degree of evolution which differs from individual to individual, based on their past karma and traits, while the primal being within remains the same.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Dhananjay,

Practice is becoming more difficult.

I have always had three major sexual desires to overcome: Sex with a woman, receiving oral sex from a woman, and performing oral sex on a man.

The first two are more or less overcome. I am clearly aware of the detriment of losing the creative fluid and understand that the mind must be engaged in constructive endeavors.

But for some reason, I cannot overcome the third.

1) Why do I have such a strong, inexplainable desire to pleasure the generative organ of another man? The mind justifies that I will not lose veerya and thus it is OK. It is very bothersome.

2) I had a vision during meditation that in a past life, I was a woman who engaged in perverse erotic behaviors. Could this be true?

3) How can I overcome this crazy impulse? I have overcome desires one and two reasonably well, but this third desire, cannot be solved despite meditation, japa, vichara, etc. It is confusing. Why do I have such an odd, innate urge to do so?

Please help. I am stuck on my path and desperately need to find a solution so that a loss of veerya does not occur.

ANSWER: This too will dissolve with proper Sadhana. There is not a better solution to any issue than merging the mind into the self.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: I appreciate the response.

However, please also answer my other two queries:

1) Why do I have such a strong, inexplainable desire? Where is it coming from? I seek the path of Jnana Yoga so I want to understand where such vasanas are coming from-this birth or previous ones?

2) I had a vision during meditation that in a past life, I was a woman who engaged in perverse erotic behaviors. Could this be true? Can realized yogis gain information about their past incarnations?

3) Very important, Jnana-yoga oriented question that I have. If at some point in the future, all souls eventually become self-realized, does this mean that humanity will cease to exist? Or are new souls being created? The total biological life on the planet earth has increased over the last 4 billion years (population has multipled many times). So how are new souls being created? Understanding this will help me better understand the teachings of the Vedas and Smrutis.

Much thanks.

Answer
1. Past Samskaras & Vasanas from innumerable previous existences, where the Jiva has indulged in such activity or has desired the same, remain as seeds in the causal sheath. These are to be burnt through years, decades or lifetimes of Sadhana.

2. Whether it is true or not, one should stop brooding over the past and focus on the present which is the only truth. Investigation into the past is not advocated.

3. Different Jiva-s are in different stages of evolution. All do not realize the self at the same time. The truth behind creation is to be known through direct experience.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
before 3 months ago I have practiced bhramhacharya and with that I have also practiced meditation and yoga 2 times a day daily after 3 months I had started enjoying this practice because I had started feeling kundalini energy, I could feel the pressures at base of my spine, but one day I started ffeeling pain in my head and as time passed tat pain and presssure increasedd and it became unbearable for Me.after that the more I do mediation and yoga practice the pain it only increases the pain and pressure not a single moment it would allow me to relax so I ffinally went to doctor but doctor said it was just the migraine problem, all test also went I want to know whhy did it happen?.iI want to clarify here that during that practice once I consumed alcohol after that I regreted that and I never repeated it. Is it during this reason I suffered this type of pain? Or something else?

Answer
1. Do your Sadhana right. Drinking alcohol is not the path one should take.

2. Various changes occur in the initial years, which can manifest in different ways.One should learn to surrender to the Lord with the attitude -"HE will take care of everything" and persist in Sadhana. That alone is surrender. No harm comes to him who surrenders.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Revered Sir,

1. Can tea (regular Indian version) be had, if one feels more energetic after drinking it when compared with drinking ragi/wheat malt.

2. When I wake up in the morning, and perform asanas, I start feeling hungry after sometime, before the completion of the set of asanas. What can be done to prevent this. I usually eat one chapati, and some fruits and one or two vegetables, the previous evening around 7 PM.

3. Kindly give me some advice on getting deep sleep despite of distractions like noise of traffic, which never stops even during the night.

4. After 6 30 AM I get involved in the household activities. Often, I can't wake up early enough for Sadhana due to tiredness or lack of sleep, and I end up missing the Sadhana, and feel extremely sad and very frustrated. Often the frustration affects me through out the day. I feel disturbed.
What can I do to help myself wake up in the morning and do the Sadhana, no matter how tired I feel, or how disturbed my sleep was.

Thank You very much for the kind help.

Answer
1. Tea and coffee are preferably avoided in the initial years. Even if one consumes, there should not be any addiction or attachment for the same.

2. Drink a glass of milk and eat a banana before practice.

3. When Sadhana gets established, night-sleep also becomes deep.

4. There should be a burning urge from within to achieve proper Sadhana at all costs. One should make Sadhana the first priority in life. Such determination will eventually pave the way.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Sir,

I am following exercise in moderate amounts.

But for some reason, the following is happening....

I feel physically exhausted as of late, and it is very difficult for me to go to the gym and do a sufficient workout. I am following your suggestions in eating limited amounts (in moderate quantities) and also, I am minimizing caloric intake.

For some reason, even after some very basic exercises (pull ups/push ups), the body feels week and my muscles feel tired and exhausted. I am wondering if you could provide a solution to this problem. I don't know what is going on.. here... any suggestions would be very much appreciated. This is very ironic given the fact I'm 175 pounds and 17-18% body fat and actually quite muscular... The strength or physical strength/endurance I have does not match my body physique or the relatively sizable amount of muscle I have on my frame.

Gratefully,

An aspirant

Answer
Food should be balanced. Neither less nor more. Let go of counting calories and measuring body fat. Such attachment for the body should go away. You seem to be more caught up with the body than Sadhana to realize the self.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir, please clarify these doubts of an aspiring sadhaka. Thank you

1. Should one eat a high protein diet?

2. If one has a choice between veg & non-veg food, which should the yogi choose?

3. Who requires non-vegetarian food? Why will a yogi not need it, if so.

4. How much effort does it take to attain Nirvikalpa Samadhi?

Answer
1. No. A high protein diet is not conducive to well being. A balanced and whole some diet is all that is required.

2. Vegetarian.

3. Those indulging in hours of hard, manual/physical labor or exertion, where the body & mind work on a highly Rajasic and exerting mode require moderate meat consumption.

Meat is not the preferred food for a Yogi indulging in much meditation and Sadhana with a Satwic mind.

5. 'Nirvikalpa Samadhi' (non-dual super consciousness) is attained when the one putting effort (Ego) dissolves. Hence, it cannot be attained through effort.

When after mastering 'Savikalpa Samadhi' (through much effort & Sadhana lasting many years or decades), the Yogi finally starts to realize the fallacy of the Ego (and thereby effort), he finally gives in to the higher power in total, whereupon, the mind collapses into the void (as salt dissolves in water without a trace), merging in the endless ocean of the infinite. Then, the Atman (self/pure consciousness) alone remains. That is 'Nirvikalpam'. There is no 'I' 'You' or the 'World' then. It is pure consciousness, truth, pure being, bliss & beyond description.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Why siddhi are considered bad and ignored in yoga? I never seen a truly big siddhi in my life. But when I started brahmacharya and meditation practices mainly to possess a better health and achieve longevity I was 25-26 years old but I knew that because my early life of impurity and debauchery I lost part of my hair in the front of my head and so many people said to me I should buy some shampoo or related products to prevent any additional hair loss in the future since I was young but prone to hair loss in that part. So I was ashamed of this situation.

I know it sounds stupid to say this now, but I did something similar to a healing to myself after some months of brahmacharya or discipline. I lied down on bed, concentrated in meditation and putting my hand on that part of my head. While saying to myself mentally that the hair should come again like for 2 hours during night. And then only few days later my hair was back again as in past years. I remember very well when I concentrated like that I didnt feel my hand touched the head or as if they existed anymore, I felt I was just the mind. 5 years passed and im still the same. So this could be used to heal oneself and achieve longevity, it is not that bad according to some religions like the tao school.

Answer
1. Does it matter whether one has or doesn't, a head full of hair in a dream? The waking state is no different to the dream state, for all belong to the realm of the Asat (unreal illusion).

2.Siddhi-s increase attachment to the unreal. Why does one intentionally develop a Siddhi? It is to demonstrate something from one's Ego to other Ego-s (people). Had there been no one to watch, a Siddhi would have no meaning. So it all amounts to self-aggrandizement of the false Ego, distancing oneself from his real Atmic state. It will eventually push man into much more suffering.

Despite not being the illusory Ego, being pure consciousness, infinite, all powerful, desire-less, full of bliss, with infinite peace, one is striving to strengthen his identification with the petty Ego which is impure, finite, powerless, full of desire, bereft of bliss and devoid of peace. It is like a king who has forgotten his king-hood and is striving to become a beggar.

3.The aim of Yoga is 'Yuj' (union with one's true self) and nothing else. Therefore, other objectives are not of any value. Just as a man who wakes out of a dream realizes that the dream was unreal, one realizes the fallacy of the waking state, as being nothing more than a dream, upon 'Atmasakshatkara' (self-realization). For this simple reason, the wise Yogi does not hanker after the Asat (unreal) but ever keeps his mind fixed on the truth within.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Lately I've been feeling that I want to finish college and not worry about a job. I want to just complete my brahmacharya. On the other hand, I want to become the most productive and worthwhile human as possible.

You say that we should not share knowledge until we are Self-realized and that we shouldn't make any decisions until we are finished our goal. We all must make decisions, and it is inevitable not to. This sparks my curiosity. I love philosophy and I want to hear your honest opinion, or instruction if prefered.

Why do buddhas, yogis like yourself, and other self-realized beings stay behind to help others before entering Nirvana or absorbing into God permanently?

Does one die in the physical body when one enters the void? Will you expound upon Muslim Muhammad's rising into the air?

We must inevitably make the decision to stay and help or give up EVERYTHING and EVERYONE. What is the use in staying and helping and why would anyone want to leave the universe permanently?

It seems to me that God's majesty pulls us to Himself. Does God will us to stay also? Is there a voice of God or do we follow our feelings and rationality (what we KNOW to be the greatest good)?

Answer
1. As in the case of all other things, just as regards all, that which is willed by the higher power transpires. Not less; not more. Knowing it to be such, the best course of action is to remain neutral and work as per HIS will. Such a man is ever free, unbound, peaceful and ever in bliss, for he does not commence any action with expectation, content with what comes on its own or does not.

When HE wills a particular Jiva to be the medium of guidance to others, it occurs. It is as simple as that.

2. When the mind (Ego) is merged into the void, nothing else exists. THAT alone exists. The Yogi who enters and returns from the void (truth) dies and takes rebirth with every such episode. After self realization, the Ego is dead forever. The body remains for some more time, if so destined. So the Jiva (Ego) is dead for all practical purposes. THAT alone functions from such a body.

3. Who must make the decision? What is everything and everyone? What is the meaning of the Universe? Is it different from the self? Where is it? One should realize the correct answer to these things first. One may then decide.

4. The Sun is reflected in a few pots of water. There are that many Suns seen as there are pots of water, though there is only one Sun above. Do the Suns in the pots have a light of their own? Can the Suns in the pots decide how much light they will give out? Yet it appears as though the Suns are moving, when the water in the pots is agitated, while the Sun above remains still...

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,
Your knowledge has always proven to be true at every turn of my growth. You have always maintained that the individual existence of the "Jivatma" is illusory and impermanent. I have been reading the "Bhagavad Gita" and have truly found it enlightening. However, it is stated that the Jivatma's individual existence from Krishna, the super-soul, is an immutable, eternal reality and that the Jivatma will forever remain just a fragment of Him. That does not mean that the Jivatma will always be identified separately. The Jivatma, if it so chooses, CAN and eventually, WILL associate and identify itself completely with Brahman to the extent where there is no difference as you have said and so it is stated in the Gita. They further add dis-credence to the Mayavadi theory, by stating that if Brahman as a whole is truly immutable, how did the fragmentation of it come to be? Therefore it is completely discredited in the Gita. I know one should not waste time by engaging in fanciful discussions and arguments to satisfy the oscillating emotions and the transient beliefs of the ignorant mind, but I truly believe that your take on this will give the clarity that I would like to progress further in my development.

With Respect,

Sahil - your humble follower.

Answer
1. To whom is the question of duality or non-duality? The one having this doubt cannot know the answer, for the limited cannot grasp that which has no limits.

2. The way out is to transcend limits through direct experience. Then, all the Holy books become clear. It will be known that all theories were different perspectives to the one reality.

Those who debate on the dual or non-dual nature of the Jiva, through bookish knowledge, gain as much as those trying to formulate the foot-prints of a fish swimming in water.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I know you said that no force outside is the cause of one failing. In the society more and more says men are the one that are immoral. But in reality and practice women's habits and television are the main causes of failing in most men, this is the truth. Do you really think it takes the same efforts to practice brahmacharya in a conservative society where women dress modestly and in another society where they dress in a libertarian way? Do you live in Usa? It is easy to point which societies, places and countries are moral and which of them are not.

Answer
1. Two children are born in the same house, grow in the same environment, yet have different destinies. One becomes a good citizen, while the other becomes a criminal. Why the difference?

2. That which is experienced externally, is but a reflection of what is inside. The world is a reflection of one's own nature. Based on the nature of karma accrued by an individual, a corresponding external set of experiences accrue, termed as the world. Te same world manifests differently, for different individuals, based on the nature of past karma.

3. Each Jiva finds itself in the set of circumstances, as earned by it through past karma. These are then represented in the form of lifestyle, society, friends & environment.

The mind (fueled by past karma) goes in search of what it wants, immaterial of whether it is in a conservative environment or libertarian. It is not that conservative societies are favorable for the practice, nor that practice is not possible elsewhere. Those who are intent on the goal are not affected by it; while those less committed, find Sadhana difficult, even in favorable circumstances. It is not woman but man's ignorance, which is the cause for his downfall.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Sir,

I ask you this question not to mock or deride you in any way, but to ascertain the truth regarding the fruits of sadhana.

I have struggled mightily, for over a year of sadhana, and I am slowly giving up the ego, continuously reminding myself that I am pure consciousness. I don't know how long these emotional phases and transitions will last, and I don't know what god's plans for me are, but I ask you a simple question because like me, you have struggled greatly to realize the self.

I am not going to complain about my dissatisfaction with sadhana because simply complaining will add to my depression and current pessimism, and further compound the emotional problems I currently face.

Suicide is not a solution because it will not solve anything and lead to an even more dreary state of affairs. Anyway, I am used to pain and depression, so there is no reason to complain of it. It is enormously difficult to one-pointedly strive for the self when there is depression and darkness everywhere and simply living through the pain becomes a struggle. You could say, at the moment, that I am simply floating through life and trying to find a way to mitigate the pain and darkness. I want to die, and just disappear, and just not experience anything (like the state of deep sleep) and be permanently destroyed. I am fine with not experiencing bliss, but I just want to escape from the pain and depression, and this hell of a world.

I don't know the magnitude of your struggle or how much pain you have suffered to realize the self, but I wanted to ask you a simple question. Was the bliss of Samadhi worth it? Was the samadhi you experienced worth all the attractions, pains, struggles and phases of depression you experienced?

I don't know how long self-realization will take; perhaps it will take lifetimes or decades and I don't know how long it will be before I can escape from this earthly hell. Self-realization itself, is not a direct goal at the moment, because I have no idea how long it will take to merge in the supreme and completely eradicate the ego; nonetheless, the bliss of Saivikalpa Samadhi seems like a more reachable state for me at the moment. If you can tell me that it was worth it, then perhaps I can goad this useless and stupid mind in the right direction, and motivate it to continue sadhana. This is the reason I ask. I am asking you with the demeanor and guilelessness of a child, the same child that has trusted you so far and done everything with the utmost sincerity.I do not mean to be impertinent in any way, and I ask you with the utmost respect and humility.

ANSWER: 1. This is the real meaning of the battle of Kurukshetra in the Mahabharata. The very same doubt was encountered by Arjuna, when the path of giving up took credence under the effect of Maya, in the form of relationships with his kin (representing the non-self).

2. The advice of Lord Lord Krishna is well known. That is the right path.

The bliss of Samadhi is just the beginning and not the end. Residence in the truth is beyond description.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Alright sir... In numerous answers, you have said that things will get easier in one year, sometimes in one and a half year and sometimes after two years....

Is it alright for me to expect things to get easier after a certain period of time, where spiritual life turns from a painful ordeal into a blissful one? And I get relish and enthusiasm in pursuing spiritual life? I know you cannot tell me dates, but may I ask when I can expect a little more enthusiasm in pursuing this life?

ANSWER: As one progresses with ardent Sadhana, the gross troubles reduce, to be replaced with subtle challenges, which are no less intense. The ease depends on one's past Samskara-s (impressions) and therefore different from one Sadhaka to another.

Sometimes, it appears as though there is no progress for years together, while in reality, a certain block of dense Samskara is being gradually dissolved. The average practitioner gives up at times such as these; an exceptional Sadhaka does not. There is always progress, as long one there is honest Sadhana, though not apparent. One should have trust in the Lord and persevere with complete commitment. Such an individual, who practices true 'Saranagati (complete surrender to the Supreme, accepting that which comes or does not come as the Lords wish) alone crosses the 'Samsara Sagara' (ocean of trans-migratory existence), which is rife with impediments to Sadhana, as are the sharks in the ocean.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Thank you sir.

May I ask what is meant by subtle samskaras and gross samskaras and what is the difference? And why are these subtle samskaras just as intense as gross samskaras?

Also, Swami Sivananda has mentioned that holy company makes sadhana easier in the vulnerable stage, as less evolved souls can take shelter under advanced aspirants and saints. He has also mentioned that living in the world yet possessing discrimination leads to quick evolution (as god places one in tough environments for quick evolution)? Does holy company truly aid evolution then, and am I missing out on a key part of evolving quickly by not having it?

Answer
1. Those Samskara-s which are most predominant are gross. That which is acting as a base for these is subtle.

2. Holy company is conducive during the initial years. Later, no company is to be desired. One should dive into the self and learn to remain there, for looking external (even as regards holy company) is to be gotten over.

3. You cannot miss out on anything. That which has to come will surely come.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Sir i think you haven't studied religion combined with history. Islam is the final revelation of dharma in practical and social world.. Quran is the final book of revelation.. you should study islam by studying quran with its context then you will be guided if god wills..you say the final sentence "The Supreme being is the absolute truth" .Practising Islam means following it in all aspects of life.. you cant do idol worship and worship the creation by saying that gos is in it.. creator differs from creation and he is at exalted station..I also advise you to research on the status of ram,krishna etc.. they are considerd as myths by westerners but their action may resemble as the prophets of god not themselves as god.. even though idolatry is abolished and comndemned in vedas,baghavadgita why do people commit it.. people with tremendous knowledge like you should create awareness among people on idolatry and worship of creation and try to guide them to worship creator as shown in islam..? God preferred Abraham over other people so his traditions are taking lead in the world and islam is the fastest growing in the world.. So I humbly request you to study islam by original sources of quran and sahih hadith((sahih bukhari and muslim) which may be available in english) with prejudice and May Allah guide you

Regards

Answer

HE decides who takes, which path, to reach HIM. One accepts HIS decision and follows. There are as many paths to reach HIM, as there are people. All paths lead to HIM alone, just as all rivers empty into the mighty ocean. Follow the path which HE has shown you, whichever it may be and reach HIM first. You may then decide which path is better, if that matter still remains.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Humble Greetings, sir,

With God's grace i have managed to progress in Continence/Brahmacharya and have been free of the vile-lustful thoughts for some time.

Tragically, for some reason the mind had the urge to view sinful images of females, sir, although i did not masturbate or lose the seed, i still feel very bad, and disappointed for committing this despicable crime, of viewing such filthy images, i feel like i have lost some purity or innocence by doing this, just sad about it, after going so long without even so much as a thought of lust or sex.

Sir, please offer your guidance and help on this matter,

Thank you.

Answer

1. The mind, which is like a restless monkey, is ever waiting to deflect. It is to be reigned through the strings of 'Gnyana' (knowledge of the truth) and kept on track.

2. Through constant 'Vichara' (inquiry into the self), 'Viveka' (wisdom) and 'Vairagya' (dispassion for the unreal), one should perform ardent Sadhana and fix the mind on the truth. Then, success comes after a long time.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Good evening dhananjay ji,

Do the hardening of penis counts as a break in brahmacharya?

I am occasionally watching tv due to boredom caused by work..after practising brahmacharya i observed that some light shivering occurs at backbone on entering of sexual thought. then i used to withdraw my mind. I feel good now but some sort of emptiness is there without watching women.. my mind or satan sometimes poking me that why to live without watching women.i had some digestive problem and my mouth is like unbrushed all the day even though i brush it.. please suggest any good ayurvedic medicines and yoga sadhanas to get good digestive system as i had of childhood.. i am afraid of allopathy because i used them a lot before and i got fungal problems(candida and aspergillos) due to imbalance of good bacteria. even allopathy doctors dont recognise it.. Also my hands got rashes please give advice.. please dont say to refer previous answers and give appropriate links of your answers to my question.. you are offering a great service that society and even parents cannot give.. Its a great relief to share with you ..God bless you

Regards

Answer

1. No

2. The suggested Sadhana will address all issues.

Since how many years are you into the practice? The practice of Brahmacharya, to reach the self, is not an over the counter medicine. Go through all the answers, absorb the essence and apply it in practice for a few years in an unbroken manner. Patience and surrender to the higher power are prime requirements. There will not be any benefit, approaching the practice with a doubtful & Egoistic mind. Physical health issues will also be addressed, along with the spiritual improvement, in case of the genuine Sadhaka.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Respected Dhananjay,

I completely understand that many viewers of this forum look for a quick fix to their problems related to Brahmacharya and that may include me. And many a times you have suggested to view your past answers. I tried reading all your answers to the questions from the beginning but was unable to find a detailed step by step method of starting the Brahmachari life towards self realization. Though the answers are available in segments. Also since this portal doesn't have a search facility it will be really helpful if you could mention descriptively the steps like the time we need to wake up, the asanas we should do etc and make this as the reference answer to the next questions. In case this seems like reinventing it will be also helpful if you could give reference to the dates of the past answers and use that for replying to repetitive questions. Another question is how will someone understand if s/he are rightly following the steps towards Brahmacharya.

Thanks and reverent regards

Answer
http://en.allexperts.com/q/Celibacy-Abstinence-3564/index_all.htm

Since the portal does not support topic wise indexing, the answers are to be manually selected.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhananjay,

Today I wish to ask 2 questions.

1) Do leadership quality have anything to do with Brahmacharya.

2) Do people have the tendency to follow one who practice Brahmacharya.

This 2 issues surface in my personal life, I have the thinking that Brahmacharya also come with added responsibilities. Like work life for example.

I am looking forward for your reply

Best Regards,
AL

Answer
1. The conserved energy can help a leader become better at his work.

2. External appearance may not tally with what is inside. Overall, it can be known that conserved vital energy helps one perform better in any activity, as compared to the performance bereft of Brahmacharya.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Sir,

I am wondering if you could help me with this problem.

As I continue meditation, these songs come from my head (evil, worldly songs about women, money and the world), and I can't resist them or rid them from my brain.

I am wondering if you can help me overcome these songs and get rid of them, or if there is any method that you would recommend that would be effective in pushing these songs out of my head, so my mind no longer repeats the lyrics to these songs blindly and obstructs my ability to focus on the self.

Answer
Such distractions are common to any Sadhaka. One has to tread the path himself, making a way through his own efforts. Perseverance in Sadhana will eventually dissolve all impediments in the course of time.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

I write to you with a heavy heart and much confusion in my life.

A few days ago I broke my months long quest for physical brahmacharya but tampering with the organ of generation. Maddened, I engaged in a relapse again!

This time, I have decided to make brahmacharya and the pursuit of self knowledge my first priority. Before, these were secondary to academics, wealth, social standing, etc., but I have now decided that without utmost commitment success will be elusive.

I have a few very mysterious scenarios though:

1) I know one should not care about what others think, etc, but a few odd occurrences of late have bothered me. One is that women and men often smile at me even during my non-brahmacharya periods. I don't know if they find something appealing or if they are repulsed and laughing out of derision. I am agonized by this and have no idea how to interpret it.

2) Long back, I made a few rumors about some individuals in a field in which I wanted to progress and to this day, those crafty individuals continue to isolate me over and over. I feel hopeless. What can be done? You will say to leave it to the almighty, and I will, but is there not something we should do proactively to seek his blessings?

3) In my life, it seems like all the small mistakes I made continue to haunt and ruin me while for others, mistakes made in their learning stage (E.g. not to speak ill of others, etc) do not harm them in the slightest. I don't know why my karma is so bad as to warrant the harshest punishment for the smallest misdoings done years ago!

4) You've mentioned that the mind is like a restless monkey. I agree. Now, one question about practicing introspection. When I choose to observe the mind (to see what it is doing), WHO is doing the observing? Is it my ego? Or is the mind capable of observing itself? Every time I do introspection in accordance with Sivananda's instructions I wonder who or what is doing the observing. For example I can observe that the mind is lusting. But who is the observer in this case? It must be another portion of the mind, yes? Is this like qualia?

Answer
1. The Ego has no better business but to waver at every possible distraction, as an excuse. Turn the mind inward and focus on the goal. What others think is of no account.

2. Merging the mind into the self is the greatest of all blessings. One who does so need not do any other worship or ritual.

3. Instead of lamenting over the past, focus on the present, do your Dharma and be at peace. That which has to happen will happen, in the way destined.

4. One should merge the mind into the self so that no awareness of the mind exists. That is meditation. Observing it will not serve any purpose, for observation is soon clouded by the traits of the Ego and the cycle starts all over.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I'm interested in the yoga perspective of left-handed persons.

Answer
The left part of the body is controlled by the right brain. The right brain represents subtlety. It governs intuition, thoughtfulness, and subjectivity. Proper Yoga Sadhana harmonizes both sides of the brain, leading to balance, poise and application of both qualities, thus aiding the emergence of a complete individual.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
sir,

When to allow the mind to indulge in fanciful yet harmless imagination (and useless activities) and when to restrain it by the practice of vichara? I don't want to oppress my mind and see it rebel nor do I want to lose track of sadhana. I am looking for your guidance. My mind has tendencies to indulge in useless imagination and useless intellectual activities.

Answer
1. When one is intent on Sadhana in the quest of the self, one need not plan anything. Things occur as they should.

2. One can then indulge in any constructive activity, hobby or avocation of ones choice, at leisure, and enjoy the same.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
In Yoga, concentration on objects gives power to the subject who is meditating. 1- Is it the object that gives power to the subject or the power are already in the mind and object only serves as points of reference to the mind? 2-Concentration without object is the only way to self-realization?

Answer
1. There is no power in either the object, the mind or the body. All power is only in the Atman (self), which is an indivisible part of THAT-Supreme.

2. Through concentration on an object, a minuscule part of THAT energy is focused through the nature of the desired object, manifesting as the same.

The Self is neither the subject, nor the object. It alone is the truth. Therefore, merging one's mind into the truth is the way to realize oneself. All other methods culminate into this.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Sir,

I have an issue that I want to address. Today while at work , I get angry with one of my coworkers due to some slight provocation.

This seem like a small issue if I never practice Brahmacharya. However, after I take up such practice, I feel that I will feel more regret if my anger manifest.

The issue I face is small and can be forgotten. But the regret I get when I am angry is still lingering around.

I want to get your opinion if my regret has anything to do with Brahmacharya.

AL

Answer
1. Through anger, one distances himself from his true self. The body & mind lose vital energy. It is therefore 'Abrahmacharya'.

2. One should remain internally calm, holding on to the truth, though displaying external emotions, as the situation may warrant. Then, he is always in Brahmacharya, in peace.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Will practice of brahmachary cause prostate cancer, because one of the saints narayana guru suffered from it during his last days and the reason he said was strong practice of brahmacharya,I aged 28 meditate 30 mins daily and practiced brahmacharya, though with difficulty(I Fantasize sexually) but after few days or weeks of abstinence I feel problems of frequent urination and sensation of pain and so i give up out of fear.So is it natural to practice brahmacharya for me, Please clarify?

Answer
1. Proper Brahmacharya removes all issues of the prostate. It does not cause any health impediment, including cancer.

2. Apply the proper techniques of transmutation on a regular and unbroken basis. Sadhana should be complete and as described earlier. No harm will occur to such a Sadhaka, who perseveres with surrender to the Lord.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Why in the west there is very few who really practice spirituality or even practice of religion unlike in the east where it is still important? I think it's because there is much emphasis in worldly things, worldly entertainment, and economy numbers which can be distractions. The majority of leaders in western countries have no clue about anything spiritual and make law the unnatural. Are the distractions the reason of the lack of spirituality or it has to do with the race of the people?

Answer
Based on the past karma accrued by each Jiva, it gets placed under a set of circumstances. It is not that the west lacks spiritual souls, nor that all in the east are spiritual. The play is varied and complex. One should not worry about these things, but should instead focus on the goal.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi dhananjay

I wold like to know if one indulge in music affect his groth in brahmacharya. Let say a musician who pratice his music everyday and he has a deep desire to improve his skills.

I am asking this because my idea of brahmacharya is the master of 5 senses.

Music which use the sense of hearing also must me control.

Can i say one who crave the pleasure derive from music also consider a leak ?

Your reply will be deeply apperciated.

Al

Answer
1. There is no harm in pursuing, listening or enjoying music, as long as one remembers the beauty of music, also to be a part of the infinite.

2. What is to be avoided is getting attached or addicted to the sensation itself, for the senses are ultimately false. Any such attachment comes in the way of residence in the truth.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
If you believe religion is important and believe in one supreme being then why don't you accept the Islamic faith? Islam is the most pure religion, it has a perfect theology of no-division of God. There is only one God and there is a high level of morality, both in ritual and sexual domain.

About the other gods they pretend to be God but are not. In Islam, all other gods are spiritual entities in rebellion against God from the beginning of time. Their names should be erased. Many of those gods are spirits of unnatural entities that originated in the very ancient time. Those gods corrupted humans, particularly women and committed unnatural sins with them. The so-called demigods and gods of pagan religions are an abomination in the sight of God. Why should someone worship those? If one does not accept God all what one does is in vain. God is the best giver of sustenance. God can give better nourishment than the other gods. Therefore, one should worship God alone, who can offer us the best in the afterlife.

[4:117] They even worship female gods besides Him; as a matter of fact, they only worship a rebellious devil.

[6:100] Yet, they set up beside GOD idols from among the jinns, though He is the One who created them. They even attribute to Him sons and daughters, without any knowledge. Be He glorified. He is the Most High, far above their claims.

[3:79] Never would a human being whom GOD blessed with the scripture and prophethood say to the people, "Idolize me beside GOD." Instead, (he would say), "Devote yourselves absolutely to your Lord alone," according to the scripture you preach and the teachings you learn.

Answer
1. All religions are different paths to the one destination. One takes up that path, which suit his/her individual temperament, as willed by the Almighty. No path is greater or lesser.

2. Realize that one Supreme being, through the path of your choice first. The answer to your question will dawn by itself.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
can you please tell me as to how to practice vajroli and amaroli.

Answer
1. When through long & ardent Sadhana to realize the self, the sex energy is transmuted into Ojas, the downward flow of 'Bindu' recedes and energy gradually reverses its flow upwards. This is true Vajroli. The Sadhana suggested in past answers, if applied for many years, with complete trust and surrender to God aids this process.

2. The practice of Amaroli is available in past answers.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
suppose if we have rnuanabandha or karmas with particular people. How can we remove those karmas.

Answer
The Yogi who practices 'Nishkamakarmayoga' (Yoga Sadhana to realize the self alone, asking nothing else from the Lord) does not have to worry about debt with others. It is cleared as and when required, by the laws of karma, in the way required. The Higher power ensures that all these things occur in a timely manner.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I have recently stopped masturbating and i have not touched myself for around a month, but it has become very difficult at this point because my penis is constantly erect and leaking pre-cum and my testicles started to swell and hurt. I would very much like some advice on how to avoid masturbating when my penis is constantly in a state of arousal from its lack of stimulus. I used to masturbate quite frequently and now I think i need to ejaculate in order to make my testicles stop hurting. I really dont want to masturbate but i feel like i need to in order to be able to go out in pubic without an erection.

Answer
1. It will not be possible to remain in Brahmacharya, through mere physical abstinence. The sex energy has to be transmuted upwards, by directing the body & mind, away from the sex plane. Else, it will stagnate, causing a variety of health issues and eventually flow out.

2. Go through all the past answers from the start and apply the required Sadhana, to sublimate the energy upwards.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I have overeaten. Will it help to exercise in order to relieve my body of calories and the symptoms?

Answer
Remain on fresh fruit juice and water for 24 hours without eating anything else. Moderate exercise can also be applied. The issue will be addressed.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Sir!

If one is sincere in doing one's duty (trying his best to learn his work) with surrender to the Divine (of course with the Sadhana mentioned in the past answers) is that much enough?
I fear whether I would be able to do my work properly or not.
Fear is just an illusion is known to me but this truth has not yet been realised.
Some part of my work would also require me to go outstation which means I 'may' or 'may not' be able to lead the required lifestyle.

Or is every single and minute thing decided by GOD?
what I might learn or where I would work or how much I would be able to learn and all these things, are they decided by the Higher Power and one should not worry a bit about them?

Thank You!

Answer
1. One duty ends at doing his Sadhana to realize the self, asking nothing else in return from the Lord. To such a one, all that has to come, will eventually come. The higher power ensures he learns that which is required, in the way necessary. He will have abundant energy and a clear mind to learn that which is expected, in his line of work.

Even if there are occasional changes to the lifestyle due to work conditions, he will not get affected.

2. Everything is decided by HIM alone. One should not however worry about all these things but should limit himself to doing his Dharma rightly. When this much is done, one will find himself working hard and honest in his line of work, without worry or anxiety, content with what comes by itself.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
If the man castrated chemically or physically can he reach self-realization? Should sexual desire exists to obtain and transmute the sexual energy in vital energy?

Answer
1. To whom is realization? It is to the individual consciousness, which has associated itself with the Ego and considers itself separate.

2. What is self-realization? When the Ego is dissolved, individual consciousness merges into the Universal.

Take glass bottle, fill it with sea water, close the cap and throw it into the ocean. It is same water, which exists in both the bottle and the ocean. Yet, the water in the bottle is not behaving as the water in the ocean does. It cannot remain as fresh as the ocean water. It does not have the power of the water in the ocean. It is not as free and unlimited as the water in the ocean. It has become limited, powerless, immobile and dead as compared to the ocean water, which is in all magnificence & glory...

The individual consciousness is the water in the bottle, one's 'Ahamkara' (Ego) is the bottle and the Supreme is the ocean. If one were to break open the bottle, the water in the bottle would merge with the water in the ocean. Is there any difference between the two now? The bottled water has merged into the ocean water. They have become one. Can they be separated now? It is impossible. It is as simple as that.

The Sadhaka strives to break and dissolve the Ego, which is acting as a barrier between his 'Atman' (self) and the Supreme, through long and uninterrupted Sadhana. As he progresses, the Ego gradually breaks down. When it is fully gone, his sense of individual identity goes away, for he becomes one with the universal, just as the bottled water became one with the ocean water. That is realization. Very simple.

Hence the act of castration does not come into the picture. A castrated person can also achieve realization, which is permanent dissolution of the Ego.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi dhananjay,

Today i want to ask if the pratice of yoga is essesntial to the rise of semen?
My belief is that yoga help in the control of body and mind and these attributes speed up the process.

I have seen that some people with devotion without yoga background are able to walk the path of spirituality.

However i notice these attributes that is essential:
Right thoughts-celibacy
Right knowledge
Right food
Strong devotion.

I have walk this path for quite some time. However, I do not take in the right food and my devotion is weak. I don t believe in the divine but i believe in the path of brahmacharya.

I strongly believe that Brahmacharya is the right path that one should follow and is more important and more realistic than god. I think that i will fail in understanding god in my life but the pratice of brahmacharya is within my reach :)

Ultimately can i say that brahmacharya and the idea of reaching god is the same ?

Sorry for the long post.

Al

Answer
1. What is required for transmutation, is to merge the mind into the Atman (self). Yoga Sadhana is one such means. There are also other means such as intense Bhakti (devotion) etc.

2. That feeling of rightness which one feels in Brahmacharya is itself God. It is of the nature of bliss, peace and contentment, free from wants or desire.

3. Residing in and as one's Atman (self) is Brahmacharya. Such residence is the truth and no different from God, who is of the nature of one's own self, one without a second.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

If a man, who practises brahmacharya, marries after thirty and has intercourse with his wife only for progeny, is it then still possible for him to acquire the benefits of 12 years of unbroken celibacy (like becoming an urdhvareta)? Or is it better not to marry at all?
I have read that the period of 12 years of ubroken practice must not begin later than 32 if one wants to fully realize all the benefits. Does that mean that even intercourse for progeny only has to be avoided?

Thank you,

J.

Answer
1. The period of 12 years is ideally unbroken and continuous. If one is destined to beget a child, that is also the will of the Lord and one must comply.

2. None of these things are in one's hands. It has already been decided. Hence it suffices if one does his Dharma (to realize the self) and accept the will of the higher power.

2. When HE wills, things will take place as needed, to merge the Jiva into the self, be it before or after marriage.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi dhananjay,

Today i realise that the only way that one can overcome sexual impulse is to develop a force stronger than it. Since sexual urge is consider the strongest force to a human. One adopt methods like yoga,devotion or even brahmacharya to counter such temptation.

However,I also realised since the start of puperty. This so call sexual impulse become active and despite my effort of brahmacharya to push back the flow to stop the flow. I am not fully successful. Wet dream and sexual urge somtime still manifest. I have tried many pratices but are not commited because i don t find it suitable. I am not asking for a shortcut or some techniques from you.

I have admit all i want to ask about brahmacharya ,you have answer in this page.

I wished to develop a force that is stronger than the human sexual urge. A willpower that is so firmed that it can stop the fall or sexual fluid and stop wet dream.

Answer
1. The sexual urge cannot be overcome through force, for force is applied by the Ego, which itself is Maya. It is overcome through residence in the Atman (self), by giving up identification with the Ego.

2. Hence do the required Sadhana to displace the Ego. That is the only way.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi sir! I hope you are fine..I have a question related karma,many times I observe that a person who is not spiritual but do good karma yet he gets nothing ..obviously he expect something returns good exchange of his karma...so why this happend..? This is because of past birth karma? Means it is necessary for someone to do good karma with spiritual life? Thank you dear for your valuable guidance..your answer always guide me.
.....Komal.....

Answer
1. Action always begets reaction, now or later. Sometimes the reaction occurs soon and sometimes later.

2. Even good deeds carried out for another, with some expectation or return in the mind create a karmic obligation as regards the other, which entangles both. Hence one should surrender all actions to God and expect nothing in return (without the "I helped" notion), while helping others. Then it becomes selfless action, pure and free from karma.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

1. I was down with a severe throat infection for almost 15 days, couldn't practice Asana/Pranayama for that period. Finally, I felt alright on an evening and thought I could restart the practice the next morning, but I woke up with a terribly sprained back. The sprain is in the upper back, almost in the centre, making it painful to turn around my neck or look up/down.
I applied oil 2-3 times a day and poured hot water over it while bathing.
The pain subsided after 3-4 days, but not fully gone. When I turn sideways or up/down, I feel the pain. What could I do to make it go away? Is it okay to start the Asana & Pranayama practice?

2. I feel my body has a weak disposition. What could be done to improve the stamina/strength?

Thank You.

Answer
1. It will go away with time. One can practice Asana & Pranayama.

2. Brahmacharya, when practiced in an unbroken manner, relieves all weakness & leads to the greatest strength.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I just want to confirm what Julian said about masturbation and the outer dream projector, causing fatality and untimely, horrible death. A few months ago a 15 year old boy died in Caledonian Road after being fatally stabbed in the chest- does this mean that he masturbated too much since about 13, more than 5 times everyday, to cause this unfortunate fatality and could he have averted this fate if he had saved more of his semen, did pints of inner blood as semen which is worth 80 drops of pure blood, result in his outer blood injury by a stab wound to the chest, causing his death, if a brahmachari who had never spilled his semen for 2-3 years had been cut with a knife, would his injury have been non fatal, as it is said his body becomes very strong and hard as vraja- and his outer world dream upgrades.

Answer
1. 'Prarabdha karma' (that which is destined to work out in this existence) cannot be side stepped. Through a life of Brahmacharya carried out to realize the self alone, one gets the wisdom to prevent future unwanted karma.

2. While the body & mind acquire great strength through Brahmacharya, one should let go of fascination for these and instead focus on residing in the self. He who fancies the powers of the body & mind deprives himself of residence in the Atman (self).

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
What is the significance behind changing one's name upon spiritual rebirth? More specifically, since they pertain to the ego should names be given any significance be they worldly or spiritual? Many great sages and learned ones felt the need to change their worldly name to a more befitting "spiritual" name.

Regards,
Sahil

Answer
1. At the stage giving up a life of 'Bhoga' (sense enjoyment) to take up a life of 'Yoga' (Union with the truth), the Ego is still very alive. A change in name is only a psychological motivation & reminder that the 'earlier' person who was after the senses has been relinquished and a 'new' person who is out to realize the self alone has taken birth. It is used as a tool to stay committed to the new path, which will henceforth be the final path for that Jiva, until emancipation.

For this simple reason, some people who take to the path of the self change their 'Ashrama' (mode of life), attire, name etc.

2. There are also others who do none of the above, but simply pursue Sadhana alone, to realize the formless Lord. That is also acceptable. What matters is reaching the destination. The road taken varies from person to person and is not of much significance. Each pursues a path as willed by the Almighty, in his Leela (play).

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
India is a country which has practiced segregation and anti-miscegenation (caste system) religiously much as other countries of the world including South Africa (apartheid), the US (separate but equal), etc., and almost every society of the past. This was practiced for religious reason and to maintain the moral order in different countries. If segregation and anti-miscegenation was universal for thousands years and supported not only by the state but by the majority of yogis, pastors, biblical prophets, saints and spiritual masters, then is it not logical to think they considered segregation and anti-miscegenation as something natural? Only recently public opinion started to go away from traditional social values as with other subjects like abortion, homosexuality, masturbation, pornography, drugs, seen as unnatural in much of recorded history.

Answer
The traits & karma of an individual determine his/her nature, character & life experiences. These are impermanent external coverings on the one, universal, self within, in the play of the Supreme. The knowers of truth, having realized this, remain silent, holding on to the reality alone.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi sir,

It is me AL again with a question for you.

After my pratice of brahmacharya, I sometime wake up before my wet dream occur. Because of this sudden wake up and regain my conscious i manage to stop my wet dream from happening.

I came up with my own theory that lust and lust in wet dream tackle one with low conscious. Since one who sleep one conscious is not there, lust is able to control this nature state. When we are awake, we can t have wet dream but only in dream/asleep.

This is just a theory i came up with from my personal observation.

I would like to hear your view.

This may not be part of brahmacharya, but i believe your feedback would prove to be useful for those here who want to understand how wet dream manifest

Best regard,
Al
Om namo narayanaya

Answer
1. Wet dreams are caused when strong sexual Samskara-s (impressions), from within, surface and manifest through the subconscious mind.

2. While it may be occasionally possible to wake up and prevent such an occurrence, this will not be possible at all times.

3. The correct method is to root out the cause and not the symptom. The cause here is sexual Samskara-s formed through past or recent activity. Through a Yogic life of purity of thoughts & deeds and Sadhana resulting in meditation on the Atman (self), these are gradually dissolved, following which wet dreams taper and vacate.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Hi Sir,

I've done everything properly: eating in moderation, proper food, nutrition and variety as well, and moderate exercise as well....

However, I've gained weight rapidly. I've went from 174 pounds to 190 pounds, but my shirt size hasn't changed drastically. I still fit well in many of the same shirts.

Any advice?

ANSWER: Simply adhere to the suggested Sadhana in total. The body will regulate itself as required, in the course of time.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: By regulate itself, do you mean I'll lose weight and get a lean body? Right now my obliques are very large, almost obnoxiously large... and this weight development is very strange

Answer
Regulation refers to the right proportion of fat, muscle and bone. A Yogi who performs proper transmutation of the vital force through unbroken Brahmacharya and meditation will eventually eat 'Mitahaara' (balanced diet) and his body becomes strong and healthy, without any form of excess.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi dhananjay,

Today by some luck I came across the concept of renunciation and acceptance. I see the link that either one lead to the same thing.

If one is unable to renounces what he have, then he should learn to accept what he have accept what he is given.

I am saying this here because the path of renunciation is not for everyone. But the path of acceptance, will be easier for those who can't renounces.

Renunciation and acceptance is 2 side of the same coin.

I hope you can give me some feedback and to guide those here.Please kindly correct what I have mention above, as I believe U can provide us with a clearer perspective of renunciation and acceptance.

Al

Answer
It is not desire itself which is wrong but attachment to the object of desire. As one gets closer to the self through proper efforts, such attachment wanes and the residual desire which remains does not cause grievous trouble. Renunciation gradually comes by itself in that case. That alone stays and not forced renunciation.

One should perform Sadhana, intent on the self alone, asking nothing in return and accept that which comes by itself. Such a man is not troubled by desire or lack of it.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello, Dhananjay!

It's so nice to have someone I can ask about some doubts I have specifically about the practice of Brahmacharya!

Here they are:
What is the best way in the modern life to sublimate the sexual energy and control the senses? Do you recommend any specifical pratice?

I'm eating once a day and drinking a lot of milk with ghee, do you think it's good for a Brahmachari? What are your diet's advises for a Brahmachari specifically?

Is it true that if a man remain a unbroken Brahmachari for twelve years he awakens the kundalini and never falls back in maya again? How long have you been a Brahmachari?

I'm seriously thinking about be a Brahmachari to the rest of my life, what do you think about it?

Do you recommend any book or article that would help me?

Thank you very much, and forgive me if I my questions are too foolish.

Answer
1. The practices to be applied are available in past answers.

2. Diet has been outlined in past answers.

3. The twelve year rule is a general reference. Kundalini awakening can occur much earlier.

4. What HE decides is what matters. You will maintain Brahmacharya, for as long as it is destined.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Should I sleep on the floor?

Why do monks sleep on the floor?

What are the health benefits/risks of sleeping on the floor vs. mattress?

Answer
1. Sleeping on a hard, level surface offers better spinal posture & relaxes the muscles deep, leading to proper rejuvenation of the musculo-skeletal system. This in turn leads to better rest, health and well being. The body & organs will be rightly refresh upon completion of sleep. A few hours of such sleep suffice to refresh oneself, unlike on a heavily cushioned mattress, where one does not enjoy deep sleep.

2. Sleeping on soft/cushioned surfaces also poses a higher chance for sexual stimulation.

3. The act of simplicity reminds the renunciate of detachment with worldly afflictions. That joy is unparalleled.

Sleeping on a simple quilt or bed sheet laid on a clean carpet is a good option. Sleeping on the bare ground is to be avoided.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir, you said about "what is destined to happen" in a previous answer.
Do you believe that everything that is destined, you happen even with we try to change our path? Don't we have free will? What is the destiny in your view?

For example, the amount of time that I will be able to stay a celibate is destined by GOD and if I "fail" it will be because of HIS will? Or it has more to do with karma and my previous actions?

Answer
1. Whose free will? Free will concerns the Ego, which puts effort. That is as much, as is within its purview. One's right ends at putting efforts in the right direction, as per one's Dharma.

The fruits of action however are not entirely dependent on one's efforts alone. They are dependent on one's past karma and the will of the higher power, which is running the show. These factors govern ones 'destiny', which is already scripted in the divine order. One cannot change it.

2. Who is staying celibate? Who fails or succeeds? It is again the Ego and not the Atman (pure self), which is beyond these things. Hence as long as the 'I-Ego' functions, as long as things are done with doership, it is the 'I' which is responsible for the outcome of such actions, though it is the Supreme power alone, whose power is sustaining the 'I' [just as it is the red glass responsible for red light emanating from it, though the light passing through it is that of the Sun]

Hence the knowers of the truth do not impose their individual will on any matter, but remain neutral, as mere witnesses, allowing the will of the Lord to manifest. To such a one, there is no karma, though he may be displaying external actions, as governed by his Dharma.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Namaste Guru,

After much deep contemplation, I have a few questions that I would like to bring to you.

Sometimes I look at Swami Venkatesananda and Chidananda and feel envious that they were able to meet Swami Sivananda when he was alive! Oh, what I would do to be able to exchange even a few words with the great Master.

Nevertheless, I have a few queries.

1) I have read your answers for many years now and it appears that your view if somewhat fatalistic. Your view seems to be that regardless of our action, things will only happen if the Atman is willing. Kindly educate me on how this is compatible with Swami Sivananda's assertion that we are the masters of our own destiny and have free will to bring ourselves closer to God. Right now, I (this fake, uneternal ego) can either pursue base pleasures or turn my mind toward Atman. Only after one is fully established in the supreme splendor of brahman does the ego and mind not exist. Until then, don't we have free will to pursue a better path?

2) The mind is a weird beast. When I get an improper thought, from external surroundings or past sexual vasanas, I force myself to think toward Atman. Therefore, I am using the mind to control the mind! How can this be? Can the mind observe itself? Is it not the case? Ultimately, all is merely a layering on the one true truth yet I need to understand this to progress in my sadhana. I am always grateful for the fact that His grace has been showered on my via having access to your portal here.

3) I thought long and hard about the nature of pain. Ramana bhagawan did not take anaesthesia while undergoing surgery! He said that the body felt pain, but he was not the body. Of course, all aspiring sadhus realize this, but the moment pain strikes, attachment and concern to the body arise! Is it not startling! This being said, when a yogi is on the earthly plane, 1) how will he react to physical pain and 2) will his mind shift from contemplation on atman when the body suffers? It is like Maslow's hierarchy; even Sivananda suggested that students have blankets in cold weather to ensure mind was comfortable for sadhana.

4) I notice a pattern in my sadhana that is disturbing. Regardless of sadhana commitment, after I sin by abusing myself, I have tremendous resolve to maintain brahmacharya and behave resolutely. Yet, inevitably after 2 weeks, the mind becomes restless and pulls me toward a visual or physical break. How can we ensure that this toxic buildup is cleaned regularly?

Humbly yours,
Milton, thy own self

ANSWER: 1. Whose destiny? Does the Atman (self) have a destiny? No. It is changeless, without a beginning & end. Hence there is no freewill as regards the pure self.

It is the Ego, which is concerned with these things. It is the Ego which has destiny. Freewill exists as long as the 'Aham' (Ego) exists, to that Ego. Whether actions carried out under freewill bear or do not bear fruit is however not within its control.

One has been asked to enforce his freewill in the quest of the self, as it is the Ego which has to strive in negating itself, to reveal the unblemished Atman (self) within. However, it is the Lord alone, through whose grace, the self is irreversibly revealed in reality, for the Ego does not exist in terms of the absolute. It is only an illusion.

Just as a coiled rope is mistaken for a snake at night and revealed as merely a rope on Sunrise, the Ego is mistaken to be the limited self under the darkness of 'Agnyana' (Ignorance) and is realized to be non-existent after the Sunrise of 'Gnyana' (realization of the absolute)

2. The 'Sukshma Sharira' (subtle body) is made of the 'Manas' (mind), 'Buddhi' (intellect), 'Chitta' (awareness) and 'Ahamkara' (I-ness), which, drawing from the power of the Atman, leads to the illusion of a separate entity called the 'Jiva - I'.

An improper thought is manifest in the mind from the seeds of past karma. The 'Buddhi' (intellect) reminds the 'Manas' (mind) that it is to be shunned.

3. As long as consciousness is identified with the body & mind, one feels pain and pleasure. The realized Yogi has withdrawn identification with these and can hence remain independent.

Since bearing cold does not in any way help realization of the self, the aspirant might as well use a blanket.

4. Through regular meditation on the Atman (self).

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: OK, a few follow ups.

1) How is Buddhi distinct from the mind? Is it simply the act of logical processing while Manas refers to emotions? Also, you mentioned Buddhi is intellect. What is the difference between intellect and intelligence, if such a difference exists?

2) In the process of meditation, when I force the mind to think of Atman, am I using Buddhi to do so?

3) When people speak of cognitive ability, IQ, and such, are they referring to Buddhi? In that case, is the reason brahmacharya improves this Buddhi because it replenishes the cerebrospinal fluid of the brain? I find this confusing: You have mentioned Buddhi is part of the subtle body but the brain, the source of intellect, is part of the sthoola sharira, physical body. How to reconcile these differences?

4) Gurudev Sivananda spoke also of the astral body and said that astral plane is filled with a tube each time one has sexual relations with another which does not dissolve for many years. When an individual takes a new birth, does he have astral connections with the individuals around him? Many times I think of the strong feelings I have to those around me and know that such deep feelings could not be the result of interactions in this birth alone.

5) A very serious question, and I mean it in earnest. The joy of contemplating on Atman and the almighty is undeniably the jewel of jewels. However, at a certain point, the mind becomes restless and wonders "oh you! you are but a young man of 21 years. you must explore the world and all it has to offer". Thus, is it OK to have a desire to explore the world and experience new things? All these are done through the unreal senses, but I feel as a young man that my growth and understanding of humanity is stunted if I do not play my role in learning more each day about the subjects that fascinate me, viz. psychology, learning, human history, achievement, and so forth.

Most grateful for your responses,
Milton

ANSWER: 1. Thought is mind, reasoning is Buddhi (intellect).

2. Yes. One should however not force. When the flow of thoughts are ceased, the self alone remains.

3. The abundant vital energy which is saved through the practice replenishes the physical brain, as well as makes Prana available for the development of a fine intellect. This is the meaning.

One should not worry much about these theoretical parameters. Do your Sadhana and simply reside in the self. All that is to be known will be known.

4. Let them exist or not. Why worry about the past? The wise Yogi does not waste his resources on what has happened. He works at Sadhana to dissolve unwanted Samskara-s (impressions) and remains quiet in the Atman (self).

5. If your mind is fixed on the self, those worldly experiences which are a part of 'Prarabdha karma' will be undoubtedly experienced at the right time. The Sadhaka is assured of happiness here and hereafter. No cause for worry.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: When one engages in sadhana, the goal is to turn the mind into the omnipresent source of energy from which the mind, prana, buddhi, ahamkara,etc. are derived.

My commitment to sadhana continues to grow. I have a few queries.

1) It is a great source of mental strain to understand what my perspective should be in the world. Although I will relate to the Atman, the one true self, during meditation, when one interacts in the real world, even a yogi must identify with the body and mind right? For instance, when hunger arises, and someone asks a yogi are you hungry, does the yogi not say yes and agree that he identifies with the body? Or when one is sick, WHO is the one who takes the medicine? Is it not buddhi that does so. What is the RIGHT mode of thinking for a yogi?

2) Gurudev Sivananda was a great writer and composed many great dramas. When asked about how he came up with such good pieces, he replied "All God's Grace". When a person takes initiative in this world-for example, to work hard to become an athlete or persevere on the path of brahmacharya-WHO, WHO, is doing the persevering? Is it not the buddhi which rationalizes, "oh man, you must lead a disciplined life for immortal bliss and the fruits of supreme knowledge"?

3) When someone asks a yogi (who is an engineer), "who came up with the patent?", what should the yogi say? If he says "I did" it means he identifies with the buddhi and body which worked on the patent, which is wrong because it strays AWAY from atman, no?

4) When seated in deep meditation, I am, after many tries, finally able to do neti neti-I say I am not the body, not the mind, not the emotions, not the intellect and slowly, a rejuvenating, fuzzy feeling of bliss courses through the body. It is much subtler than the horrible cycle of physical orgasm that depletes vital fluid, but this sensation is truly bliss-inducing.

However the point of merging the mind into atman is to forget the body. Therefore, what is this weird bliss? WHO feels this bliss?

Please take mercy and help me. In a world filled with lust and mindless pursuits of hostility, kama, krodha, sometimes I feel wounded and confused to the point of questioning why I am doing sadhana. The only two things that inspire me to stay on the path relentlessly are the advice of Swami Sivananda gurudev and bhagawan ramana. Unable to ask them, I turn to you, admiring your wisdom and grace in helping aspirants cross this samsara sagara.

Milton

Answer

1. One should hold on to the self, which is a witness of all these things such as sickness, hunger etc and reject all else. Through such a perspective coupled with long Sadhana, the false identification gradually ebbs away.

2. It is all the Lord's Leela. The ignorant mind however assumes doership, thinking itself to be the winner or loser. One should be detached to the world, yet do that which is expected of him, bereft of doership.

3. One is playing a character in the drama. The character of the engineer demands that he claim doership and the engineer does so. The Yogi within him however remains detached, knowing all comes from HIM alone.

4. He who feels bliss or does not is the Ego. The Atman is bliss itself & there is none there to feel or not feel it. When the mind truly merges into the self, there is none to seek it. THAT alone remains, within and without, the void of voids, without a second.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Is it okay to call running a sadhana

Answer
One can indulge in light/moderate running as a physical activity if he/she is drawn to it. However, it cannot substitute Yoga Sadhana. Asana, Bandha, Nadi Shodhana & Pranayama followed by meditation are paramount in importance.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: I was just wondering is it better to gain knowledge(computers for example) through meditation or should we keep reading books the traditional way until I achieve photographic memory

ANSWER: Learn from the books, absorb the essence, apply in practice, contemplate on the shortcomings and vacate those. That will lead to perfection.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: So does this mean I might have to read a computer science book 5 to 20 times to understand and memorize it?

ANSWER: One who absorbs the essence does not memorize. It is there in him, for ever.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: I'm sorry I'm a bit confused. What do you mean by absorb the essence?

Answer
When the finger is burnt on touching a flame, the essence of heat is realized for ever. Does such a one need to memorize the sensation of heat?

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Expert: Dhananjay - 5/19/2015

Question
Dear dhananjay, is it possible to have intercourse without ejaculating. After reading books on tao, I tried to see whether it really works. So I tried to masturbate without ejaculating, it worked fine for a few days, but on the fourth day I had severe pain in my testes and groin region. I got relieved only after ejaculating.

Can you please tell me whether there's any truth in the tao practices. Or are they saying that: one must hold ejaculation until the man absorbs his wife's fluids and then ejaculate. If this is called dual cultivation then wont it lead to many pregnancies. Please explain.

Answer
1. Masturbation, whether with ejaculation or without will not work. It will always end in a break and suffering.

2. Non-ejaculatory sex is taken recourse to in marriage, for a short time, before moving into a life of complete Brahmacharya, with the required Yogic practices. This too cannot be carried out forever. Absolute Brahmacharya in thought, word and deed alone is the answer. Everything else ends in suffering.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

In my sadhana, sometimes I have the perspective of clinging to the Self to realize the Self. Other times, I have the perspective of surrendering to the Divine, as in opening to truth or God from which Grace would be bestowed upon me. Though it seems that each perspective is the opposite side of the same coin, is either one more correct? Is it advisable to adopt one perspective and stay with it?

Thank-you

Answer
Both are one and the same. When one holds on to the self, it is surrender to the divine and he who surrenders to the divine is in residence in the self. The grace is always there, for one is grace himself.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Beloved Dhananjay,

Al-Isra verse 79 includes that we should wake in the middle of the night for recitation. I try to meditate 3 times a day for 10 to 20 minutes besides my 2 major sadhanas. The Quran's word of God includes that we should pray 5 times a day to God. I am only skeptical at the moment about this prayer time, but I'm sure that I will incorporate it into my schedule for power resulting from self-discipline. What is your take on this prayer time?

Also, my fast day was spectacular this last Sunday. Is it safe to fast every Sunday on fruit juice? You specified fruit juice for my fast only. What is the consequence of drinking milk, vegetable juice, and water too?

Thank you,

Answer
1. Sadhana can be resorted to at the four 'Sandhi kala-s', as described earlier.

2. One can include milk, water and vegetable juices, if he so wishes, while fasting to correct overeating. Unnecessary fasting is neither required, nor beneficial. Moderate food 'Mitahara' is the way.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Right now I've been eating kale, collard greens, mustard greens, and turnip greens and I also got carrot juice. They don't taste good at all. Every time I've ate something sweet like donuts and muffins, I feel guilty because I enjoyed it.

Also should I give up on reading books, watching TV, playing video games and watching movies because your being "hooked or glued" to these items.

This would free up a lot of time for me to do my sadhana

ANSWER: Gradually allot more time for Sadhana and perform it honestly. Things will align as they should. What is required is to give up the one, who seeks.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Can practice Sadhana back to back to back, like after meditation, you can immediately go back to Asana, Bandha, Nadi Shodhana, Pranayama, then meditation again?

Answer
1. No

2. One should follow the procedure at the recommended times. Residence in the self is however to be made a continuous affair.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Beloved Dhananjay,

I wonder about your viewpoint on simple pleasures, such as using blankets at night and enjoying a revolving heater unnecessarily.

This weakens my resolve, proves less dedication to self-realization, and effectively encourages pleasure-seeking, right?

Thank you,

Answer
It is not use of a facility which is detrimental but addiction to that sensation. When the mind is fixed on the self, one does not succumb to addiction, but merely uses the same as required.
ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

Please favour me by answering the following queries.

1) I am currently availed lunch and dinner. For breakfast, I am only availed fried chapatti and tea. Should I have normal chapatti and milk only? I get very hungry in the morning and that bland meal is nauseating but the current meal is satiating, despite containing fried food and the stimulating beverage. Or shall I have three fruits and nuts only? Please specify explicitly as I cant even read the newspaper before a heart warming breakfast, fit to please the valiant kings of old.

2) When studying for exams, should I quickly read a chapter with focus and then answer a specific set of questions on it and then do the same for the next chapter? Please elaborate since 'absorbing the essence' may be defined by such action, or perhaps not.

3) Business is not doing well. How should I sell my products? Everybody is refusing to buy my products which are not inferior to my competitor's products. I personally prefer praying and drinking spring water but I have been instructed by my Guru to focus on business. However, nobody wants to buy from me and everything is working out exactly in a manner conducive to nil revenue.

Thanking you for your time.

Answer
1. Breakfast should be the heaviest meal of the day, followed by smaller lunch and a very small meal as dinner. One should decide the constituents by himself, based on the nature of activity and constitution.

2. What is required is to realize the subject in depth. The means to be applied vary.

3. Do that which is within your ability and be quiet. Things happen as they should.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Sir,

I am here to complain about my present state of affairs. I know you have said the body eventually becomes lean, wiry, taut in the case of a yogi that eats "mitahara" and this eventually results in a lean body. But how long will it take to reach this state?

This is quite ridiculous because presently I am around 190 pounds. My stomach bulges out of my suit, and I look overweight to many. I have followed every single yogic regulation and "mitahara." When you told me "indirectly" to eat more, I gained 11 pounds of fat in a month and a half, and now my shirts look fat on me rather than small and lean. I can't go to the gym because my mind is easily aroused by women and I can't focus on working out. It's like I'm stuck being fat and obese.

You told me to observe mitahara, but I AM still fat and remaining fat. I do moderate physical exercise and yet I am still fat. In my weightlifting days, I used to be leaner and did not have this problem. Why now? Even though I do yogic practices twice a day and moderate exercise on top of this? Please give me instructions.

IF I EAT "MITAHARA," I just gain fat and look fat/obese. If I eat too little, I lose weight but I feel weak and unable to do yogic practices. There is no correct moderation or medium for this useless body. I curse my faulty constitution.

Yoga is not supposed to make one obese, yet I look obese and quite chubby. When will I have a lean body and not have to worry about this? I've quit regular Western exercise because I'm easily aroused at the gym and I simply don't have the time for it because I do yogic practices twice a day. I beg for your help; even my relatives say I'm becoming fat once again.

ANSWER: 1. Constitutions differ from person to person. Being plump is not essentially unhealthy for those with such a constitution, just as being overtly lean and rickety is not unhealthy, for those which such genes. There are a large no. of people on either side, who enjoy health and well being.

2. Stay with moderate food and exercise. One should neither eat little, nor overeat. Food consumed should be right enough to sate hunger, yet not cause heaviness. Do this much with the suggested Yogic discipline and stop worrying about the body, which will be fine, immaterial of whether it is plump or wiry. Excessive concern on the body, is not to be indulged in.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Alright sir... so I've been following the advice given above. Right now, I see how cunning and depraved other people are in my life... they think I'm a fool, and they continuously try to manipulate me. I'm just ignoring them but I'm starting to despise these other people and their wiles.

Also sir, my parents, relatives, and everyone close to me is calling me fat and overweight on multiple occasions and saying I've gained too much weight. They almost make a hobby to call me overweight. I'm taking your advice and not worrying about the body or what others say. I assume this is the right approach when it comes to these things?

Answer
1. What others think is not one's business. Such fancy is the first impediment to Sadhana. One does his Dharma and remains quiet.

2. If your Sadhana to realize HIM is honest and unbroken, everything else will be taken care of. There is no cause for worry. Hence do the needful and be quiet in the self.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
1) If the sense of bliss in the body during meditation is NOT atman-realization, is it something detrimental? When a yogi achieves self-realization and merges into the atman completely (like a sugar cube in a water glass) does he not feel the mind or body, since those don't exist any longer?

It is very, very hard to grasp how the individual identity (body and mind) can be discarded such that an individual identity remains. This must be because manas, the mind, is incapable of grasping the all-pervading reality?

2) When a yogi remains on the earthly plane, he creates an ego so he can engage the mind, buddhi, chittha. During this time, he WILL be aware of bodily pain and illness, no? Ramana Bhagawan was said to feel great pain when thieves struck his thighs.

3) The process of death of the physical body is something the yogi must be aware of yet not afraid of in the least. Why is it the case that when the physical body dies the jiva (consisting of the atman wrapped in ahamkara, mind, ego) vacates this body? When the physical body dies, what will happen to the prana of the astral body?

Answer
1. When one resides in the self as the self, the bliss is continuous. He no longer seeks it, unlike earlier, when the Ego used to. It is not bliss which is detrimental, but being the Ego which seeks it externally, when one himself is bliss.

One does feel the mind and the body even after realization. However, he does not identify with those as the self.

It cannot be grasped. It is to be experienced, through merger of the mind into its source.

2. Yes, it is a temporal Ego, used for communication. However, there is no identification with either the Ego or the body, as one's own. Consciousness can be withdrawn from these at will, just as a man residing in a building does not consider it as a part of himself. He vacates it at will.

3. One need not be aware of any of these things. It is enough if one is always aware of himself as the self, bound by nothing. The snake in the rope will disappear on Sunrise. Why should you worry about an imaginary snake (body, mind etc.)? Be the self and be quiet. It is very simple.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: What is the true meaning of love and compassion? Are these attachments of the ego? They are given high significance in Self realization by many sects.

ANSWER: Looking at another as no different from oneself is Love & Compassion.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: When one can see the beyond the Ego, they are above pain and pleasure, itself. One will no longer feel a need to treat another with respect, nor disrespect. One will no longer feel a need to inflict pain, nor bring pleasure. One will remain unaffected and indifferent by another's pain or pleasure just as he remains indifferent towards his own pain and pleasure. What then is the meaning of Love and Compassion? Why then should one care what is happening to himself or the other, knowing full well that these are all illusions and dualities of mind. Why then is being of service or help to mankind of such importance and held in such high regard?

Of course, that which is willed by the Supreme must take place. Whether it's the help of the world or the destruction of the world, as He sees fit. My questions are should one really place such a high emphasis on love and compassion? Should one really care to "benefit", "protect" or "help" another with Love and Compassion knowing that which is to happen, will happen. Should one go out of their way to alleviate another's suffering? These things are given such a "pious" and "righteous" connotation and I would like to question the validity of such ideas because I currently believe that the Atma is above all these.

Answer
1. Such a one works, without working. He loves, without display. The first & last service is to get rid of the Ego. That is the best gift to mankind. That which is to be done will then be done.

2. One should reside in the self. Period. Nothing else needs to be striven for. That which is to be done will then be made to occur, as it should, at the right time, by the power which is making things happen. To such a one, there is no Dharma and no more Karma. All is Brahman alone.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Dhananjay,

I have been practicing celibacy for some time now.I am more attractive to women, as I find them taking more interest in me.At times I run into trouble though.For example, I get onto a train carriage and a woman smiles at me.I ask if I can sit with her and we have a nice talk.She asks me for my phone number, and leaves.She calls me next day, but I become fearful that I have acted impulsively, and that association with her will lead me astray, so I don't call her back and I feel bad because I really would like to see her again.This is a reasonably common pattern with me.Can you please offer your perspective on this and any advice on the matter.

Another thing is my desire to help my family members and also other people with their personal problems.For example, I notice my sister is suffering in her relationship with a man who at one point told me that porn and masturbation is 'normal' and 'healthy'.It pains me to see her and others suffer, and at times I fear for her safety at the hands of a potentially violent man.I try to offer guidance but feel quite helpless and it affects my sense of calm to do so.Should I try to stay out of others problems unless asked for my help?Please help me to find some clarity with this.

Thankyou very much for your help.

Barry.

Answer
1. The interaction is to end with the return of a polite smile. Taking it further is the mistake.

2. Do that which is felt right at the given moment and be quiet. There is a higher power watching everything. It will arrange for things as they have to occur. One does not have to take doership.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhananjay,

In a few week time I will graduate and I will start finding a job and join the work force.

I need to seek your expert opinion on why job is suitable for a person practice Brahmachraya.

I am a quiet person and a poor speaker. I don't like to speak much and prefer listening to others.Now, I am having a hard time finding a suitable job.

I believe job that require one to perform shift work is not suitable for one practicing brahmacharya. Especially one that need one to perform more than 12 hours shift at a stretch.

Job that require one to carry a weapon, or such is a Big not suitable either. I also think that job that promote gambling, alcohol, prostitution is not idea for someone into Brahmacharya.

Today I need your advice on the criteria that I need to look out for when finding job.

Best Regard
AL

Answer
1. One should let go of preconceived notions and work honestly, be it any kind of a job. Work carried out with honest effort is acceptable, immaterial of whether it is this or that.

2. Apply efforts and remain quiet. That which is destined will come without doubt.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Beloved Dhananjay,

I fill the majority of my time doing constructive and productive activities. I make sure to do my best in school work and understand the essence of the material I learn to the best of my ability.

Now that I am enjoying summer vacation, I am reading a lot of journal articles to keep myself occupied. I read about 4 to 5 a day. They take about an hour each to read. They tire my brain by the end of the day. Is it efficient to do the same constructive exercise for most of the day? Is it better to do various activities such as write poetry, write journal entries, play cognitive, challenging games like Lumosity?

How would you prioritize my 3 activities of reading spiritual texts, doing intellectual work, and physical exercise? (once I've already done a sufficient amount of all 3)

Will you recommend some constructive activities? (especially those that you do)

I see that you have a bachelor's degree in engineering. Have jobs in the field of engineering been your profession throughout your journey of self-realization?

Thank you,

Answer
1. Any constructive activity which one feels drawn to can be taken up. There are no rules as regards this or that, as long as one enjoys doing it. One can vary these activities, so as to provide variety. What is to be avoided is excessive indulgence leading to any form of addiction.

2. When Brahmacharya is maintained with the right Sadhana, one will gradually gravitate towards the self in the course of time. The priorities will align as they should.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I always wondered if we have to go through the other planets(like Jupiter and Pluto) and stars after achieving self-realization on earth. Like meditation in the Himalayas prepares us on the next path.

Answer
Who goes where? It is all a creation of the mind and nothing else. One need not go anywhere to realize the self, which is right within. He who goes and the places gone to, are both imaginary. THAT which is within is infinite and alone the truth. It alone is the self. It is all.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
It is not normal that a stranger or the opposite sex talk to someone and ask telephone in the first date. It is true that some women (but not the majority) like to tempt and are used mentally by the demons or spirits (according to many true religious like St Francis and St Anthony, they were not liars) to tempt someone with much self-discipline. I just want to say something that may help in most situation and it is very easy to do and to understand. If one uses sunglasses in public, strangers in general and women will not be so interested to talk with such one and one doesn't fall so easily into temptation. Because the sunglasses themselves isolate to some degree the person from exterior temptations, others cant see his eyes or where he is looking to. At least it helped me because there is no temptation from others and at the same time there is less attachment in me concerning what I see in the exterior when in bus or streets.

One may support or be against it, but we can easily understand why very orthodox Muslims countries like Saudis, Qataris or very orthodox Jews societies wisely use veils or even burkas for women to protect both sexes from the devils. Its the same situation with sunglasses, not many are psychologically interested to talk and tempt such ones neither to start a talk with a woman covered in a burka or niqab. This is not an opinion but a psychological fact. Would many be interested to star a talk with a woman in burka if they cant see her eyes or face? I dont think so.

Answer
Different religions have different approaches. Each befits the concerned race and culture. One can make use of that which one finds helpful. However, the right method is to negate the source (ignorance of the self) behind lack of Brahmacharya.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Beloved Dhananjay,

I work throughout the day to be as productive as I can intellectually, through physical exercise, and meditation/Sadhana x2. I respect all religions, and I will read all their texts by the time I self-realize. I don't encounter the ten commandments often, but I am very dedicated to Jewish and Christian ideals. The commandment pertaining to keeping the Sabbath day holy and resting throughout it is a problem for me.

I know that all God-inspired scripture and direct messages that are in sacred texts are there for a purpose beyond what we understand. Oftentimes, the text cannot be interpreted literally to get the full essence and therefore must be interpreted to fulfill the greatest good, morally, ethically, and practically.

When our bible says to keep the Sabbath day holy and rest throughout (i.e. our mules, servants, ourselves), the Jews interpret that an individual should not do the slightest creative/constructive activity. I believe that this is an extreme view, and I make sure that I only read little spiritual text on this day but meditate a lot. I want to know the significance of the commandment in a practical sense so that I know that I am doing the right thing. I have not found any scientific research to backup the significance of resting for an entire day every week, and I have not looked much.

I do fulfill the commandment in multiple ways though. Perhaps every day is a holy day. I try to keep myself holy by living a life of brahmacharya, giving my body rest from toxins. I meditate often, giving my body rest from work and allowing it to consolidate memories and repair. I cultivate the spirit day in and day out, which gives us the only true rest. I am afraid that I will not fulfill the commandment to the fullest extent if I work on Sunday, my Sabbath day, but I know that you possess superior knowledge on every subject pertaining to the spirit and God's will. Is it necessary to rest a full day in order for our bodies to reinforce themselves for another vigorous week of productivity or are these enough?

Thank you for your continual responses,

Answer
What is 'Rest' on Sabbath? It is letting go of all worldly thoughts & deeds, merging the mind into God and remaining quiet in the truth. In other words, it is meditation. The common man is attached to the world and considers God separate. So on Sabbath, he gets a chance to let go of the world and remain in solitude, fixed on God. This is the significance; it is very simple. To the one in quest of the self, all days and times are Sabbath, for he remains detached, ever fixed to the truth. He who does so follows all the commandments, in their true essence.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Sir,

Sometimes I meet my roommate and one things leads to another, and I naturally get drawn and absorbed into needless conversations. He is a worldly man and I was wondering if you have advice on limiting myself from interacting with him and not getting into useless conversations. Should I just keep aloof and introverted and self-centered? That seems to be the best approach but I wanted your advice. If I do so, I will naturally look arrogant and aloof .

Answer
One should be polite and brief in interactions, for excessive talk wastes resources and becomes an impediment to residence in the self. If you hold on to the self, that truth, that peace, you will know what to talk, how much to talk and when to remain silent. That is the way.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhananjay ,

I wish to know how deplete in Semen in sex and masturbation shorten one life span.

The semen that one conserve goes to nourish the body on physical,mental and spiritual level.

But one thing I observe from old people is that they lack sexual urge, or their sexual urge has decreases after they hit 40-60 years old.

Can I say that semen is like "battery" and that all of us is given a fix amount.

One who constantly use our "battery" will deplete its power and until a stage that no power is left.

I hope to extend my understanding of semen and its usage and I believed that semen in a Man is fixed.

Answer
Everything as regards this body is limited. To overcome identification with the body & mind, negate the seeds of past karma and attain realization of the self, one requires much fuel of Ojas. Hence the wise convert Semen into Ojas, so as to work at freeing themselves of residence in the body & mind, which are nothing but suffering.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
What happens when a man have sexual intercouse or masturbates himself but does not ejaculate? Is this practice dangerous for his health? Does the prana of the semen return to the whole body or it is lost in the moment the reproductive fluid is formed?

Answer
Mere restraint from ejaculation will lead to various health problems. One should practice proper Brahmacharya and overcome the need for both recreational sex & ejaculation. That is the right method.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
hello dhananjay,

is there any difference between parakaya pravesha and mahasamadhi?

shibi kiran

Answer
1. Entering another body is Pararkaya Pravesha.

2. Merging into the self for ever, letting go of both the body & mind is Mahasamadhi.

There is no connection between the two.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Beloved Dhananjay,

I want to live by every rule to the best of my ability.

My stomach tightens shortly after finishing eating. 1) Is this normal or have I over eaten?

Measuring enough food to fill half the stomach is tough. 2) Is it better to stay safe and eat less than half a stomachful and snack later if I am hungry?

I read online that my stomach was the size of my fist. I may be over eating every meal, but my stomach gets tight even after a small dinner. I barely eat anything for dinner. My body won't allow me to.

3) Should I limit my food consumption to make sure that I am hungry by lunch and dinner time? My logic is that if I can suffer through some hunger every now and then, my craving will dissipate at a faster rate.

Answer
One should neither overeat nor starve. Food should be moderate, giving a pleasant, yet not heavy feeling. Do that much and focus on Sadhana

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Help me.

By the Lords grace I've been able to better control myself. I'm scared because I know a little jyotishya and my family does too. They keep telling me I can never Be a brahmachari because Venus is too strong.
They keep saying I'll meet someone I'll be infatuated with.
I know I should leave it all to The Lord but they're starting g
To make me scared. Please help me be resolute.

Answer
Let go of all these baseless imaginations and do your Dharma right. No planet affects the one who resides in the self, forsaking the body & mind, as not his own.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Humble greetings sir,

There are some concerns needing answered, if it is so willed:

1.) How is it possible to reside in the Self? how/why does one become an ego/jiva/individual soul which views itself as such, and not the Almighty which it really is?

2.) Secondly why is the illusion so real and pervasive/persistent? a man sees a female which then bothers him, you say this is negated through practice of long and arduous sadhanas, but why originally is such illusions so real-seeming?

3.) Finally when self-realisation occurs, what then will happen? does one cease to exist having merged with the Source as a raindrop falls and thus merges with the ocean?

Thank you sir.

Answer
1. Through merging the mind into the self, realizing everything else to be an illusion, one resides in the self. Then, he can stay this way, even while in the midst of external activity. The why and how are to be realized through direct experience.

2. What happens when you come out of a dream upon waking up? You laugh at the dream and characters, realizing it was nothing but an illusion. The same occurs after self-realization. Just as the man who came out of the dream realizes that the dream events, circumstances and characters were only a figment of his imagination, the world, its pains, the body & mind are realized as another figment of imagination indulged by the Ego centered consciousness. They no longer affect the liberated one, just as the dream no longer affects the dreamer who awoke.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello sir,
I am 23 , I believe in brahmhacharya. I wants to ask you that I tried to keep me from sexual activity but I can't .
Its reflect my health . I become mentally, physically sick if I continues to it . so I wants proper advise from you about how to do proper brahmacharya and healthy

Answer
Go through each and every past answer from the end and apply the suggested methods in practice. It will come alright in the course of time.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
"What mean to be happen will happen,what won t happen matter how hard man try,won t happen"

The path a man take, even this path call brahmacharya.

Is already decide by out past action.

What we are now, is what we left before.

I have tries very hard over some area in life. I find that what i achieve in that area, my passion and interest in that area is already predetermine.

I is not a lack of hard work or talent.

But something in life, are not to mean for me :)

Answer
Realizing it to be such, one should focus on attaining to the self, for that alone is the reality, all else being a dream. He is ever content.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Sir,

Due to HIS grace,you came in the form of a guiding light in my life and make me walk on this pure path to liberation.Please accept my sincere gratitude towards your lotus feet.

Sir,since last few days,there's been quite a workload so I'm not able to sleep that much early.As a result,I sometimes wake up a bit late.

Today morning I went through a very strange type of wet dream.Around 4.15,I woke up for attending nature's call.Although I thought I must not sleep again,I again layed down on bed.Within a few minutes,in a sleeping to semi waking state,a dream occurred in which I saw two women draped in saree waking on the street.I stopped one of them and got aroused by seeing the other.I orgasmed and woke up to find that I had ejaculated white semi-opaque to transparent fluid a bit and not the thick fluid that used to come after orgasm when I used to indulge in this sinful habit in the past.As I was feeling very sleepy,I went to sleep again.It followed by a second dream in which another lady was there but this time,I applied mula-bandha and stopped the flow.

Also,since past many dreams I've developed this habit of applying mula-bandha in the dream itself,so as to restrict or stop the flow,but in this dream it was like I let it happen just to 'enjoy' the feeling and only the second time I became aware enough to stop the flow by applying bandha.Also,in the first dream,I was in a sleeping to semi waking state .I even don't remember clearly whether it occured during sleeping state or during the transition state between sleeping and waking.I just woke up as if I was voluntarily fantasizing and doing it in waking state although I wasn't.It was like I was aware of my surrounding of the waking state,viz.the bed,window etc. but still the dream was also going on.I hope you understand the situation I was in Sir,at that time.I don't even remember clearly who that lady was in the dream.

I've also noticed that mostly wet dreams occur to me on Saturday mornings.Since Shanidev is considered the god of karma,is it a way that He is making me redeem my past sinful karma?

I'm very worried and disappointed.Please help me.What should I do?Is it a break?

Also,as I'm moving forward day by day in my sadhana,very complex types of wet dreams have started to occur in sleeping-transition state,like the one I explained above,which confuse me between voluntary ejaculation and involuntary ejaculation when I wake up.

Sir,I'm doing everything I can to walk on the path of purity and now I'm miles away from my previous sinful life but still these things are happening.How should I cope up with these occurrences?They discourage me a lot.

Thank you
Anant

Answer
Based on the nature of past Samskara-s (impressions), varied sort of wet dreams can occur at different phases of life. As long as you persevere in honest practice, with surrender to the Lord, there is no cause for worry. All issues will gradually taper away.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I've finally stop meditating in a chair two week ago. Since then I meditate the correct way but I can only go for 15 minutes. Is this ok for a beginner? Should I increase every 5 minutes after I get comfortable with 15 minutes

Answer
The period of time in meditation gradually increases over the years, further to honest Sadhana. One should persevere patiently, doing as much as possible, without giving up. Sitting in Padmasana or Sidhasana is preferable.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear sir

I am 27 yrs. old and just started wearing langot.But after wearing it for 15 days feeling pain in my left testicle.Although I'm wearing it in proper form as described by you. Even my left testicle hanging compared with right one.Please suggest something and also tell there are any rules to be followed by wearing langot

Answer
It is normal for the left testicle to hang lower than the right. Apply proper Sadhana for transmutation and relax. This is an initial issue faced by some, that will go away after getting used to it. Always remove the langot while sleeping at night.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
How does day time sleeping effect my bramhacharya? And how can i know about which type of body i have(i mean wheather it is pitta/vata/...specific body upon which the effect can alter?

Answer
One should not sleep much in day time. It will drain Ojas, leading to a host of issues. A nap if taken should be short and brief.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
In which process does the ojas decrease for day time sleeping?

Answer
Vitality in man is governed by the Sun and the mind by the Moon. The Sun is 'Rajasic' (activating) in nature, while the moon is Tamasic (inert). Solar energy, which is predominant both within and outside the body during daytime is to be harnessed through activity, which then nourishes and vitalizes the system. In a similar way, Lunar energy, which is predominant in the night after Sunset is to be harnessed through rest (sleep), which then nourishes and revitalizes the tired cells through sleep.

Therefore, those who sleep during the day or remain active during night go against nature and reverse the process required for health and well being. Vitality (which comes from Ojas) gets burnt, leading to premature degeneration, decay and debility.

Hence the wise Yogi sleeps early and wakes up early.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir - Namaste. I am a spiritual aspirant beloging to Grihastha ashrama (householder). I have tried to practise sexual abstinence on a few occassions earlier. The problem starts after about 10 days of abstinence. I begin to feel burning inside my urethra. Temporarily the burning goes away while semen is excreted via urine while passing stool. This continues during my period of abstinence. If I have sexual activity, this burning problem does not occur. I have resumed sexual activity just to suppress this burning problem in those instances. Kindly let me know if others too experience this issue and any remedy for this.
OM

Answer
Take up the complete Yoga Sadhana suggested in past answers, with surrender to God. You will gradually get established. Brahmacharya cannot be attained through forceful abstinence.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Once saint swami vivekanada told that it is better to play football than only reading gita to see god and it better to worship god with biceps and strong muscles(he told this in those days of british ruled india in the context of our freedom movement). Now my question is how important role does health of the practitioner play in his practice? I mean india has half of its population malnutritioned. So is india's prospect bright enough in this regard?

Answer
A body & mind plagued by illness cannot carry out Sadhana to realize the self. Hence, one must ensure that health and fitness are maintained. Having said this, one should not get obsessed with the body and its glorification. The aim should be to be healthy and not a craving to beautify the impermanent bag of flesh. If one does his Dharma right, leading an active and productive life backed by Yoga & Brahmacharya to realize the self, health and well being come on their own.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
hi
Last time i thanked you for helping me to clear my board exams through brahmacharya.
I am confused with what is real and what is not real ,whether the religous books are right or not. I believe in god but i dont understand how everything is illusion. I like to believe in my experience. when i am praying to god if i have a headache i unable to concentrate. so it is my brain which is praying not the soul.
I dont have a goal or a burning desire to achieve something. This has affected my brahamacharya. spiritual goal that is to reach god alone does not motivate me. I feel a materialistic goal is required . I feel alone in a directionless road. so please help

Answer
There is nothing wrong in having materialistic goals, as long as one is not attached or obsessed to them. Persevere in the activity that appeals to you, always holding on to the self through Sadhana. In the course of time, all that has to come will come...

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Would a liberated Self ever wish to return to Samsara, effectively losing His self-realization or keeping realization to a certain extent (staying in a greater heavenly realm in comparison to Earth existence)?

Unbinding completely from the physical cosmos, what is eternity in heaven?

This cosmos includes infinite possibilities. Am I correct?

Answer
1. There is no wish as regards the liberated one, who is one with the infinite. Who is there to lose realization, after the one requiring realization is gone forever? The question does not arise. That alone remains. However, if willed by the infinite, there can again be a manifestation. Such aa one however stays realized, without being least affected by the unreal, whether manifest or unmanifest.

2. There is no heaven or hell in the truth. It is...is

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

Reading many texts on meditation, taoist, yoga, buddhist and from my own practice, one of the most important thing in spirituality is to be able to concentrate the mind single-pointedly on anything. Concentrating the mind on anything produce perfect health and make oneself be fearless and calmer day by day. But even gaining benefits, I don't know if I ever truly reached a genuine state of meditation or samadhi. The two last limb of yoga (meditation and samadhi), do they emerge naturally from the practice of concentration or one should do an inquiry practice?

About the benefits of concentrating the mind:

The One as Vital Energy. The One is the vital energy underlying all, and the more one obtains the One, the greater amount of vital energy one possesses: “Fulfilling his destiny, The Yellow Emperor got it and ascended to the cloudy heavens.” Zhuangzi “I hold on to the One, abide in its harmony, and therefore I have kept myself alive for 1,200 years. And never has my body suffered any decay.” Zhuangzi

Answer
1. One should let go of all thought and merge into THAT, whereupon the mind merges into the Atman (self)

2. Why should one go after vital energy when he is THAT himself? One should let go of this 'me' 'mine' falsehood and reside as the truth, instead of a separate and limited entity seeking things. Then THAT alone remains.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

Its with much adulation that I read your answers to the various questions posed by numerous aspirants.

I was intrigued by your reference to "proper sadhana"in many of your responses.

What is this proper sadhana? Is it a general rule that can be applied by everyone or does it have to be customised to suit each individual?

Your response would be much appreciated

Namaskars

Nityanand

Answer
It differs from individual to individual, based on their traits & past Samskara-s (impressions). When the complete set of Yogic practices suggested in past answers are applied regularly, with surrender to God, the path will be known on its own, from within.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

Today i wish to talk a out body heat and my pratice. I notice recently I am having an internal body heat which previously I am not able to feel.

I was unable to feel coldness in Air-con room and i sweat more than usual.

My pratice for yoga is not strong which I admit yet this internal heat build up. I have slack in my pratice and only meditate if I am free. I have 1.5 years of celibacy.

I hope u can provide me with advise on this. This sign may show that I am on the right path and also may be sign that I am doing something wrong in my yoga pratices.

Best Regards,
AL

Answer
It is natural for an increase in body heat further to Brahmacharya. It is this 'Yogagni' (Fire of Yoga) which roots out the karmic toxins over a span of many years, eventually rendering the body free.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Dear Dhananjay,
You once mentioned that throughout the course of evolution, the aspirant experiences various states of mind and non-mind. By the grace of the almighty, I have been fortunate enough to experience states of non-mind for prolonged periods of time (months at a time). In this state I constantly remain in contact with the ATMA's detachment and peace (or so I believe, please correct me if I'm wrong). However, every now and then, something will trigger, within me, that propels me out of this consciousness and back into clutches of misery and ego. These triggers are seemingly unprovoked, I have taken no wrong action. Most of the times I am able to, through effort, inquiry, and atmic wisdom overcome these phases in no time (hours, days)... Sometimes however, no matter how much sincere effort and inquiry I put in, I am not able to remember the divine essence of my atmic wisdom (something I was in contact with for prolonged periods of time) and remain entrapped within the ego consciousness and subjected to extreme misery. You righteously maintain that the lord himself is in control of the external. My question is, is it the lord himself who is in control of my internal (mental) as well, and engenders these phases of ego and prohibits me from slipping out of ego consciousness into soul consciousness due to past karma or is it some sort of mistake I am making that triggers ego thoughts and keeps me trapped in ego-consciousness. Basically my question i, who is in charge of the happenings, failures and successes within the mental realm and to what extent? What is governing the happenings within the mind? Is it again the lord himself? I really hope this makes sense ... I myself do not fully understand.

- Sahil

ANSWER: 1. The nature of the seeds of past karma determine these events. One is the ever pure Atman alone. However, identification with the non-self (due to the seeds of past Samskara-s) make one assume a separate, limited and finite being. Hence one has to persevere till all these seeds are roasted and can no longer germinate.

2. One tends to those actions as dictated by his past karma (which may get further strengthened by present karma), as dictated by the Ego. It is not the Lord who is responsible for one's actions, though all energy comes from HIM alone. As long as the 'I' (Ego) remains, one is responsible for the deeds committed by the I-ness. After the self is realized, there is no 'I' and therefore none to commit actions. The actions of such a man are then the actions of the Lord.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Is there a method to actively burn away past samsakaras within the linga sharira through detached effort? Should one even attempt to do such things? Does actively holding on to the self burn away samskaras in itself? If you would, please shed light on the changes that take place within the various bodies in terms of purification from Ego when one remains fixed within the self. I feel that you may have already done so in the past. If so, please let me know during which time frame and I will go through past answers.

ANSWER: 1. Past karma's are stored in the 'Karana Sharira' (causal body) and not the 'Linga Sharira'. The Yoga Sadhana with Brahmacharya suggested in past answers is the method to dissolve the same.

2. There is no better method to burn away these seeds than residence in the self (Samadhi). All Sadhana is only to reach such residence and nothing else.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Thank you. The reason I am asking is because these Karma's surface spontaneously, abruptly and without warning. When I am at home, resting, they are manageable. However, when I'm in the work place... Sometimes these episodes can become so intense that I am rendered unable to perform work. The only thing I can do, is withdraw from all activities and go into a meditative state and deal with the resultant thoughts and emotions with complete mindfulness and concentration which can take up to 45 min - 1 hour. I don't mind doing this, but I feel guilty and dishonest. My company is not paying me to sit in my office and perform meditation exercises. Furthermore, I feel as if I am not responsibly tending to my work duties as part of my Dharma assigned by God. No one is aware that I sometimes do this and my work output is just fine. Is there anything I can do to more actively manage the timing of these "surfacings" at least or should I just wait patiently, holding on the self, and surrender all these concerns to the will of the Almighty? Meaning - withdraw from work during work hours, meditate and deal with my ego, when absolutely necessary.

Answer
It is not necessary to retreat into a meditative posture, away from work. What is required is to hold on to the reality. Such a one is always in the self, whatever be his external work.

Just as a majestic falcon flies at ease without effort and yet is aware of the slightest movement of prey down below, he who has mastered the art of staying as the Atman (self) sports in that ocean of joy, immaterial of the nature of his external work. The world does not affect him.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Sir,

A few doubts have arisen.

After countless breaks, I have finally understood that it is my destiny to be someone who preserves the vital seed very carefully. Being of a vata constitution and a thin, weak bodily framework, I am often reminded that any engagement in the sexual act only further weakens my physical and mental strength.

1) IS it possible that I was endowed with this constitution for the purpose of learning to not identify with the body? I am thin and not very strong; I wonder perhaps if I had been given a robust constitution and a tall frame, I would have proudly identified with the body.

2) Regardless of the ultimate truth, the reality unfortunately is that being one of short stature is a hindrance in all aspects of professional life. Is it possible for the radiance and charisma of the true brahmachari to supersede such factors? I know the answer is yes but given how few urdvaretas there have ever been, it is a question which bears asking.

3) The worst of all things possible happened a few days ago when I began doubting my guru for so long, Swami Sivananda. I read accounts by U.G. Krishnamurti demonstrating the temper and ineptitude of the sage. Osho (who himself is not credible) said that Sivananda told an already weak man to exhaust himself by not eating. In addition, Sivananda warned about dietetic regulation when many disciples clearly saw him eating copious quantities and rajasic foods like pickles.

Such thought processes shattered the mind. I also thought about how Sivananda tried to make a "name" for himself via Divine Life Society while Ramana Bhagawan, Milarepa, and confirmed self-realized sages like them did not ask for or say for anything. The straw that broke the camel's back was Swami Venkatesananda's saccharine description that glorified every Sivananda did, including asking that the grave to bury his body be dug deeper to accommodate his large frame.

I have begun to doubt the rock to which I have clung and the mind is trembling with uncertainty. Osho, Sadhguru, Ravi Shankar and a host of pseudo-gurus have emerged-how can I ever find and trust and learn from an actual self-realized being?

4) Is it appropriate for the yogi to desire accumulation of some money such that he can live off the interest for the rest of his life and can devote his life to other pursuits? I feel this is essential.

Being a corporate worker fills the mind with jealousy, anger, desire to retaliate against coworkers, avoid big egos, etc.

5) Deep inside, I feel that my path is to be a yogi, author, and speaker to motivate others. From where do such desires and seeds stem? Will engaging in the activities one is drawn to not create extra karmic baggage?

Sincerely,

Jakob

ANSWER: 1. One is given that which is required to move towards the self, based on his past karma. Whether one is weak or robust, loss of the vital seed debilitates the system in the course of time. None are spared.

2. A man is recognized by the greatness of the Supreme being residing within, shining through him and not by physical stature.

3. The Guru is within oneself. He is one's Atman (self) alone. He who holds on to the self is ever one with the Guru.

4. If one does his Dharma (efforts to realize the self) right, everything will be taken care of.

5. Realize the self first. The rest will follow as it should.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Please, at the very least, tell me whether Swami Sivananda was a perfectly self-realized soul. Knowing this will be instrumental in knowing how and where to take recourse to the wise when my thoughts are disturbed and I face trying times in practice. What about Vivekananda?

I have noticed that the truly self-realized sages were quiet and did not engage in much fanfare: ramana bhagawan, milarepa, hanumandas baba. However, I have become skeptical of those like vivekananda-who traveled far and wide, threw a suitcase out of a train, and eat beef-and yogananda, whose cunningness is very evident in the eyes. You also have thorough cheats like sathya sai baba.

It is because of this that my practice is disturbed. One needs to believe in the ultimate fruit in order to ward off the enormous onslaught of maya one sees in the world. However, if the mind starts to think that even those it turned to during deep sadhana-like sivananda and vivekananda-were not perfect, a break seems eminent.

Please either tell me if these gurus were irreversibly situated in nirvikalpa samadhi or if I can look up to another guru, in the flesh, when the mind is not capable of abstractly focusing on the shining atman.

Please help. Your help would be invaluable, like a rock, in girding my practice and ensuring that I avoid a break. After so many breaks in this life and last, I have vowed to let nothing get in the way of my perseverance to reach the almighty and request that you kindly help me in this journey to attain the immortal seat of supreme splendor.

Last question: What are the definite signs of one who is self realized? When I have asked this before, you have mentioend that the actions of such a soul can only be understood by another self-realized soul. How, in society, do we distinguish the self-realized from those who are merely crazy? Osho Rajneesh, the famous fraud, tried to poison an entire village and kill them. Some justified this as spirituality. I am thinking about a similar grave situation now and need your urgent advice on how to handle such frauds and preventing them from harming innocent others.

Answer
1. To know if another is realized, one has to realize himself first. Apply efforts in that direction.

2. Hold on to the ever realized self within, which is the self of all. It is the Guru.

3. One should stop pointing fingers at others for his lack of success and instead correct within as required.

4. When you learn to merge with the Guru within, all issues will be addressed. It will then be known that there were no issues.

5. One feels indescribable peace and complete surrender in the company of the realized soul. One does not think...he becomes silent. THAT alone remains.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dhananjay,

Today I wish to know more about how Brahmacharya affect one eyesight.

From many books and resources, it is known that Brahmacharya help improve one eyesight if the practice is correct.

However, I have been practicing Brahmacharya/ Celibacy for more than 1.5 Years and my eyesight have not improve. In the recent eye screening, my eyesight is getting worse from 350 degree to 400+ degree.

I am asking for your advise because I think the theory of Brahmacharya help to improve one eyesight is just a myth.

I seek your expert advise.

Best Regards,
AL

Answer
1. One's present physical and mental state is the result of millions of past births. A year or two of Brahmacharya cannot negate the karma of such weight.

2. Brahmacharya is the way for perfection. Be it of the mind or the body; be it now or later.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Swami,

I made a grave mistake.
By The Lord's grace I have kept myself pure physically. I have even managed to keep a purer mind when talking to women (when I have to).

Today I talked to a married woman with a very impure mind. She's a neighbor of my parents I hadn't talked to in years.
She was talking to me for quite some time, and I let my guard down and started to enjoy it.
I didn't fantasize about sex, but I did enjoy her company.
She was dressed very scantily (explanation, not excuse).
By the lords grace I didn't commit a physical break.
I was courteous with her - the only possibly flirtatious thing I said was that she hadn't changed a bit, but my mind wasn't pure. The worst of it is that she is married.

I'll be more mindful from now on, but did I commit a break?

What prayaschitta can I do ?

Answer
Avoid repetition and hold on to honest Sadhana. One is the best judge of when he is crossing the forbidden line. He knows it all the while...

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Sir,

I hope you are well. I have three questions that require your advice.

1.) When walking in the street, Swami Sivananda recommends keeping the eyes down. However, this prevents one from enjoying vocations (such as sightseeing), and makes social interactions awkward. I also look like a person who's feigning humility. Should I rather keep my eyes up and behave like a normal person?

2.) However, there is the issue of the lustful look. My question is: When will this go away and fully disappear? If my eyes are up, I have to actively restrain them.

3.) Also, the images of some damsels who appear exceedingly beautiful still haunt my head. I assume the best way to get rid of these images is to remember the divine, and remind myself I am "pure consciousness"?

4.) Finally, there is the issue of men staring at me and trying to intimidate me because there are jealous or hate me. What is the best way to react in this case? You have said one must get rid of the ego in this situation. What would you recommend as the optimal reaction?

Should one stare back at them? Should one ignore them?

5.) When I am in the company of a woman on the subway, typically I stare at the ground, at the woman's feet, and say "Om, Sri Durga Devyai Namaha" in my head. I assume this is the best way to react?

Answer
1. It is one's inner eye (mind) which is to be fixed on the self.

2. When one resides in the self as the self, the one lusting dissolves forever.

3. One should remind himself of the falsity and decay of the same body in old age, which is changing everyday.

4. Ignore and do your Dharma

5. Holding on to the truth and reminding oneself of the falsity is the way.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhanajay,

Many saints (Tukaram, Eknath...etc) saints were married & were having children, still they attended Mokshya (Salvation). This indicate they did not follow celibacy. Please let me know your view.

Regards,
Narayan

Answer
Limiting the sexual act to progeny (producing offspring) as regards one or two wanted children, does not come in the way of attaining salvation. The purpose of the sexual act is procreation & not recreation. The saints mentioned above and many more, took to a life of Brahmacharya for realization of the self, shunning a life of recreational sexuality, though married.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sometimes when I make an effort to fall into soul consciousness by focusing on the nature of the breath, I feel quite a discomfort. The peace and detachment of the Atma (or so I believe) come over me in quite an intense fashion. I feel intense surges of heat, pressure in the upper abdomen and diaphragmatic area, pressure in the neck/shoulder area and a feeling of lack of breath as blood surges to my head. It throws my breathing rhythm off track and breaks my focus. The peace becomes to feel like an anxious rush for a few seconds. This happens quite occasionally - every now and then. Is this a common/normal experience or is something irregular/odd about this? Is this the sign of any shortcomings of my body which may need tending to? I ask purely to enhance my efforts at self-realization and nothing else. Please answer as you see fit.

Answer
It can happen due to the movements of Prana and is nothing to be worried about. One should focus on making the mind free of all thoughts, so as to collapse it into its source (Atman)

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Mr. Dhananjay

I have been going through your insights on Celibacy/Brahmacharya. In your past posts, you had mentioned about Urdhvareta (no semen is produced rather transmuted) as an essential step before self-realization.
In this connection, when I read about Prophet Mohammad, he had the revelations from God and Samadhi. However afterwards, he was able to have conjugal intercourse with his 11 wives and 2 concubines and even produce children. How is that possible? Kindly go through the life of Prophet Mohammad and provide your insights.

Answer
One will know these things through direct experience, further to the attainment of Gnyana, rather than through the book reports of historians which one takes literally.That will clear the matter as required.
It is the symbolic meaning which is to be grasped and not the gross.
ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: there is a long story of war against other groups not only by part the prophet Mohammad (verses of killing Christians and Jews in the Qur'an), but when one look at the Bible, many of the prophets said only one religion was true (The religion of the Jewish) and many called for crusades or wars too. There is the story of Moses and the plagues, Elijah against pagan groups, . Speaking only within the christian tradition, many other in more recent times, did miracles or were called wonder-worker but called for war too. There was war and inquisition even over rites like eucharist or baptism in that dark age called Middle Ages. Saint Anthony of Padua who was canonized called war on the heretics (those who don't follow the strict teachings of the church). Saint Bernard of Clairveaux who was canonized called for the Crusades against the Muslims and heretics. Saint Dominic called for Inquisition against heretics and witches. Francis Xavier requested an Inquisition to be installed in Goa. Even Galilei was close to execution. Padre Pio who was canonized said one time that multiple lives (reincarnation) is a doctrine of Satan an against church teachings, etc. Many popes say the eastern forms of thought-free meditation are dangerous for Christians, etc. So you see, those are the saints.

ANSWER: Instead of pondering over history, realize your self first. That is only of value. All else is a bubble on water.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: But facts are facts you cant deny facts, I HATE when someone TODAY say that in the past, society and people were more in tune with 'divinity'? On what basis they say that? Only fools could think that. Who would like to live in a 13th century full of plagues in France or Britain or any other part for that matter where law courts and churches processed werewolves...

Answer
What is fact, what is fiction and what is the absolute are to be known from direct experience. One should not get affected by what people say or don't, and should instead fix oneself to the goal. He should remain unperturbed by everything else and strive in the path alone. Then, the truth behind all that is to be known will be revealed.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
hello sir , i am practicing bramhacharya from approx 4yr 8month . In last 2 yr i found by wt has decrease and skin becoming dull or blankening. I got various result by celebacy like memory and focus improvement, physcially and mentally strong and energetic but why now skin colour changeing and not increase wt after increase diet and exercise?

Answer
There is a gradual evacuation of karmic and physical toxins during the initial years of practice, which manifests in different ways. Ignore the condition and persist in honest Sadhana as suggested in past answers. Things will get right eventually.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

In Katha Upanishad, as response to Nachiketa's second boon, Yama happens to explain about the knowledge needed to attain heaven. But, in the upanishad, it is only mentioned that Yama explained this knowledge to Nachiketa, and Nachiketa recites back this knowledge. Being very happy with Nachiketa's ability to comprehend it so quickly, Yama named that knowledge as "Nachiketa Agni".

What exactly is this Nachiketa Agni? What is the philosophical aspect surrounding this?

regards
RK

Answer
Before the attainment of final & irreversible emancipation (Videhamukti , which refers to the relinquishment of all the three bodies) after destruction of the Ego, further to self-realization, the Jiva experiences 'Jivanmukti' (liberated while still residing in the physical medium, with a created astral medium)

'Nachiketa Agni' refers to a particular kind of meditation on the internal being, bereft of external form, which eventually bestows merger with the Lord of the Cosmos (Vaishwanara), who is the support of everything created, via Jivanmukti

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Hello sir, I have reached this conclusion that everything in the world is subject to our minds, and if something is subject to our minds, then it cannot be God. How then can We talk of God and his existence? Because if we say there's God and this and that, then he's subordinate, and as I said he's subject to our mind.
Second, wet dreams have stopped happening to me for more than 6 months. Is it a sign of progress in brahmacharya or no? (Btw, I'm near 3 years into the practice).
Thank you.

Answer

1. God is to be experienced by annulling the mind, and not spoken about. There is no need to talk.

2. It is a sign of progress, as compared to frequent wet dreams.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Dear Sir. Does brahmacharya practices that you have suggested apply for GAY men also ? I am gay and practicing brahmacharya for past 1+ months and want to continue till I become urdhvaretas. Kindly advice.

Answer

Once 'Avidya' (ignorance) around the Atman is removed, one is neither heterosexual nor homosexual, but the pure self, which has no gender. Take up the practice honestly, with devotion to the Lord. The objective will be attained. One's orientation does not matter here.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Dear Sir. In many commentaries, more is talked about brahmacharya and urdhwaretas in men only.
I would like to know if women also can benefit from brahmacharya and hence attain urdhwaretas.
How do women do this ? Kindly advice.

Answer

Yes, a similar process occurs in women, eventually making them 'Urdhwarajas' (Urdhvaretas in men), when the downward flow of 'Bindu' (seed) is arrested. The matter is available in past answers.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Hello Sir,

Which book would you recommend for a detailed account on the practices of Brahmacharya?

Also, is there any book which contains a large number of recipes, which utilizes Sattvic ingredients?
Thank You

Answer
The Yogic practices required to achieve Brahmacharya are outlined in detail, in past answers. go through each and every answer from the start. Additional books which one might want to read are also mentioned.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Sir,

I hope this message finds you well.

Several questions, however:

1.) How to discriminate against worldly titles, honor and prestige? Should one remind oneself that these are anitya (that is, transitory) and ephemeral and subject to eventual destruction? You have said that the one should remind oneself that striving for these will lead to pain, anxiety, misery and sorrow. However, the cunning mind tells me that striving may cause pain, but if one is given these titles and positions, why not enjoy it in the present? Why not enjoy it right now? How to discriminate in this case?

2.) Same questions applies for respect and well-treatment. If others treat one well, why not enjoy it in the present? Why not feel good about the treatment?

3.) Also, you have mentioned a virgin is advantaged in the spiritual path because he does not have to deal with certain "sensations" from the sexual act extraneous from simply masturbation. What are these sensations and where do they originate? And my cunning mind tells me that as I have not enjoyed the sexual act in this life, why not enjoy these sensations? My questions are: are these sensations simply nervous tickling? Are they simply nervous pleasure? And is the pleasure from these sensations (which includes touching a woman) also illusory?

4.) What is meant by the sexual pleasure is false and illusory and imaginary? What is meant by this statement? And the statement that the sexual pleasure is nervous tickling and the sexual pleasure is an itch?

Answer
1. One need not avoid. That which has to come will come. What is required is not caring for these, knowing them to be unreal.

2. Same as above

3. Everything perceived by the mind and senses is illusory. Those experiences which are in destiny will transpire, be they sexual or otherwise. There is no need to give these more importance.

4. It is like the pain & death one experienced in a dream. Both were illusory.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
How can a man know if he has the nature of a brahmana, kshatriya, vaishya or a shudra?

Answer
Past Samskara-s (impressions) determine the same.

One whose mind is longing for the quest of the self is a 'Brahmana' .

One whose mind & body are longing for activity and achievement on the mental and physical plane, fearless, full of dynamism with vigor and valor is a 'Kshatriya'.

One whose mind is intent on the calculation of gains is a Vaishya.

One whose mind and body are aligned for hard labor, is constantly after the senses and who is content with the pleasures of the body alone is a Shudra.

Though born in some other cast at birth, one belongs to that Varna as dictated by his Guna (traits) and Karma (actions). Thus one who is a 'Brahmana' by birth, but after sense pleasures is a Shudra; While one born as a Shudra by birth, but intent of realizing his self is a Brahmana.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
In general, women have less problems dealing with lust than men do and the difference is significant. Do this also mean they are more spiritual or psychic? What about if a man control all his lust, is he very spiritual?

Answer
1. Women have more desire, but more self-control. They can also develop devotion much more easily, their basic nature being governed by emotion. However, it is difficult for them to develop detachment.

2. The desire in a man is comparatively shallow, with lesser self-control. Developing devotion requires more effort, their nature being rational. It is however easier for men to develop detachment, as their involvement in the unreal is superficial.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhananjay,

I am writing this today to thank you for your contribution to allexperts.com. I am of of those who are lucky enough to receive your teaching and advice here.

I am reaching my 650 days of Brahmacharya in a few days time.I would say Brahmacharya is the right path for me.

As one progress in the path of truth, the craving of answers also reduce.There is nothing much to ask and nothing more to know as one progress/getting closer to one.

Since I am typing this I will ask something for the sake of it.

I would like to know how to calm the mind on physical and mental level. That include developing right thoughts, right diets....

I believe that by developing these attributes, I can obtain greater peace.

Answer
It is very simple, the closer one keeps the mind to the Atman (self), the calmer it stays. Disturbance is the result of the mind's attachment to the 'Asat' (unreal). The Atman alone is real. The beginner achieves this through constant meditation on the formless self, asking nothing in return. As one practices so over a span of many years with unbroken Brahmacharya, one is always in meditation, whatever be the nature of external activity. Then the self alone remains, encompassing everything.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Which perspective should one adopt towards the inevitable attainment of yogic powers en-route to self-realization?
What is the correct manner in which an aspirant controls yogic powers? Are their any practices and/or exercises one may perform?
What is their purpose and how must they be correctly utilized? In which instances is the use of yogic powers warranted?
Please provide examples as to how they become impediments/distractions in terms of self-realization and the solutions with which they can be counteracted.

if you have already answered such queries, please tell me the time frame and I will search through past answers.

Thanks.

Answer
1. "All powers belong to the Lord and not me. What is seen is a mere reflection of HIS will. I do nothing" should be the attitude. With such a detached mind, one should be indifferent to all Siddhi-s, giving them no more attention than one gives a grain of sand.

2. One should first let go of the desire to 'exercise' and 'control' such. Then there will be no issue.

3. Do your Dharma (Sadhana to realize the self) and be quiet. HE will decide how they are to be utilized through you, if so willed. That is not your concern.

4. He who seeks, craves or thrills in Siddhi-s is soon enveloped by his 'Ahamkara'(Ego) which will cause his downfall without doubt. There are numerous instances in mythology, illustrating the same.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

first of all thanks for answering questions. Not everywhere you can ask about this topic and get honest answer :)

I am on my second stretch of abstinence. First one I went close to 120 days and now I am near 70th. As time passes by I wonder more and more about it's true purpose. Could be that celibacy meant to achieve something bigger then yourself? Like some goal that person views as life long big (for example I have nagging thoughts on such a creative project for awhile)? Like wouldn't be a waste of effort to not try to accomplish such a goals that leads to greatness? I hope I expressed myself clearly.

Thanks

Answer
1. Mere abstinence is not Brahmacharya.

2. The purpose of Brahmacharya is to realize oneself, thereby delivering oneself into infinity, ever in bliss, free from all suffering. One thus reaches his true state of freedom, free from encasement in the body & mind forever, which are the forts of suffering. That is greatness.

He who strives so achieves all he is destined to in the material plane as well, en route.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

1. You often say one should continue unbroken Sadhana. What is the minimum amount of time per day one should devote to Sadhana to consider it unbroken? I was able to successfully practice celibacy for one year. Of the 12 months, for the first 8 months, I did several hours of Sadhana per day and it was proper brahmacharya. The last 3-4 months, I practice celibacy through body and mind but my Sadhana slipped due to work stress and I started playing computer games and phone games and eventually fell from brahmacharya. I finally recovered and have resumed brahmacharya and Sadhana for last 3 months, but I have have host of health problems now because of which I can neither sit, stand or lie down comfortably for a long time at a stretch. I'm trying my best to do Sadhana in various body postures while health recovers. What is the minimum duration I should devote to Sadhana per day to consider it unbroken? Also I'm seeing some tendencies repeat like wanting to play games to forget about the pain. I recognized how last time it led to my fall and Am avoiding it.

2. In some spiritual traditions , fasting to death is considered good spiritually. I'm wondering if for someone things become really painful in the body, and if the person does not have any serious attachment to anyone, is it OK to give up food and devote oneself to full time Sadhana and brahmacharya until death arrives? Can this lead to moksha or will it lead to bad karma and rebirth?

Thank you,
Om tat sat

Answer
1. As much time as possible, after getting done with activities related to one's Dharma. It is not the time alone, but the intensity. The true Yogi holds on to the self in the midst of all activities. He is always in Sadhana, though attending to external work.

2. If that is destined, as per one's Prarabdha karma, it will happen. Else, one cannot. Fasting by itself is not favorable.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Beloved Dhananjay,

I follow mitahara as best I can. I am sure to snack between meals. I'm not hungry when I do. I just want to keep my 'digestive fire' rolling, as I should according to quoted yogis of the past.

Sometimes I skip the snack between meals though. I feel that I should wait until I'm hungry to eat. I feel that I'm just eating to eat, fulfilling some desire. In other words, I'm afraid I may not be taming my passions enough.

I'm sure you've read all the scriptures that include fasting. Medical opinion shines light that fasting is healthy too. I know that I have an 8-12 hour fasting period every night, so I'm skeptical about the need to lessen my food intake.

Should I continue with my current diet, lessen the size of meals, remove snacks, eat snacks instead of meals, etc? I know you've advised on the subject PLENTY, and I've read the posts to absorb the essence. I'm insecure (or petrified). I want to eat less but I want to eat enough (perfectly). I could be a dedicated ascetic.

When do our bodies enter 'starvation mode' where our digestive system decides to devour precious soma we've accumulated over months?

Peace and well-being,

Answer
1. One should eat when hungry, at the designated hours, and not randomly.

2. To the Yogi who practices 'Mitahara', separate fasting is unnecessary, unless specifically required for a particular reason. Unnecessary fasting drains Ojas, causing weakness.

3. To him who does his Sadhana right with unbroken Brahmacharya and meditation, the how much and when to eat will be revealed by itself.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Dear Dhananjay,

I want to thank you for your answers so far, I appreciate your advice very much and it helped me on numerous occasions. I practise chastity for a considerable time now and I see the benefits very clearly. I had one voluntary break many months ago and that made me feel so miserable afterwards (both mental and physical) that I'm determined never to repeat it again.

I've one last question. Sometimes I read in your posts that contact with women should be brief and that we should be on our guard because God will tests us in our resolve. But I also read that a brahmachari who doesn't plan to become a monk can marry and beget offspring; and thus only has procreational intercourse.

So, how can I tell the difference between a girl who is tempting to break my chastity and a girl who may become my future wife? How can I meet my future wife when I should avoid contact with women as much as possible?

I live in the west where men and women mix regularly in social life and in the work place.

Thank you for your help,

J.

Answer

If one's Sadhana is right, with honest efforts towards Brahmacharya and surrender to God, a suitable soul will take the position of one's life partner, if so destined, at the designated time. It will be known when it happens, just as all other things. There need not be any worry.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

QUESTION: Hi Sir,

Two queries for your expertise.

At the present, I can remain in two different states: one where I offer the body and mind to God, and identify myself with pure consciousness, and the other state where I actively discriminate and remind myself of the disgusting nature of the body and that Veerya is too valuable to waste on a bag of refuge such as woman. However, the following problem occurs: whenever I discriminate, the ego rises in another form, meanwhile, if I offer the body and mind to god, the waves of passion invade my mind but slowly subside but I feel as if I am not developing Varaigya (dispassion towards woman). It seems to be the difference of god mitigating these waves of lust vs. "I," who uses discrimination to tone these waves. When the lustful wave comes, and attraction arises in the mind, should one remind himself that the body is a bag of flesh that should not be indulged in, or should one stay or reside in the self? If one should reside in the self, is there any time or place during the day when the yogi should remind himself of the falsity of physical beauty?

Also, sir, upon facial examination, I have very deep lashes below my eyes. I do not care if these lashes hurt my appearance, but they are very deep and also cause a noticeable difference in my appearance and make me look tired. I sleep everyday from ~9:00 am to 4:30 pm and commence yogic practices upon waking up. Would you suggest any kind of solution for this problem that is amenable for yogis to reduce such deep scars and help create a more normal looking face?

ANSWER: 1. Use the method which works. Surrendering all to God is the best option, for it quells the Ego.

2. Do not worry about the body. It will correct itself after a few years of unbroken practice.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: If I surrender all to God and constantly stay in the self, must I strive to develop Varaigya independently or will Varaigya naturally develop due to god's grace ?

Answer
Surrender means relying on HIM and doing your Dharma silently, no matter what. One should accept whatever HE gives, pleasant or unpleasant, knowing HE is doing it to quell the Ego and its karma. Vairagya dawns on its own, further to life experience, as one realizes that attachment to the world and senses brings suffering alone.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Among all the major world religions which is closer to the truth in your opinion, one or many religions?

Many people who practice religion very deeply have faith only in their form of worship and say that my denomination is corrupt because it is not found in the Bible. They even say if one do not believe correctly one is lost. In my opinion, lot of people don't understand what is religion. Doesn't religions change over time?

Answer
1. All true religions aim at the truth alone. Different people find different religions appealing, based on their individual nature.

2. What one says or doesn't is of no account. The truth remains as it is.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello brother,
I want to know your point of view on social work and spirituality,I ask this question because before the following of bramcharya and spirituality.I had decided to do life time social work but after following bramcharya and meditation and lots of experience my thinking is change and decided to concentrate on spirituality so my first priority is spirituality and leave social work but my friends try to convince me that i am wrong and back to come in social work but i cant back now i surrender to my Guru and God totally...so just i simply want to know your point of view both of these

Answer
Realizing oneself is the greatest service one can offer the society, for the realized one quells the suffering of all others, like a light which guides one in a dark tunnel. Hence one should strive to realize oneself first.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Salutations to you Dhananjay Sir,

Before i ask you any questions i feel it as necessary to give you some details of my life(no names included).
1.Sexually abused at 6-7 years old by a female cousin of same age: Effect : Desire to exert dominion over women as revenge, strained relationship with mother and failed relationship with girlfriend in school(no physical pleasure involved) as a result.
2.Inferiority Complex at 12-13 years old, when everyone began to notice and became very verbal that i was an introvert and my younger brother was and is kind of a rockstar.
3.Addicted to masturbation, gaming, TV shows to cope with depression: 500-600 times repetition of the suicidal act till date.
4.Allergic rhinitis (cold air, pollen/dust)

I suffered from childhood Tonsillitis which after being cured manifested into Allergic Rhinitis(AR); it absolutely wrecks the nervous system on par with masturbation as far as my experience is concerned; which naturally made me hate my supposedly defective body. I always had a natural hatred towards women and used to see them as objects of physical, emotional pleasure only and was revolted by the idea of marriage. Even then, somewhere in my mind I have always longed for peace but tried to find it in all the wrong places. I was always good at learning concepts and applying them. But, after beginning to masturbate, the spark that i used to feel slowly chipped away. In early 2014 i resorted to bodyweight exercises in an effort to stop masturbation and succeeded for three months. And i confronted my failed relationship in school after 7 years of denial. For a certain amount of time, it felt like the end of the world for me. And, in a way it was, because i finally gave up the idea of bodily pleasure. I have been an on-off celibate since January 2014.
I am aware of the 7 year karmic cycle and the synchronization of behavioural and life patterns with the 12 year solar cycle(my cycle is just around 15 days). I have realized that the source of all pain and misery is attachment(to the self, to family, to all material things) and in particular that a woman is the source of all pain for a man and vice versa. After realizing this, I studied Practise of Brahmacharya by Swami Sivananda and Brahmacharya: Celibacy Attained with Understanding by Gnani Purush Dadashri.Then I took a vow of brahmacharya on 17/8/15 and broke it on 31/8/15. The desire that i felt at that time was 10 times the most i have ever felt, but, the ensuing guilt and debility that i felt was 100 times the most i ever did. After that, my mind has been free of sexual thoughts for the most part of this month with no physical breaks, though i had a wet dream on 2/9/15, it was mostly prostatic fluid. The most helpful step that has worked for me so far is regular yoga, physical exercise and ever constant recitation of Vishnu mantra(tvamewa mata'ch pita tvamewa....).

Finally, after preparing for GATE-15 for a year and failing to secure expected marks, was a wakeup call for me. After reading the aforementioned books, i have developed a disgust towards the HUMAN body in general. Please understand that i have always subconsciously hated all material pursuits. Also, i have, since childhood, always hated being in company of people, because all most of them ever talk about is money/sex/marriage/food/house etc., including most of my friends and extended family members(not parents, they are materialistic about relationships).

Q1.How do i recover my memory, lost self-confidence and absolute brahmacharya to succeed in this world, so that i can continue my path to absolution?

Q2.I have increasingly grown detached to everyone and everything including my parents on some level. How do i behave in order not to hurt them? How do i get over anger and the guilt of my past sins?

Q3.As days have passed by since 2014, i have become more and more convinced that marriage or any form of sexual relationship is not my cup of tea because i neither have the mental setup nor desire to keep a woman. How do i break this news to my parents when the time comes? Can it be said that the will of the Lord will manifest in either me being as obstinate as a mountain even at the threat of being restigated from the family or being a cowardly mouse and succumbing to the first signs of pressure or in my parents being totally ok with it? Because i am aware of "Pitru Runa" or "father's debt", though my younger brother will very easily fill the gaps i will leave. And what about not being eligible for moksha if you don't have a son(according to gita, somewhere)?

Q4.I read somewhere that cold showers increase the intercellular spaces of the cells on the skin and facilitate better absorption of the spiritual, mental, physical benefits of yoga. On account of my allergic rhinitis, the cold morning air while practising yoga after cold baths almost 7/10 days triggers my chronic sneezing which continues till evening, wrecking my whole day. I have noticed an increase in body heat due to brahmacharya but, it still is not enough. Can i use any oil on my body before cold baths to prevent my allergy or will it serve as an impediment to the process of absorption of spiritual energy that i stated earlier in this question, because the option of bathing even 2 hours after yoga with warm water makes me feel very lazy and sleepy?

Q5.What is the difference between Anulom Vilom, also known as Nadi Shuddhi according to Dr P.D.Sharma's Yoga book and Nadi Shodhana? How to properly perform Kapalabhati to cure my kapha dosa?

Q6.What do you think about breathing through the mouth? If it is spiritually harmful,how and what to do when someone is going to yawn?

Q7.Do simple bodyweight exercises count as violence towards the body? And if so, will my Kama-Krodha in any way be increased by moderate or excessive exertion?

Q8.Lastly, am I wrong to feel that I don't belong to this era and world(since i was a little boy) and now long to realize Brahman/God/Lord... by breaking all attachments and dissolving all karmic debt, especially when i haven't even stood on my own two feet yet(i am 22/23 and never joined the IT company i was placed in B.Tech because i couldn't handle the idea of the lifestyle involved)? And is "Akhanda Brahmacharya" is the answer to everything or do i come off as a complete idiot?

Thank you for reading till the end,
A Fellow Aspiring Brahmachari.

Answer
Simpy adhere to honest Yogic practice to realize the Atman (self), via Brahmacharya, in the path HE will show. All else will be taken care of.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I am 39 years old & have started brahmacharya 5 years ago til now.
I have not been successful in my path not because of indulging in the sex or lust but because of not being able to manage the fluctuations of mind. in countless times in my life I confronted with these fluctuations & most of them I failed. you recommended holding on the self when we confront with these crises. please describe it more.

Answer
Though proper application of the Sadhana suggested in past answers, in an unbroken and consistent manner, one gradually detaches from all conceived and perceived and resides in the truth, realizing all else to be an illusion. This is holding on to the self. It is being quiet.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth) 98r

Question
Hello,

I think most people know that much recreational sex is not good but they don't care.

I have a question:
is there a relation between the ethnic race and the level of brahmacharya achieved, it is easier for some? ANd why sme people are born with red hair? Thanks

Answer
1. It depends on one's evolutionary level and not race, caste or creed. When there are past Samskara-s (impressions) supporting the same due to previous efforts, it appears easier.

2. Genes determine body features. Genes are the result of past karma.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

I read that sexual stimulation not followed by ejaculation causes prostate cancer and other problems and this often happens to men who pratctice sex without ejaculation.

Although I do my best to keep my mind pure, sometimes I become sexually aroused for a few minutes and get a slight erection when some female friends hug me or touch me friendly.
What should I do when this happens?

Are arousals of this kind not followed by ejaculation harmful on long-term?

Thanks.

Answer
He who holds on to the Atman (self) through regular and honest Sadhana with surrender to God develops the immunity to remain untouched by external stimuli. The methods to be employed to maintain Brahmacharya are available in past answers.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I forget and want to say thanks very much for your teachings of 2012 in past posts I decided to practice brahmacharya for now 2-3 months. It is one of the few sites that talk about self-discipline in mind and actually tell the benefits and the science behind it. Morality is an energy issue not a religion. Many other religions and tradition talk about moral code and chastity but don't give any clue about it they just give it as a forceful moral without knowledge.

I wont go on all the benefits I had but before practicing I was a wreck and many people bullied me, laughed at my appearance, always say this mustache or any clothes go bad with me, etc, took me for a stupid person, I always said yes to everything for fear of what other might think. I was always blocked to express feelings or to talk. All was negative. In only the first two or three weeks, everything changed. Now some say my gaze is like a soldier or military and want to start conversation or waiting me to say goodbye when they quit. This all appear unimportant but it tells a difference. In my mind, I don't think much anymore and don't care about what I see even I'm not interested in making conversation with women anymore. I don't feel any need to talk or care if other think good or bad of me, I see many as waste of time. I don't care what their religion is or if they don't have any. If there is no account of energy all their practices are useless.

The first time I heard about brahmacharya was in the books of the spiritualist Samael Aun Weor popular in South America and Osho. They have lot of information.

Answer
May all realize themselves as being no different from the Supreme self within, crossing the ocean of Maya (illusion), through the boat of Brahmacharya.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dhananjay,

Due to your graciousness I have been able to weather many tides of Maya and ascend gradually through the stormy ocean that is Samsara.

The mind is starting to quiet down, but I cannot feel the progress for it seems so slow that I doubt it is happening at all.

I would like to ask a few things:

1) Sivananda spoke of the free will. Is there not a contradiction between us engaging in free will to embark on brahmacharya and HE deciding all? How can HE decide? The Atman (HE) is the fundamental energy or shakthi in the world which underlies aging, electricity, and gravity: What does this powerful, wonderous force have to do with our will?

2) The body often gets the desire to physically hug a female. No desire for intercourse. Just a desire for cuddling and warmth particularly during stressful times. The mind desires companionship and genuine love but not sex-sex seems too raw and too animalistic. Is engaging in such activity against the tenets of brahmacharya? I live in a cold, stressful place and I have read that human touch is essential for good health. Kindly clarify. Is this a Middle Path? or bad?

Ever your student,
Dhananjay

Answer
1. As long as there is the apparent Ahamkara (Ego), it appears as though there is free will. When the darkness of Agnyana (ignorance) is vacated by the light of Gnyana (truth), then it will be known that there is no such thing as free will, just as the snake in the rope disappears upon the advent of dawn.

2. The Atman (Supreme spirit within) is not Shakthi. It is that Supreme power, through whom Shakthi (the principle behind creation) gets manifest. Shakthi is created and destroyed, while the Supreme remains as ever, without a second. One is really that formless self, which has no birth & death.

3. The ardent Yogi who is in the path to realize the self should keep at bay, all such tricks of Maya, which will undoubtedly cause his downfall and hold on to the Supreme alone, through his Sadhana.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dhananjay,

I must bring to you one doubt which troubles the mind.

It is said that upon death the atman and the encapsulating jiva and 5 senses, along with karana sharira, vacate the body.

But isn't the atman everywhere? Is the atman not present in inanimate objects? Or is it exclusively present in living objects?

After death, many processes like decomposition and decay will occur, all of which involve shakthi which is derived from the supreme source called atman. Even the bacteria in the gut which eat the body are functioning by power of atman.

So how can the atman depart a dead body if 1) inanimate objects have atman in them and 2) processes in a dead body require the power of atman?

Kindly yours
Stanley

Answer
If a hundred pots are filled with water and kept out under the sky, a hundred Sun's are seen to be reflected in the water. Is there one Sun or a hundred?

If water in one of the pots is agitated, the Sun in that pot appears to be moving, while the Sun in the 99 others remains still as ever. Is the Sun really still or moving?

If one pot is broken, water flows out and there isn't any Sun there anymore. There appear to be 99 Suns only. Where did the other Sun go? From where did he come before?

Just as there always was one Sun alone and not many; just as that one Sun existed or ceased to exist relatively, based on the state of the pot, the Supreme being, though one, appears as many in the billions of living or non-living beings he inundates. There is not such a place anywhere in creation or beyond, which HE does not occupy. Rather, everything is IN HIM and not the other way round. When the power of that infinite is manifest through a life form, it is termed as an entity and wrongly mistaken as being separate, due to Agnyana (ignorance), while in reality, HE alone remains. This many or that many concern the viewer and not the truth, which is one & remains as it is.

When he who experiences or see's death and birth (Ego) vacates, it will remain that there is neither birth nor death, which are illusions concerning the unreal Ahamkara (Ego)

Then, he goes beyond birth and death, to the truth.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir,
My queries are not related to Brahmachrya, so you may reply back when you are finished with important questions related to Brahamacharya.

1) please give some effective ways to get sleep instantly.

2) I read that NOPOLEAN BONAPART owing to his high concentration could make himself sleep the instant he laid to bed. Can you please tell how he was able to do that.

3) i saw a youtube video, where a man can stop himself from feeling pain sensation. He owed his ability to meditation. Can you please tell how he was able to do that. Is it possible to maintain that state as long as we want.

4) how can we astral project at will. Can you please tell the technique or procedure to follow in order to attain these abilities

Answer
1. Do the suggested Sadhana

2. When one is not attached the least to himself or the world, he enjoys instant, deep sleep at night.

3. By withdrawing the life energy from one's senses, one gets oblivious to pain. Purposefully going behind such powers is a waste of time and not for the one in quest of the truth. The honest Yogi who surrenders to the Lord is enabled with what is necessary, at the right time. He does not crave for such things, but ever remains steadfast on the Atman (self)

4. This purpose of this portal is limited to guidance on Brahmacharya to realize the self.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

Is Siddhasana supposed to arouse sexual feelings when you sit in it? (i.e mild erection, contractions, general pleasurable feeling) If this is happening does this mean it is being done incorrectly? Should I continue with the practice of it or stop if it is unsafe.

Kindly advise. Thank you.

Answer
'Sidhasana', when done right, helps channelize sexual energy upwards, aiding transmutation. Learn it right from a competent teacher and practice.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear sir

1 The pants like jeans or tight dresses are cause any bad effect of our veerya?

2 if one sadhaka continued his brahmacharya for a certain period. And married after freeing from his all vasanas. And now he wants a child as per his wife's will, how he can do sexual activities?

2 how the pranic healers can see the aura?

sarvam khalvidam brahma
Vijith ramakrishnan

Answer
1. It is preferable to wear comfortable and ventilated clothes.

2. When the birth of offspring is destined, it occurs by HIS grace. HE controls and not us.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
1. What is the importance of effort?

2. What if someone feels apathetic?

3. Is there a strategic use of the OM? My trikuti is stimulated by it.

4. Is it unwise to be ambitious for acquiring the superhuman state (since I may want siddhis for the sake of others [not to be conceited])?

Answer
1. Effort is required, till the one putting effort (Ego) exists.

2. The oscillations of the mind are to be ignored.

3. The aim is to merge into the self...

4. One should focus on reaching the thought free state (merging into the Atman) and not aspire for anything else.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Hari Om,

Dhananjay ji, I've been following you for quite some time now. In this iron age of ignorance, it is truly befitting to know how this portal is helping a struggling mankind to achieve what is his true nature (svarupa). I've taken to Brahmacharya Dharma and am trying with my whole heart to live a disciplined life. I have the following query:

1). For a man (of 23-25 years of age), dwelling earlier in sexual self-abusement in excess, if he takes to strict practice of celibacy, as per your earlier posts, the vital energy takes atleast 3 months to stabilize and if the celibacy is genuine, more and more of this energy is harmonized.
May you explain what exactly harmonization means here. Even after one takes to the practice, due to the past samskaras, the semen is necessarily formed due to wet dreams mostly which is beyond the control of an aspirant as it happens due to the samskaras embedded in the Chitta on which one has hardly any control in the beginning stages of Sadhana?

2). For the above mentioned subject and also taking into consideration his age, is Mukti possible in this very birth for him. What should be his intensity of austerity. How should he burn the samskaras, knowing that these are the greatest obstacle in his way to achieve the goal.

I would be obliged by your reply to the query.

Hari Om.

ANSWER: 1. The arousal of sexual thoughts and thereby the process of formation of semen are interlinked and one and the same. Through honest Tapas (Sadhana), the Yogi gradually vacates these Samskara-s (impressions) embedded deep within. This is also accompanied by cleansing and purification of the physical medium.

As these impressions gradually dissolve through Sadhana, the mind gets purified to that extent and the formation of semen also gradually reduces (from slowing down of the downward flow of 'Soma', which commenced upon puberty, from the' Ajna Chakra' to the 'Svadhistana chakra')

'Soma' or nectar is the subtle most form of 'Bindu' (Life seed). It is stored in the Ajna, in children, aiding their growth and development. From the onset of puberty, it starts to flow down and takes its gross most form (Rethas-semen). The downward gates are then opened for ever. Through herculean efforts at Sadhana, coupled with the grace of the Lord, the Yogi reverses this process and stabilizes Bindu in the upper region. No semen is then formed. Such a Yogi is then an Urdhvarethas. Soma in turn again aids meditation and nourishes the Yogi-s body, even if he is in years of unbroken Samadhi.

Loss of Bindu as semen from the downward channel results in debility, degeneration and Avidya (ignorance), binding man in the cycle of births, disease & death. While the Yogi, who retains it up through Brahmacharya & Meditation shines in strength, vitality and Gnyana (knowledge of the truth), eventually freeing himself from the 'Samsara sagara'(Ocean of trans-migratory existence), to realize his state of eternal Ananda (bliss).

2. The methods required to be adopted are elaborated in detail, in past answers. He who perseveres committed, with surrender to God, asking nothing in return, with unbroken Sadhana, reaches the goal. When and how it comes is to be left to the higher power and is not one's concern. One's right ends at duty.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Hari Om,

Sir, I am very much thankful to you for clearing the doubts. I would be more obliged to have a few more of the following queries resolved by you.

1). Due to heavy loss of the seminal fluid, now the semen has become very, very thin and watery. When in a wet dream, there is emission of semen, this is clearly noticed. Does this mean, that this particular aspirant aspiring for emancipation, is weaker than him, who is untouched of the evil of adultery and is also putting the same effort in Sadhana.

2). In one of the past queries about sleeping in day time, you replied that a nap could be taken. Considering the fact that sleeping in day time shortens lifespan and destroys Ojas, what should be the time duration of the 'nap', if it has to be taken on account of some hard work or the like.

3). For the particular subject in concern, does the question of marriage arise, for much has already been destroyed. Stepping forward in the Grihastha ashrama would only mean further degeneration and degradation. Doing Sadhana and at the same time having copulation with a women would be the greatest act of cheating Him (Paramatman). It would be like butchering the self. If the subject endeavours, that he should remain a life long celibate and fix his mind on his goal and destroy the Samskaras of the previous million births, what would be your recommendation, Sir.

I would be greatly obliged to have these queries resolved.

Hari Om.

Answer
1. The ejaculate in a wet dream can be more watery than that of a willful ejaculate in the waking state as it is more of prostate fluid and less sperm. Do your Sadhana and let go of worry.

2. Within half an hour.

3. HE will decide if there is marriage or not, as HE decides all else. It is not one's concern

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir.
I am now crossed 12 weeks in Brahmacharya. So far I had night fall one time, however sometimes I feel the semen is stored up inside me. When I go for toilet and exert myself, then semen comes out which is somewhat like diluted and non-sticky. I guess this is due to thought that come. Question is - Will this kind of storing affect health OR should I ejaculate and get it emptied ? How can I reduce this ?

Answer
The Brahmachari should not willfully ejaculate. It amounts to a break. All fluids are eventually transmuted back, when there is proper Brahmacharya in thought, word & deed. That is not semen but the Cowpers fluid. If your Sadhana at transmutation, as suggested in past answers is regular with surrender to God, things will progress as they have to.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Sir!

Can Yogic Sadhana cure Obsessive Compulsive disorder?
Or is it advised to consult a good psychiatrist parallely?

Om Tat Sat

Answer
The suggested Sadhana will help come to terms with the same and eventually root it out. How long depends on the strength of past Samskara-s which are the cause. If the Sadhana is honest and regular, one will know whether to consult a psychiatrist or not.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi,
I meant to ask you one more question, sorry.
Is not cutting one's hair important for cultivating energy? I feel like I don't want to cut my hair or my beard as I feel it's unnatural. Why do Buddhist monks shave their head if hair is important for cultivating energy? Is it necessary to not cut the hair?

Answer
1. When one feels from within, not to cut hair, it would be good to comply.

2. There are different paths. One should choose that which the inner voice suggests.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

I have a few doubts which I would be most grateful if you could clear.

Slowly, as practice progresses, I have noticed that the power of buddhi grows stronger in quelling the vicissitudes of manas. Before, manas-the mind-jumped like a monkey and the body was dragged along. Now, the problem still persists to a large degree, but I am able to apply a modicum of discretion in restraining the monkey-like mind. Will this power of buddhi continue to grow until one day, the mind will not affect me one bit?

Second, during meditation on the formless, non-dual reality, an immense bliss pulses throughout the body. My breathing becomes shallow. I have two worries. First, how is this spiritual bliss different from the pleasure of savoring a candy or engaging in orgasm? This spiritual bliss is highly addictive and I keep wanting to return to that peaceful, zen-like state but I fear that it is simply another addiction which floods the brain with dopamine and seratonin. Kindly clarify if I am on the right path.

The other issue is that during illness, I lose the will or inclination to reside in that supreme state of spiritual bliss. So, when people speak about the bliss of atman, isn't this merely a physical sensation? When the body does not cooperate, there is no bliss. So how is HE different from any other pain or pleasure response given that the body is the medium which experiences the bliss?

Lastly, I have noticed that while I am able to properly control the mind when I see a number of beautiful individuals, there are a few particular women whom the mind simply does not go off. These individuals cause craving and obsession and the mind-for whatever reason-does not let them go. Have I met or interacted with these jivas in past life? Or is it simply common for the mind to crave certain objects or women randomly? It is frustrating as a yogic aspirant.

Kindly Yours,
Tat Vam Asi - Thou are That Sreyas

Answer
1. With honest and unbroken Sadhana, the Avidya (Ignorance) surrounding the Atman gradually breaks down, and the mind takes the nature of the self itself. Thereby gradually increases self-control.

2. One should stop thinking and make the mind free of all thoughts, including the taste of bliss in meditation. That alone leads to Samadhi

3. One's consciousness is attached to the finite body and perceived though the senses initially. This is called 'Dehatma Buddhi' (I am the body assumption). It gradually reduces with merger of the mind into the self. Then, one perceives himself as separate from the body.

4. It may or may not be the case. The Yogi has to fight these battles and overcome them one by one.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Beloved Dhananjay,
I have met someone, with whom I believe I can build a family. She is spiritually minded, and relatively free from wordly desires. I would be grateful if you could bless me with clarification for the following questions:

1. What is role of Man in the building of a family? What is the role of Woman?
2. Is any level of physical intimacy (be it without attachment) appropriate while a yogi remains dedicated to brahmacharya to realize the self? (ex. Cuddling, Hugging etc.)
3. Are life partners allowed to provide each other with spiritual guidance, emotional support etc.?

I have read the following from your past answers:
a) In regards to physical intimacy, "the ardent yogi steers clear of such tricks of maya." The reason i ask is, you have also stated "Initially in marriage, physical intimacy is appropriate if used to form an open, emotional bond between the two partners." It is hard for me to imagine a successful marriage where none of this is helpful or required atleast in the initial stages.

Warm regards.

Sahil

Answer
1. The role of both man and woman in marriage is to respect each other as divine individuals & let nature take its course towards establishment of a family through progeny.

2. Sexual activity required to bring forth a child is valid within marriage. It is holy under such pretext.

3. Yes

4. That is for aspirants who are done with bringing forth progeny and have thereupon taken up a life of strict Brahmacharya to realize the self. It does not apply to newly weds, who are yet to make a family.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Hello sir,i am age 21 i have been practicing celibacy for an year, in the time i have lost almost 10 kgs weight nd having cough and breathing problm.

ANSWER: Forceful celibacy is injurious. Sexual energy is to be transmuted via the required Yoga Sadhana. Go through each and every past answer and apply the suggested methods. The practice of Brahmachayra does not lead to abrupt weight loss or ill health. That is the result of some other cause.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Sir, i am doing sirsasana and jap and some pranayama and now my breathing problem and disesase is cured but my body has become a bit slim.is it ok to do sirsasana i feels a bit headache after sirsasana.

Answer
Yogic lifestle, when applied gradually, over a period of time in a consistent manner, negate all issues of the body & mind. Apply the practices with commitment and devotion. Things will resolve.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi dhananjay.

What happen if one don t pratice brahmacharya from 20-50 years old?

What will happen to a man who have no sex restraint ,had been having sex from 20-50 years old and have many affair with different women.

I know one own karma determine one life and results at the end.

But i hope to observe sone of thr traits of men without restraint.

The man above is someone close with me.

Answer
Loss of the vital seed speeds degeneration, decay and debility of the body & mind. Sexual relationships with the opposite gender outside marriage adds to unwanted karma, that one will have to settle at a later time, through suffering. The wise transmute their vital energy upwards, to realize their self and stay clear of adding undesirable karma, which binds man into the web of suffering.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

The rapper named eminem said these lyrics "Im trying to stay on fire, so you know if I hate water sprinklers, I don't love the hose" (hoes meaning woman)

I listened to his music regularly in the past don't now as much is negative, The man has musical talent resulting from his fire (sexual purity)?

I know the goal is to become one with god and lose attachment, but I just want to know if it is possible to remain sexually pure whilst giving into lower desires such as smoking or drinking alcohol now and again, will it just make it more difficult but its still possible to remain sexually free?

I mean as a man grows sexually pure and more powerful in his mission to be successful in life will maya bombard this man with temptations of sorts to keep him in, have you had to deal with sorts of temptations, I'm thinking if theres no desire theres no temptation but lets say have you had to deal with what other men would call great temptations?

Hope to hear from you,

peace

Joe

Answer
1. Indulgence in vices (alcohol or tobacco) are all sense pleasures, which weaken the mind further, taking one away from one's true self. As one moves further away from his Atman (self), he gets deeper into the web of ignorance, which ultimately culminates in sexual sin.

2. As one progresses towards his self through Sadhana, the challenges from Maya become more subtle and powerful. One has to constantly exercise Vichara (inquiry) and develop Vairagya (dispassion) to make further progress. Till the final goal is not reached, there is always the chance of downfall.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Dhananjay, I've heard from the bhakti-yogis that the proccess of attaining samadhi in our age, Kali Yuga, through astanga-yoga is almost impossible, having in mind that it is very difficult to put the eight angas in practice in a perfect way.
They say that it can be achieved by following refulative principles like brahmacharya and sattvic food offered to Sri Krishna and japa-mala on brahmamuhurta...

What is your opinion about it?

Do you think that an ordinary person can hold an asana for 3 hours if he practice, and after it be sucessful in pranayama without a guru, just by an autodidactic study?

I'm very confused because if it was impossible in our age to practice it, books like Hatha Yoga Pradipika, Gheranda Samhita and the stories in the book Autobiography Of A Yogi would not have been possible to write in Kali Yuga.

Please, clarify my doubts.

ANSWER: 1. Samadhi is attained by the grace of the Lord and not through one's efforts. After the Yogi dissolves the impediment Samskara-s (impressions) blocking Samadhi, he still fails to attain it. Then, he lets go of even the effort "I am striving" and gives in to the Lord, letting go of the 'I-Ego', through complete 'Saranagati' (surrender), following which Nirvikalpam occurs in short phases, to gradually become longer.

2. To claim one path alone as the way to the Lord, is like claiming one kind of food alone to give health and strength. Just as there are as many kinds of foods as there are people, there are that many paths to merge into the self (Samadhi). Each one chooses that which is destined. Yuga (period) has nothing to do with it. This is the truth.

3. All are ordinary and all become extra-ordinary, when the Ego is given up. With practice and devotion, that which is necessary will be attained.

One should do his Sadhana and work at negating the Ego. Then, the right path will be known from within. It is very simple.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: When you say about the path which is destined, is it related to the previous Samskaras that the person pursuits? How does this destination works?

How can one develop and keep increasing his devotion?

How to superate the necessity of attaining knowledge of various yogic paths without choosing and practicing strictly any of them, and put finally the attained knowledge into practice?

Concerning about the Sadhana, what path do you follow? Do you practice Astanga-Yoga? How is your Sadhana composed? How long have you been following it?

Thanks for your responses!

Answer
1. Both past Samskara-s and the will of the Higher power govern destiny.

2. As one slowly dissolves the Avidya (ignorance) surrounding the Atman (self), devotion increases by itself. One has to put in Sadhana to attain the same.

3. The higher power will take one in the correct path, when one's longing and efforts are genuine.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhananjay,

I have a few queries for you.

1) When meditating on the supreme, formless self, what exactly is one to do? When I sit for meditation, I use Ramana Bhagawan's method-I ask Who am I, and once I "feel" the ego, I then merge my mind into the larger, deeper "I" from which the ego derives. I also try to think of empty space.

Here's the problem-I have no idea if what I am doing is correct! If I described what I do to others (and I don't since the practice is to be kept private) they would say I am merely hallucinating or being hypnotically swayed. I don't know if I am actually meditating correctly. When I think of the supreme almighty being, here's what happens: My breath becomes so shallow that it gets hard to breathe, and a subtle bliss glows through the body (like orgasm but subtler and far better).

Am I doing the right thing?

2) Is there any difference between masturbation and other forms of recreational sexuality? Or do all these simply end in suffering. There is one type of sexual imagery which bothers me highly-When I see a beautiful woman who large lips, the mind pictures her performing oral sex on this body. Oddly, this is tantalizing to the mind but regular sexual activity isn't. What is source of this odd transfixation? The mouth and lips house millions of bacteria and smell of foul saliva in the morning, yet despite all this logical input from buddhi, the monkey mind cannot be controlled and rushes! What am I doing wrong?

3) I ardently desire to desire the self. However, I know that in order to do so, I will have to fulfill my worldly dreams. I, the ego, want to see what it is like to be famous. I want to have a small bank balance such that I can live off the interest and not have to work so I can focus time on selfless service, learning, and meditation. Are these desires acceptable?

Sometimes the mind desires to see what the sexual act is like-"just try it once!" says the mind. However, I feel like if I try it, it will open up a huge pit of worms. Please give me a guarantee that the sexual act and oral sex are in no way as great as the pleasure of the atman and that I will not "miss out" by abstaining from sense pleasures. Please give me a guarantee.

3) When I think of the sages who live in himalayas and renounce fully the world and its pleasures, the mind starts to cower in fear. "how can it be!" the mind asks. "how can I exist without people? without family? without friends? without anyone who knows about me?" asks the mind. Have you overcome such questions? Or are you still at a point where you have trained the mind but have not fully conquered the ego yet? The mind seems to fear being isolated more than anything else-how can I overcome this?

4) How does one know when he has become realized and has merged forever into the infinite? A realized sage creates an ego to function in the world but still stays suspended in the infinite-how does this work? If someone were to physically hurt a realized sage, would he not feel pain? Even if he thought "I am not the body", wouldn't the mind be at least partially linked to the body when the sage creates a temporary ego to function in the world? Ramana Bhagawan often moaned in pain during his bout with cancer.

5) This is a crude question, but for a self-realized sage, will touching a nude woman or touching the genital organs not create any excitement or erection? Here's my confusing situation: Even when I force the mind to think of the absolute, the sight of a women's breasts or the thought of being orally stimulated by a woman causes an erection. It is involuntary! Are these impulses biological (derived from evolution) or reflective of the embedded seeds/vasanas?

6) How is the journey of the soul related to the physical evolution of humans over time? When we were monkeys in a bygone era, was the jiva and ahamkara and manas all present then as well? How does it relate to evolutionary science?

Thank you for your service and for guiding this aspirant. Today I resolved to guard the semen once and for all. My only concern-If a tempting woman is to enter the fray, I may fall prey to oral stimulation if she forces it-I must guard myself against this.

Answer

1. One should sit in Padmasana or Sidhasana with the spine, back, neck and head in a straight line. Then, one should close the eyes and focus at the 'Thrikuti' (region between the 2 eyebrows), make the mind blank of all thoughts and merge it (Ego) into the empty, infinite space, which is the nature of the absolute.

It is natural for breath to shallow and after many years of such practice, one eventually loses awareness that he is meditating and then comes Samadhi (super-consciousness) where breath eventually stops (yet the Yogi is alive)

2. These are the result of past seeds of karma. Recreational sexuality is to be shunned in all forms, for the one wishing liberation.

3. Those worldly desires which are destined to be experienced will get done. The limited pleasure of sexuality, which ends in suffering is incomparable to the infinite bliss of the self, like a drop is to the mighty ocean.

4. Who is there to know? The one who wants to know, disappears after realization. Silence

5. The body of woman, a lump of earth or wealth, all are seen as no different by the realized being.

6. It was present in a dormant state, as applicable to those creatures.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Hi, to focus on on Thrikuti means that one should roll up the eyes or just concentrate mentally at the third eye?

Answer
When there is mental concentration, the focus reorients automatically towards the 'Thrikuti'. One should not roll up the eyes, which becomes a distraction.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Sir,

In the morning, it usually takes me a very long time--due to long rests in between asanas and bandhas--to finish yogic practice. Because it takes a long time, I usually finish yogic practice by 830 or 900. I am also somewhat tired after certain asanas and I believe this feeling of tiredness slows me down from completing the asanas efficiently. I am wondering if you would suggest a method to destroy this indolence and finish things earlier; in my future work schedule, I will most likely have to be done with yogic practice by 6:00 am before getting ready to leave for work, which will start by at least 700 am.

Thank you.

Answer
Wake up at 4 A.M 'Brahmimuhurtham' and go about the Sadhana with a clear mind, free from all other thoughts. Things will get done right in the course of time. It is the mind, which is responsible for the inertia and nothing else. The delay is due to harping on unnecessary thoughts.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi, I have been doing brahmacharya for 4 months now and out of nowhere my appetite has increased so much, almost double in calories. Is this detox? I almost feel like eating meat to slow this detox down because nothing else is working. It feels very hard to cope with. Is it permissible to eat meat in such circumstances? I am well aware of effects of meat on sexual urges however feel I have discipline to control that if I did eat meat. Thank you for any insight

Answer
Various kinds of reactions can occur, further to the gamut of changes which occur during the initial years of practice. Hunger can oscillate. The beginner does well to avoid meat in the initial years. Later, after much advancement, one eats a little of that which is required for sustenance. He is then not affected by the type of food.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir,

As of late, I am experiencing increasing pain in the temples and I feel my whole head throbbing. I believe this may be a severe headache or a migraine. What is to be done to combat the problem? This happened twice or thrice in the last week alone. Once again, very grateful.

Answer
Stick to the suggested Sadhana properly and persevere. All these are eventually vacate in the course of time. The body goes through various changes, both physical and karmic, which can manifest in different forms.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear sir,

I broke myself the other day, due to large intake of alcohol the previous night. I was in the house alone all day and just felt lonely.
I have recently quit smoking for good and I mean good, I'm reading books and listening to audio books on quitting smoking they help a lot, this is good as I finally feel a great sense of freedom from quitting now.
I think I drank the alcohol due to the pressure of quitting smoking I'm not a regular drinker (rarely) and only seem to drink when the pressure of life gets to me, this I must conquer.

I live with my family at home at the moment, I have my own business for a little while now and will be looking to move out sometime early summer next year. I am a single man, I know I have to remain strong to grow, I hope that I meet new friends and good people however I'm frightened of regularly being alone in the flat, this is why I have been wanting to get a dog. I don't know the future maybe I move in with flat mates, I need to grow up and realise that I can only count on God, it's just I don't really want to be regularly alone in a flat although I must move out to grow. Sometimes I wish I could be the outgoing person who does what he wants with no conscience, the pain is too much though.

I appreciate you wandering my previous question.
Hope to hear from you.

Peace
Joe

Answer
With proper Sadhana, these issues will iron out eventually. There's no harm in having a dog, however, one has to learn to hold on to the self and be at peace, content in the inner self alone. That alone is eternal.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Guruji,

1) Does sharing a room with non practioners (due to need for saving electricity used by A.C) lead to loss of prana due to the concentration gradient? Contact during the day is kept to the minimum.

2) Are we commiting himsa (violence) if we calmly decline commiting actions detrimental to the practice eg. Shaving beard, white lies on the phone etc. This gets the other party EXTREMELY WORKED UP AND ANGRY.

3) What is the benefit of eating prasadam?

4) What other factors within a household with servants and other comforts lead to loss of prana?

5) What kind of theurgical rite one should follow to chase away evil spirits?

6) What happened to the body of Jesus, do you believe in were-wolves?

7) Is it too much asking?

Thanks for the kind reply

Answer
1. One should learn to perform Sadhana in the existing circumstances.

2. What is right and what is not will be known through the inner voice.

3. One lets go of his Ego to some extent and offers food to God. That is the benefit.

4. None, as long as one holds on to his self, through Sadhana.

5. Let go of that (Ego) which is assuming it is being troubled.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
The ability to retail semen/ Veerya (God) is determined by the purity of the vessel/body.

One just need to focus on this simple rule.

Yoga, veg food, prayer and meditation are all "moves" to make the vessel more pure.

God/Divine can't enter a body that is impure that is why semen is expel from a person who indulge in senses.

I hope you can give me your input on this

Best Regards,
AL

Answer
1. Semen once produced cannot be retained. It can either be expelled or transmuted. The Yogi, through many years or decades of Sadhana reverses the production of physical semen, to stabilize it as Soma (nectar) in the Ajna Chakra.

Once this has been accomplished, that state can be maintained through dissociating the Ego consciousness, through surrender to the higher power (Samadhi). Therefore, Brahmacharya which is residing in the self, as the self is attained through vacating the Ego and thereby merging into the will of the Almighty. It cannot be attained by any other means. It cannot be attained through Ego effort, though one puts effort as the Ego initially.

The body is only an inert medium which has no life of its own, bereft of the power from the Supreme being (manifest as Atman) that charges it to life. Residing in the Atman, as the Atman is Brahmacharya. The body follows suit, being purified through such residence and not the other way round. It is not the decider but the follower.

2. To explain objectively, it is said that Veerya (semen) which is the representation of the individual life force (God) doesn't reside in an impure body/mind. HE who occupies one and all is everywhere in reality. There is no residence or lack or residence in terms of the absolute. It is the mind, which, through Avidya (Ignorance) fueled by past Samskara-s makes man succumb to Maya (illusion), distancing consciousness from the Atman (self). Then, it is said "The divine doesn't reside there". That is all the meaning. Everything is in the Supreme and not the other way round.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir, I am a 21 year old male. I am preparing for the IAS exam But I keep forgetting stuff. Is it true that brahmacharya can help improve my memry? If yes what are the techniques I should follow along with celibacy so as to improve memory? Thanks.

Answer
1. Conserved and transmuted Veerya (semen) recharges the entire system with Prana, thereby aiding the empowerment of all faculties. Semen is produced at the cost of drawing vital life elements from the brain & spine, among other things. Curtailing its loss through transmutation, therefore helps prevent degeneration of both these.

2. Go through all the past answers and familiarize yourself with the Yogic methods required to attain Brahmacharya. Things will improve without doubt in the course of time, further to regular practice.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
So, this whole process we go through. it's regenerative, it's transmutation, it's evolving, forming, shaping, shifting Us into... and out of our bodies.

and in the process, toxins are relieved and so are cells. our future karma can be counted as dirt.

1)as people, we become natural? defenseless? new, would you term it?

2)will you explain the process?

a shout out and thank you to Brahmimuhurtham, wherever you are. in space. like a window. lol.

Om,

Answer
One eventually becomes what he truly is...not the body, not the mind but the limitless self, free from desire, ever in bliss, the pure being.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
sir, it was a nice articel.
my questions is 'is it necessary to shave our pubic hair(genital hair) if we have to regularly wear kaupin and why?"
becoz i read ot on some website.

Answer
Everything on then human body has been put there with a purpose. Hair is no different. One should not interfere in things unnecessarily. There is no need to shave pubic hair.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir,
Greetings.
Nowadays the newspapers and commercial advertisements are lust provoking. It requires immense care not to look at wrong images while reading news. It becomes so difficult to avoid those kind of images from all our surroundings. I cannot afford to stop surfing the net or stop reading any news/books. Is there any way out? Or these things will even out in the long run and I need not bother? Please help.

Answer
With consistent and unbroken Sadhana, one eventually develops the Gnyana to be oblivious of external stimulus. What is required is committed, unbroken Sadhana.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir I m a student of intermediate I wantntonserve to country by taking vownto be a bramhachraya but if wet dreams come in my mind how can I be away from it

Answer
The methods of Yoga Sadhana to attain Brahmacharya are available in past answers. Go through each and every answer, absorb the essence and apply the same in practice.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Revered Sir,

I have been a follower of this forum and have been trying to practice Brahmacharya since 2012 but have never been able to practice my Sadhana regularly even though I tried to the best of my capacities. There have been so many obstacles which have nearly drained me of my energies.

Last year we made a decision to move back to our native country and I decided against being employed so as to dedicate more time for my Sadhana and started reading spiritual scriptures and listen to various discourses. I continued doing my morning+evening Sadhana, but could not do so regularly due to the circumstances. Then there were episodes of illness which added to the discontinuity.
The breaks in the Sadhana got longer, so long that I have still not been able to restart it. Currently, I feel ill, and experience some kind of digestive problems like acid reflux, bloating, etc and feel low on energy. I some how struggle to get done with the household chores with the help of my spouse. But I am unable to do any kind of asana in this state. All I can manage is nadi shodhana for 10 minutes.

I feel very helpless and am on the verge of a breakdown. And the problem with the health adds to my anxiety.
How can I restore my health and get back to the mode where at least I could try to do my Sadhana?
Could you please kindly advice me.

With Deep Gratitude and Best Regards.

ANSWER: Take an early morning walk for about 15 minutes. Meditate on the formless Lord as described in past answers for half an hour before dawn and at dusk. Make it a point to take many small, light meals. The issue will get resolved, enabling full Sadhana.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Revered Sir,

I started with 30 mins meditation twice a day and by the Lord's Grace, was able to get to a point where I could do Sadhana twice a day, with basic asanas and nadi shodhana and 30 minutes meditation in the morning and evening. I walk for 30 minutes during the day. I have still not started the Sirshasana, Bandha and Pranayama practice. My digestive issues were getting sorted out.

But over the last 2 weeks, some problems have surfaced again. After food, I burp a lot and get the food smell in the burp. Sometimes, the burp produces a burning feeling in my throat, which has left my throat very raw and inflamed. This usually happens when I drink water after a gap of 1 or 1.5 hours after food.
Throat is so burnt that eating cucumber irritates it. Eating raw vegetables like carrot, beets irritates it.

1. Is there anything I could do to stop the burps and soothe the throat.
2. How much water should one drink, since drinking water also triggers the burping.

3. Before my illness, I would spend a lot of time reading spiritual scriptures and listening to discourses, but now, I am anxious most of the time about the health. Earlier, I had spiritual thoughts in the mind, but now all that is completely replaced by thoughts related to health. I have become obsessed with it. Please help me and kindly tell how to get out of this circle.
Thank You very much.
Best Regards.

ANSWER: 1. Drink small quantities of water in between, during and after food. Later, once the issue is resolved, it can be relaxed if necessary.

2. Small sips of a glass suffice.

3. The body is a product of one's karma. It will take the destined direction. One need not worry about it. The higher power governs all. Take your mind off the body and do your Sadhana honestly. Things will get sorted out in due course.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Revered Sir,
1. How much water should one drink through the day.
2. My menstrual cycles are getting shorter. Earlier I had bleeding for about 3 days, lesser on 3rd day and some spotting for 2 more days. But now it has reduced to around 2 days, and some spotting on 3rd and 4th day.
Is this normal?

Thanks a lot again for all the help.
Best Regards.

Answer
1. The quantity varies, based on various factors. As a general pointer, 6-8 large glasses of water suffice.

2. There will be changes in menstruation with the practice. The cycles can shorten and be less intense. There is no cause for worry, as long as one adheres to proper Sadhana as described earlier.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhananjay,

Today I told a lie and the impact was worse than I expected. I have practice Brahmacharya for more than 2 years. It had help me a lot in my personal development.

Recently, What I hope and wish for turn out better than expected. But today I told a lie about something I am not. After this lie, I feel guilty and I know I need to turn this lie into a reality because I say it.

Although I know it to fulfill this lie is something of my capacity , I also feel a strange feeling that what I say must be of truth.

Best Regards,
AL

Answer
Through Asatya (untruth), one walks away from his innate divinity, into suffering. Satya (truth) is Brahmacharya. It is the essence of the Atman (self).

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

Soon I have finished my first year of absolute Brahmacharya. I have a question on the effects of this practice. I notice that sexual desires are very low, but emotional attachmennts are very, very strong. Sometimes I almost start crying when I say goodbye to a friend, a family member or a student of mine. I feel the inherent pain of separation very strong. At other times I feel very happy. I feel a sort of timeless space in which all experiences come and go, and I'm not afraid of death. Then a moment later I become very emotional again and I don't want the endless separation. It's like I want to be connected with everybody all the time.
Should I worry about this heavy fluctuations in my mind? It's making me tired and confused.

Thank you,

J

Answer
It is normal for the mind to pass through oscillations, till one is established in the self. There is no cause for worry. What is important is to be committed to unbroken and consistent Sadhana.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namashkar Dhananjayji,

People say I m too much emotional. I also feel it very often and for this I get pain in my mind while dealing with friends, relatives, family members when there occurs some mismatch specially regarding sensitive issues. People also say if I cannot overcome it I will face failure in everything and be depressed. So please give me some valuable tips so that I can overcome it and can handle those issues quite normally and be happy. Thank you.

Answer
Attachment and the resulting emotions are the effect of 'Avidya' (lack of knowledge of the truth). Through Sadhana and life experience, one gradually overcomes the same, following which Gnyana shines forth. Hence one should stick to proper Sadhana and meditate on the self, to overcome issues of the mind.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Hi Dhananjay,

I am Amit 23yrs old. It's a blessing for me that I came across your site, life is taking a meaningful direction and perhaps this is the thing which I have been desiring unconsciously. I am a follower of your site since one year and I read your answers every day for daily motivations and try to mould my life accordingly. Even though your answers are getting smaller now a days but I still wait to listen some new words every time in the form of a new question however it ends in 3 line but it reflects the same truth. I request you to write at least one article in an interval of some days for inspiration on self realization according to your convenient. I have not much succeeded in the path of celibacy in terms of days but one thing I can say that my view towards recreational sexuality have changed and right now i am more inclined towards clearing the samskars of mind as that is the main reason of downfall. Here are few questions in my mind regarding practice...

1.currently I am practicing the asanas in the following sequence sirsasana, sarvangasana, halasana, matsyasana, paschimottasan, bhujangasan, salabhasan, dhanurasan, ardhamastyendrasan, mayurasan, padahastasan, trikonasan... but due to lack of strength I am not doing sirsasana and mayuransan hope i will do it later...

But later while reading your answers I saw that you have provided a different sequence that is... Padmasana, Sidhasana, ArdhaPaschimothanasana, Paschimothanasana, Halasana, Sarvangasana, Dhanurasana, Padahastasana,Chakrasana, Shirshasan
My question is whether i need change to your sequence(as it is designed by you to ascend the kundalini) or continue with mine as u have said one should stick to one system so i can't decide whether i need to change or not??

If i want to do surya namaskar then when should i perform that? before these set of asana or after, i start asana around 4.45am.
2.doing meditation exactly at 2am has any special benefit?

3.i have a serious problem of drowsiness during the afternoon specially after lunch and due to this i can't read and many time i go into abrahmacharic things, is there anything to avoid this(i have tried with having little amount of food)

4.you have explained very well the benefit of waking up early and i have seen the benefit of it and i don't have any doubt on that but i want to know is there any other routine for one who loves to stay awake till 3am as i am more alert , aware, feel active and more efficient to work during the night however i have changed this habit from last one year to wake early and do asana according to your instruction but still i think i am more efficient during the night and somewhere i feel am going against my natural tendency so this thing is creating a confusion in me, a clear-cut advice from you will suffice to solve the problem.

5.have you reached to the enlightenment?

Thank you very much Amit

Answer
1. The sequence suggested in past answers is preferable.

2. Surya Namaskar, if performed should precede the above Asana-s. Yoga Sadhana is to be performed at any of the four Sandhi Kala-s, as detailed in past answers.

3. Through Sadhana and much meditation, drowsiness (the effect of tamas) will gradually taper away.

4. Night is for rest and day for activity. Staying & awake at night leads to degeneration of the body & mind in the course of time. It is not conducive to well being.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir, I had bad habit of watching porn and masturbation since I was 13 y/o. I am now 26 y/o. I followed brahmacharya or Abstinence for 90 days and then masturbated and I noticed that my semen was thick but not like it used to be in addiction stage. Now my question is is there any negative effect of long term (ie. more than 3 months) brahmacharya ? Does it make us less or more fertile ?

I am asking this question because I suffered like hell in first 70 or 75 days. I was tired all the time, had low focus/concentration, lost motivation. But after 75 days these symptoms started to fade out. Acne's gone. I got fairer skin. lots of other benefits also. But one of my friend told me that he read it somewhere on internet that long term celibacy/abstinence is not good for sperms health and it makes us infertile. He also told me that If I follow brahmacharya for long term then I will be impotent. He also said that all monks do take sanyasa from Gruhastha ashrama so they dont care if they go impotent or infertile and thats why they followed celibacy. Now I am very much worried after listening this. Please guide me.

Answer
1. No. All faculties of the body & mind improve and not the reverse. Various changes occur at the mental and physical levels during the initial years of start of practice.

2. Celibacy is not Brahmacharya. Celibacy refers to forced abstinence, which is harmful, while Brahmacharya refers to transmutation of the conserved sexual energy into Ojas by merging the mind into the Atman. Brahmacharya does not lead to impotency. The aspirant will retain the ability to bring down the energy for progeny, in marriage, if so required.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Sir,

One interested in meditation may know the theory about the rotation of vital energy. Some say semen should be transmuted to vital energy but the semen is only transmuted by the rotation of the vital energy inside the body. There are circuits of chi inside the body and to rotate the energy one should do it with the will and thinking. There are many theories. What is your practice or method?

Answer
The Sadhana required to transmute semen into Ojas is elaborated in detail in past answers. One should realize these things through personal experience and not harp over this or that theory, which is nothing but fancy.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Beloved Dhananjay,
Recently I have been feeling physically overwhelming Love in my heart for God and all of creation. These feelings are extremely intense and are accompanied with other physical symptoms such as an immense pressure in my chest, tingling up and down my spine, goosebumps, the urge to yell in joy etc. Of course, the feelings are a great blessing but the sheer intensity of these sensations are proving to be discomfortable and quite frankly, scary. I don't know what to do with my body and I lose all sense of control and sanity when im feeling these sensations, They are temporary.

My questions are:
1) Are these feelings aligned with the Self or the imbalanced Ego? In other words, are they conducive to spiritual development or just another effect of attachment?
2) If they are aligned with Self, how does one develop a sense of peace and control while experiencing such intense emotion? With what perspective should one view these feelings?
3)Are such intense feelings/experiences a regular occurrence in higher states of consciousness and/or samadhi?

You have been a tremendous help along my spiritual journey. I wish there was some way I could repay you. I have the utmost love and reverence for you. I hope you don't feel it is inappropriate for me to say so, but my gratitude is so genuine, that I felt it worthy to be expressed.

- Sahil

Answer
1. It is normal for one to experience such intense feelings of a pleasant nature, in the path of Yoga Sadhana. These vary from person to person, governed by various factors. That which comes and goes is related to the Ego, for the self is constant, infinite and endless. However, the joy comes from the Atman alone, which the Ego temporarily experiences.

2. All one needs to do is to let go of the Ego and ascribe all to the Lord alone. Then, one is not under any duress, whatever be the intensity of the emotion.

3. As one progresses, he comes closer to the Atman-self (Samadhi) and more intense is the bliss. Eventually, the realized being becomes bliss itself, for that is the very nature of the self. There, there is no I-ness. It is beyond description. It is known by experience alone.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Respected Swamiji,

Jai shri krishna. I have posted queries earlier also regarding Sadhana and was entitled 'Urdharethas'. I am passing through great difficulty in my practices. Let me come to the point.

During Pranayama practice, I also practice Jalandhara and Mula bandha. I dont practice Uddiyana during pranayama, but practice it separately. The problem is that, after taking Mula Bandha for 3 to 4 times, the prostatic fluid with some quantity of semen is involuntarily discharged. It has been happening since a year almost now and my hopes are shattering. Let me acquaint you with the fact, that a year ago from now, I had abused myself terribly for 5 or 7 years. Day and night I had destroyed myself. I am 25 now.

I request you to be kind enough to throw some light on this matter so that I can curb this problem effectively.

Also, in your replies to quite a number a aspirants, you have stated that "the sadhana process is elaborated in the past answers". On searching through the queries I am not finding them. I request you to give me a link for the same.

Jai Shri Krishna.

ANSWER: http://en.allexperts.com/q/Celibacy-Abstinence-3564/2011/5/Pranayama-Yoga-Brahma

http://en.allexperts.com/q/Celibacy-Abstinence-3564/2011/12/thribandha-khechari-

These links will provide insight on Sadhana. The answers on Meditation procedure and Samadhi will give insight on the procedure for meditation. One should go through each and every past answer from the last, to get clear with the lifestyle and attitude to be developed for Yogic practice. Brahmacharya cannot be attained through index-wise, textbook type study.

Apply the suggested Practice properly, with the Pranayama suggested, followed by meditation on the formless self. The issue, which is the effect of past karma will eventually go away.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Respected Swamiji,

I thank you for providing the links. I am sorry for asking one more question which I should have included in the former query.

Swamiji, in excitement I never knew the deteriorating condition that my health was undergoing. Now that I've started to observe the vow of Brahmacharya, I am able to realize the fact that I've already become very weak, physically. The arms and legs often tremor on undergoing little strain. Strain, which should be nothing for a youth of 25. Power of endurance has almost completely nullified and breathing becomes very heavy on doing a slightly difficult job, contradictory to what the case was, 7 to 8 years ago.

I request you to advice me on food that I should eat to recover myself to some extent. Nutritious food, which will help me to regain my vitality, as I move on with Sadhana. Atleast, you can name a few of them to help me.

Jai Shri Krishna.

Answer
A balanced and wholesome Yogic diet, taken in moderation will suffice. The nature of food to be taken is dealt with in detail, in past answers. Follow the instructions on food & Sadhana meticulously for a few years. That which is lost will be regained.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
hi dhananjay,

This query is from the previous posts which i was reading earlier this day.

1.in one of your posts you said that before marriage we should maintain celibacy and after marriage we should perform the act only for progency and if the partner wants then we should perform non ejaculatory sex in the initial years for the bond between couple, so my doubt is if the partner performs non ejaculatory sex then after the act the semen in ejaculatory mode will escape as it has no outlet and this is equal to tantrik sex (if i am wrong correct me and voluntarily stopping the ejaculation might cause health problems.) so in this way he is losing his prana while engaging in the whole act and he is refraining from ejaculation and this results in wet dream.

so is it better to use the above method or is it better to ejaculate in the act(through health point of view and in this method will he be having the craving for sense pleasure as in the first method).

2.in the other posts forms of semen you said that the sexual excitement takes every essence of body and produces semen. i am little confused at what point of time the body takes the essence and converts into semen.

1.if the sexual thoughts arises and we think of god, these thoughts alternate one after other (this is my case i don't know what to do).
2.if we unintentionally see women for some seconds or minutes(in magazines,newspapers,tv.
3.do you think alchemy is the final solution to the problem?
4.is freemasonry secret or discret?
5.is it too much asking?

thanks for the reply, I appreciate your wise answers

Answer
1. Non-ejaculatory relations, if resorted to, are to be temporary, so as to help one overcome the urge for ejaculation during sexual activity. It can be a part of the beginner's footsteps to gradually overcome the need for ejaculation and cannot be a permanent feature. Coupled with Sadhana, this helps wean oneself of the act eventually.

2. Drawing of the essence from all over starts as soon as lust creeps into the mind. Period. Hence one has to develop Vairagya and Vichara, to keep lust at bay. The mind is the switch.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Dhananjay,

I have been a pure vegetarian throughout my life till now and ive always been truthful and good in my deeds. I entered into the world of ayurved by learning about vata,pitta and kafa and ive properly balanced them all and ive experienced how powerful this knowledge is. Now I want to become a brahmachari but when I try to meditate my kundalini begins to rise. I dont want to attain moksha at so young age. Because let me tell you, I had tried to become a brahmachari and did meditation but i felt this energy flowing through my spine always. And one night my I saw very powerful white light in my dream. To be honest I did not like this experience and felt very scared because following things were happening :
1. No food tasted good
2. The affection to family members was fading
3. I was beginning to forget goals of my life

I dont want to attain moksha now because i want to do something for my economy (India) and be a contributor to it and follow the other three purposes of my life like artha, kama and karma. If I do become a brahmachari and attain moksha my life will never be the same. I will be so much carried away from wordly activities and all my ego and purpose of life will go away.

So what should I do ? Whenever i try to practice brahmachari my kundalini begins to rise because ive always eaten the right food and done good karmas. But I really want to prove my worth as a human and do something for the society before I go on for achieving moksha. Please help me to the best of your knowledge. I have many more questions but this is the biggest one I have. I know I have a lot of spiritual energy but to use it in what direction- for achieving moksha or for other purposes of my life (artha,kama,karma)

Answer
You will not attain Moksha with desire in your mind for the world. So there's no cause for worry. The honest Brahmachari attains Dharma, Artha, Kama without issues.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,
How does one derive tremendous power from Brahmacharya?

In the Mahabharata, though Bhishma and the Pandavas had practiced Brahmacharya, for some reason only Bhishma was able to truly harness its power and thus became virtually invincible. What was that specific reason?

To observe this vow, one must take Sattvic Food in moderation, which does not contribute to physical strength. So how does one go about deriving tremendous physical and spiritual power from Brahmacharya?

Answer
1. Bhisma was an 'Akhanda Naistika Brahmachari' (One who has never lost Veerya and has complete mastery over its non-production). He was hence at a much superior level.

2. The strength referred to is Spiritual strength of the highest order, which supersedes mental and physical strengths, which have limitation. Sathwic food helps in attaining Brahmacharya, which in turn leads to such strength.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,
In modern times, is there anyone alive who has successfully become an Urdhavareta Yogi i.e. one who has withdrawn his seed? Can you give me some examples?

What exactly is Sadhana and what does this practice entail? What does it include?

A quote from Swami Sivananda's book, Practice of Brahmacharya:
"That Yogi who has disciplined himself through ceaseless protracted Sadhana, continuous meditation, Pranayama and Atmic Vichara, the practice of Sama, Dama, Yama and Niyama, is also safe, although he has not attained the stage of perfect sex sublimation."

What is Sama and what is Dama?
Thank you in advance.

Answer
1. Those who are Urdhwarethas do not claim to be so. It is an internal phenomenon.

2. Detailed information on Sadhana is available in past answers.

3. 'Sama' refers to the control of the mind by displacing the desire induced from past Vasana-s through 'Vichara' (Inquiry) and 'Viveka' (Wisdom). 'Dama' refers to control of the sense organs through 'Vairagya' (dispassion for the sense objects - knowing them to bring nothing but suffering), further to 'Sama'.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hare krishna dhananjaya maharaj,
Brhmacharya is essential for spiritual and material progress.it contributes mostly to development of character.After one month of brhmacharya both physically and level best mentally, one can see result like higher energy level than before and more peace and purity. So each and every man and woman should develop this sanskara and practice it in daily life to be happy.
Sir I am 28 and please answer my question. If I practice this at my level best along with spiritual sadhana and marry after 3years can I expect to get good child who will be devoted to god and intelligent? Hare krishna

Answer
Yes, the possibility to beget good offspring increases with sustained Brahmacharya. Detailed elaboration on the topic are available in past answers.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir,

Having read in your posts and on internet from gandhi ji's book about benefits of eating tasteless food and following same
I've been taking completely bland food including milk, sprouts, dalia, seasonal fruits, boiled moong from past 15 days and it has enabled me to experience one of longest stretches of conservation.

My query is can I eat home cooked roti subzi once in day or week just to give my brain these intermittent rewards of taste (just to divide long stretches in small sections, thereby easier to fool brain) or should I completely avoid all taste that I usually derive from subzi now a days.

I do not struggle in eating bland food, in fact I feel confident that I am doing the right thing.

I've taken roti subzi once in a week and I admit that I found my self vulnerable after eating it as my mind was wanting to eat other sugar/salt food articles kept at home. I feel If I cannot control my palate, I won't be able to stand the onslought of lust whenever it strikes me. I follow early waking up, pranayam, mild excercise and focussed intellectual work day long.

Pls give your comments on it.

Answer
1. It is preferable to take moderately spiced food, as bland food may not be available at all places and at all times. In a gist, one should gradually become indifferent to these things, rather than being attached to bland or otherwise. The mind is to be centered on the Atman (self). That alone matters.

2. Food matters much initially, but not so much after many years of advancement. One's inner voice shows the path to be taken, during different stages of Sadhana. It suffices to follow it.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,
Before I ask my question, I apologize for my negative previous question, it was from a weak state.

Q: I had a lucid dream in which I flew around where I live, it felt great like the dreams I had when I was a child. I wanted to ask you if this is a result in rising spirit, can it happen often and is it possible to master this even though it happens in a dream?

Q:What is lucid dreaming, isit possible to explore other worlds whilst sleeping, are these things that one must just find out personally?

Hope to hear from you,
Peace
Joe

Answer
All these are variations of the Ego and none else. All such fancies which are nothing but imaginations of the mind become impediments and distractions to the aspirant in quest of the self. Letting go of fascination for such, one should remain intent in realizing oneself as the truth, which has no birth or death and which is beyond the world of forms, names and variations.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Revered Sir-

I have followed your portal for a long time and have found it to be of immeasurable help in my sadhana.

I write to you with a heavy heart. I have a few queries that I hope you can resolve:

1) In accordance with Yogic practice recommendations, I ensure that I engage the body in adequate physical, intellectual, and spiritual work to ensure that Veerya is not lost.

Yesterday, while reclining to fall sleep, an incredibly strong wave of lust overcame me. The fantasy was homosexual in nature and for whatever reason it did not let go of me.

I pulled up Swami Sivananda's picture and managed to hold off the onslaught, but upon waking up, I saw that I had a massive wet dream. I did not have any dream fantasies though.

What "portion" of spiritual practice and the benefits accruing from such are lost from such a wet dream?

In this difficult, thorny path, I need to keep focused and maintain cheer-I am a college student in a highly sensually charged environment and any advice from you would be dearly helpful.

2) Sometimes, the mind does not cooperate for Sadhana. Interestingly, during those frenzied, forced sessions, the mind jumps to sensual thoughts-as if it is somehow rebelling against being curtailed. How should this be rectified?

3) I always feel drowsy after lunch. After 2-3 weeks of brahmacharya, such tiredness goes away. Eventually, will I be able to get to a point where I am fresh after 6 hours of sleep and can function well throughout the day without becoming drowsy?

4) I know every jiva has different karma and the grace of the lord alone leads to progress. However, roughly speaking, what are the milestones a sincere aspirant would see after 1 month, 3 months, 6 months, 1 year, 2 years, etc.? It would help greatly in motivating me to stick to the path and to know if I am on the right path.

Respectfully yours,
SP

ANSWER: 1. Involuntary wet dreams do not reset practice. However, they cause a temporary loss of Prana, which is restored in a few days, as long as the Sadhaka maintains Brahmacharya in thought, word & deed. All aspirants go through varied forms of temptation. This is the challenge, the hurdles one must cross, through Sadhana and self surrender. Eventually, light is seen at the end of the tunnel as regards the exceptional and honest Sadhaka.

2. Take a brisk walk and divert the energy towards physical activity such as a sport etc. Energy that is disturbed gets harmonized and can then be applied to Sadhana.

3. One is fresh and cheerful when there is adequate sleep. The no. of hours can vary. As a general pointer, 6-7 hours of sleep suffice one who does not squander his Veerya.

4. The milestones vary from person to person, based on their individual karma and the progress they have already accomplished in previous existences. Elaborations on these are dealt with to some extent in past answers.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Two quick follow-ups:

1) When sleeping, unfortunately, sometimes I roll over and sleep on my stomach. When I do so (and when the bladder is full) a wet dream inevitably occurs. To clarify, I was caught in the oddest of scenarios: I was dreaming of being in a conference room listening to a lecture, and although I knew I was approaching a wet dream, my buddhi was not able to exercise any self-control! In other words, I was in a half-conscious and half-unconscious state! How is this possible?

2) How debilitating is the situation described above? If we were to say 100% of sadhana has been broken and "reset" by a fully conscious sexual act, and 10% is "broken" by an occasional non-sexual monthly nocturnal emission, where would this fall?

I am greatly aggrieved.

3) After nocturnal emission, I find that the feelings of lust and unchasteness are much higher for the next few days. Why is this?

Answer
1. Avoid drinking water from three hours before retiring to bed. The subconscious mind at play is irrational. One should discount all such experiences.

2. Let go of percentages and do you Dharma. That which has to come will come.

3. Past Vasana-s can get ignited to some extent by such revisits to the sexual plane. This makes one more susceptible

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Revered Sir,
1. Is it okay to sit in Sukhasana for mediation if Padmasana or Siddhasana is not possible for a long duration.

2. What should one do when there is stiffness while sitting for meditation. How to sit erect without becoming stiff, which happens without one's kniwledge.

3. During the course of meditation, the posture slants in the front inadvertently.

What should one do for such problems

Thanks a lot.

Answer
1. Yes, once Sukhasana is practiced and mastered, Padmasana and Sidhasana come within reach.

2. With practice, all these issues disappear.

3. When the mind is merged into its source, everything sets right. One should focus on this goal and not worry too much about the body or other things.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Hi sir,

I tried to remain abstinence from all sexual desires but it's very hard to maintain it for long days. Because when as long as I tried to stay abstinence my head get heavy and I suffer a problem of headache, chest pain like that even I have not any desire of sexual desires. Then I try for masterbation to relief even then headache will remain.

So I request you to how to be abstinence from all sexual activity if we not interested for some reason.

ANSWER: One should apply the Yoga Sadhana and lifestyle suggested in past answers, keeping Brahmacharya in thought, word & deed. Mere physical abstinence is harmful and does not succeed. Go through all past answers on the subject and apply the suggested methods. The practice will get established in due course.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Hello Sir

Thanks for your kind replay.

It is possible to keep physical abstinence.

You told me that we have to word, deed, physical abstinence then how u achieve brahmhcharya when users ask question about sexual , here lots of words r related to sex. Then how u keep word abstinence.

And why it becomes very hard to achieve brahmhcharya without any sexual desire and we fails in it and evacuate by masterbation or sex. Why?

Answer

1. One's mind should always hold on to the self. This becomes possible when one practices meditation often. He should also keep a mind aligned with virtue and practice and stay clear of sexually inciting company.

2. Past Samskara-s (impressions) lodged within stir up on occasion, causing trouble. Through many years of Sadhana, these gradually dissolve. Then Brahmacharya gets more firmly established.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Dear Sir,

During the practice for Self Realization, is it detrimental to have any kind of hopes?
Does hope pose as an obstacle?

Hope provides some consolation during the bad times a person may go through, so is it okay to use it to console oneself while on the journey?

Thanks a lot.

Answer

It is beneficial to have a positive approach during the initial years of practice. One should however stay clear of expectation, which results in bondage. As one gets closer to the self, he comes closer to the permanence of reality, which is infinite and constant. Then, one is not affected by adversity or well being at the mental level, for the endless self alone is seen everywhere, all else realized as an illusion. Such a one see's the world events as one does a dream, upon waking up.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Hi Sir,
I'm a 24 year-old guy from Europe, and have been interested in spirituality and Yoga for more than 4 years.

I was educated in a Catholic household, and sexuality was never mentioned during my puberty. Nonetheless, I started fantasizing about sex and masturbating at about 13 years of age.

I am sometimes told that I am handsome, and should get a girlfriend,but I decided to be on this path these last weeks, and to rid me of all my anxieties and other guys'envy. I had anyway "only" two sexual encounters.

I still sometimes get into anger and anxiety, but thanks to meditation it's getting better and better.

There are 2 questions I wish to ask you:
1-A part of me still believes that I must have at least another 5 girls or more, since I had "only" two sexual encounters in my life; otherwise, I won't be "ready" for Brahmacharya and won't understand that the pleasures of women are not real.
How should I cope with these feelings?

2-I have a narrow palate; I went to many dentists during childhood but I still have a reversed bite on my left side, and this is causing me some anxiety and slight headaches. It becomes more evident when I do "head down" poses, such as Sarvangasana and Adho Mukha Svanasana, because I feel an uncomfortable pressure at the head, sometimes a pulsing.
Is it possible that as the months and years of practice increase, a healthier body will finally solve my problem in my palate?

Thank you in advance
David

Answer

1. If sexual desire could be overcome through indulgence, it would have been very easy. There is no end to the aspirations of the mind as regards recreational sex, for the matter is like adding fuel to fire, and only increases with indulgence. Hence the right path is to negate those Samskara-s responsible for the same and become the limitless self, which has no sex and gender.

2. Overall health will get bestowed through honest practice eventually. Practice the Asana-s gradually, in a gentler manner.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Dear Dhananjay,

While I have read all of your past answers and the tenets of sadhana, I find it extremely difficult to eradicate my "wants".

My desires are very strong.

I want to become a New York Times best-selling author.

I want to start a consultancy and speak to great Fortune 500 companies.

I want to be in demand.

These desires ravage the mind and spoil peace. I cannot make any progress for my days are spent lamenting and anguishing.

I am unsure if I will reach these goals and that further creates problems.

1) How does one deal with such strong desires for achievement and success? Is it permissible to pursue them? How do we stifle the feelings of inferiority and uncertainty which raise in the mind?

2) My Professor is a world-renowned expert who is a genius in his field. He gives talks and charges $100,000 per speech. Seeing such success makes this foolish ego very jealous. Envy raises its ugly hood and poisons the mind. How does one deal with this horrible emotion?

3) I am a young man of 21. I desire to control and transmute veerya but one impediment derails me-I am often very sleepy in afternoons and when I sleep during the day, veerya is unfortunately lost. How can I gain enough energy to NOT fall asleep in the day time?

4) My mind is also turbulent. Always. Apart from the few minutes of respite I get during pranayama and yoga sadhana, every other moment is filled with tension, anger, uncertainty, and fear about how the future will unfold.

How is our future fully in HIS hands if the actions conducted by the ego have their own fruits in the material world? Does HE dictate all or is there a small portion of fate that we control and direct ourselves?

There are tennis players who win dozens of trophies and make millions of dollars. Other players-who try as hard-get injured at a young age and have no luck.

Does it not drive one mad to think that so much is OUT of our control? We could live for another 50 years or be violently put to an end by a gunman in a public space tomorrow.

The uncertainty of life is so evident yet the mind still roams in jealousy and worry! Why?

5) I wish I could have a guru in the flesh to look up to. Swami Sivananda's picture is all I have and even that fails to assuage my doubts at times. Are there any real enlightened souls on the planet? I would be surprised if there are more than a few. I seek the guidance of these souls. If you happen to be one of them, I would be most thrilled. If not, you are so far along the path that I will take your answers in stride and work to perfect myself further based on your advice.

Humbly yours,
Sam

Answer
1. The sadhaka who sticks to honest and regular Sadhana to realize the self is assured of material gain as well, if there is such a want. It comes at the destined times.

2. Envy is the resort of the weak mind. Through meditation on the self, such Vasana-s gradually vacate and one loses attachment to the source of envy, which is desire.

3. Sleepiness during day is the effect of lack of adequate mental and physical activity on a constructive basis. Applying the same and working towards a goal, without expectation is the remedy.

4. Knowing one's right ends at effort, one should be at peace, as a silent onlooker, content with what comes through such honest efforts. The higher power decides what and how. That is not one's concern. He who follows this rule is not affected by success or failure, knowing both to be unsubstantial & Maya. He resides in the bliss of the self.

The world is the stage with the Almighty as the director and man as the actor. Life events and experiences are a part of the play. Just as an actor does not get affected by the sorrows or joys of the character he enacts, the wise Yogi does not get affected by the events in the life play, knowing his Dharma ends at honest enactment of the script laid down by the God-director.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

I am an avid reader of your answers and you have greatly helped me establish a spiritual life. My periods in Brahmacharya are becoming longer and am deriving great benefit it.

One small request if I may, is I would like to know why you never talk about yourself and remain silent when people ask you regarding this. Except for some basic info about yourself in some of the old answers, your identity is a complete mystery. I understand that your humility is of a high order, for you never claim or project yourself personally in the least. Wish I could see a picture of you, so as to connect better.

Thanking you...
Mark

Answer
1. The Dharma of the entity through whom these questions are answered ends at guidance to those asking for the same. Any other matter is out of purview.

2. The higher power decides things and so it happens in the world drama. If a picture is to be put up, it will happen. Who can decide these things? There is none.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

I wonder if various phases of bad mental state is normal in deeper celibacy durations. For example I am close to 140 days and lately experiencing severe sadness, apathy and intimidation. I wonder if it's normal and if it will pass with time. I have way more nocturnal emissions as of lately as well.

My lifestyle is quite healthy. My reason to be celibate is to eventually become better version of myself. I don't smoke, drink or use drugs. I try to eat healthy, keep regular sleep schedule and meditate daily twice. I also used to exercise till this moment but this mental state I am in simply won't let me exort physically. So I just walk here and there.

Please, answer if possible in a detailed, helpful way because last time I got almost one liner answer and it did not help at all.

I am mainly asking is what I am experiencing normal and should I persevere.

Thank you a lot

Answer
It is normal for the mind and body to go through extreme oscillations of an opposite nature during the initial years of practice. This is on account of the upsurge of past Vasana-s, which have suddenly been restricted and curtailed. The reactions can vary from person to person, in nature and magnitude.

The determined Sadhaka turns a blind eye to all these and perseveres in his Sadhana patiently. That alone dissolves the impediments and helps one eventually break out of ignorance.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Can the pratice of pranayama burn out lust ?

I discover that breathing and lust and connected in some way in my pratice.

Please advise thanks

Best regards
AL

Answer
The mind, Prana (vital energy), semen and breath are all connected. Control over any one gives control over the other three. The mind, which is the result of past Samskara-s cannot be easily controlled. Hence the wise Yogi develops control over his Prana through the practice of Pranayama, which involves breath control and controls his mind. Thereby comes control over semen, which culminates in the power to stop its production itself. When this is achieved, Bindu (seed) stabilizes as Soma (nectar) in the Ajna Chakra and does not flow down. It is the necessary fuel for Samadhi (merging the mind into the Atman). Through merging the mind into the Atman (self), one becomes THAT, limitless and all encompassing, his true nature.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello, relative to supernatural powers, the world we see is a creation of our own person? The sage and guru Osho (Rajneesh) explained supernatural power this way: "The theory of levitation for example is explained by being in a state of mind where a person is abstract or spiritual in relation to the material or physical world on which he stands. When abstract thought grows to be sufficiently strong, the abstract observation becomes physical and concrete thereby enabling the person to stand on what others normally see as abstract and imaginary. To the levitator, the abstract is as real as ground, earth or water is to others." It is possible to do?

Answer
One is not the body or mind but the limitless self which is infinite. The wise man first attains to this true state, rather than resorting to the useless fancy of doing acrobatics with the impermanent body.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I have practiced various forms of meditation for much of my life and have experimented with abstinence. Only recently have I sought to fully embrace brahmacharya. In embracing brahmacharya, I am getting a sense of it's liberating power. I am already in my late fifties. I have never married nor do I have children. My libido is still strong and brahmacharya is often a struggle. For the past ten years I have struggled with intense fatigue. I work full time in the social services and view this as a kind of karma yoga. But due to my fatigue, I must spend most of my weekends in bed. I also feel that my meditation practice (and brahmacharya practice)would be stronger if I had more time and energy, but I feel a sense of responsibility to keep my job. I feel a sense of naturalness.
At my age do you believe brahmacharya could restore the lost energy I have experienced. Also I have a strong belief that God has a special status and is above everything else. Do you believe God is present in all of us? Is it enough to listen to our own daimon? Those individuals telling their life stories and asking such questions (and doubting their conciousness) deserve to be called human beings? God speak through mediums? I believe I drained my energy with a nervous disposition and through putting myself through college and graduate school at a late age. Any comments about the occult path you teach would be appreciated.

Answer
The practice of Brahmacharya (which is merging the mind in the self) is the most efficient option for overall improvement, be it of the mind or body. Taking up the path honestly will answer all these queries

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

Sometimes as part of indian customs children receive money as a gift from relatives and friends wom we havent visted in a long time. Even after firm and polite requests, they become emotionally forceful and compel one to accept, I can be absolutely firm in my wishes to reject, but that would then violate ahimsa because I have hurt their feelings. I do not want these karmic bondages. If i donate the gift to charity, have I set up a new karmic equation which takes enlightenment further away?

Answer
If one donates to charity with the 'I-ness' (Ego) thinking "I have done someone good", it will result in a karmic obligation. If it is done without the I-ness, with the feeling "Everything belongs to the Lord. Let good come to he who takes this. I do and expect nothing" then there is no karmic obligation.

The man in the quest of the self surrenders all his actions to God and does not take any credit. He does not perform them with his Ego.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

Today I've almost completed my first year of unbroken Brahmacharya. I want to thank you for all the valuable advice you give, without it I would not have entered this wonderful path! My mind feels calm and clean now. I'm very happy that I can talk with women without having impure thoughts dominating my mind. Sometimes I have improper thoughts, but they arise and dissolve very quikly, I don't want to have anything to do with them. Also, it is much clearer for me what I must to do with my life, it's almost obvious, and many times I know without a doubt what the right (or wrong) course of action is. When I meditate my mind becomes very tranquil and I just want to sit in silence for a long time.

I have two questions:

1) How do I proceed from here? What are the dangers that I should be aware of, since I have read many times about yogis who fall from the path even after a long time of practice.

2) I know I should be careful with women. But sometimes life brings me in circumstances that I have to deal with them, I can't avoid it. I practice meditation on the foulness of the human body (both my own and theirs), I practice seeing them as sisters and I practice restraint of the senses. But many girls and women are attracted to me, maybe because I practice like this and therefore they feel safe with me. How should I handle this? Sometimes I have feelings of friendship for them and it's like they intuitively know that they should not approach me for a relationship. In fact, they never do, they are always very respectful but I know they like me very much. I'm sometimes scared I will do something wrong.

Answer
1. Remain in that 'silence' always, be it while working or otherwise. Silence is internal and not necessarily external. He who resides in the silence (truth) has no worries.

2. That "I" which knows they like or dislike is to be kept at bay. It is the step to downfall. Let go of it and be at peace.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Dhananjay,

I've noticed that when I have prolonged abstinence my mind begins to race and I begin to move quicker. It's almost like my mind and body are racing due to the increased energy in my system. I feel a little out of control and don't really like feeling that way. I was hoping you could give me advice on how to calm down and control the increased energy.

Best,
Michael

Answer
The mind is to be merged in the silence. Then there will be no problem, immaterial of whether one is in meditation or at work. Internally, such a one is always in meditation. That is Brahmacharya, nothing else.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

I am 20 yo, and recently found out about Brahmacharya after a porn addiction that lasted from 12-20. In this time I lost a lot of vital energy. I was never sexually attracted to men growing up but my addiction caused me to distance myself from women and now many think that I am in fact homosexual. I have always wanted to grow up and have a wife and kids, but the pressure to be gay is getting to me. Homosexuality seems unnatural but these days people feel that one is pretty much born that way. I also don't feel as manly as the men around me so I'm wondering how I can regain my masculine energy through brahmacharya. At the moment I feel physically, mentally, and emotionally weak, especially since I broke my practice last night after 2 weeks. Not eating meat these past few weeks has also made me lose weight and thus made me feel weaker. Homosexuality is also frowned upon in my native culture although I'm now in America. I really do no wish to be gay, but do I have a choice? What must I do to purify my mind and heart? And how should I deal with those that insistent that I am gay?Thank you in advance.

Answer
A few years of unbroken practice with consistent merging of the mind into the Atman (self) will solve the issue. Adhere to proper practice and turn a blind eye to everything else. You will be assured of peace and progress.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi, I was doing brahmacharya to the best of my ability for 6 months. Towards the end of the 6 months, I started to feel very ill. Nothing I ate satisified me and I felt like I was starving and dying. It was a very strange feeling. It felt horrible and like death. I was eating plenty and sleeping and everything, too. The only thing I had been doing differently was no sexual activity. I eventually broke and ejaculated myself. I felt instantly better and it felt like a numbness washing over me. I ask, Why did this happen and why could I not go longer with brahmacharya? Is this normal? Before, I had been a big sex addict, ejaculating everyday to porn. Am I still in the right direction? I think you mentioned it is common to have a streak of brahmacharya for 6 months then a break, then 1 year and a break, then 2 years and a break, etc.

Answer
Having or not having a break varies from person to person. Some go for years without a break, while others can't. As long as transmutation is complete with Brahmacharya in thought, word & deed, such issues don't arise. Feeling better after an ejaculation means there wasn't proper transmutation, and that the energy was stagnating below, without being sent up. He who transmutes right does not get the mind to ejaculate, for vital energy does not put the downward pressure.

Practice right with Sadhana and the mindset required.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Dear Dhananjay, I practiced brahmacharya for 6 months, but ended up having sex without ejaculation.
How to deal with the women that feels attracted to us while we are trying to fight our lust? I felt that as much the time passed, more women came to tempt me.

What happens internally when a brahmachari has sex but does not ejaculate? Is all the walked path lost by it?

Answer

1. Such activity for recreation goes against the practice and will eventually cause a major downfall with multiple repercussions.

2. It is a matter of priority and commitment. Just as one prioritizes his needs and requirements setting aside other things, one who is in the quest of the self prioritizes Brahmacharya.

3. Energy always finds a channel. When directed at the sexual plane, it will flow down and out, throwing one deeper into bondage; when transmuted upwards, it gives liberation.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Expert: Dhananjay - 2/18/2016

Question

actually i am in saraswathi deksha but i am not able to control my self in watching porn and masturbating and seen porn what will be the result if this porn is seen by me will there be any threat to me?
if yes how to get reduce the consequence of that threat

Answer

"Just as a rain fly attracted to fire, marveling it's luster and brightness flies towards the fire, only to be reduced to ashes; man in the grip of Maya, incited by the promise of sexual pleasure runs after woman, only to be cheated and burnt by that very same fire of passion"

There is no happiness in sexual passion. It appears sweet in the beginning, only to burn one's body, mind and well being in totem. Much unwanted Samskara-s (impressions) get lodged in the mind which will again make him run towards it, only to be consumed again. It is a dangerous illusion which brings nothing else but sorrow. Hence the wise man keeps his mind fixed on the Atman (self) which is the source of unending bliss, through constant Sadhana.

Whether one is in Deeksha (Spiritual Oath) or not, watching porn and its after acts will destroy one completely. One is punished by the sin itself and not for the sin. The threat is one's own actions, which come round to finish him.

Give up the activity, perform regular Sadhana and live in the luster of the Atman. There is no better well being, for there, it shines with the brilliance of a million Suns.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Hi sir, i have a query regarding sex abstinence. Whenever i stop masturbations ,my health degrades.Even i stop it for 2-3 days i catch cold ,i get fever or my stomach gets disturbed. Headache becomes severe and frequent.Last time i tried to remain celibate for exactly 3 months but situation remained the same.It is not that i cant control myself from masturbations but situations compels me to give up.I am atheist ,nor i believe in maya or something else.Neither i practice celibacy for any personal gain.I do it because i know this that it leads to detachment from everything,as my 3 months experience tells Hoping to get some good advice.Also i cant dwell on degraded health as i live in hostel ,miles away from my home.

Answer

The issue is because of lack of transmutation, with mere physical abstinence. Abstinence without transmutation leads to ill-health. What is required is Brahmacharya in thought, word & deed and not mere celibacy. Apply the Sadhana suggested in totem; the issue will resolve.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Hi

You said in previous answers that painful physical/karmic toxins can come to the surface during brahmacharya. Do you know if enemas or saunas would help expel these toxins so that it isn't so painful?

Or will the body naturally eliminate them without it? Here in the West we are exposed to so many horrible toxins and some say they cannot be eliminated through our body's natural detoxification pathways and that things like enemas, saunas, and mineral supplements are needed for these never before seen toxins like heavy metals and plastics.

Answer

Yes. They will get expelled naturally, in the course of time when Brahmacharya is practiced with the required Sadhana in thought, word & deed. The power of transmuted 'Veerya' vacates all toxins.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Hi Dhananjay, I am a 19 year old boy who needs advice on brahmacharya. I am struggling mightily to keep the vow of brahmacharya, my mind is still very bothered by lust and it is troubling me because I cincerely want to become a better human being. I suffer from Ocd anxiety over many things and depression. I also cannot focus and feel very tired and dull all day. Despite this i still pray to God to guide me and give me strength. I want to attain peace of mind, health, and eventually get to know my true self which has been suffocated by my ego for a long time.

I also am a christian, but not practicing. I am drawn to hinduism because i know it speaks the truth. Where should i start and what should i do? I feel stuck.

Answer
All religions preach the same goal, which is to realize oneself. One can follow the religion he prefers. Go through all the past answers and employ the Yoga Sadhana suggested in daily life. This will help establish Brahmacharya, which is nothing but residence in the self. All issues will gradually vacate, further to correct practice.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Hii dhananjay,
Im almost about to complete my education and join industry..I have had some academic setbacks which caused long term depression/loneliness..I got into habit of masturbation..Each time I did it again and again, I realised how superficial the whole sex/marriage is..is it worth to get into those bonds of marriage of lifetime just for few moments of pleasure? What are some phenomenal things that I can achieve with brahmacharya (I had about 18 months streak of non masturbation, which I did to achieve academic goal)?
OR Im just thinking about all these just because Im alone and dont have many like minded friends..? I mean how do I know that this path is for me??
Thanks

ANSWER: If one is destined to go through marriage, it happens. Marriage is not an institution which goes against residence in the self. Marriage by itself does not have anything to do with Brahmacharya. It is not that those who are single succeed or those who are married fail. Brahmacharya is attained as the past Samskara-s blocking residence in the self gradually vacate through Sadhana. All occurs by the will of the higher power.

Apply efforts to realize the self, with surrender to God always, asking nothing in return. Then, one is not disturbed, whether he goes through marriage or remains single. The path to be taken unravels by itself.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: 1)How can one be brahmachari while being married? isn't whole brahmacharya concentrated on "abstinence from sexual activities" ?
2)what daily activities a person can and should change if he is to progress on this path of realization, while living the common man like life?
3)You said you are married,then how do you observe brahmacharya?, and how do you know that you would not have done better, had you not been married?
Thanks

Answer
1. Sexual activity carried out for progeny does not come in the way of the quest of the self. The Yogi who is a 'Grihasta' (householder) does so and maintains Brahmacharya. He focuses all his energies for self-realization, further to the birth of a child.

2. The Yogic lifestyle to be applied has been dealt with in detail, in past answers.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

My prostrations to your self!

I am 34 and married. But my addiction to masturbation has not yet stopped which I started since childhood.

If I refrain from masturbating, after a few days, I get lot of dreams accompanied with a discharge of semen. When I am awake, I can exercise some control but I dont know how to get rid of this. I have reduced watching Porn/TV and I am a vegetarian.This has problem has been there for years and I see no solution since this happens in my sleep state.

I've followed several of the practices you have mentioned but doesnt seem to help much.

Any suggestion from you would be of much help and seeking your blessings to get rid of this problem.

Thanks

Answer
Go through each and every past answer and employ the complete Yoga Sadhana and related lifestyle suggested for a few years patiently. One should stop porn. There is no excuse. Things will fall in place.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear sir i am practicing celibacy over an year nd i asked several question earlier also.by your advice i am doing asana and pranayamaa and a aura has come to face and peace in my mind by the grace of lord.inspite of having gud lifestyle i am having belching problem ayurvedic doctor said its hyperacidity but medicines given by him isnt working my problem is not serious but it is affecting my sadhna.i have learned asana and pranyama from an expert teacher.

Answer
One should apply the said practices and lifestyle consistently for a few years in an unbroken manner, with devotion and surrender to the Lord, despite impediments. Is it possible to unwind karma dating back to many births in a few weeks or months?

All issues are eventually addressed in case of the honest Brahmachari through the power of conserved and transmuted Veerya. Based on the nature of one's past karma, it takes different periods of time, for different people. The determined and sincere Sadhaka perseveres and eventually gets the reward.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Hello Sir,

In one of the posts, you had advised that one shouldn't do mula bandha by holding breath for more than 5 seconds, I can quite easily do it for 20 seconds.
Should I reduce the duration of kumbhaka?

Thank You

Om Tat Sat

ANSWER: Yes. A duration of 5 seconds in Kumbhaka during Mula Bandha suffices. More is not advisable.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Hello Sir!

Thank You for your valuable reply.

Earlier I used to do ALL BANDHAS for 20 seconds*4times which is equal to 80 seconds....
Now after your advice, I will do it for 5 seconds*16 times which will also be equal to 80 seconds...is the right way to do moola bandha, jalandhara bandha and also uddiyana bandha?
Also please enlighten us as to why its not favourable to do it for more than 5 seconds? Are there any negative effects (for many days, have been performing for 20 seconds?

Answer
The purpose (of pulling up the Prana to the higher chakra-s) gets served at that duration. Anything more is unnecessary and not of benefit.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

thank you for your assistance and willingness to help! I hope you are well.

Tonight, I am not so well, because lustful thoughts have again entered my mind. I'm on my third month of brahmacharya, no masturbation and being single.
I am 24 now, and have been using porn occasionally between ages 16 through 23. Today, I started fantasizing about a girl who's a college mate of mine and a lot of pre-cum was produced in my lingam. I have been fantasizing about her for a long time, and had been courting her since more than a year. She rejected me more than once, and a few months ago I was forceful to her, my lust being out of control, which motivated me to start the sexual mastery path.

The problem now is that I see her every day in classes, and sometimes I "catch" her looking at me, and once I noticed her looking at my crotch. I think she too fantasizes about me, because when I am far from her I don't usually get this aroused.

My mind sometimes tells me to go and talk to her, that maybe she would like me to be nice to her and touch her gently, and this seems true, because when I touched her like that she started giggling and laughing more than once. I also get the feeling that when I ignore her she resents me, because she likes me to chase her around.
My mind has been extremely active in the past weeks, and my thoughts not so lustful but "crowded" and loud, anyway.

How can I get this temptation under control? I pray every day to God, do regular yoga and sadhana, (but today I was a bit in a hurry) and avoid meat, which I still seldom eat. Will this lust subside with time? I am a bit concerned, because it feels uncomfortable to ignore her, after we've been nice to each other in the past.

Also, sometimes the fear of being single forever because my shyness is still there, and this seems to be the reason of my celibacy. But, celibacy is much better than masturbation, since I can't find some suitable partner right now. Why does God give me so many fears about courtship and marriage? If I am too weak-willed to be a celibate, perhaps a wife would be more helpful to serve Him.

I am grateful that God brought me to you, I hope my message wasn't too long or confusing, because right now I am extremely confused

Answer
The Ego driven mind employs different ploys to succumb. One who is in the quest of the self should be wise enough to stay clear of these tricky temptations. Root out all these fancies and stay true to Sadhana. That alone will lead to the infinite strength of the Atman (self).

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi dhanajay,
I have a question regarding evolutionary scale which you have discussed some time in your previous answers, so my question is when one gets a human birth can there be any possibility that in subsequent births he can get an animal birth in any case.

Answer
Whether it is possible or not, why should one worry about these things? One should make full use of this existence and reach the self. Anything else is pointless and a fancy, like the many other fancies of the mind.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
A person previously engaged in total sexual life but latter totaly chaged and determines to practice brahmcharya with devotion but since when he start practice he faces bad dream and descharge in sleep. Is there any method one can compeletly escape from wet dream? What is its reason?

Answer
Is it possible to undo the effect of millions of births of recreational sexuality with a few months of abstinence? It takes regular and unbroken Sadhana, twice a day, with the required Yogi lifestyle to slowly undo these past Samskara-s.

The reason behind wet dreams and the methods to overcome them are addressed in detail in past answers. Go through each and every answer from the end and apply the methods. Things will stabilize after a few years of such practice.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,
If one does not have enough time to meditate for hours a day due to work/family, can one still cure illnesses and lose weight with brahmacharya? I am abstaining from all sex but I work a job all day and when I come home, I have to take care of my daughter. I also cannot get up early as I did that and find I wasnt getting enough sleep. Can I still regain my health from abstaining from sexual activity? I have eczema, dandruff, and am overweight and fatigue that I would like to cure. Thank you kindly.

Answer
Devote half an hour every day for the suggested practice. Mere abstinence will not work and leads to problems. Sadhana is required to transmute the conserved Veerya into Ojas.

The issues mentioned above will slowly start to resolve after a few years of such practice.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hari Om.

I'd posted few queries a few months ago also. I was a victim to self-abuse for nearly 7 to 8 years. Now I am 25 years old. I am a engineering student. I became a moral wreck owing the the habit, but have recovered considerably now owing to abstinence for nearly a year. I have 3 questions.

1). The region below the root of the penis and just above the testes (the area joining the two) has suffered damage (in the form of expansion of the area, consequently expansion of the penis from its root.) as a result of which little quantity of semen usually accumulates in that region which has the smell of blood. I am observing restraint on all sorts of stimulation so there is no question of voluntary ejaculation now. But this automatic accumulation of semen below the penis is the result of long time self abuse. What should be done?

2). There are some people, who never fall prey to evil habits and lead a wonderful life full of material and spiritual progress. There are some, like us, who put ourselves behind the doors and throw out our rethas from the body into the urinal to invite death, weakness and disease. By the time we realise what we've done to ourselves, everything is lost and we end up in bringing permanent injury to this body. Body, which serves as a boat to cross the ocean of this illusory sense universe. why is it so?

2). For a person like me, is self-realization possible? Or I've wasted this life. Kindly also consider my degree of physical weakness, while answering this question. The Scriptures say, "Nayam atma balaheenena labhyah".

Hari Om.

Answer

1. If the Yogic practices for transmutation are rightly applied, no fluid will get secreted or accumulated in the area. Mere abstinence does not address the issue. One should apply Brahmacharya in thought, word and deed and sublimate the gross fluid into subtle Ojas.

2. One's past Samskara-s (impressions) and Vasana-s (tendencies) dictate the direction of the present existence. However, he who realizes his follies and takes up to the quest of the self is eventually redeemed of all issues and goes into the bliss of the Atman.

3. Yes, the self cannot be realized by the weak and timid. However, who is weak and timid? It is the body/Ego and not one's Atman (self), which is ever strong. Therefore, it is enough if one strives through Sadhana, to overcome identification with the body & mind as not being the self. Then, one resides in the Atman, full of strength. An exceptional person, who perseveres relentlessly will eventually achieve this.

Do the suggested Sadhana, without interruptions and without doubt, with surrender to the Almighty. Things will come out alright.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Is it dangerous for christians?

Answer

Who is a Christian? Who is a Hindu? Who is a Muslim? Did you call yourself a Christian when fast asleep? Can being a Christian or Hindu empower one from not eating food? Can a Muslim live without drinking water because he is a Muslim? Is there anyone of any religion who does not suffer when afflicted with disease or injury? Is the blood of a man of this or some other religion different in color and thickness from that of another? Is there any sign on the body of a new born child that he/she belongs to one or the other religion?

There is no difference between people, be they of any religion, when it comes to the basic needs of the body or the mind. All wake up in the morning, all have to attend to the calls of nature, all get hungry, all feel the need for love, all work for a living and all have to sleep, whatever be their religion, at the end of the day

One should let go of this foolish fundamentalism, proclaiming himself this or that, claiming one's path as superior to that of another, when there is not the least difference as regards the core needs and nature. Religion is a path to reach one's self. There are as many paths, as there are people. None is superior or inferior. They are all to be respected, just as the people following them. The wise do not waste their time, getting lost in the endless forest of religious fundamentalism.

Yoga is realizing oneself to be what he is. Then, the self is revealed. There is no religion, cast, creed, gender or other super-impositions in the self. It is one, without a second. So the question of harming does not arise, because there is nothing there to harm. Harm or danger applies to the unreal and not the real. The reality is continuous, eternal, infinite and all pervading, beyond the realm of sorrow

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Namaste,
I feel like I have been put in various tests by God. These tests were put to test which field I belong. It felt as if it was being determined in which caste I will be put into among the four ordered castes and the one I was born in was just a namesake and that my duties and will be decided now based on how i cleared the test ... I would like to ask if it is possible ..
Om

Answer

One takes up the occupation dictated by his Prarabdha (past karma), just as an actor takes up the character, as dictated by the director. One need not worry about these things, as long as he holds on to the self through Sadhana. Things will go on as destined.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Hi dhananjay, I have troubles to control my anger when my older brother annoys me. I've gotten very tired of it. I sometimes feel I want him to die because he is the most annoying person I have known. He is annoying because he is a hypocrite, a liar, reckless and he enjoys watching others get mad as well. he also laughs when I am in pain or crying when I was younger, but when he is in pain I don't find it a laughing matter at all. When he talks to me it is just him saying how much superior he is than me, so I ignore conversations with him yet he will still talk even if I am not even listening... How do I deal with the anger my brother causes to me, should I just accept it? Also my brother has very bad luck, he is always sick and he's got several injuries tore his acl in his knee, and also his ankle tendon and wrist tendon. is that due to karma?

Answer

If one were to react to each and every eccentricity of people in the world, there would not be one moment of peace. There is no end to irateness. One should accept people for what they are and learn to remain unaffected, focusing on one's objectives. All eventually learn from lessons of experience, in the classroom of life.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Dear Sir,
I had asked questions previously regarding problems in the digestive system recently. I am unable to follow up questions on the same thread anymore, hence asking this question as a new thread.

The stress and fear over my health problems over the last months has increased a lot. It has begun to disrupt my sleep. I am unable to sleep even a bit. The moment I begin to drift into sleep, a sudden jolt of fear wakes me up. I try to console myself and go back to sleep, to be woken up by fear once again. This cycle repeats for a long time, after which I give up trying to sleep due to the discomfort of experiencing the jolts of fear. I stay awake through the night. I have also begin to feel afraid of sleeping thinking that the fear will wake me up again. I am unable to practice Sadhana at all due to this. Through the day, this thought keeps coming to mind that will i be able to sleep tonight.

I am very distressed and desperately need your help.
PLEASE PLEASE help.
Thank you very much.
Best regards.

Answer
There is no cause for fear. Let go of fear and stay calm. Getting worked up only increases health issues and not the reverse. A calm and happy mind, which surrenders itself and one's fate to the Lord remains unaffected, whatever be the situation. Sit in meditation and merge the mind into the formless Lord, who is of the nature of the self. The tough phase will pass away and health will get restored.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir

If a person doing Mantra japa as his main Sadhana, He can tranform his vital energy in to ojass successfully?, He can grow spirituly, mentaly and physicaly?

Regards

Answer
It is possible, if there is genuine & longing Bhakti (devotion) to the Almighty, behind the chanting. There are numerous ways to merge into the Lord and pure devotion is very effective.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Sir

I have just completed a month of Yogic Sadhana and am very happy with the changes I have been experiencing.

But the cause of worry is that I have started experiencing uneasiness/pain in my heart.
And I am almost sure, it is because the way that I have been performing Bandhas.

Could you please point out what could be going wrong in Bandhas.
I have gone through the past posts and am following it.

I do not want to skip bandhas as it has helped me gain peace of mind and reduced stress, neither do I want to stress my heart.
Please help me Sir...

Om Tat Sat
(That Supreme Being is the Absolute Truth)

Answer
Take it slowly, with minimum effort initially. It takes time for the practice to stabilize, before which the body reacts differently in different people.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir,

1)
In one of your post, you mentioned :
Anandamaya Kosha: - That covering of bliss around the Atman which whose manifestation can be obvserved very clearly at the time of some pleasurable experience

Does that mean that whenever we indulge in any pleasurable activity we are actually unknowingly causing the pleasure to manifest at certain intensity(depending on our activity) from AANDAMAYA KOSH & that pleasure isn't derived from the external pleasurable activity but it only acts as a trigger & pleasure is actually being derived from within.

2)
In another post you mentioned that Devas lives in the higher astral planes. Then who inhabits the causal planes.

Also you mentioned that Sadashiva loka is the 5th plane. Does that come under astral worls or causal world.

Can you please give an account of the hierarchy of the universe in causal & astral world, if not please mention some books or online links which provides detailed account of it.

Thank You

Answer
1. All pleasure is from the Atman alone. The means employed to experience it differ. Sense pleasure is derived by partially overcoming the body & mind consciousness through some sense related activity. It is temporary, limited, causes bondage and ends in suffering.

The Yogi who overcomes body & mind consciousness through Sadhana experiences the bliss of the Atman as the Atman itself. That is permanent, unlimited, gives liberation and takes one away from suffering.'

2. Realize who you are first. Other planes and worlds later, if they still exist. All else is verbal fancy.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Dear Sir,

I would like to thank the Almighty for having provided aspirants in the modern world with your services. In the absence of a gurukula system, your online portal has provided much relief and strength.

I have a few queries:

1) During meditation and pranayama, one feels invincible, as if no lust can penetrate him. After intense meditation, one thinks about the body of a woman with disgust, laughing at how he had moha for the flesh bag, and pictures the body in old age or death.

Yet...the next moment, when one walks on the street and sees a beautiful lady, all this vairagya vanishes! The mind covets the flesh form!

Is this not strange? I am very intelligent by academic standards but how is my mind not processing this simple fact? One moment, I am in the throes of atmananda, aware of the falsity of sense pleasures, yet the next moment, all it takes is for one appealing woman to thwart my sense of balance!

I am very confused by my inability to keep the mind clean. How can this be, even though I cognitively know what is right?

2) I have read your answers carefully. You advise to abstain from massages in general with other individuals, citing that prana mixes. What are the harmful effects of one's prana mixing with another.

3) Some have suggested that male and female energies are complementary and nourish one another. Will the brahmachari derive any benefits from hugging, caressing, etc. women? Or will any such benefits by shadowed by the huge losses he suffers in veerya being produced?

4) The more I practice brahmacharya, the more I notice I am polarizing. While charm, humor, and intelligence have increased manifold, I find men and women are irresistably drawn or quickly repulsed due to jealousy. What does the Almighty do to cause these changes and WHY does he cause these changes?

5) It's popular for young men to measure their worth by the number of women they have bedded. It is crude, but the mind starts to wander when being placed in a young, collegial atmosphere with thousands of such men around. What is the antidote?

Many Regards Guruji.

ANSWER: 1. All those feelings of invincibility are a product of the Ego, which flies in borrowed feathers, drawing from the power of the Atman in meditation.

Maya will break the power of intelligence like a knife slices through butter. Maya cannot be won over through intelligence manifest through the Ego. It is like a drowning man trying to save himself by holding on to his own hair, for the ego itself is Maya. When one overcomes the Ego alone is Maya conquered.

2. It is not preferable to come into contact with the astral energy from other bodies. It becomes an impediment.

3. It will end in downfall.

4. The why and how is to be realized through direct experience.

5. Let go of the concept of being man or woman and strive to realize yourself as the Atman, which has no gender.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: 1) When the body and mind are tired, the natural recourse seems to be a desire for hugging a flesh creation of some sort, particularly a woman. It feels that desire is natural and biologically prompted similar to how one feels attracted to a plate of hot food after having played a long game of tennis. Is the biological impulse toward flesh natural or unnatural and how is the aspirant to overcome it?

2) Conquering maya can only be done by becoming the one supreme self. But for bodily tiredness, weakness, aches, and pains, the natural biological recourse appears to be intimacy with a woman just like the recourse for hunger is food. If this is not the right path, will meditation or some other method suitably take care of the ailing body?

3) Why does the astral energy from other bodies cause problems? In modern society we sit in close quarters at work, live in crowded cities, move on crowded platforms such as trains and buses, and frequently hug/handshake others. Will the astral body or "linga sharira" get affected by these worldly vibrations? I feel it will but am helpless as I have no choice but to endure these.

4) I really, really want to be happy. To be truly blissful. Is there truly no sense pleasure on this planet that will equal the bliss of the atman? I have partially felt the bliss of the atman during meditation but even afterward a craving for sense pleasures remains. Are atman and sense pleasures simply two varieties of pleasures to be savored or am I mistaking having actually felt what true self realization feels like?

5) As a very young man my chief worry is regret. I do not want to wake up one morning at the age of 50 and think "hmm, my brahmacharya pursuits prevented me from living a full live" and crave sense pleasures. Will HE take care of me if I concentrate on him? It is very difficult to maintain sadhana and CONFIDENCE in one's sadhana when the rest of the world has not the least interest, care, or belief in moving past the sense pleasures.

Thank you,
Saswath

Answer
Do your Sadhana with surrender to the Lord, asking nothing in return. All queries will be answered by themselves in time. Things will come alright.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
First of all i would like to thank you for all the answers and help you provided here. I am 20 years old and struggling to understand brahmacharya. I started practicing celibacy 3 years ago but still i am not able to do it correctly. i can last for about 15-20 days only and then i fall back to my old regime of watching porn and masturbating. I am fed up with this life and often complain about depression. through these years of celibacy i have developed some sort of belief which is doing much harms than any goods. i request you to please give your opinion on it. (i searched your previous answers already but couldn't find anything about it).

1- I understand about the prana being converted to gross semen under sexual excitation. Practically speaking i am not able to stop the sexual excitation from happening, So after some time i give up, open my computer and watch porn for hours. In the middle of this my brain recalls all the wisdom and knowledge about celibacy so it stops everything all together, shuts down the computer and ask god for forgiveness. But again my brain tells me that my prostate is already filled with all the gross semen (manufactured out of all the prana). All the prana has been used to create this gross semen. So i think whats the point of keeping gross semen when it's going to get ejaculated in wet dreams anyways? so i masturbate till the last drop of semen to clear out prostate and gross semen. Please give me your opinion on this.

2- i have noticed that when i watch porn or think about lusty thoughts for hours and stop it and ejaculate the semen few days later, semen has huge yellow jelly like substance sometimes crystal like substances (which are sometimes little painful to ejaculate). So what should i do?
is it best to ejaculate in such conditions or not. my belief says i should ejaculate and clear my prostate. Please comment.

3-If i accidentally get excited sexually, should i clear my prostate gland to remove gross semen?

These are my beliefs. Please give your best opinion on all 3 beliefs. Please i request you to understand that i know i can avoid all this together by doing yoga sadhana but i am not able to do it daily due to the above belief. Until unless i get a brief and clear answer on this i am not gonna practice celibacy. Please i request you to not to write answer in a context of avoiding all these activities all together. Please focus the content of the answer directly on my belief. Your direct approach to this will help me in breaking my beliefs. thanks you Waiting for your wisdom to shower .... May god bless you. Om namah shivaay.

Answer

1. This how 'Maya' works. It gradually induces one to slip. The right way is to perform honest Sadhana and increase the periods in Brahmacharya, asking God nothing but residence in the self. To the one who perseveres and is honest, success eventually comes.

Do not worry. Apply the suggested Sadhana and persevere in a committed way. Things will eventually be overcome through HIS grace.

2. That is an indication of conversion of semen into stones. It is risky and dangerous. The right way is to avoid the process right from stimulation through diverting the mind onto adequate physical, mental and spiritual Sadhana.

3. He who does not transmute cannot practice Brahmacharya. The sexual energy is either transmuted or let out. It cannot be made stationary. Until and unless one transmutes existing semen into Ojas & prevents the formation of fresh fluid through Sadhana and by keeping the mind free of sexual delusion, the process cannot yield fruit.

Gradually increase residence in Brahmacharya as described in past answers with surrender to the Lord. Eventually the practice becomes stabilized.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

1) I have heard from elders that spiritual practices done during solar and lunar eclipse benifits 3 fold..mantra sidhhi can be achieved very easily and also one should not eat anything during this period and do fasting.
2) ekadashi is also given more importance for sadhana..why?

Answer

1. The Lunar and Solar energies (corresponding to Ida and Pingala in the human body) are in synchrony during an eclipse. This is most conducive to balance the corresponding energies in the human body, so as to merge Prana & Apana into the Sushumna Nadi to attain Samadhi (union with the Supreme). Hence the advise to engage in spiritual practice.

The Jatharagni (digestive fire) naturally diminishes during an eclipse, as Prana shakti (vital energy) is channelized towards the Sushumna. Hence food if eaten will not be properly digested or assimilated, leading to the formation of toxins. Therefore, one is advised to fast. Also, a heavy stomach is not conducive for Kundalini awakening

2. Ekadashi (eleventh day of the lunar fortnight) is the time when it is most conducive to merge the mind into its source - The Atman, for at this time, the mind naturally resides in the 'Ajna' and the 'Anahata' chakra-s, which are very close to the Sahasrara as compared to the others. Hence the energies in the cosmos and within oneself are most conducive for Samadhi. So the wise desist from loading their stomachs with food (which causes stupor) and instead fast or take something light, in their quest to merge into the self.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Dhananjay,I feel sad almost everyday with thoughts that torture myself because I could have been practicing brahmacharya since I started to learn about it which was about 4 years ago. I think about the amount of blessings that could have come to me if I had never lost my seed. I am currently reading the Mahabharata and when I see stories of brahmacharis like Bhisma, I feel bad about my past actions. I am 20 years and 4 months old now and feel that all my life's years were lost because of it. I don't ejaculate since last year's july although I enganged myself in sex without ejaculation in the last two months, which made me feel even worst. What is your advice on how to deal with this guilty which I am feeling? Sometimes it is so extreme that I do not even want that people see me because I feel ashamed of myself and stay home all day long thinking about it, feeling impotent. I gave up everything I was going of life, including college and I now practice shirshasana and padmasana chanting japa of the Hare Krishna maha-mantra everyday for hours and read Holy books. Please give me some light about what I should do with my life and accept my humble obeisances.

Answer

There is no need to become reclusive or get depressed. True spirituality is to hold on to the Atman (self), whilst attending to one's Dharma, whatever it is. One has various responsibilities which he should attend to with cheer and commitment, yet hold on to the self through simple and unpolluted effort, with surrender to the Lord.

The past is gone and not worth worry. The present is to be utilized to move towards the self.

This much suffices.

Do your Sadhana and keep yourself busy with your occupation. Set aside an hour or so for deep meditation on the formless Atman. With time, everything will come alright.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I am 17 year old and had been doing brahmacharya for past 12 days but had a break just two days ago. Now i cannot start it again as sexual energies become quite high and my will is also weaken.so wat do you suggest? I do yoga but what else do i do to give it a kick start, as when i continue it for 1 week or so then my will becomes stronger and i can stretch it for longer periods.

Answer
Gradually increase the periods in Brahmacharya. Do regular Sadhana as suggested earlier. With time and effort, the practice gets stabilized in due course.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Beloved sir,
I thank you for your patience in answering me. I wrote to you about a month ago about a girl in my class who makes me feel really aroused; some fantasy about her whilst I was trying to fall asleep in bed was enough to make me lose my purity and ejaculate, after a 4 months streak. I didn't feel so horrible as the past relapses, but still feel that a lot of purity is lost.
You were so right, keeping my mind (and body) focused on her just for some seconds can be enough to let me fall for Maya.
Anyway, this time I feel optimistic and hopeful about "my" ability (which actually is God's Grace) to replace sexual fantasies with something more constructive. The great beasts are pride and lust, indeed I find myself impatient to "beat" this streak and reach one year. This means that I will likely spend the next months just with the first focus to get better at purity. I'm realizing more and more how some part of me just wants to be admired by women and by God for "its" purity (which is just my hypocricy). I can't help it. These next months will be just numbers to beat a previous record of purity. I'm thinking about changing courses also in order not to have to see the girl I like so often.
I know that this is not true Brahmacharya, but the ego in me is very strong.
I shall enjoy sleeping and eating less, and a life of renounces, in order to wake up earlier and not be trapped in the horrible prison which is my bed. Can eating less help me to sleep less? I sleep in a room with another guy, so I can't take the habit of sleeping on the floor like you suggested. I'm realizing how dangerous a warm bed really is for an aspirant. To me this has been one of the major obstacles.
I'm sorry to write to you with such pride and egoism, if possible try to see my true inner Truth, which often I cover up with hypocricy and pride. I hope I can write to you again in a completely different state of mind of humility, God willing.

Answer
The Ego, which is nothing but Maya itself finds various ways to trap and victimize the mind. The alert Sadhaka should stay clear of all these through regular Sadhana, humility and surrender to the higher power. Then, stability comes slowly.

1. One should neither overeat nor starve but resort to 'Mitaahara' (a balanced diet). Details on this topic are available in past answers.

2. Sleeping on the floor does not imply sleeping on the bare ground. A few simple sheets or layers of cloth & a hard pillow are put on a carpet or mat. Soft, highly cushioned beds and pillows are bad for health and not for the Brahmachari who is in the quest of the self.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Guruji,
When you speak of 'Maya' you use adjectives such as illusory, non-existent and metaphors like dream. Although, I can intuitively grasp this truth, my analytical mind has some doubts in need of clarification.

In this world of sights, sounds, objects and their corresponding senses, everything feels so rigid, sturdy and "existent". Forces and objects behave in a constant manner. Nature responds to consciousness, consciousness responds to nature, evolution occurs and so on and so forth. With what reasoning can one call of this false? Is it only " real" in relative regard to the mind and senses? So does that mean if there is no mind, there are no senses and therefore no physical existence? It's like the age old question "If a tree falls in a forest and there is no one around to hear, does it make a sound?" Is then the body and senses just another creation of mind?

Warm Regards,
Sahil

Answer
The people, events, circumstances and objects in a dream also appear completely real to the dreamer. When one gets killed in a dream in some violent encounter, the horror and pain which he experiences are not different to a similar encounter in flesh. A knife or gun which might have been used there also appear very real and to such an extent that people can remember minute details about the color and characteristics of the weapon. It is a well known fact that people scream and wake up perspiring, in utter horror and shock after such an incident and start calming down only after they realize it was a dream. Does this mean those events, people and objects were real?

Just as the dream was only a superimposition of circumstances and ideas on one's consciousness through the mind in sleep, the waking state is another superimposition on the pure Atman, whose consciousness has identified itself with the Ego, body and a sense of separate entity. Just as the dream is realized as being unreal upon wake-up, the 'waking state' which was earlier considered real by a person is realized to be an unreal illusion upon attaining 'Atmasakshatkara' (realization of the self)

Just as the dream knife, dream killer and dream horror no longer affect the person upon wake-up (who then laughs at the same), the events, circumstances and happenings of the world are realized to be a dream by the 'Gnyani' (realized soul), after he has irreversibly woken up to the reality of the Atman.

The world, its objects and even space are only a creation of the mind. Where were these when one was fast asleep where there was no mind? Just as images (which are not real but only the product of light) move on the cinema screen, while the white screen remains constant, the world and its phenomenon are images on the infinite screen of Brahman (Almighty)

"O Innocent one, just as a city may be seen reflected in a mirror, I am that Brahman, the absolute reality, in whom is seen the reflection of this world. Knowing this, O sinless one, ever be fulfilled."

"The perfect among the sages is identical with ME. There is absolutely no difference between us" - Tripura Rahasyam, Chap XX, 128-133

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,
I can not find the exact procedure(like yoga, pranayam, asana) for transmutation. And I dont know how to perform these things. Unfortunately I could not find these from past answers.

So kindly provide me link otherwise the date on which you posted these answers so that I can protect myself fro wet dreams.

I will be grateful to you, if you provide all yoga, pranayam, asana with their name & procedure to become a perfect brahmachari.

Answer
http://en.allexperts.com/q/Celibacy-Abstinence-3564/2011/5/Pranayama-Yoga-Brahma
http://en.allexperts.com/q/Celibacy-Abstinence-3564/2011/12/thribandha-khechari-http://en.allexperts.com/q/Celibacy-Abstinence-3564/2012/1/alternative-meditatio http://en.allexperts.com/q/Celibacy-Abstinence-3564/2011/12/japa-chanting-medita

Go through all the past answers to get clear with the Yogic lifestyle and perspective to be developed. Merely following the above links alone will not suffice.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir,

You mentioned the following in an answer:

"Just as the dream was only a superimposition of circumstances and ideas on one's consciousness through the mind in sleep, the waking state is another superimposition on the pure Atman, whose consciousness has identified itself with the Ego, body and a sense of separate entity. Just as the dream is realized as being unreal upon wake-up, the 'waking state' which was earlier considered real by a person is realized to be an unreal illusion upon attaining 'Atmasakshatkara' (realization of the self)"

Please clarify. I do not understand. Pure consciousness, the "screen", is the atman. In a dream, dream events are superimposed on it while in life, life events are superimposed on it. But does the mind and ego function in both cases or only in the life case? There is no ego and mind in the dream state, is there?

1. Also the Tripura Rahasyam mention the waking state, dreaming state, and deep sleep. Is the atman present in all three states? What about the mind, ego, intellect, and consciousness?

2. When you say "manas, buddhi, chittha, ahamkara" you are referring to the mind, intellect, consciousness, and ego. Do all 4 of these always appear together or is there a state in which, for example, there is consciousness but no mind? or intellect but no ego? etc.

3. Lastly, is there any merit-as a young brahmachari-to enjoying carnal pleasures before embarking on celibacy so that the "curiosity" factor is killed? Else it keeps rearing its ugly head. As a young brahmachari the stakes are low. As an old man, breaking brahmacharya would preclude one from completing 12 or however number of years are needed to realize the self.

4. Why is the mind so attracted to the sexual body parts-breasts, penis, lips, vagina, etc? These are all very disgusting upon close examination (e.g. the saliva of the mouth) yet for the average man these body parts bring excitement. Is it due to evolutionary reasons (e.g. breasts represent fat stores for survival) or due to the many impressions (vasanas) or due to social conditioning (culture is very lewd these days)?

5. One thing that prevents the mind from complete peace is worldly desire. A recognition for fame by helping others and financial stability (a bank account large enough to be independent) are both preventing me from focusing inward. With the right practice, will I be able to clear these barriers so I can turn the mind inward without it going outside?

Thank you,
Parsa

Answer
1. The mind and Ego function in the waking as well as the dream states. The dream is experienced through the mind, like any other experience. Had there been no mind and no Ego, there would have been no dream.

2. The Atman alone exists, always. All else is illusion.

3. All these are the product of the individual Ego itself, which shines by unknowingly drawing from the power of the Atman, yet assumes itself as independent.

4. Do your Sadhana and remain quiet. The experience of sexuality is to be gained within the bounds of marriage, as per Dharma.

Maya makes the false appear real, clouding Buddhi. One should do his Sadhana and merge into the source. Then alone will all queries be answered through realization. All else is fancy.

Question
Hi dhananjay,

I would like to know your thoughts on family gathering/small parties I feel they are very overwhelming and i do not enjoy going to them, unlike most people who enjoy it. is this bad for brahmacharya? I think I read in a past answer and you said it is best not to be around others a lot? I am reading your past answers a lot in my free time as well. sorry if this has been asked a lot

Answer
One in the quest of the self, who is into committed practice will not get the mind to spend too much time in the non-self. They are mutually exclusive. The sign of an aspirant destined to progress is solitude, for the Atman (self) is itself silence.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,
I am a beginner on brahmachari way. In an internet sight for mula bandha some are suggesting to contract anus & genital, & some are strictly suggesting only to contract the area in between anus & genital. Now I am fully confused which is perfect.

2.Sir, in pranayama method, suggesting by you, should I take a gap from one cycle to other cycle or it should be in continuous manner.

3.I am performing asana,bandha,nadi shodhana & then pranayama and meditation suggested by you. Is it necsssary to perform sarbangasana/sirsasana. But I dont feel comfortable in sarbangasana/sirsasana.

4. Any extra tips for beginner, kindly recommend me or give me exact link. Due near exam I can not go through your all past ans. Still I am viewing ans by managing time.

5. How can I rate this site. Just give me link to rate this site.
Lot of thanks to you.

Answer
1. It is only the anal and genital muscles which are to be contracted

2. A few seconds gap is suggested

3. Do the Asana-s suggested by the inner voice.

Apply this Sadhana with Brahmacharya in an unbroken manner. In a few years, things will stabilize and progress as required.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhanajay,

My heart lies in the practice of the eight limbs of yoga.
There are other good things in the world, but I know that all of these are secondary to the highest practice of yoga.

When I practice yoga, I know I'm doing the highest good for myself and others.

This past year I've taken to the primary series of asana in the tradition of k pattabhi jois. I also have a fairly consistent sitting meditation practice.

However, I find the yamas and niyamas of yoga and the sila of buddhism to be of a much greater importance than the asana and the one that gives me greatest difficulty is brahmacharya.

Before finding yoga & buddhism, I had heard about this thing called "nofap" and had tried to give up pornography and masturbation. With a full year of attempts, I could make it to 6 days only a few times before losing it. I didn't realize how habituated to it I had become.

The past six months or so my records have increased. Recently I made it just under three weeks, but I've fallen back into looking into pornography and masturbating the past few days. I feel like such a total hypocrite. My heart says yoga is what I should be doing, and here I am doing all these asanas, yet I'm so clearly addicted to masturbation and pornography. & both yoga & buddhism say the bridge of sexuality is to be cut off.

Sometimes, because of my failings at total brahmacharya, I think I should strive to reduce sexuality only at first or switch to real sex at a later date, but I see that this would only create more problems for me and is not honest.

What I'm doing right now in faliing brahmacharya is unhealthy even for a worldly man and totally contrary to my spiritual aspirations. I could feel the loss of stability in my meditation. I'm more agitated now and filled with anxiety.
I want to abandon sexuality completely.
In my clearer moments I'm baffled as to why I'm attracted to it at all.

I sleep on the floor, have satsanga when I can and don't hang out with old vulgar friends and acquaintances, take vigorous asana 4-6 times a week, meditate most days at least one hour per day, and I watch my diet. I keep a diary also.

I'm so frustrated by my lack of success here. Before my lapse at day 20 I felt impervious to the attaction but since my fall, I've had many more lapses and have been unable to get going again.

Should I attempt a graded approach to cutting out sexuality or strive for full brahmacharya from the outset?
What should I expect to really have success in this?
I don't want to live the course of my life without being established in brahmacharya. What a pity that would be.

Answer
Turn a blind eye to everything and get established in unbroken Sadhana to realize the self, asking nothing else in return. With time, the goal will be reached. There is no cause for anxiety.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

Namaste, dear sir. Prostrations to thee. I have some questions that I would be very grateful for your advice, suggestions and enlightening knowledge, and I'm grateful for your answers.

As I am discriminating and learning my true identity, I find it is difficult to discriminate my real identity from the seed body. On this topic, I have some inquiries for you:
(a) What is the seed body? Is it the depository of karma?
(b) How is the Atman distinct from the seed body, and how to discriminate against the seed body?

Thank You sir, and one more question that requires your help. I sometimes get over anger, but there is a persisting irritation and impatience that lingers in the mind, which is often the cause of further anger I must overcome. Please allow me to describe this from Swami Sivananda's Mind Its Mysteries and Control:

"If you strive and make sincere effort to subdue your anger, the hatred subsides. Even then, a slight movement of impatience lingers although the angry feeling has gone. You must eschew this slight disturbance also. For a man who is leading a divine life, this is a very serious drawback."

How to remove this slight movement of impatience, sir? I often tell myself that this impatience belongs to the ego, and not me. But is the most effective strategy? Please advice.

Answer
1. The 'Karana Sharira' (causal or seed body) is the depository of all karma-s related to the Jiva. It is the seat of the Ego and envelops the Atman on account of Maya.

The Atman is the infinite substrate and the reality. There is no comparison between the two, for one is real while the other in unreal. This is to be realized through direct experience and not by explanation. He who does unbroken Sadhana to realize the self eventually becomes one with knowledge.

2. Through surrender to the Almighty and the realization that one is nothing, the Ego gradually dissolves, following which the Atman shines. This vacates all the dross around it.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaskar,
My questions are
1. Is it possible to change the direction of life or the Prarabdha karman through Brahmacharya and intense yoga sadhana?

2. Is it possible to fulfillment of all the worlfly desire through yoga sadhana and Brahmacharya?

Answer
1. No. Prarabdha karma (the result of actions committed in the past) cannot be changed. One has to face it. However, through Sadhana, Vairagya and Vichara the advent of 'Agama' (future karma) can be curtailed.

2. That which is destined will surely come. Not more, not less.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

I am following the path of truth as it gives me relief from suffering, I do my best to be good and strong through working and cycling. I get so busy sometimes that it can be overwhelming, I like it but it can get to the point where I start to feel that I deserve more than I have and feelings of desire can creep in this lead me to lust which lead me to break. I get suicidal thoughts, it's like going from heaven to hell. I know that I must stay good and be strong its that simple.

I find it strange how I go from being at peace and doing very well for long, then to be put down all of a sudden which leads to suicidal thoughts as I just don't want to have to deal with going up and down, up and down. I just want to stay up but I always seem to think that going down is worth it, how can I overcome this?

I just dont really want to be in this world at all to be honest and my incentive for being good is that I hate the feeling of inner pain in this world. I just don't want to be here but I have to. Im trying to love! My patience starts to wear thin for what I truly want if it's even possible.

Answer
1. One must reside in the Atman (self), not letting desire, expectation and self pity to raise their heads. Such a one is blessed.

2. Past Samskara-s (impressions) creep up from within at opportunistic moments, oscillating ones peace. One has to burn these through Sadhana till the self alone remains. That is eternal.

3. One in the quest of the self realizes the fallacy of the external world and turns his mind inward to realize the truth. There is no pleasure in the senses and the world. That which one seeks outside through worldly attractions is within and not out there. This is the truth. Eternal bliss of indescribable magnitude is the Atman. An exceptional Sadhaka who perseveres relentlessly realizes this at the destined time.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Respected Sir,
Sorry for asking you again.Two more things that I wanted to ask are-
If a person suppose if a woman eats food made from the cook(male /opposite sex) ,hand made& hand touched food from opposite sex, does that spoil one's brahmcharya.(because after digestion stool comes from anus)?

The other thing is I had followed brahmcharya till now like this-physically its 100%,no pornography ,just fantasises 4-5 times (that's also I dinr know that fantasing a little can break brahmchraya,otherwise I would never never have).So I used to think that I am going very well on brahmcharya till now.Iam 36 years now.So I am compmletely broken thatI did so much to follow it stricktly but still left with 4-5 fantasies.Is I am high on brahmcharya.
And even if I start now today will it be counted again in the eyes of God because I used to think that it starts from childhood and after being unchaste it cannot be started(at a later age in life).And will it yield any punye if I start at the age of 36?

Answer
1. It depends on the mindset of the person who cooks. If cooked with a neutral or well wishing mind, there no harm. If cooked by a person with vested interests or malefic intentions on those who eat, the food gets charged accordingly and does harm.

2. You will derive the required benefits. Practice asking nothing in return, with surrender and love for the Almighty. All will be well.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Dear Dhanajay,

Hope you're doing well.
I'm on day 6 of brahmacharya toward a day 15 goal which I plan to extend upon completion as suggested in past answers.

Pranothana is the linear movement of prana. I've read elsewhere that this is the beginning of chakra purificaton and preparation for kundalini awakening. Does this mean prana is turning into subtle ojas through pranothana instead of gross semen due to yogic practices and the like? (and will this help my hair at all?)

Secondly, I've read some answers noting hair and beard being valuable for the yogi. So I'm growing my hair out again and my beard for the first time but im just 22yo and it doesn't look like it'll really look too good. Will brahmacharya make my beard thicker somehow?

Regarding my head hair, its VERY thick, wavy, and sortof difficult to manage when it gets longer. It had a certain luster and silkiness that has diminished since my teens but its always been a bit of hassle to deal with.

Nevertheless, I'm motivated to let it grow without trimming it. How should a yogi with my hair type take care of his hair?

I really admire the shiny, healthy looking hair most kids have. Unfortunately, I don't see too many adults maintaining that youthful look. Will brahmacharya with yogic practices improve the quality of my hair at all and make it more manageable as it grows long again?

Thanks you!!!

Sincerely,
Austin

ANSWER: 1. Through 'Pranothana', vital Prana is prevented from turning into gross semen and converted into Ojas.

2. Growing hair and the beard is beneficial. However, keeping one's worldly duties in mind, it might be necessary to trim them, if so required. One should not worry much about external appearance, for it is the practice that matters. It is the internal purification which is more important.

3. It is the law of nature that a flower buds into a fruit, which ripens and falls one day. The body has a beginning and hence an end. That which is destined occurs. This fascination or attachment for youth is to be relinquished, for it is as false as old age. One is the immortal self and not the impermanent body.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Dhanajay,

1) Is the conversion of Prana to Ojas always associated with pranothana and the sensations that accompany it - could you elaborate more on this please?

2&3)

There is an attachment for the youth there in me. However, I assumed that youthful looking, healthy hair would correspond to the health of the individual and the hair's ability to perform its subtler functions.

Will the hair perform its yogic functions equally well regardless of its physical appearance and how its taken care of from an external point of view, or is there anything I could do to assist or at least not interfere with the hair performing its more subtle functions? like some do's / don't with hair care for this purpose?

Thanks very much,
Austin

Answer
Do your Sadhana honestly and merge the mind into the self. That which is to be known will reveal. Let go of fascination for the hair or the body. They are of no consequence in terms of the absolute.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
My questions :-

1- Sivananda said By practicing pranayama semen Gets dry completely. evenm ramakrishna also said the same thing as- semen become like crystal sugar candy after a long practice of brahmacharya. What's your opinion on it. does semen really becomes like crystal as stated by the ramakrishna and sivananda?

2- Modern doctor says you need to masturbate to keep the pipes clean or your reproductive system will become rusty. Is it true?

3- i happened to break my 10 days long celibacy streak in which i was practicing pranayama. When i ejaculated my semen was thick like jelly, all the way sticky. I thought if this sticky sibastance gets clotted in one of the ejaculatory tube then it may become a health concern for me.

Answer

1. The production of gross semen is halted through continuous sublimation. It can be started again for procreation, if so required in marriage. The complete stoppage occurs only in advanced stages which are attained when the Yogi has got done with his family responsibilities, if any.

2. The need for sexual release applies to one who frequents the sex plane and who is not into Brahmacharya. It does not apply to the one who takes up the vital power and prevents formation of physical semen.

3. There is no cause for anxiety when there is proper practice. No harm comes to the honest aspirant who surrenders to the higher power.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

will the multitudinous benefits of the kaupin be obtained with a cotton jockstrap such as this: http://www.amazon.com/Papi-Mens-3-Pack-Cotton-Strap/dp/B00C20E124

Answer

1. No. Those will not give the support and firmness of the Kaupin, which gives great power and energy.

2. Such undergarments contain rubberized contents like elastics and lycra. They aren't good for the skin or body. The Kaupin is simple cotton cloth, a natural fibre. It is cooling and beneficial

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

As per your past answers a brahmachari should eat and drink satvik things like milk and other dairy stuff. But as you know in today's world it's very difficult to find out purity in stuff. Most of the milk companies are selling artificial milk + preservative added milk and there are no cows or buffaloes available near our area.So what can we have as an alternative to milk? can we live without milk? This question might help those seekers also who are lactose intolerant.

Answer

A similar principle holds good for all eatables. One has to make use of that which is available and adapt the body to the same. There are those who live without milk or dairy. However, the same is not advised, unless inevitable.

Soya milk, almond milk, flax milk, oat milk & coconut milk are a few alternatives which may be sought in such cases.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

1. How much amount of food should be consumed by a yogi in a day (including 3 times)

2. As I drink water after nadi shodhana before pranayama I fell toilet in the middle of meditation.

3. After pranayam, then meditation, then snacks, so the time gap between pranayam and snack is minimum 40-45 mins. Is there any problem with such type of time gap.

4. In evening is it necessary after nadishodhana and after pranayama same procedure that means water/milk and snacks respectively ?

Answer
1. As much as would neither make one feel heavy, nor hungry. Details on 'Mitahara' are available in past answers.

2. Ignore and persevere.

3. One can take food a few minutes after meditation. The body should be fed after Sadhana.

4. Yes, one should get done with dinner after the evening Sadhana.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi,
It is easier to preserve your seed (Bindu) in winters when Moon energy is at its peak. But in Summers, it becomes very difficult to preserve seed when Sun energy regains its strength. It becomes even more difficult for a person with predominant fire element. Would you please share with us how you remain blessed in this situation? And please educate us on whole mechanism on this regard.

Stay Blessed!

Answer
1. Through merging the mind into the self, the seasons do not trouble. This is the correct method.

2. One can take recourse to other methods to cool the fire element in the body such as oil head bath etc.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Is padmasana a must for the advancement of the yogi? It is very difficult for me.

What is the point on keeping one own's sadhana in secret, and how is the proper way of doing it? Shouldn't we spread the glory of brahmacharya and true yoga practice?

Answer

1. Padmasana, Vajrasana & Sidhasana are some of the preferable Asana-s for meditation.

2. It is the way. If one wishes to prevent additional impediments, the Sadhana is to be kept to oneself.

3. The duty of the Sadhaka ends at honest practice. He will know what to do or not, when he reaches the required degree of quiescence

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Dear Sir,
In the earlier posts, it is said that AC is the foremost cause of diseases.
What should one do if one has to spend time in an air conditioned environment for work, and when there is not much choice since all work places are fitted with air conditioning system and absolutely no scope of natural ventilations.
Thank You.

Answer

A natural environment is most conducive to good health. Sweating is a healthy reaction which expels toxins and heat. The body should not be prevented from sweating. One however has little choice at work places. Following a yogic lifestyle and taking breaks for fresh, natural air will help address the problem to some extent.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Dhananjay ji,

I'd posted queries earlier also. Sir, I am a Bengali. Fish and meat (of goat only) is common in the community in which I've taken birth. I have abstained from non-vegetarianism for 3 years now. For the practice of Brahmacharya, these exciting food materials are to be avoided, as I've learnt. I recently found myself to be suffering from Anemia(low on blood) which caused severe weakness in the body. I halted my Sadhana. I then had to take some meat and medicines to bring myself on the tract. It was all because of misunderstanding the term 'Mitahara'. I took it for under-eating and thus abused the body.

One cannot recieve the grace of the Lord if ones' stomach is filled with meat diet, I've learnt from the Master. The divine light will not descend on him. Though, I am a Bengali, I've developed a distaste from food procured by blood-shed now.

What is right for a person like me belonging to such a community? Saints like Aurobindo, Ramakrishna and Vivekananda also belonged to this community and they were Brahmanishthas. I am not able to understand. Kindly clear this doubt of mine. Surely, I've not committed a crime by taking birth in this community and that I want to tread the path to illumination.

Hari Om.

Answer
It is generally preferable to avoid meat during the initial years, as past Samskara-s towards sensuality are very strong and animal matter can trigger these easily. Later, after much advancement, food does not cause trouble and one eats a little of whatever available for sustenance.

Take the food suggested by the inner voice. What is to be eaten and how much is very simple, when one listens within. No harm will come to such a one.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I am on the path in preparation for Kriya Yoga initiation. I have a strong sexual desire that I have been working on. However I have found that I have developed a very uncomfortable internal issue in my stomach/colon area on my left side. I went only 10 days while remaining celibate and this occurred. I then experimented with foods and the problem remained. And then I broke the 10 day celibacy (and during celibacy the urges really disappeared consciously)and found that the problem subsided. Is this a problem with sublimation? I'm very concerned because I fear not being to build ojas and power within myself to "ascend".

Thank you for any and all assistance that you may provide.

-Josh

Answer
Random issues arise in some people, based on their past karma. If the Sadhana is proper and regular with surrender to the higher power, all these vacate in the course of time, leading to stability and improvement.

It is important to transmute the sexual power and not let it stagnate, for that is forced abstinence which eventually fails.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Please elucidate the meaning of 'inner voice'. How does one distinguish the inner voice from just another thought or feeling?

With reverence and respect,
Sahil

Answer
To know the inner voice, one must quiet the mind and merge it into its source. The inner voice is clearly heard when the outer (Ego) is quietened.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,
1. In summer days, toxin is released by sweat but in winter/rainy days how toxin can released.That means my doubt is there any procedure to release toxin artificially ?

2. Can a yogi use soap for whole body once in every 20 days ?

3. As maintaining celibacy, why I am feeling heavy day by day ?

4. Is there any problem with clean shave as Swami Vivekananda was always remain with clean shave ?

Answer
1. Urination is more in winter and sweating in summer. The body expels toxins accordingly.

2. Occasional use does not cause harm. It is however not necessary to the one who does his Sadhana right and rubs well with water while bathing and later with a towel.

3. One feels heavy when energy becomes stationary in the lower regions. It is an indication that more efforts are to be applied towards transmutation. He who transmutes right feels light and energetic.

4. One should listen within and do accordingly. It varies from person to person.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaskar Guruji (please allow the title despite the impersonal relationship),

1. When one thinks of recreational sex, should one think of the pain of childbirth, knowing that if sattvic sex brings that much pain for the woman, then how horrible would the results (also multifold like bringing a child onto the planet) be?

2. I used to do sadhana everyday from very early. Nowadays I am missing a lot of days due to just waking up and lazing out with technology or 'ravaging the fridge' instead of using those precious moments which I have been programmed to utilise but fail to do so. Please assist. The days I do sadhana, the intensity and duration are like a hut compared to the castle (although subject to regular attacks, some successful) which once stood.

3. In the morning, I am served a breakfast which is always rajasic/tamasic by my employee. I also serve all my employees the same. This makes me lazy even before the dining experience and even prior. But I seem to be tied to the same as it happens everyday, almost automatically.

4. I have stopped working consistently and spend most of my days as a failure. The short busts of activity yield great results but I just cant do it. I try very hard. I cant even exercise.

5. I cant even study.

6. I have nobody to talk to. My 'foster' family are very different people and dont have my views and life outlook (and my sadhana suffered when I was thrown in this jail). When will I have a support system again (which was taken suddenly from me about two years ago)? I just want a family so I can work rather than bumping blind from an empty home to a repulsive jail.

7. Please save me from this. I have everything I need but cant use it. I love sadhana and I pray for my failure to see me shine.

Please give me a comprehensive answer as I feel very lost and dont know when this loneliness, sloth, living around tamas-rajas predominant relatives (who are not even my obligatory family!) and complete failure will end. If I am going to fail anyway then its better to stop trying (although always failing).

Thank you for your assistance to all and may I remain on this path under your guidance but outside dependence on this medium.

Answer
1. Sexual activity for recreation is a poisonous sugar coated pill which begins with pleasure and ends in suffering, debility and disease in the long run. The body is an impermanent bag of flesh disguised attractively in youth, to reveal its reality in old age.

2. All aspirants go through lethargy and lack of motivation. However, 'Atma Sadhana' is a long battle, which is won by the exceptional Sadhaka, who perseveres relentlessly, despite impediments, drawing from the infinite source within. One has to always remember the goal, alert and vigilant always.

The suggested Sadhana, if done without deviation will clear all these obstacles. One should do it till the light within alone remains.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
When it is stated that GOD is impartial, why do some people come to know about brahmacharya early? Why does HIS grace is different for every person?

Answer
Who comes to know early or late? It is the individual Ego and its body and not the Atman (pure soul) within, which is the same for all. God is impartial, while the Ego (of people) isn't. Hence different people realize things differently, based on their past karma.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhanajay,

Some concerns about evening sadhana:

In the evening i plan a regimen of asana, nadi shodhana, (pranayama when introduced to these practices through lineage), followed by a session of silent sitting meditation.

I understand that after yogic practices and before sunset, food should be taken.

Sunset here is ~8PM.

How far in advance of sunset may yogic practices begin in order to reap the advantage of practicing at sunset & still leave room to eat. Is it good to retire to bed with the sun immediately following food?

What advice can you give about this evening time?

Thank you very much for all your past answers and I look forward to your response. :)

OM

Answer
1. As advanced as is necessary to complete the practice, as it gets fully dark.

2. Some time is to be given after food. One should not retire to bed immediately.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Respected Sir,
I just wanted to ask you these questions-
1.Why do we have to follow brahmcharya in thoughts also?

2. Swami vivekanada said that we have to follow "Chastity in thought ,word and deed always and in all conditions".What does he mean by "in all conditions"here?

ANSWER: "One becomes his thoughts". The individual system eventually becomes the products of one's thoughts. The body in turn follows the mind.

Hence one should think positive, wish good to all and maintain a cheerful and glad demeanor, filled with gratitude and love for the higher power.

A mind which resides in the sexual plane is soon enveloped and drowned in the ocean of sexuality. Hence Brahmacharya starts with pure thoughts and the body follows. There is no Brahmacharya without purity in thought, which then translates to word & deed.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Respected Sir,
Thank you for the above answer. I also wanted to ask the meaning of "in all conditions" in the following question-
Swami vivekanada said that we have to follow "Chastity in thought ,word and deed always and in all conditions".What does he mean by "in all conditions"here?

Answer
Whatever be the nature of one's external surroundings or mental state, and whatever be the result of such circumstances on the body or the mind, one should hold on to the Atman (self). This is all the meaning.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Sir,

I hope you are well. In my future job, I must arrive at work most likely at or around 6:30-6:45 am at the latest, and may even have to arrive at 5:45 am in extenuating circumstances. This means I most likely have to start eating breakfast around 5:50 am and traveling to work at 608 am at the most. It also ensures that I must sleep at or around 8:00-8:20 and not have time for anything else, maybe including exercise. I tried to wake up at 3:30 am to do yoga in the morning to make this possible, but I feel so exhausted in the morning that sometimes it is difficult to even move my bed or the door and doing the asanas at 3:30 am is exceedingly difficult despite all efforts to remind myself that lethargy does not belong to me. I am currently doing the follows schedule:

- Padmasana
- Vajrasana
- Ardha-Paschimothanasana
- Paschimothanasana
- Halasana
- Sarvangasana
- Dhanurasana
- Chakrasana

Then I perform TriBandha, Nadi Shodana, Pranayama and Meditation. This schedule is the one I follow and it takes at least 2 hours to finish everything especially now since meditation takes longer. I am sincerely wondering if it is possible to wake up at 4:00 am and if you would approve cutting some asanas or procedures from the above schedule so I may finish everything earlier and become capable of fulfilling worldly duties, and still retain the benefits of this practice. I don't know if you would approve of this or suggest it, but it is so difficult despite constant struggle to finish everything in two hours and not remain exhausted at the end of practice for the day's rigors. I must also brush my teeth well, as my neglect in doing so caused two cavities of mine, and this will also take time. Please advise.

Answer
Wake up by 4.00 and perform the Sadhana. It should take a little lesser than 2 hours. Keeping the mind focused only on Sadhana will reduce the time taken. The Asana-s do not take more than a few minutes.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

I have benefited much from your posts but I am an unworthy practitioner.

Once every few days or weeks or months, a wave of confusion/emotion/lust rides over me and I inevitably break my practice. I am young and poor. I do not know what to do. I do not know of my destiny. In anger and confusion, the mind turmoil becomes so great that I resort to spilling seed

1) What should be done? Will honest practice lead one to discover that which he is meant to do in this birth?

2) Due to circumstances I have very close relations with some of the most wealthy and powerful individuals in the world. Seeing their lifestyles makes me jealous, bitter, and anxious. It is a very negative feeling. No matter how ardently I remind myself of maya, do sadhana, ruminate on the false nature of flesh, etc, the sight of a luxurious building or a charming young girl causes the calm mind to immediately speed up and become instable. Why! I am ashamed at how little progress I have made and have no right to even call myself an aspiring brahmachari given how flimsy my grasp of the mind is.

Answer
These reactions are encountered by all Brahmachari-s during the initial years of practice. Later, after much advancement when Yogi has negated most past Samskara-s, the mind rests naturally in the self and delusion does not come into the picture.

Do your Sadhana with surrender to the Lord and hold on to the self through constant meditation. Things will stabilize.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Guru Dhananjay,

-Upon realization, does the enlightened one still maintain control over his body and sentience? If he were to touch fire or be pricked by a needle, would he not yell in pain and also have visceral anger toward the thing/person that caused the pain?

-Second, although such feelings may not be there when a sage remains in samadhi and loses awareness, when he comes back to the world, will he not feel pain and experience the negative emotions of ordinary men when he assumes a fake ego to interact with people of the world?

-Third, you mentioned bhoga vasanas and bandha vasanas. Would this explain why a self-realized soul like Swami Sivananda continued to relish food items even after reaching nirvikalpa samadhi?

-Fourth, I long for a proper guru. In this Kali yuga I can find no individual whom I can trust fully. I am not content looking at pictures of Ramana Bhagawan or Yukteswar Giri. I long for a guru in the flesh. But has our Kali Yuga, with all its greed and immorality, prevented the creation of true realized saints as we saw in the past?

-Fifth, many speak about Trailinga Swami's amazing abilities. In the Kali Yuga, since the invention of video, is it possible that the almighty prevented honest sages from gaining such siddhis? Why don't we see siddhis anymore? I feel there is some hyperbole in our great spiritual texts because otherwise, wouldn't we see people being able to fly/stay under the water for hours/shrink in size/etc?

Humble Regards
Shardul

Answer
1. The body and created mind of the realized being goes through similar sensations as those of the unrealized being, with the difference of "I am experiencing this" being absent. The realized being does not have a sense of ownership with the body or the created Ego. It is a mere witness to the occurring. The created mind of a realized being is temporarily associated with that body. The mind can be withdrawn whenever necessary.

2. The created Ego is like the shadow of a person. Present, yet absent.

3. The body & mind of a 'Jivanmukta' go through that which is dictated in 'Prarabdha', as in the case of any other person. If it is destined that the entity has to enjoy a certain kind of food, or experience a certain kind of pain, that will transpire. However, there is no effect of pleasure or pain as regards the one (Atman) within.

4. The Guru is within, HE is everywhere. HE may come in form or without. Time and place have no connection with HIM. If HE is destined to come in form, it occurs.

5. There is no value attached to a Siddhi by the realized being, it being another part of the illusion. All occurs or does not occur by the will of the higher power.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear sir,

1. In one of the previous posts, I read that one shouldn't take any breaks in sadhana for random indulgence may lead to problems and the practice may lose its effect.
I had to go outstation as a part of my work for 1.5 months, i tried my best but couldn't continue sadhana properly and in the last 25 days or so, i completely gave up sadhana altogether due to heavy work pressure which disrupted my entire schedule.
Now, I'm afraid that some harm may befall since there was a gap.
Will it be harmful to start?

2.from past few months, I'm having problem in thinking, I have a kind of blocked thinking, irrational thinking, sometime without any substance which was not the case 12-24 months back and as a consequence, my communication is also getting hampered and people hardly understand what I mean (this could be evident from the way this question is written) to say Could you please tell me what could be the problem?

I will take a firm resolve to never give up sadhana irrespective of situation. Is this much enough?

Om Tat Sat

Answer
Residence in the Atman (self) is the goal and the means used to attain the same is 'Sadhana'. He who holds on to the self is not deluded, whatever be the external factors. Hence do your Sadhana without fail and hold on to HIM. All will be well.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Respected Sir,

Can doing a job of Software professional ,being a hectic job,destroy brahmcharya?Actully there are opportunities for me to do a job as a software professional but I am confused that in a hectic job ,can my brahmcharya be destroyed and I might not forget to practice brahmcharya.

Answer
One will take up the job destined. No occupation troubles an honest aspirant, whose mind yearns for the Lord. Brahmacharya is within and not outside.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear sir,

Just before I had woken up at 5:30am, I had non-vivid sexual activity in my dream which resulted in the sexual energy about to be expelled however just as I had woken I stopped it mentally. No fluid was expelled.
This sort of thing has happened a few times in the past and although it does not feel like a break as I controlled myself from releasing, however it feels unfortunate to have these dreams.

I must do my best to control mental brahmacharya.

Answer
This can happen further to a cumulative build up of sexual thoughts in the waking state. One must work to keep the mind clean and fortify the same with regular Sadhana.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Dear Dhananjay,
As it has been said that service of jiva is service of shiva, your highly appreciable effort is indeed a contribution in the grand cosmic plan of shiva. I have gone through your past posts and found them immensely helpful for a sincere practitioner of brahmacharya and you are a true inspiration for such aspirants.please continue your effort and i pray to the almighty to impart you requisite strength and courage in your journey of self realisation. may the grace of god be upon you.

Though i have clarified most of my doubts but i am curious to know that is it safe for an aspirant of bramacharya to practice kapalbhati pranayam as it is supposed to increase the energy in the system which the aspirant might not be able to handle in a constructive way?

ANSWER: Different Pranayama-s benefit different people. One will eventually know what is good for him. There is no harm if done right, after having learned from one who is an adept.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Dhananjaya thanks for your reply. one more question what is the significance of hard bed for a practitioner of brahmacharya.

Answer
The tendency for lustful stimulation of the genital region is lesser on a harder surface. A hard sleeping surface helps maintain proper spinal posture, thereby helping the body to relax completely. One achieves deeper sleep and is more fresh further to the right spinal posture.

Also, sparse, hard and simple bedding helps remind the Brahmachari of the life of simplicity and frugality he has to follow, relinquishing attachment for the luxury of sense objects, in his quest for the self.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Dhanajay,
I was doing well for 10 days in a row with yogic sadhana & complete brahmacharya and then i had a nightfall. This may have allowed lust to creep in. I noticed today that I was very tired and weak but then after dwelling on wrong thoughts and a look from a certain woman, lust arose strongly and my tiredness went totally away.

How can I summon this magnitude of energy without activating lust? I don't want to lose my seed but the surges of energy/stimulation are very seductive. What's going on here?

Thank you!

Answer
After many years of honest and unbroken Sadhana, that state will come on its own. One should adopt the required mode of life and be patient in the path.There is no shortcut.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Dear Sir:

As of the past three days, I am constantly getting feelings of Laziness and Lethargy during the day. Despite the use of volition and will, I slept during the day for two hours yesterday and am getting similar feelings today. I could also barely sleep yesterday in the night because of sleep during the day. Why is this the case? Why is my body and mind becoming increasingly tamasic? Would you suggest a remedy? As always, I thank you for your guidance and help.

Answer

It can happen due to various reasons. Such bouts are experienced by all practitioners at some stage or the other. The remedy is to adhere to the suggested Yogic lifestyle with unbroken Sadhana. Then, the trouble goes away.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Respected Sir,

I have got a good very good job and I am tense that I might not lose my brahmcharya(mainly mental) in job.Sometimes I think that I should not do this job.Can you tell me -how can I keep up my brahmcharya in job?

Answer

There is no end to such worries, if given a seat. These are an offshoot of the Ego. Let go of attachment and do your Dharma right, keeping busy. Things will fall in place.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Hello Dhananjay sir, I hope you are doing good.

Here I am explaining my issue:-
1.5 months ago I learnt meditation from my nearby local yoga center. It is exactly same technique as you have suggested to focus on 'Trikuti' in your past answers. Even though, yet I am not able to meditate properly(concentration getting broken every few seconds) but I am experiencing some kind of bliss. It is a strange feeling. I am getting uneasy. I am not getting motivated to do studies. I am kind of becoming disinterested in doing anything. I am not able to concentrate properly in my studies which I am supposed to as my exams are near. Sp, To bring my consciousness level down I ultimately broke my continence of 12 days but still the same kind of feeling persists. Same thing happened almost 25 days ago and then also I broke my continence to get to normal state and then this worked as I felt relieved somehow but this time it didn't work.

To add, My morning sadhana consists of 3-4 rounds of surya namaskar, 2-3 asanas(as time permits), tri bandha, kapalbhati-2 mins, nadi shodhana-5 mins, pranayama - 6 rounds, then 15-20 mins meditation focusing on trikuti. In the evening I do 30 mins meditation and if time permits 5-15 mins trataka on candle flame. Due to my preparation for exams I kind of remain all alone throughout the day.

Please shed some light sir, how to cope up with these things as with this kind of feeling I won't be able to carry out my worldly duties.

Thank you very much

Answer
These oscillations of the mind occur in the initial years, when one moves from one extreme to another, on account of the weight of past Samskara-s. A diligent aspirant turns a blind eye to such and never breaks his Sadhana. He alone succeeds. Do your Dharma with a bright and cheerful mind and be positive. Things will get alright.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhananjay Sir,
I have been married for nearly 4 years now.I was following celibacy strictly but somehow started watching porn again.
Now I am not able to ejaculate during sex but i am able to ejaculate in full measure while watching pornography.
Mine marital relationship is geeing strained.Please help me out.

Answer
Porn indulgence destroys all faculties eventually. The wise do not take recourse to it. Stop the porn and do your Sadhana right. Things will resolve in a few months.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,
I have noticed that I get sexually oriented dreams when my menstrual cycle is about to begin. I get the dreams early in the morning, which wake me up. During the cycle, the sexual thoughts are more, and I find myself engaging these thoughts. I try hard to divert, but these thoughts are strong.
Why do I get these dreams (which trigger the thoughts) during the menstrual cycle. What could be done to improve the situation.

Thanks a lot.

Answer
There is a stronger physiological stimulus at the start of the menstrual cycle, when the body is preparing for fertilization. It is a normal occurrence. With constant Sadhana, one eventually goes beyond the body and the mind, following which these effects taper and eventually stop.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Respected sir,
Thank you very much for your guidance.i sometimes do worship and fast also.The problem is that after worshipping and fasting ,I think -when will I get the fruit?Will I get it or not?What should I do because I want to worship and keep fasts also but I also expect the fruit.Will iget the fruit of worship and fast?
Thank you

Answer
One should worship the Lord with no expectation, in the quest to realize the Atman (self) alone. Do your Sadhana and remain quiet. That which has to come will come.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Respected Sir,
I just want to ask that -if a person has two options- not doing a small adharma of other types but not practicing brahmcharya seriously or practicing brahmcharya stricktly even if he has to do small adharma
.Can you tell me which path a person should follow and why?

Answer
Brahmacharya, which is residing in one's self is the greatest Dharma. None supersede it. Through its right practice, all other problems will eventually get dissolved.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Respected Sir,
People say if we practice brahmcharya for atleast 12 years or maybe more than that then we get moksha.What about the other karmas we have done maybe somewhat bad or good in this life even if we are doing brahmcharya practice stricktly in this life.So doesn't it mean that we have to take next birth to get the rewards of the deeds we have done even if we are practicing brahmcharya stricktly.

Answer
To whom is life and death? To whom is karma? Who are you? Are you the one who experiences these? One is the eternal Atman (self) who has no birth or death and who is unaffected by karma. It is the Ego and the body which are limited by birth, death or karma. He who practices Brahmacharya in essence realizes this ultimate truth and resides as the Atman, unaffected by the unreal. Hence let go of pondering on the illusion and work to remain as the self.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)
Question

Dear Sir,

I am aiming for complete surrender, unquestionable purity in mind and body, unbreakable. I fall short of this many many times and I feel ashamed and childish now as it feels immensely insane giving up what I receive from life in a state of brahmacharya.
It's a repeating of events and it goes like this, I swear of all hindrances and remain so for weeks not even months get bored and end up rebeling with silly alcohol or ciggarette (I feel I have conquered these although my little relapses say otherwise) I know these substances are pointless and only lead to destruction and lowliness yet i still get attracted to the flame like the moth after lowly thoughts get a hold.
I feel stress that I feel this is a mighty! test living in England with all its material wealth and easily accessible negative substances and women everywhere!
I quite frankly feel that is it even possible for me to attain brahmacharya living here working a job that leads to money which leads to property which leads to more desires, I see the monks practicing martial arts on TV and feel envious that these monks are living a well discipline life with the benefit of brotherly support in remote area. I'm Fed up of being surrounded by hedonists.
I have not experienced great wealth in this lifetime yet it is great compared to 3rd world. Do I have to experience millionaire lifestyle to renounce it all or can I just go somewhere that is simple and lovable?

Answer
All aspirants go through failure en route. It is a process that is overcome when consistent and honest Sadhana vacates the seeds of 'Agnyana' (ignorance). One has to take the path which is laid for him in destiny and work his way up. It is not that a monk finds it easy or that the man of the world has it tough. The fight is within and not outside.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi iam a medical student & have completed my MBBS, i have suffered a lot and have been subjected to a lot of stress that has got me many ailments like thyroid and loss of much of my scalp hair and lipomas all over my body with the evil habit of masturbation for a period of 7 years. I have discovered the habit spontaneously by my self but i have read in many of the articels of the MANY renowned sexologists in news papers and on TV programmes that masturabting daily is a normal thing and is good for health on listening to those my habit worsened.i have controlled it to a greater extent by now but still i not in a position to give up the habit completely due to porn compulsion my mind deceives me in some or other way after abstaining for a span of 2 months and moreover the habit of porn compulsion is not leaving me, it is happening since the last 2 years i have attempted my post graduate medical entrance examinations two times by now and failed hopelessly and im going to fail in the third attempt even. i know the very reason behind my failure but still could not manage to give up the habit can you please give some advice to help me with the same, i have suffered from lot of stress ihave read some where that once the brain has lost its capabilities it is very difficult to restore them furthur on net i have read that with the chronic stress hippocampal lobe the mainseat memory conversion from short term to long term also suffers insult and gets shrinked. Swami vivekananda said with the observance of strict brahmacharya (chastity in thought word and deed) all the learning can mastered with in a very short time one aquires an un failing memory of what one hears or knows but once what does this mean exactly and also i could not understand what this once mean in the end mean. i have been reminding myself of the thing for so long but could not get an exact meaning of this. Does it apply only to those students with good attittude and moral life from very beginning with moderation in the habit of breaking celibacy if at all one has been with it or does it apply to severely self abused as well l have read in one of your answers your saying "when a life of abrahmacharya has been indulged in for decades and millions of past lifes is it not unreasonable to expect speedy results in a few days or months" but i have seen few of my friends who are in habit of breaking celibacy 2 or 3 times per week succeding in exam. but my health status and mental faculties are far lower than them, im having very poor memory i have experienced this on many instances. can you have any any suggestions to help me to give up the habit-can i get into my PG in this life, im getting depressed & mentally imbalanced, some times thoghts of sucide haunts me its because of my inability to give up the habit but i refrain those thoughts saying lust will haunt even in the next birth as well as said by swami sivananda i have also thoughs to go and take up sannyasa and settle in GOMUKH in himalayas with out telling my family members and leaving them for the whole of this life in accordnace with the taking up of life long celibacy before 32 for self realisation (goal of life as read in practise of brahmacharya by sivananda) which i think i can never do it if i attempt to do it residing in this material world with these many temptations. how to clean my mind of the lustful thoghts the stimulus some how comes to me in the form of lust exciting images from newspaper or on smartphone news or ads while surfing the net.ihave gone to a psychiatrist also he gave some tablets and not at all taken any pain to listen to my problem completely. Please help me in giving up the habit and help me succed

Answer

1. By the power gained from transmutation of Veerya (vital fluid) over a long time, one develops the ability to understand and remember things explained to him, immediately. One with such perception is called 'Ekachandagrahi'.

2. One's present state is the result of his past karma. Whether he goes to the Himalayas or to the Antarctic, the Samskara-s do not lessen. The method to dissolve them is through constant Atma Sadhana to realize the self. He who tries to run away accomplishes nothing, for his Samskara-s accompany him to wherever he goes. Hence take up the required efforts, joyfully accepting the circumstances around and fight like a warrior. This is the meaning of the war in 'Mahabharata'. It is the internal fight.

Go through each and every past answer and apply the suggested Sadhana committedly. In due course, things will fall in place. May the Lord bless all.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Is it common to notice an increase in rage after some months of brahmacharya? What can I do to prevent these rage attacks that burn inside of me like fire itself?

Answer

The Ego tries to rebel in various ways, anger being one. Count to twenty, take deep breaths and take a walk. With Sadhana, anger eventually tapers away.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Respected Sir,

I want to know -

-If the brahmcharya not followed in the thouhghts,is that mean that brahmcharya is broken?

- The other thing I want to know that should we follow complete chastity the entire life is we wish to go to heaven?
Please give answer to both of my questions separately.

Answer
1. Brahmacharya is to be followed in thought, word & deed. A break in thoughts will soon culminate into a physical break.

2. When the expulsion of 'Rethas' (semen) is limited to procreation, one will have the abundant pranic energy required to attain 'Nirvikalpa Samadhi', where one resides in the self as the self and thereby burns the past karma-s blocking 'Mukti' (liberation). Hence a life of Brahmacharya is to be taken up at the earliest and made default.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Respected Sir,
I want to know that after death is it that the soul takes whatever sanskaars we have in this life like good karmas,brahmcharya etc to the next life ?
Suppose I do good karmas,follow brahmchrya in this entire life then in my next birth ,my soul will carry good karma sanskaar and brahmcharya sanskaar in the next life after death?

Answer
1. Yes, the embodied soul carries with it the karma-s accumulated through its actions, which then dictate its next birth.

2. One should perform good deeds without expectation, selflessly, without the 'I-ness'. Else, one is reborn to enjoy the merit and denied liberation.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

1. question:

I am practising brahmacharya for 7 months now and progress is steady. I practise a healthy Lifestyle with meditation in the morning and evening, doing asanas daily and I pay attention of what I am eating. But occasionally due to familiy reunion or other circumstances I still eat meat (once a month I would say). Afterwards I feel that my energies are in a bit of turmoil and I have to pay "extra" attention of where my focus goes.. but I do not fail in brahmacharya because I apply my willpower.. but still I have doubts as to what is (and if there even is)the damage done by eating meat from time to time...?

2. question:

After a wet dream I almost always feel as if my energies are able to penetrate a little higher in my system... like my chakras are getting purified. There is a little bit of turmoil in my Emotion/energy for 2-3 days but it seems as if there is a clearing in my energetic system trough these wet dreams.. is this possible or there other reasons for this?

Thank you very much.. you're expertise is very much needed in this day and age..

Answer
1. It is preferable to shun meat in the initial years as the past Vasana-s are still strong, making one prone to a fall. After the Yogi has burnt much of these through many years of meditation, food of any kind, taken moderately does not cause trouble.

2. Energy which has not been transmuted, which is in stagnation, causing discomfort is spent in a wet dream. Hence one should strive to transmute completely and prevent wet dreams, for all loss of vital energy is to be completely annihilated in due course.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Swamiji Namaskar,

1). I want to use langot to maintain complete brahmacharya. I m 29 and unmarried but next year planning to marry. Previously i never maintain Brahmacharya and my semen keeps falling, but now i want to reten semen. Swamiji, if i use langot then can i able to become father ?
2). Also, plz guide how much hours in a day should i wear langot ?
3). While going to sleep at night, should i remove langot ?

Kindly answer my all three question as it of uttermost importance to me.

Answer
1. Using the 'Langot' improves health and not the reverse. It promotes fertility and sexual health, along with aiding Brahmacharya. It does not in any way affect one from fatherhood.

2. It is to be worn during the day and removed at night before retiring to bed.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Respected sir,
Is there any lok where we live without suffereing ,not even very very mild suffering,just happiness only.If yes,then what should we do to enter in that lok?
.

Answer
One has to transcend all the Loka-s (worlds), which are only domains of the mind and reside in the Atman (self). There it is eternal bliss - permanent, irreversible and infinite. It is Mukti (liberation). All other places are temporary and false.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
They say it takes 12 years to become Urdhvareta. If one has a wet dream, does one have to start all over this 12 year process? Also, I had a dream where I was engaged sexually in the dream and almost had an orgasm but was able to wake up before it happened even though I still noticed a slight loss of energy/coherence from this experience. Is that considered a break? I am noticing how powerful thoughts are.

Answer
The occasional wet dream which occurs in sleep involuntarily does not constitute a break. However, an honest aspirant has to hold Brahmacharya in thought, word & deed while awake, to prevent and eventually overcome wet dreams, for they result in a loss of Prana (vital force).

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Respected Sir,
IS it true that after 12 years of unbroken brahmcharya ,we realize God ? Can we see God face-to-face also after 12 years of self-realization?

Can we get moksha also in this life after we get self-realization?

Answer
The twelve year period is a general pointer towards the goal of the human birth namely 'Moksha'. Periods vary based on one's past karma and the will of the Almighty. There need not however be any doubt that unbroken Brahmacharya carried out with the aim of realizing the Atman (self) eventually delivers one into liberation.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi, can someone benefit from brahamchari life at least at the mind level if he has no particular religion? If yes then why to be very religious? I'm agnostic, not atheist, in the sense that I dont know if there is a god or not. Still I'm not all against religion there is a use to religion, it can help to organize good governance if the religion is powerful enough to put society in order, decrease crime rates and rapes, establish concord and rule of law. It is in that sense I feel a religion is important for a society not much for their beliefs.

Answer
1. Religion is a way of life which eventually leads one to realize his or her self.

2. 'Brahmacharya', is residence in the self which is the substance of all religions.

Hence he who practices true Brahmacharya follows true religion and is beyond all religions. It is residence in the truth, where the purpose of all religions ends.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)
Question

Dear Dhananjay ,

I must bring to you a series of problems which have bothered me like a dog's tail, never straightening out.

Thanks to the path shown by Him, I embarked on the celibacy path a few times. Most recently, I had my longest duration at roughly 2 months and unfortunately gave into visual and physical stimulation.

My problem is a physical one. For the last many years (7 or so and I am currently 23) I have had severe bowel issues. Sometimes there will be IBS, having to go to the restroom immediately upon eating. At other times there will be incomplete evacuation and a feeling of total tightness and gas in the bowel region. When stool is passed, it is dry and hard and requires severe strain and it comes out in small sharp fragments which hurt.

Sadhana cannot be conducted in peace when the body is in such fragile shape. I cannot have milk in the morning as it triggers the bowels. Almost all foods cause havoc except for very few Sattvic entities.

An ayurvedic practitioner recently told me that there was too much heat in my upper body area and that the stools may have been dry due to my practice of Tribandha. Could this be possible? She prescribed the Ayurvedic herb Haritaki and I have been taking for a few days now. My problem has decreased slightly but has not gone away.

I do not joke here Sir-Right now, I want neither fame nor fortune nor accomplishment but simply a rigorous, healthy, digestive system with powerful jataragni that works properly. The lack of this prevents my sadhana, my peace, my japa, and fills the find with anxiety. As the anxiety builds, the mind becomes instable and soon, a break occurs. I do not want to lose brahmacharya again. Without proper digestion, performing pranayama hurts in the morning. I cannot do Tribandha well. The mind cannot be turned inward to the almighty.

Could I be doing something wrong with Tribandha? Would you recommend herbs? The problem did not abate during my 2 months of celibacy.

I fall at your feet. I will never be able to move one inch in my life if my health and digestive situation isn't resolved. I am a natural "Vata" type and my constitution is frail and sensitive. I wish He had given me more natural strength, digestive power, etc. but who am I to question his design and his plans for me?

On an unrelated note, as my practice has continued, one very unpleasant vasana has emerged. A desire to see people taken advantage of sexually and forced into such activities is clouding the mind. It is truly disgusting and I do not know where it came from, but the mind races when this vasana pops up. Kindly suggest how to resolve.

A student humbly waiting to follow and sincerely apply your advice,
Parth

Answer
Take moderate amounts of foods agreeable to the system and persist in proper practice of Brahmacharya in thought, word & deed with the requisite Sadhana described in past answers. Though initially difficult, practice stabilizes to the one whose yearning for the Lord is genuine. The issue on hand, which is karmic will slowly taper and vacate.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello sir. I am trying to practice serious celibacy from past one and half year. Two years back I was addicted of chronic masturbation habit. But somehow I got influenced with power of celibacy thought internet and various books so I started practising it pretty seriously and I could hold myself for continuous 7 months. I was following strict physical celibacy but I would still think about romantic things and a few times I would also watch porn. I broke down when I failed after 7 months but I started again with full will power but alas again I masturbated after two months, I did not give up and started again and now I again failed after three months. Later I realised I must practice full mental celibacy too, so past two months back I started again with absolute will power and complete mental abstinence and I was on the good way. I had also started doing Pranayama(30 Mins) and Meditation(10-15 mins) every day for 2 months. But yesterday something happened to me and I couldn't control myself and watched porn and read esoteric stories again and see now I have masturbated twice within past 12 Hours. This time I'm really feeling disappointed, not understanding what to do? Loosing my self esteem and confidence that I have had earned through practice of months.

I had also stopped watching television and any external thing that could trigger such thoughts but suddenly I felt extremely high urge to cares myself :'(and I am failed now. Please help me from loosing.

Answer
Sexual energy cannot be suppressed. It is to be transmuted through the complete set of Yogic Sadhana described in past answers, whereupon it redirects itself as 'Atma Shakti' (Atmic power). With such Sadhana and a lifestyle applied consistently, one should practice Brahmacharya in thought, word & deed. Then, the practice slowly stabilizes after years of efforts.

Go through each and every past answer, absorb the essence and apply with devotion to the Lord. Things come right only in case of that Sadhaka, who strives with childlike devotion and belief.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir,

I recently asked you about IBS and the interruption this has on my sadhana. Rather, it is not just IBS but severe drying of the intestines, irregular bowels, etc.

I am trying my best but it is impossible to do bandhas, for instance when there is so much pain.

1) Please correct me here. Trikala bandha is giving me much pain. In phase 1, I inhale and lift the diaphragm while leaving sphincter anal muscles relaxed. In phase two, I exhale and suck in the stomach upward toward the chest. In phase 3, I inhale and lock down the chin when lungs are full. Is this correct?

2) Much heat generates in the body after trikala bandha, which dries stool in my case. How is one to reduce/sublimate?

3) Are oil baths advisable for the brahmachari? As one with frail vata constitution, I don't want to use anything that reduces my digestive fire as digestion is already weak.

4) After my break in brahmacharya, I felt that the almighty was guiding me this time specifically. You know why? Because I felt immense pain in the prostate and irritation in my intestines like I had never seen before. Could this be a clear sign from Him?

5) Assuming one does regular pranayama, exercise, meditation, and intellectual work, will this be enough for sublimation? Or is tribandha required in addition?

Thank you kindly
Parth

Answer
1. For now, perform Sadhana minus the 'Bandha-s'. They will come in later.

2. http://en.allexperts.com/q/Celibacy-Abstinence-3564/2011/12/thribandha-khechari-

They are however to be properly learnt in person from an adept.

3. Soak the head in coconut or olive oil overnight and wash away in the morning with 'Shikakai' (soapnut powder) once a week on a Saturday. This will reduce body heat.

Do the suggested Sadhana in total, honestly, without fail. All the issues will get addressed in due course.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello sir,
I am following brahmcharya in thought,word,deed for the past two years completely and I think I have passed the test till now.The problem is that even after practing it for the last 2 years ,I am getting lot of problems in life.Can the brahmcharya not help me to stop my problems?What should I do to stop my problems?
The other thing that I note that some people say that the practice of brahmcharya is not easy and what I have noticed for myself is that its easy.I am not even doing the yoga practices even to keep up the brahmcharya.Why is it so?
The other thing I want to ask what is the proof that God exists?
The other thing I want to ask is-Are the scriptures like Mahabharata,Gita etc. true or imagined?
Please answer my questions separately in points.

Answer
1. Be patient and persevere in the practice relentlessly. One's current existence is the result of past karma dating back to hundreds of years.

2. Who is God? first realize this. The answer will then be known.

3. The scriptures are as true or false as oneself.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Sir,
I have seen in many books that its written that after chanting "om namah shivaye" mantra ,our sins are destroyed.So is it that-if a person who is not following brahmcharya dharma and chanting the "om namah shivaye" mantra,his sin of not following brahmcharya gets destroyed?
Is chanting "om namah shivaye" mantra a spiritual practice?
Please answer these questions in points.

Answer
Through constant chanting of the name of the Lord, one's mind gradually de-links from the Ego, resulting in 'Bhakti' (devotion) and trust in the Almighty. This eventually takes one closer to the Atman (self). That itself results in Brahmacharya. Where then is the question of not following 'Brahmacharya'? Isn't proximity to the Lord itself Brahmacharya?

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

Is it accurate to say that God places increasingly challenging tests in our path in order to measure and cultivate our spiritual growth? It certainly seems that way in my life.

Answer
Man is a student in the world classroom, where the ultimate truth is taught through lessons of experience, by the teacher God. Just as in formal education, one goes through tests and exams periodically. He who remains as the self passes all exams and graduates into irreversible Enlightenment. There, there is no suffering but infinite bliss alone. Beyond the illusions of the body, mind and the Ego, one becomes the infinite.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
As per the logic posted by you in this link earlier http://en.allexperts.comhttp://en.allexperts.com/q/Celibacy-Abstinence-3564/2012
Wearing tight fitting boxer trunks also should serve the same purpose, if one is not able get or use a kaupin due to some other reasons.
What do you say?

Answer
The Kaupin works on an entirely different principle. A boxer will not give that effect. The difference will be known after wearing the Kaupin for a few months.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Namaskar Dhananjayji,

All of us are running after money,it wastes a lot of precious time in accumulating as much as possile wealth.Considering we aim for pious,yogic and simple life, will you guide us how much we should aspire for in modern circumstances.what proportion of money should we save to not worry of future.i know ans will vary from person to person but i am asking from perspective of average small town middle income family i.e. 3 lakhs to 5 lakhs p.a.

Answer

All one needs to do is follow the occupation which naturally comes on account of one's 'Prarabdha karma' and devote the required time to the practice of 'Atma Sadhana'. Such a one is content with what comes through his efforts and unattached to wealth. The rest, HE takes care.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Dear Dhananjay,

Could you please explain the meaning of 'Savikalpa Samadhi' and 'Nirvikalpi Samadhi'? What are they and what are the differences between the two?

I'm familiair with Buddhist texts, there they talk about 4 rupa jhana's and four arupa jhana's. Are there maybe (as far as you know) correspondences between these states and savikalpa- and nirvikalpa samadhi?

Thank you,

Gideon

Answer

In 'Savikalpa' or 'Sabija Samadhi', the 'Pratyaya' (seed of meditation) exists. Hence the I-ness (Ego) or experiencer also exists.

In 'Nirvikalpa' or 'Nirbija Samadhi', the knower, known and knowing all merge. So there is no seed or object. Hence there is no I-ness. Pure consciousness alone. Reality.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Dear Sir,

I am at a desperate crossroads at the moment and without the help of the almighty, I am almost certain to plunge into depression. I am currently battling near-suicidal thoughts. Please advise me and I will not violate an inch from your words. I am growing up as a young man in the West. No one in my family would understand my desire for Sadhana (my mother is an innocent housewife; my father's side of the family is highly lustful and I hate even associating with them).

I deeply apologize for the long message but I implore your advice. I have decided to live in semi-seclusion and quit my job for a period of 3 months and I would like to solicit your teachings before continuing on this path.

1) The almighty is the one who guides all actions. He, however, seems determined to not let me succeed in my celibacy practice. I think this may be due to my past karma (I had a vision of having been a prostitute in my previous life. The prostitute turned to a life of yoga late in life, but alas it was not enough to wipe out the karma accrued and thus I took this birth).

The problem-At roughly 3 weeks to one month of starting practice, some terrible event destroys practice. One time it was a massive nocturnal emission. Another time, I always sleep on my back but something in my dream forced me to roll over and the pressure caused an emission.

So much energy is spent into maintaining practice and I feel weak and helpless when HE decides to take it away heartlessly. Please advise.

2) My life is thoroughly ruined due to my weak digestion. I cannot eat anything but rice, cooked pasta, made mild without spices. Even slightly larger quantities of food or mildly flavored food cause intestinal havoc-The stool is malformed, is constipated to the point of pain, or remains mushy and does not come out. Without clean bowels, I have no peace of mind. Kindly advise medicines, yogic postures, or anything else that may help.

3) I am somewhat disgusted to say that I know of a friend who felt a sexual pull/attraction to his first cousin. Karmically, why does the almighty pose such an unfavorable situation to certain people and what are the karmic repercussions of incest? I wish to say the right thing to him as he has put in trust in me and confided this.

4) I realize that hankering after the fruits of brahmacharya is not advisable and only reaching the Supreme should be the ultimate goal. For the sake of this weak mind and novice Jiva, please tell me if one's overall health (digestion) and cognitive power/memory increase further to the practice. If these are present, I promise to use these powers for good-but I would really like to know roughly how long it may take before a few benefits are seen. I have heard, for instance, of yogis who after brahmacharya started remembering memories they forgot. I also want to accrue a level of wealth so I do not have to WORRY about money (key difference! I do not money to splurge. I want money for peace of mind to meet bodily needs and take care of my family).

5) When Swami Vivekananda spoke of the Medha Nadi, was he speaking specifically of the power of eidetic/photographic memory or was he speaking generally of brahmacharya's benefits? Swami Vivekananda was naturally bright and may have had such a strong cognitive capability from birth, from my reading of the great Swami's works.

6) My most important question to you is this. Due to my weak digestion, ill health, lack of energy, and lack of peaceful surroundings for sadhana, I have decided to take 3 months off to live separately from my parents. I plan to only meditate during this time and only work on a few constructive activities for my personal growth. I quit my job in New York because the stress and tumult wreaked havoc on me. It was like what Raja Bhatrihari said: I let go of almost all material attachments, yet this cursed mind wandered and gazed at every pretty woman on the street.

7) What is the correct way to handle a bout of lust when it comes up? Cognitively, I think about the false nature of the flesh and then at home, I shift the mind to the almighty. But this cognitive process of forcing oneself to think about the false nature of the flesh, to exercise willpower, etc. drains the mind of energy tremendously. Am I doing the right thing?

I will follow your words to a tee. Please give me a chance, guru, and I will not fail once more in my quest.

Samuel

Answer
This internal war is the war of Kurukshetra in the Mahabharata, which the diligent aspirant wins through Sadhana and surrender to the Lord. An exceptional Sadhaka perseveres with unwavering tenacity, following which the obstacles fragment and dissolve with time.

Do the suggested Sadhana with childlike devotion to the Lord. Things will fall in place and the answers will reveal.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Sir,

hope you are doing well. I need your opinion. I am 1 month left until full year of celibacy. During that time I have been meditating twice a day for 10 – 15 min without skipping much sessions, exercising, eating somewhat clean and in general avoiding intoxicants outside of coffee. My mental celibacy is as strong as physical. Seemingly I try my best but lately I ve been experiencing severe sadness, almost depression alike, 0 confidence, apathy, weakness and all sorts of emotional turmoil that is affecting my daily life. No Fap crowd call it ”flatlines” but I am almost one year in it and at that point I’d hope it would of passed already. I am contemplating ”release” but I don’t want to make rushed decision so I need your advice, pep talk, motivation or whatever one wants to call it.

Is it normal part of the path or it’s a clear sign I am over done it? What should I do? If I release I am sure this issue would come up again after next time I’d go long enough so I am thinking perhaps regular cycle where release once it gets unbearable. Or am I doing mistake and should persevere.

I would be very thankful for your insights since I a close on the verge.

Answer
It is normal for the Sadhaka to go through oscillations of the mind and body, depending on the nature of his past karma. Though it may appear for a few years that no progress is being made, large blocks of karma would be gradually fragmenting and dissolving under proper Sadhana within. It is a battle all encounter. There is however no cause of worry as regards the one who surrenders to the higher power and perseveres unfailingly. Light eventually comes at the end of the tunnel.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Pranam Dhananjay Ji,

I have read all of your questions and answers on allexperts, probably all of them which were relevant to me.

I have been practicing Brahmacharya/celibacy from last 4 and half months.

I didn't know anything about Brahmacharya/celibacy.

I came to know about it after reading a few books written by swami vivekananda ji. I started listening to mantras like gayatri mantra, maha mrityunjaya mantra and music by sound of isha. I have also attended 3 days Inner enginnering course conducted by Sadhguru in Mumbai 2 years back. I practice shambhavi mahamudra and meditation by concentrating on my breath.

After a few days before I began practicing Brahmacharya/celibacy, I got vertigo for a few months.

I even get vibrations passing through my hands sometimes.

Is this normal? Can you please guide me.

Answer
It is normal to experience varying degrees of sensations and experiences during the initial years of practice. The body and mind go through changes for the better as past karma slowly gets vacated through longer and longer periods of Brahmacharya. This can sometimes manifest as some illness. As long as the correct methods of Yoga Sadhana (described in detail, in past answers) are adhered to, one has no worry. Things will eventually stabilize with time.

Go through all past answers slowly and apply the essence. Everything comes out right as regards the honest Sadhaka, who surrender to the higher power.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Does having sex with prostitudes create the astral tube connecting him and her and will bring him bad "energy" from her life? If so does it really take 12 years for these tubes to dissolve? Is there a way to break these tubes faster?

Thank you for your time.

Answer
Sexual contact is to be limited with one's lawfully wedded spouse, where it has meaning and substance. Any deviation results in unwanted consequences.

Those desiring the bliss of the self and self-realization limit even such contact for progeny and not more.

The astral shield of sex workers is highly contaminated with unwanted karma and sorrow, as a result of clandestine sexual activity with multiple people. He who makes contact partakes in this contamination and becomes the same.

It cannot be said as to how long it takes for one to overcome such karma, which is dense. There is right conduct and wrong conduct. The wise man takes the right path alone.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Om Tat Sat,

If ashwagandha/shilajit, taken in medicinal doses detrimental to Brahmacharya/self-realisation?
Does it make brahmacharya difficult to practice?
I have heard that they enhance ojas in the system.
Btw., I take ashwgandha due to health issues in the past.However, now that issues doesn't seem to bother.
Should I stop ashwgandha and shilajit? (I'am 22 y.o). I will do as you say.Please guide me.

Sincerely aspiring your advice on this

Om Tat Sat

Answer
It is not necessary for the Brahmachari to take recourse to such external supplements, for it leads to dependency. A balanced and wholesome diet suffices. The human body has an ability to be self sufficient under the right food and lifestyle and Brahmacharya brings out this ability.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir,

Please advise me on the issue of dietary challenges.

I have a highly sensitive stomach, incapable of digesting milk products and oil/fat. Eating these substances leads to sticky, greasy stool, constipation, lack of peace, and total hampering of sadhana.

As such, being a vegetarian who cannot eat milk, eggs, or butter, kindly advise how I should eat to make up for this.

In addition, one quick query: I would like to combat my digestive issues and build the jataragni so it can digest anything. Will brahmacharya eventually allow me to do this, or is it acceptable to try remedies such as digestive enzymes, alkaline water (to replace nutrients lost from years of foolish self abuse and ejaculation), etc?

Please do tell me, the pain and disturbance to peace of mind are monumental when the intestinal and digestive system is thrown out of order.

Answer
1. For now, take food which the system accepts and is comfortable with.

2. Unbroken Brahmacharya with meditation will eventually restore 'Jatharagni' (digestive fire) without doubt. Remedies if resorted to should be natural and not artificial.

3. If the Sadhana is genuine with surrender to the Almighty, the path to be taken will gradually come in place by itself.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Pranam Dhanajay ji,

Hope you are doing great.

This is my second question on allexperts.

My question is regarding sore throat and fever in context with brahmacharaya. I know these two topics have no relation. But, I still have a question.

Everybody gets a sore throat and then most of the time fever for a few days or weeks. It depends on person to person.

After following brahmacharya for more than 4 and a half month I feel more energetic.

I have been studying my habit pattern, thought pattern and as well as about my health state.

Before brahmacharya whenever I use to get sore throat, I use to get fever all the time for a few days. But, now its not the same. In the last 4 months I have had 3 sore throat and not even once I got any fever. Instead of getting fever my body would make me to spit a small amount throat mucus out of my mouth and at the end of the day there will be no sore throat. This has happened around 4 times. This never happened before I began practicing brahmacharya.

I don't know if i am exaggerating about it. Can you please shed some limelight on this? How does this happen?

Answer
Immunity and vitality within gradually increase further to peventing the loss of vital energy. The 'Sukshma Sharira' or auric field gets strengthened, leading to better health and well being

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I'm 20 years old and was in the brahmacharya path from 2015's july to 2016's february living in a Hare Krishna temple as a monk and enjoying this amazing way of life.
Unfortunately, in february I ended up leaving the temple because of bad association with ex-devotees when I was distributing books in the streets and was also tempted by an ex girlfriend some days before leaving the temple.
I left the temple by free will, had sex with that woman without ejaculation for some months which ended up leading me to become depressive as a toy in the hands of Maya. After some months I moved to my parent's apartment in a different city then, where I've been living since the end of may. Here I knew another woman in july which I involved myself with sexually without ejaculation until august's 23 when I finally lost my semen and felt the urgency of going back to brahmacharya's path immediately.

My perceptions then are:

Brahmacharya can really do miracles in one's life and is a gift given by the LORD to the most fortunate souls on earth.
Sex relations without ejaculation kept for many months end up harming the body, specially the prostate where I felt a lot of pain, and by far has not the same benefits as absolute brahmacharya.
To succed in brahmacharya one must keep himself in the sattva-guna platform.
One should keep himself away from individuals who criticize saintly people.
A voluntary break in brahmacharya after many months causes tons of troubles in one's path.

So, here I am again in my 17th day of brahmacharya, trying to collect the dust from the divine feet of the mahatmas and figure out what I'm going to do with my life from now on.

Please Dhananjay, give me some inspiration and blessings to go back to this divine path.

Your servant.

Answer
माकुरु धनजन योव्वन गर्वम्
हरति निमेशात् कालात्सर्वम् |
मायामयमिदं अखिलं हित्वाम्
ब्रह्मपदं त्वम् प्रविश विदित्वाम् ||

Do not revel or take pride in wealth, people (relationships) or the strength of youth.
All these disappear and become non-existent with time.
This whole world is nothing but 'Maya' (an unreal illusion).
Knowing it to be such, realize the Supreme Almighty and be blessed.

-- Verse 11, 'Bhajagovindam' - by Shri. AdiShankaracharya

One unknowingly takes strength and pride from his wealth, the people surrounding him (relationships) or the strength of youth, thinking all these will make his life complete and are sources of happiness. However, with the ravages of time, the wealthy man is struck by misfortune and turns a pauper. Friends and relatives turn into foes and become unhelpful. Youth is soon replaced by disease, debility and old age. This world is 'Mayamayam' (filled with Maya or the unreal). None of these were real in the first place and hence cannot give one eternal happiness. Through experience, one should realize the same and focus his energies towards realization of the Supreme, of which he is an integral part.

The road to 'Atmavidya' (residence in the self - which alone gives eternal bliss), is strewn with impediments and thorns in the form of these unreal world illusions. The wise man is ever alert and vigilant in holding himself to the path. The ways of Maya are tricky and cunning. However, he who surrenders to the Lord by giving up his Ego, who performs devoted Sadhana, asking nothing but self-realization alone, crosses this 'Samsara Sagara' (Ocean of trans-migratory existence) using the raft called Brahmacharya.

Let go of the incidents but do not forget the lessons they taught. Do the suggested Atma Sadhana with complete honesty and surrender to the Lord. Things will get back on track by HIS grace.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Dhananjay ji,

Thank you for answering all of my questions.

A few days back I got urine infection and it burns a lot when I pass the urine and I am not able to control the pressure of my urine.

FYI I have consulted my doctor regarding urine infection. Doctor has advised a few medicines and cital tonic.

My question to you is, is this something related to me being on this route or just because of some infection in my body.

Also, I have noticed sensations around my upper left back.

Please explain why these sensations are happening around my upper back.

Regards

Answer
1. It is important to practice proper transmutation and not merely let the vital force stagnate. The complete Yoga Sadhana with required physical, mental activity in real life helps one achieve the same.

Sometimes, past karma manifests as some form of illness in the path. Take the required medical efforts and continue with the practice. Eventually, all issues are resolved.

2. Pranic movements can cause sensations. One should ignore them and focus on Sadhana to realize the self alone.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Mr. Dhananjay,

Thank you for your wonderful service. Words cannot convey my gratitude for the information you are providing.

I have been trying to follow your Sadhana guidelines and have few questions. Could you please clarify them? Please.

1. Can we do bathing after the sadhana or should it have to happen before? (Sorry for this silly question - I live in an old apartment and pipelines make lot of sounds, I am trying to avoid disturbing other tenants).

2. I am following your guidelines on Bandhas. When doing them, I am doing 3 Bandhas X 10

Sequence for each Bandha X 5 Seconds for each sequence. Is it appropriate?

3. After Bandhas and Nadi Sodhana, I have started doing Pranayama as you explained in past posts. I was doing Art Of Living's Sudharshan Kriya in the past. Can I continue to do SK?
If so, should it be done after Pranayama? Please clarify.

Thank you again. God bless you and your family.

With regards,
Gary

Answer
1. One can bathe after completing the Yoga Sadhana.

2. Each of the 3 'Bandha-s' are to be performed 3 times. The duration of 'Kumbhaka' (Holding of breath) for each should be within 3 seconds.

3. It is preferable to hold on to one method of practice.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaskar Sir,

1) Business is extremely stressful in many respects. Establishment of enterprise and overseeing operations can cause innumerable mental challenges. What should be the manner of business management:
a) Should one set a fixed time to the same eg. From 9-5 and thus prevent it from becoming a primary driver in life?
b) Should one expand with force and vigour or settle for controlling income to the limit required for comfortable sustenance?
2) If fixed passive income such as rent and dividends is available, should one, if one could, dedicate most of one's time to their sadhana and some to necessities? Is this the recommended path where scope has mysteriously appeared, as if put forth by the Lord?
3) What if unethical behaviour is the norm in a business eg. Tender acquisition commissions. Should one do as necessary?

Thanking you for your time.

Answer
"Inwardly calm and uninvolved, yet externally displaying various emotions, play in the world O Raghava" -- The Yoga Vaasistam

As told by Sage Vasista to Rama, on how to deal with the world.

1. The rule for all worldly actions, as regards the Yogi is the same. One involves honestly but remains detached to the action and its outcome. One's right is to the action alone and not to its fruit. Work honestly to the extent possible, doing what is felt right at the given moment and leave it behind. Things proceed as they have to, in the script written by the higher power.

2. When this method is understood, one plays his part in the world stage as an actor, emoting and talking as per the script, yet does not become the character. Just as an actor playing the role of a mad man does not become so in reality, the wise Yogi puts on various skins, as may be required, but ever remains virtuous, holding on to the truth which is the Atman (self)

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Mr. Dhananjay,

Thank you for your valuable service.

I have been practicing the following sets of Asanas. I would like to get your thoughts on any changes needed in this sequence.

- Standing:
    - Dwikonasana
- On Belly:
    - Bhujangasana
    - Shalabhaasana
    - Dhanurasana
- On Back:
    - Sirsasana
    - Sarvangasana
    - Halasana
    - Matsyasana
- Forward Bend:
    - Paschimottanasana
    - Ardha Matsyendrasana
    - Gorakshasana
    - Yoga-Mudra

I want to make sure that I am not doing them in wrong sequence or order. Or some other asana could be included.

Thank you for your help.

With regards,
Gary

Answer
These will do. The breathing is to be slow, gradual and smooth, with 'Puraka' (Inhalation) during upward (expanding) movements, 'Rechaka' (Exhalation) during downward (contracting) movements and 'Kumbhaka' (retention) while maintaining the final pose.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

Please allow me to introduce myself and my quest.

I am a young aspiring Akhanda brahmachari in my early twenties who, due to the grace of the Almighty, picked up Swami Sivananda's famous handbook on the practice of brahmacharya several years ago.

Much to my chagrin, despite my ardent efforts, I have not been able to break a month of celibacy thus far. I am continuing nonetheless.

I must ask you of a few questions. I know your responses to aspirants have been terse of late because one must undergo the path by oneself, but please have mercy and respond to my few questions. They are greatly hampering my sadhana progress.

1. Is this a "threshold" point during sadhana (for instance, 6 months or 2 year or 2 years) when buddhi is able to significantly control the fluctuations of the monkey mind? Right now, I can do one hour of sadhana or look at corpses in a cemetery but the sight of a pretty woman will immediately dissolve vairagya with stunning, frightening force. I am reminded of Raja Bhatrihari's plight. Please advise.

2. If a realized sage is given the option to stay in a damp hut soaked with feces and forced to eat feces or the option of staying in a clean room with simple rice, will he have any preference? The mind would have been destroyed but is there not a human, biological aversion to the sight and smell of feces, for instance?

3. The realized sage creates a temporary ego to produce a mind with which he can interact with the world, as you have said. But will such a sage not suffer from body consciousness? If his eyes are gouged out, if his skin is burned, etc., will he not cry in agony and look bitterly upon the one who has tortured him?

4. In today's world, we increasingly face the threat of growing terrorism, extremism, etc, particularly from Islam. If one is to secure his people in a leadership role by slaying those who wish to harm his kith and kin, does such an act go against the tenets of dharma? I have heard Swami Vivekananda, for instance, threw out the suitcases of an Englishman who opposed Indian independence.

Sincerely,
Kowshik

Answer

1. Till all the past Samskara-s (impressions) & Vasana-s (tendencies) impeding residence in the self are not roasted, they germinate like seeds into saplings under favorable conditions.

Just as a sword cannot cut itself, 'Buddhi' (intellect) cannot control the mind beyond a limit, for both are of offshoots of the Aham (Ego). The intellect is controlled by the Atman alone. Hence the wise Yogi performs constant meditation on the Atman (self), whereupon the mind takes that form (of infinity) and dissolves into it. Then there is control.

However, the mind again de-links and retakes the form of the Ego, till it is not irreversibly dissolved in its source (Atman) through Self-realization. Hence one must perform Sadhana ceaselessly till that goal is reached.

2. If the one who prefers (Ego), through the mind or senses exists, it is not self-realization. The Atman (self) has no preference, for there is nothing to prefer there. Based on the nature of the remaining 'Prarabdha karma', the body of the realized being is subjected to pleasant or unpleasant conditions, which however have no effect internally.

3. There is a temporary body consciousness, like the consciousness of an actor with his character. Does the actor really look bitterly against the antagonist after the scene is over? Did he die because he died as the character?

4. One has to follow the law of his land, which dictates who is supposed to do what and when. That is his given Dharma.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Dear Dhanajay,

I've taken your advice and been diligent with my practice of yoga in all its aspects. By 2 weeks of solid brahmacharya, many negatives had disappeared from my life to be replaced with various blessings.

I cannot doubt the benefits any more.

However, yesterday my mind kept going out looking for women to delight in and I was a bit weaker in my meditation, watching television shows instead, wrongly thinking i would be OK.. and despite knowing the detriment of such actions, I eventually caved and lost my seed. Today the same has happened and I'm feeling really dejected, like I'll never get it together. I feel hypocritical, unworthy, and dishonest in my efforts. It's easy at the monastery but at home my practice deteriorates.. How can I find the inspiration to keep going?

Thank you!!

ANSWER: "Failure is the stepping stone to success" -- The wise man learns from his mistakes, not to repeat them. One should never forget the lessons that are taught by failure. Keep the mind riveted on the Atman (self) through regular Sadhana & meditation. Eventually, one learns to stay above the tide.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: When you say to keep the mind riveted on the atman with sadhana and meditation, I take this to mean that I should use these practices to direct the mind in the direction of the atman, letting my mind be calm and serene.

I'm currently unable to focus directly on the atman, but I can send my mind in that direction...

Am I understanding correctly?

Answer
When the mind is fixed on the Atman, it stays calm, peaceful and bright, completely unaffected by the external world and its happenings, be they of any nature. It is thought free, even if indulging in external work. Then, there is no agitation or unrest. The world is seen for the dream it is and produces no attachment, anger or desire. He who attains this state is said to have fixed his mind on the Atman.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Dear Dhananjay,
I am having a tough time remaining fixed onto the Self while tending to other tasks at work. I remain fixed on the self going in to work, and then before I know it, I've become so absorbed in the pressures and workload of daily life, that I've become completely engulfed in Maya and find myself struggling to get back to the Atman, remorseful for ever letting it go. I try to remain detached initially, but I don't know what happens. I don't know when, how and where I lose presence and consciousness.

In the Buddhist philosophy it is recommended that one complete each task with complete focus and attention ONLY on said task and nothing else and to prevent the mind from wondering elsewhere. Furthermore, one should develop a habit of living COMPLETELY in the present moment. The mind should not project itself into the illusions of past and future. It is said, that in doing so one develops mindfulness and concentration.

My question is; How does one remain fixed on the Atman while tending to tasks requiring the mind and body? Is the above-mentioned method correct and flawless? Is there a more efficient method?

I'm very sorry if you have already answered this question. Please tell me if you have, and I will go through past answers.

Sahil

ANSWER: When work is carried out with involvement, honesty and sense of commitment, it becomes possible to invest one's heart and soul into it. All of one's energies flow towards efficient completion of the job on hand. One should do this as a part of one's 'Dharma' (duty), in the script written by God. Then there is neither attachment, nor deviation from the Atmic state, for it is a part of Dharma. The self is held on to by itself.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Should one make sure to use single-pointed focus on all tasks at hand or is this unnecessary?

Answer
Does a knife pierce a fruit when thrust at a single point or when touched at many points? which is correct ? Focus means concentration. It is always single pointed. That alone completes a job efficiently.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhananjay, may the Lord bless us all.

Are strength-related exercises like pull-ups/push-ups/handstands conducive or detrimental for brahmacharya? I'm mixing asanas and this type of muscle building exercise. Do you think that I should restrict my physical practices to asanas and pranayama only for the energy transmutation and conservation?
Thanks a lot.

Answer
1. Eventually, one will find the best benefit from proper Asana alone, as regards the physical requirement. They are to be performed with proper inhalation and exhalation, in a smooth and jerk free manner. Asana-s take care of physical health without an iota of strain, stress and side effects. The same cannot be said of other physical exercise.

2. Asana, Bandha, Nadi Shadhana and Pranayama should precede Samadhi (merger into the Atman), following which the truth (self) alone remains.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhanajay,

I'm 6' tall with pitta body type. Is there an ideal weight for a practicing yogi with these specifications? I apologize if asking in this manner isn't the most appropriate way to solve this issue; I've been thinking it might be good to eat less, and I'm hoping you could give me some guidance.

Also, recently I've heard a lot about how detrimental animal proteins can be for the body, and since the ghee I get doesn't contain these proteins, I'm leaning toward this ghee being the only animal product I consume. I love to have it on whole wheat toast and I'm wondering.. what is the appropriate amount to have per day?

Thanks again,

Austin

Answer
नात्यश्नतस्तु योगोऽस्ति न चैकान्तमनश्नतः।
न चातिस्वप्नशीलस्य जाग्रतो नैव चार्जुन।।

"Yoga is not for him who eats too much or too little;
Who sleeps too much or too little, O Arjuna".

-- The Bhagavad Gita, Chapter VI, Verse XVI

One should resort to 'Mitahara' (moderate, balanced food) and let go of all other worries. A fancy for weight, height or other mundane physical things stems from attachment to the impermanent body and is an impediment to be got rid of.

That meal which makes one neither feel heavy, nor starved, which makes one feel pleasant & cheerful; which does not produce lethargy or stupor but brightness is 'Mitahara'. He who understands this knows what to eat, how much to eat and when to stop.

Eat a little of that which is available and focus on the Atman (self). It is better to take many small meals periodically, than one large. He who eats to survive is not troubled by food, for he is always moderate.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Dear Dhananjay,
As you may recall me asking you several questions a while back, I just want to thank you for your advice. I have been doing brahmacharya for 7 months now with a few wet dreams but they have gone now. I am up to an hour of meditation a day. For a while I was doing half hour but not seeing much progress (even though I was) and then once I felt ready for 1 hour meditation, I started losing appetite and losing excess weight and continue to. I am feeling so much better. I am 31 years of age in this incarnation. I just want to thank you for your advice on persistence, meditation for transmutation (this was essential), and so much more. Thank you again. You have saved me in many ways. God truly does exist. Thank you.

Answer

All that is required is to give up the Ego and merge the mind into the Atman (self), who is the Lord residing within. All knowledge lies there. HE alone is the truth, and shines as the self in the individual. God bless.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Namaste sir
I am struggling to maintain brahmacharya from last 5 to 6 years
As i maintain celibacy after sometime it weakens my concentration and then i broke the vow. how it affects my concentration?
NOW I AM GOING TO GIVE A COMPETITIVE EXAM
AND IT NEEDS A LOT OF CONCENTRATION SHOULD I MAINTAIN CELIBACY OR NOT WILL IT BE HARMFUL OR ADVANTAGEOUS PLEASE SIR REPLY AS SOON AS POSSIBLE AS MY EXAM DAYS ARE NEAR

Answer

Brahmacharya, if practiced right increases concentration and not the other way. Unrest and lack of concentration means that the vital force is being stagnated and not transmuted upwards. Go through past answers on Sadhana and perform Asana, Bandha, Nadi Shodhana, Pranayama & meditation as advised, daily without fail. Things will set right once proper Sadhana is implemented. You will have abundant energy to focus on academic study.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear sir,

Reference: http://en.allexperts.com/q/Celibacy-Abstinence-3564/2014/2/balance-sadhana-work.

I dont find time for morning yogic practices (and may not be able to find for next 1.5 years). From the previous post, I understand that sadhana and work are no different, but how does one transmute without physical and spiritual activity?
Can brahmacharya still be maintained only with studies and work, right diet and god surrender, with no time for other yogic practice?

Om tat sat!

Answer
To the one who has realized the essence, they are one and the same. However, proper Yoga Sadhana is necessary to aid transmutation. Meditation, which is merging the mind into the Atmna (self) is mandatory.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay ji,

I have benefitted a lot by reading out the questions and answers in this forum.

Exercise and sports followed by pranayam helps a lot in keeping the mental health pure. My personal experince is, if we do only meditation and spiritual activities , it doesn't help much in controlling our vasanas and may be past sanskars. So if I do some exercise(swimming, running) followed by pranayam, it clears up the mind and gives a boost to the spiritual and mental health.

but in near future, due to some stomach upset, I had a sudden increase in my lust. I did try all methods including swimming , vigorous pranayam , but not meditation. So I had a fall by tempted to see porn and followed by masturbation. I had a impure mind for many days.

Then I realised, I missed the meditation part. I could have sat for a long meditation and transmuted/sublimated the sexual energy. But I doubt if I sit for meditation at that time, will that help in control of the powerful lust at that time. I am self analyzing what could have gone wrong at that time, so that I will be careful the next time.

I need your guidance.

Pranam,
Sriram

Answer
Physical, mental and spiritual efforts are to be constantly applied to succeed. It will not be possible for the beginner to directly meditate. So he employs Asana, Bandha, Nadi Shodhana and Pranayama to ready the physical and mental vehicles to merge into the Atman in meditation.

It is a battle where one has to be ever vigilant. A mental lapse soon turns into a physical one. Hence the need to keep constant focus till one is advanced enough to make it into a default way of life.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Firstly, I would like to say that you are doing tremendous service to humanity by sharing your knowledge and experience on such a vital topic.

To begin with, I would like to disclose that I am addicted to onanism since the past 12-13 years. It is a vicious cycle which I am certainly not proud of. Though I am at the lowest point of my life, I thank God that I am still alive, which gives me hope that I can turn things around.

Aristotle had stated, we are what we repeatedly do. The fact is so simple that we humans take it for granted. How can I create something productive if I have been repeatedly practicing onanism since a decade.

Whenever I have abstained for even 2-3 days, I have noticed a spike in my energy and overall health. I am willing to devote myself to Brahmacharya/celibacy for the remainder of my life, except for having a child when I get married, as I now understand that the only real purpose of sex is the propagation of species, and certainly not something any civilized individual should indulge in for mere pleasure.

I would be highly indebted to you if you could answer these questions with complete specificity.

1. I would be turning 28 years old in March 2017. Given the torture that I have put my body through for more than a decade, can I regain my health back if I strictly practice Brahmacharya, take up some kind of exercise on a daily basis, and get adequate sleep at night?

2. Can you share some of your personal experience related to Brahmacharya? When did you start practicing Brahmacharya, what were your reasons behind pursuing this path, and how do you cope with the sexual drives?

3. Lastly, what would be your word of advice for someone like me who has taken things to the extreme?

Finally, I am not doing this because I want to gain some super power as claimed by the people doing NoFap. I just want to get my sanity and health back so that I can fulfill my duties to the best of my capability.

Thank you.

Answer
1. Brahmacharya is the way to health, happiness and well being. The complete Yoga Sadhana described in past answers aids success in Brahmacharya. Perform the same with sincere devotion to the Lord to realize the self. Things will go in the right direction.

2. Things happen as per HIS will. The efforts of an entity that has striven in the path to the self are a result of HIS grace alone. There is nothing more of importance than this truth.

3. Take up the practice with surrender and single minded devotion. The effects of the past will eventually vacate and life will get blessed. You will have all the energy required to uplift yourself.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

I have been struggling with lust alone, specifically internet porn and masturbation since age 13 or so. I am now 26.

For last 2.5 years, I was able to abstain from both, and the only breaks in celibacy were from night emission.

However, recently, I had a massive falldown a month back, and again in the last couple of days. I watched porn (and went to chat rooms, a novelty) and indulged, not once, but many times in the last few days. I feel like have lost strength, shattered nerves, like having gone back to an old bygone day. What is alarming is that I have been unable to control myself in the last few days, and I feel like I may not be able to stop.

I feel miserable to have fallen down. Though I have some awareness that there is no reality to sexual attraction from one point of view, I am also bothered by the fact that I have been attracted to the same sex (male) sexually. Really, I don't see how this would work out if I get married in the future. Frankly, the only way I see myself rising beyond this all this mess, is by practising celibacy.

I really want to become an Oordhvaretas for His sake, but I am afraid that with all the self-abuse, my body is refusing to retain semen. I am however hoping that if He wills, the knowledge and techniques of becoming an Oordhvaretasa will become revealed to me.

I will be grateful for your advice.

Answer
Do the suggested Yoga Sadhana in totem, with a complete sense of surrender to the Lord. The urge within, for establishing should be as strong as that of a drowning man trying to swim back. When one puts in such dedicated effort for a long time, the hands of God reach down and the past Samskara-s dating back to eons slowly dissolve.

Let go of the past and make a fresh start. Things will eventually fall in place.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Pranam Dhananjay Ji.

I have read all of your past answers. Reading past answers written by you is just like keeping ourselves wisdom-drated (Hydrated with wisdom) every day.

I have been practicing brahmacharya from last 6months. Recently I have started doing bandhas, and mantra recitation and without your guidance I wouldn't be what I am today. Hope your blessings shine on me.

I am really sorry for writing such a long post with so many questions.

1. I'm 28. Why did it take me 28 years to find myself and this path? please explain in detail if possible.

2. Copper Ring charged with Prana:

Can I wear a Copper Snake ring provided by Isha Foundation?

The copper snake rings are made at the Isha Yoga Center under Sadhguru's guidance and go through a process of consecration at the Dhyanalinga Yogic Temple before they are offered. The Dhyanalinga temple is consecrated using prana prathista and is dedicated for meditation.

Actually, I would love to wear this ring but my mom said not to wear it. Should I wear this copper snake ring or not? Please guide me and also please explain prana prathista.

http://www.ishafoundation.org/us/blog/significance-of-snake-ring/

3. Letting Go: Can letting go of fear, guilt, disappointments, grief, lies and mistakes provide us more guidance on the path of self-realization. I am asking this because I have felt it. A few years back in 2013 I started forgiving friends and peoples whom I was angry on and vice-versa. I also let go off a lot of guilt and lies. By doing this some of my friends they themselves came to me for forgiveness and forgiving them made me feel calm and peaceful. Can you please explain how does this happen and why does it happen?

4. Temple: The place where I stay we have a Balaji Temple next to my building. This Balaji Temple has a murthy from Tirupati. The Temple also has the Navagraha murthy and Ashlesha murthy. My Mom always keeps telling me to visit the temple every Saturday and offer oil to the Navagraha murthy as I have Shani and I was born on a Saturday. Should I, do it? Can visiting this temple help me on the self-realization path. Please guide me.

5. Mantras and brahma muhurta: I do the recitation of mantras like mahamrityunjay mantra, gayatri mantra, guru paduka stotram, nirvana shatakam. Lately, I have heard about brahma muhurta. Please explain about brahma muhurta and tell the exact brahma muhurta time. I know there are a lot of websites and blogs talking about brahma muhurta but I would like to know the exact explanation and time from you.

Bless you Dhananjay ji. You are doing such a great thing (Karma Yoga) by guiding ignorant souls like us.

Pranam...

Answer

1. Things happen when the time is ripe.

2. When the Ego is dissolved, the Atman (self) is revealed. The Ego is dissolved through Sadhana (effort) and through HIS grace. Wearing external accessories is one's personal choice.

3. That which one gives another is giving it to ones own self.

4. It is the one Lord, who inundates all temples and all creation. One can visit a temple, if one feels like. The same Lord resides in the Sadhaka, as the self, within the temple called the body.

5. Elaboration on 'Brahmimuhurtham' is available in past answers.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Namaskar DhananjayJi

I am on the spiritual path from the last two years, and during this time, I have experienced some incidents during sleep, it has happened around 8-9 times with me in these two years. What happens is that while I am in sleep, I feel some presence which is pulling me out of my body, it is very terrifying, and suddenly my mind wakes up and I become conscious but that presence is still not gone, I experience the same pull sensation, but i keep my eye close due to fear. This experience lasts for some minute, I generally start chanting mantra with my eye close, and the thing goes away.
After this I am reluctant to sleep again fearing that this may happen again, but I eventually fall asleep but wake up few times during the night.

For better understanding, I am sharing one of my experience :-
I was sleeping alone in a room in a P.G, and during sleep, I felt very strong sensation of some energy sitting on me, and trying to pull me out of my body, suddenly my mind wakes up, now I am conscious, keeping my eyes closed , I started chanting mantras and reminding myself the lessons of fearlessness of Swami Vivekananda and something very terrifying happened, I felt that the energy caught my mouth very tightly and shaked it and then that thing was gone.

Please tell me what is this and how to get rid of this.

Pranam

Answer
It is all a play of the mind which one experiences, which one need not worry upon. With Sadhana, all these fears which are a result of past Samskara-a eventually dissolve, following which it ends. One is infinite and all pervading, limitless, without a second. Who then to pull and where can one go? Relax, hold on to the Atman (self) and be at peace. No harm will come.

"One is the unborn, eternal, timeless, infinite, all powerful and all pervading Atman which has no body, no mind and no limitations. Without a beginning and without an end, he exists complete, without a second, integral with the all powerful Lord. The body and mind are super impositions, and the result of ignorance. They are not real. He who realizes this is blessed"

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir,

I have been struggling to give up bad habits for the last 8-9 years. First I thought it was wrong, then I wanted to have a good memory,now I just want to give it up. I'm surrounded with many people who do not believe in Brahmacharya. I do not have any sexual experience with anyone, sometimes lustful thoughts try to come up in mind. I go for a few days and break it again. I've been in depression, even psychiatrist told me that it was okay to masturbate, but I cannot agree. Sometimes I think I should take a vow to kill myself if I fall again, but I cannot take such a vow because of my parents. I understand Lord is real Guruji, but I cannot reach out to him because I am not able to give up ego, no matter what. Sometimes I punish myself by not doing my academic and extracurricular activities which I enjoy doing and which it is my duty to do everyday. Even then ego creeps in, telling me that I have made a good method. Due to this ego I'm not able to make up my mind to surrender totally to Lord Almighty. I once told my mother crying that I masturbated, but she said while those who can maintain deserve our salutations, everyone cannot do it. I've made my mind to quit and broken the promise so many times that I'm scared. I'm also because of this not able to make up my mind to follow the practices in totem as delineated by you. I am unable to look at all females as Mother. (I cannot bring myself to write why.) I don't want to depend on myself anymore because I know it will only increase the 'Aham'. I think of Bhagavan Sri Ramakrishna Dev ji's stories of spotless purity. I think of Swamiji's words that even though there were so many women endowed with beauty in USA, presence of the Master dissolved all attractions...
I am not sure what exactly to ask from you... But please help

Answer
It is normal for all aspirants to go through these contradictions during the initial years of practice. The strong past Samskara-s (impressions) and Vasana-s (tendencies) come in the way of residence in the Atman (self).

In the scriptures, this state is compared to the green layer of algae that cover a body of pure water. One who wishes to drink the clear water underneath moves it aside with the pot, only to see it return and cover the water once again under the movement of breeze. Just as one has to frequently push aside the green algal layer to access the clear water, the Sadhaka (aspirant) has to displace these past Vasana-s through constant Sadhana involving meditation on the truth. Else, the non-self raises up and takes control.

An exceptional Sadhaka alone perseveres relentlessly, to reach the state of the self and reside there. When one's efforts are persistent, the grace of the Lord shines and gradually takes out the Vasana-s supporting 'Avidya' (ignorance). Then, the state of silence becomes more frequent.

Persevere as required... things will set right in the course of time.
ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello! I have a question regarding(additional) benefits of Continence.
I have already decided to do this practice but im curious about legends regarding this benefits.

Boxers avoid sex before a fight, and indian wrestlers are continent,;does this mean celibacy automatically increases the prowress and strength of any male? What may be the reasons behind this;testosterone?

Also, I heard a Taoist story of years-long celibacy creating a "protectice sphere"which makes a person unable to get harmed in any situation. has this any basis on fact or truth?

Thanks for your time!

Answer
When the vital force is conserved and transmuted, it leads to a superlative form of energy called 'Ojas' which inundates the being. This energy eventually shines as brilliance in whatever activity the Yogi performs. It confers immunity against a vast range of undesirable energies. It is the power of ones own Atman (self), shining in the practical world.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Could you elaborate on the stages in realisation? Absolute being and intermittent states of being.

Having practised unbroken Brahmacharya for just under 2 years, suffering considerable bodily hardships like skin ailments during the practice, (My annamaya kosha is of a Pitta-Kapha constitution)I had to break it with a new loved one, a somewhat extraordinary and spiritual lady for today's society, who mysteriously entered my life, without me taking nay steps. I refused to enter into any sexual relation with the lady whom I married since and although we slept on the same bed, I did not enter into any contact with her for months. The suddenly, a force seems to have entered me and reluctantly, for the sake of the other, I gave up my practice. I felt drawn to the feminine aspect of godhead at the time. Material life seems to have improved since but after nearly a year, I have gone back to my highly sexualised teenage ways in secret to drain out the excess urges and feel a loss of the peace that would dawn on me almost immediately without effort during the practice. I must confess it was also easy to fall asleep during the practice and I had skin ailments as suggested.

Having gone through this, I have been wondering if it is Shakti playing out before me. I wondered if you had any guidance on the worship of the divine mother, particularly the reading of Devi Mahatmyam and Lalitha Sahasranama -also Vishnu Sahasranama for a better understanding of events playing out before me? I'm a man of temperament most of the time but will was strong during the Brahmacharya period. I'm 24 years of age living in Britain

Answer
It is Maya, the result of Avidya, that cuases one to move towards the non-self. One wishing residence in the Atman should restrict sexual contact within marriage for progeny and do the required Sadhana.
That alone is the way. The path of Sadhana to be taken will get to be known, further to effort and devotion to the Lord.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Mr. Dhananjay,

Thank you for all your help in the spiritual path.

As householder, can we chant OM? I happened to read in the following link that it is harmful to chant OM. Could you please clarify?

https://magnuseduce.wordpress.com/2012/08/05/maharishi-mahesh-yogi-on-the-mantra-om/

By God's wish, I do not have an ishta deva. But I want to chant a mantra when the mind is restless.

Please help.

Regards,
Gary

Answer
Can one's self be harmful to oneself? The truth pervades all beings and that alone is real. Rest are all moving images on the eternal truth and not of substance. Who is a Sanyasi? Who is the householder? One who is in the quest to realize the truth is the Sanysasi. It does not matter whether he is married or single or a hermit, as long as he is in the quest of the self. The 'ॐ' (OM) represents the truth, which is one and within all. How can harm can come to anyone who chants and merges into the truth?

That which comes or goes in not real. So social statuses such as being a bachelor, householder, widower or something else have nothing to do with one's core, which is the Atman. Knowing it to be such, one should let go all attachments to gaining or losing and hold on to the self. Then, he goes into silence, which is the nature of the self.

Merge the mind into the formless Lord, with whom one's Atman (self) is integral and indivisible and chant the Omkar.

God bless

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Expert: Dhananjay - 11/24/2016

Question
Hello Sir.
I have this question that is, Urdhvareta men is in a state that he stops sperm production, spermatogenesis? Advaita, just be?
So phisiologicaly controling, stop sperm production is the goal of Brahmacharya, beig that one doesn't want procreation?
It appears to me that sex is only for reproduction, the scientist Barry Komisaruk found that orgasms are separated from sex, one does not need sex to get orgasms.
So the Kundaliní is about to unite a couple and mantain in the sense of procreation, to create a family and so appart of this, is only mind elusion, instinctive, pleasure and lack of self love, independency?
I read the heterosexual anal sex is used on maithuna, Tantra, as the most direct way to guide Kundalini, is it true?
I do not found any question similar before, I am sorry if it is already in the site.
Gratefull.

Answer
Do your Sadhana and focus on realizing the self first. All these fancy queries later. One should be focused on the goal and not on endless theories.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Pease read this and Thank for answering for free.

Ps: english isn't my first language
I am 21 yo black man(live In canada)
BACKGROUND:
I started abstinence around the age of 17 to detoxify from porn, 2 years later i stumble upon a book, called Practise of Brahmacharya.
My life changed.
Then i was 19 year Old due to friends pressure and society sexual attacks i failed many time. Some of them eventually called me homosexual.
Then i stumbled upon a book called Raja yoga by Swami vivekananda.Now my life changed even more, but i wasnt really practising, again the people In my life pulled me the other way.
Then after ignoring Raja yoga,i Reread the book again. Now serious meditation started, with pranayama.

PRESENT MOMENT:
2 days ago i turned 21 yo. At the start of this year, I went 3 month without sexual activity (i didnt meditate).
This year has been the worst year of my life, i went trough tremendous austerity.
I believe God tried to show me something because it is not normal. I resolve a problem another one arise, i Lost my car, my computer,have to stop school and go work to pay my car tickets.
I gained dispassion, discrimination it was a blessing In disguise.
Without this i would have NEVER turn my life completely to the spiritual.

SPIRITUALITY:
Everything that i read on Yoga is true.
Since i started dharana i see light everywhere, and i verily met some beings who weren't of this life.

QUESTION:
As i am going back to finish school, i am afraid it will take me away from my path to God or the self.
Will it?
Will everything eventually fall into place, where my work wouldn't interfer?i believe if i pray God and finish school(only about 6 month left) and don't give up he'll put me In the adequate circumstance to pursue my practise.
By mid 2017 school should be over, and i'll try to live by myself.
The simple question is:
Will i one day be able to meditate in peace if i build the neccessary circumstance.Or will the World get In my way?

Answer

1. Impediments are the Lords way of making one realize the falsity of the 'Asath' (unreal), so as to correct and merge with the 'Sath' (Reality of one's self). They help the aspirant develop 'Vairagya' (dispassion). The exceptional aspirant, who puts in constant Sadhana overcomes all troubles and attains to incomparable bliss in the course of time.

2. Persevere honestly in the practice, with the devotion and innocence of a child, full of trust and surrender to the Lord. You will progress in school and all will go as required. The silence (meditation) will establish itself. God bless.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

I'm 23. I fantasized a sports anchor wearing revealing clothes and searched her up in google images to intensify it on her scantily clad images. It feels disgusting that I did that though I know she is a married woman. Though I used to fantasize before, they were fictitious. I watched a few soft core porn clips(I couldn't escape seeing horrible images that pop up while browsing for sensual and I regret seeing them), but feeling wrong I quit it. I don't like myself that I watched them. I'll be filled with guilt when I come across her occasionally while watching the sport and the guilt lingers over. I fantasized her so can't be erased from my memory. I feel soiled. You would ask me to do practices. I am doing them already and will continue doing them. But how do I get over this guilt?

Answer

Put it behind and look forward. Fantasy is imagination and can be stopped with meditation on the truth. One must constantly meditate and hold on to the self through Sadhana. Then, unwanted stimuli do not affect. A wall of purity engulfs the mind, which gets steady.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Dear Dhananjay,

When see people who remind of old self when taking a walk for example, I do feel a compassion to a degree. Would you think it necessary to preach?
I just taken interest in that thought.

Kind regards,

Joe

Answer

There is no 'oneself' or 'others' in reality. There is only pure consciousness, infinite and without a second. Hence, if one feels like serving humanity, one has to first know his own 'self'. That is the greatest service, for the realized being then becomes the instrument to help others in this relative world of 'Maya'. Without true knowledge (realization), it is not possible to help another in terms of the absolute.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Dear Dhananjay sir,

I am feeling disappointed, I am a 27 year old male and this system has still not allowed me to move out on from my parents house. I have been working hard and focusing on brahmacharya for the last 5 years and working persistently hard. Does it not say in the bible somewhere that saints/prophets are despised in their home towns which could be family house also. I feel that my family does not care for me they like to see me low even though I am in a good place on the inside.

I have just completed a bricklaying course, I went to a building site as I was reassured that they would accept me after this long course, I know I am a good bricklayer, the foreman said no you need more practice even though I look at their bricks laid below looked crooked. I left the site feeling just disappointed in man. I know I'm a good worker with all the benefits of brahmacharya.
Well I may have a opportunity lined up but it's not certain which is leaving me in a state of limbo, regarding work at this moment.
I am getting feelings of why am I here, when I do try and try it just seems pointless, people are in this system they don't care it's just making a living and pointless Pharisee like states.

as materialism is pointless and I've basically renounced the world as i am practicing brahmacharya, whould moving to India and finding a ashram and working to stay there be possible? I just feel like getting on a plane to India and cutting of my family and living a life of service to God. At least I would be around mostly sincere people.

Please give me some advice.

Kind regards,

Joseph

Answer
The events that unfold in one's life are already fixed, based on one's past karma and the will of the higher power. It is not necessary for one to worry the least as regards the direction to be taken. All that the honest Sadhaka needs to do is persevere in the direction available at the given moment and watch silently. The path will unfold. One needs to accept it as the will of the Almighty and be happy, focusing on his Sadhana to realize the self. This is all is required.

It is not that moving to India or anywhere else will make the path easier, nor that staying will making it tougher. The ease or difficulty one faces is the result of his own karma, and he carries this karma, wherever he goes. If relocating is in destiny, it will happen. Else, it won't. Do not worry about these things which are inconsequential in terms of the truth. Persevere with the opportunity available at the given moment and watch silently, without desire and without frustration. The path will be known. It is normal for Sadhaka-s to go through these trying times during the initial years, when karmic blocks are dense. With time, involving persistent Sadhana backed by surrender to the Lord, everything will fall in place eventually.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Sir,

I have a couple of questions. I know you are an advanced soul and the following queries/statements may seem a little direct, but I need to voice my concerns, and apologize if I look impertinent.

1.) I was recently in a job where my manager was abusive, derogatory and mean for no reason, and I experienced a tremendous amount of pain, anxiety, and misery as a result.

Why did god put me through this experience? Was it to kill my ego? I am now in a monastery, soon going to join the Ramakrishna-Vivekananda order, and many have implied my job experience as rather useless in my spiritual progress. Why is pain neccesary to realize the self? Why should one tolerate an insult by another, and why isn't it better to just have some level of self esteem before someone runs you over? You told me to tolerate insult and injury blindly and I experienced a tremendous amount of suffering at the behest of a tall, unfit, insecure, and idiotic Portuguese fool, and an idiotic and foolish Argentinian. I don't know why you recommended this to me, as I feel the past six months of my life have been a waste. If god simply assigned me a job that had less hours, and a better work culture, I would have a far better time, but nonetheless, you advised I blindly follow this path like a wimpering dog who was whipped and abused to no end. I honestly felt like taking my life many times and I felt terrible. Why did you advise I do this? How can I call you a master if after this experience, I felt a 100 or 1000 thousand times better after I enraged them and taunted them , and left those insecure, clueless bastards?

2.) Many senior and junior monks of the order do not have brahma-Tejas or Ojas in their face, eyes, and body. Yet the practices you have advised me to do have left with them. Why is this so? And why have they achieved samadhi or higher states without showing brahma Tejas in their face and eyes?

I don't know why you led me on this path of low self esteem and just constant pain, but I feel an extremely high level of resentment and feel like fully leaving your practices after this experience because I believe you have misguided me to an extensive degree. I don't know if I will ever be able to follow your advice again, but the least you can do is provide me with an answer and tell me why I suffered so blindly. I do not mean to be impertinent and rude with my query, even though this sounds a little direct, but the least you can do is provide some answers and some closure so at least I can be at peace and leave this experience and this pain behind me.

Answer

1. Who was abused? Who suffered insult? When that one is vacated, the state is called self-realization.

2. One should realize his self first. Questions about others later.

The self has no esteem. Pain, insult, injury or maltreatment do not affect it. Infinite, complete and without form, it shines eternally, without a second. One is this self alone.

The Jiva goes through experiences based on its karma. He who wishes to realize his self, lets go of the non-self (which experiences pain or pleasure) and remains a mere witness. He lets go of affinity or aversion for experiences which are like ripples on water, which are nothing more than modifications of the mind, for these concern the non-self. He holds on to Sadhana, till the goal is reached.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

I was reading your answer to someone's question about how should a man deal with a partner's desire for an offspring and you said ,"When the birth of offspring is destined, it occurs by HIS grace. HE controls and not us".

Now my questions are ...

1)...whether the desire itself is part of Maya(and should be ignored if you are on the path of self-realization) or something that shouldn't be ignored?

2) Also, I understand that these desires might arise due to some karma or way of thinking, but is giving birth that important for a woman?
I'm a female and while I do think I can get carried away by these desires, I don't really like hearing from people that it's part of "Dharma".

Answer
1. The world and this birth are itself Maya. However, there are certain urges which are deemed valid, the desire to make a family being one. While there is no harm in aspiring for marriage and a family, what is important is not to get attached to either.

One should remain neutral and accept what happens as the will of the Lord. If marriage and offspring are in destiny, they occur. Lawful relationship with one's spouse, within marriage does not come in the way of Brahmacharya.

2. Marriage or producing offspring are not in any way mandatory for attaining to the self, for that is an internal process, while these are external. Those Sadhaka-s who wish marriage experience it if destined and continue in the path of self-realization as 'Grihasta-s' (householders). However, marriage or lack of it do not have any bearing.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hey,

it's been one year and several month of unbroken (outside of wet dreams) practice for me. Best thing I have done to myself ever! However I am over going minor obstacles lately. Several months ago I picked moderate (1-3 times a week) weight lifting. I do enjoy improved health and doing it not for vanity reasons. Unfortunately my wet dream frequency increased to having one a week. It has nothing to do with dirty mental plane as my mental celibacy is on same par as physical. Could it be due to increased testosterone which lifting perhaps creates? I really don't want to give up exercise but next day after hard lifting day and wet dream combination I feel irritable, less spontaneous, more prone to negative emotions, timidity and all these feelings that normally almost non existent.

Answer
Exercise should be moderate and never hard. Hard exercise causes excess fatigue, leading to irritation/aggression followed by stupor and lethargy as an aftermath. Heavy weight training is not conducive to Yoga Sadhana for a multitude of reasons. One will not have energy for Sadhana.

Yogasana-s are the best form of exercise as they do not cause fatigue. The Yogi is bright, positive and cheerful. Other exercises, if taken, should be moderate.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I have no problem concerning indulgence In the waking state.

My Brahmacharya is getting destroyed by wet dream
Even just after meditating i got one wet dream.
I wonder how much damaging is a wet dream compared to a fully conscious ejaculation?
I do not touch myself whatso ever In waking state, but when i fall asleep i have no control.
I try to wake up before 4 am
How to avoid this?
I feel like there is some terrible memories of sexual activity In my subconscious that meditation is just awakening.
All that effort for nothing.
But i still feel enough energy to continue.
What to do?

Answer
Do the complete set of Yoga Sadhana-s described in past answers with the required food, lifestyle, physical and mental activity. It takes time for wet dreams to taper and eventually stop. That is achieved undoubtedly in case of the aspirant who resorts to honest, regular and unbroken Sadhana. Patience and perseverance are the keys.

Go through all the past answers to get an elaboration on the means to be employed.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

My past karma must be very thick indeed. Every day for the past 9 weeks the mind has been oscillated by various forces yet due to the lord's grace my ship continues. Of worry is one nightfall endured, which worries me greatly.

My questions may seem basic. I am a 20 year old brahmachari so kindly have pity on me, I know you often tell people that the path is to do sadhana and stay quiet, which I understand, but please, any detail would give me hope and encouragement to pursue this path rather than the degeneracy of my present generation. Today, with social media and apps like Tinder it is so easy to lose sadhana and society is filled with sexual stimuli. As such, I stay very careful.

1) In previous answers, you mentioned certain worldly desires are legitimate. Please tell me whether this refers to artha, kama, dharma, moksha? In addition, are there limits to each? Kama for instance is to be limited to procreation as you mentioned. What about artha? For one man, 1 crore is more than enough. For another it is paltry. Are there any limits the yogi should observe?

2) I am curious to know why facial hair not only retains ojas but seems to attract the opposite sex. I am not growing it for vanity; I would just like to know the spiritual/biological basis as every time I grow out beard sadhana is better but external world temptations seem to augment proportionally. The lord does not want to make my task any easier! :)

3) Of late, I sometimes feel pity for purely bhakti oriented people. I am behaving very myopically I realize as bhakti yoga is just as legitimate as the jnana yoga and karma yoga I practice. What leads to this feeling of "oh, bhajans and slokas are not sufficient"? I sometimes wish those who engage in sloka or mantra blindly would deeply understand why they did what they did rather than turn to these simply for comfort

4) What is the extent of cognition of a full-blown jnani? If you do not answer anything else please at least answer this. The world, although fake, is run by elites and governments who conduct gruesome rituals worshipping the anti-christ, abusing children, etc. Most people have no clue. Are jnanis like Swami Sivananda, were they aware of the real nature of the disgusting worldly behavior and the "truth" behind major world events? Certainly a yogi of self-realization would view such an event as merely a scene passing on a silver screen but I am curious to know the power of their cognition.

5) The real guru is within as you have said. For sadhana purposes I would like to look up to a former guru in flesh but I don't know whether swami sivanandan, bagawan ramana, or someone else should be trusted. I do not want to fall prey to charlatans who accrued negative karma by cheating masses like Muktananda or Osho. Kindly suggest the right path.

6) I find that the sleep schedule of few hours destroys mental ability and thus resort to 7.5 hours of sleep daily. how does one taper this to 4 hours over time?

7) Is it possible for a jnani to find something, a rock a painting or a woman, attractive without lusting for it? I have always wondered whether the right response to seeing a naked woman, for instance, is to turn eyes away or look at the object plainly, acknowledge the lump of flesh, and turn away with conviction.

Humbly yours,
Dhananjay

Answer
1. The 'Mumukshu' (one who is in the quest of the self) works without desire in the profession shown by destiny and stays content with the resultant lawful earnings (accepting them as the will of the Lord). The magnitude of the earnings do not come into the picture.

2. The energy conserved through hair growth, further to Sadhana is the cause of attraction. It is the law of nature that things move towards regions of higher energy concentration. However, these things do not affect the one who is intent on the goal (realization).

3. There are many paths to the destination. One should focus on his path, period. What others do is not of one's concern.

4. The Atman is a mere witness to the scenes unfolding on the screen of pure consciousness. That unfolding occurs as per HIS will. The screen (pure consciousness) alone is the truth, while the scenes (events) are false. Hence the Gnyani remains a neutral witness, despite full cognition.

5. When the mind is merged into the 'Guru' (Atman) within in meditation, the physical form is eventually revealed. That power of discernment comes to the true Yogi. It is very simple.

6. For now, that is alright. After much advancement, further to years of unbroken transmutation, the 'Ojas shakthi' becomes immense, following which one does not need much sleep. Sadhana is the key.

7. 'Raga' (attraction) or 'Dvesha' (repulsion) do not exist in the realized one. Centered irreversibly in the truth, he remains unaffected by the senses, as the waters of the ocean remain unaffected by the entry of rivers into it.

As in case of the unrealized man, there is cognition of everything (such as the apparent beauty or lack of it in an object) in the realized sage as well, however, while there is an immediate degree of attraction or repulsion in response, with the ignorant one, the sage has no attraction or repulsion, for he has become one with 'Sat' (reality), (while attraction or repulsion concerns the 'Asat [the unreal])

आपूर्यमाणमचलप्रतिष्ठं
समुद्रमाप: प्रविशन्ति यद्वत् |
तद्वत्कामा यं प्रविशन्ति सर्वे
स शान्तिमाप्नोति न कामकामी || 70||

-- Chapter 2 Verse 70, The Bhagavad Gita

" Just as the mighty ocean remains unaffected & constant, despite water entering it from all sides, he (realized one) remains calm and peaceful, though the senses are exposed and perceive the stimuli; and not the one who craves after the stimuli".

The same however does not apply to the aspirant who has to exercise control and put constant efforts to prevent the senses from being stimulated.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Pranam Dhananjay Ji,

Thank you for answering all of my questions.

Today, early morning I felt something very unusual.

I felt somebody touching me and trying to wake me up. It happened twice. It also tried to pull me up from my bed and I am pretty sure that it wasn't any of my family members because there was no one around me or in my house except my parents and they won't such things.

I felt the feeling that somebody is trying to wake me up and forcefully pulling me to get up and telling me to start doing my work.

Please explain why did this thing happen.

Answer
It is generally a signal from the Atman within, urging the aspirant to wake up and do Sadhana. It occurs to certain aspirants. Do your Sadhana regularly and there will be no problems.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Om Gurudev,
I am a regular follower of your answers and have benefited immensely from your guidance. I am practicing brahmacharya, with exception of unintentional wet dreams.
My query is
1- From past 1 year I used to purposefully ignore the kind of clothes I wear. My view was to build raw confidence as who iam is independent of what I wear, for example I would wear the same trouser for 1 week despite having many at home. Lately I am having strong desire to wear good clothes i.e new clothes everyday, clean and of good quality. Just like PM Modi Ji . Will this act lead to a downfall..? Is it a sign of Maya. I do not use any vanity products or watch my self in mirror again and again.

Answer
One should wear clothes that befit the circumstance, without attachment. The harm is not in wearing particular clothes but being attached to this or that kind. What one wears should not be the cause of elation, nor dejection. When the mind is fixed on the Atman (self), one wears that which is necessary, but without attachment.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,

I am just not able to get married. Even though I have strived to desist from negative relief, in the hope that God will bless me with a good home before I am too old, no girl is coming in my life. So much frustration from loneliness. I understand that I should forget all this and focus on the Self but the above mentioned seems to be a legitimate desire. Why am I suffering? Isn't it better to take a permanent decision to discard marriage intentions like Shree Modiji, sannyasis etc. rather than to have false hope?

Thanking you with humility and appreciation.

Answer
1. Let go of the one who wants or doesn't want. That which remains is the Atman (self). That is meditation.

2. To decide or not decide, to want or not want etc. are the causes of suffering. This is the mistake.

When one does not have control over these things, why should he indulge and suffer? Things go as per a predestined plan, as governed by the Almighty. If marriage is on the cards, it will transpire at the destined time. Else, it will not. One should remain neutral and not be for or against. That alone leads to the Supreme state.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Pranamam to pujya Guru,

I am having this doubt why we say body temporary when body is made of 5 elements which are emereged from Brahman which is permanent. five elements are also sparkles(jiva) in the fire(paramatma) like individual jiva, why we say only jiva is permanent and body made of five elements are temporary??

Answer
The screen is permanent while the moving images on it are temporary. The images cannot exist without the screen, whereas the screen exists even after the images have stopped.

The 'Panchamahabhutas' (five elements of creation) are not the Atman. They are an illusion on the screen of pure consciousness, like the images on a screen. Just as the images on the television cease to be when the program ends, so do these elements dissolve into their source after the Atman leaves the body. Just as the television screen remains even after the end of many programs and their images, the Atman is eternal. It is very simple.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
After doing Sarvaangasana. It feels like dizzy and buzzy. The edgy effect is carried over for a long time.Though not significant, it can be felt. I'm doing Bhujangasana to counteract the neck muscles compression in sarvaangasana. I'm making sure my body till neck is close to 90 degrees to the ground, and chin is pressing the chest while arms are resting on the ground. Why is it happening. Please suggest some remedies.

Answer
Do it for shorter periods initially and gradually increase the duration. Some people need more practice to bear the increased blood flow to the head.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I work at a small business that is currently family operated. So I work with my Aunt she goes to church and prays but I feel she is not truly dedicated into following that stuff because she seems very lustful and she tells me stories of night clubs she's been to or is going to and it disgust me. And she thinks anger is cause because of not being able to get laid. How do I know what to trust I don't know what to think, first I thought she was a good church lady but I feel I am wrong it annoys me that someone would act a certain way when they are not truly like that.
Thanks for your guidance

Answer
Different people are in different states of evolution. The degree of ignorance varies. One should turn a blind eye to the doings of others and focus on Sadhana alone. Let go and concentrate on reaching the Atman (self).

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

I write to you with much anticipation following your last answer, which helped clear many doubts and steady my mind. I have a few additional points that I contemplated in my intellectual inquiry (although in the long run I am aware that all answers will come through enlightenment, but I do not know when that will be!). I know some of these questions may be trivial for an advanced yogi but kindly help me as I live in a world where young men are subjected to onslaught of the senses at every turn.

1) My mind has recently become unsettled by two things. One is a fear called "tryphophobia" of worms/larvae infesting the skin in multiple circular holes. The other is ancient torture, such as impalement, being boiled alive, having limbs broken one by one, chinese death by 1,000 cuts, and so forth.

The mind grows weak and depressed when such thoughts come.

Will an enlightened soul, if subject to such miseries, feel pain? I know as you have said that body consciousness has vacated in such a being and he moves in and out like a person occupying a house, but in the real world, does it not take time to go from worldly living to being in the state where you lose body consciousness? Swami Sivananda, for example, manufactured an ego to interact with worldly beings and he had body consciousness at the time. Would a realized sage in such a worldly state not feel fear, pain, etc. at such thoughts as outlined above?

3) With regards to the enlightened being, the merging of the ego in the soul alleviates fears as you have mentioned. However, are there not biological components of the body which react automatically? For example, amygdala in brain instinctively creates fear when we look at spiders and snakes. Will such functions be turned off in the enlightened being?

4) The process of the jiva going adding samskara is said to fuel the cycle of birth and death. At the beginning of time, when HE alone was present, suppose He created the first human beings. In the process of time, the world has gone from a few thousand organisms to billions of humans, animals, etc. How were so many souls "created"?

5) Is the process of samskara compatible with our human evolution? For instance, as Sivananda says, the sight of a pretty young woman causes intoxication/stupefaction (sthamba) in the average man. If this is instinctive, isn't it because evolutionarily, only those with high carnal desire procreated, leading to current beings being highly lust-driven? As such, how does His plan work here?

6) My life and practice are miserable due to my poor digestion. I have IBS. Fats and oils are not digested. My stool is thick, sticky, and incompletely evacuated, causing bodily illness. Please suggest the proper medications that should be taken-I know you mentioned to another aspirant to take food that agrees with the system but I really don't have any options. At this point, I fear I will end up like Swami Vivekananda, with persistent lifelong illness which is incurable. I am 21. I cannot function, my gut is unclean, and my brain and memory are both worsening due to my gut issues.

7) Thousands on this forum love you. You are a guiding light in a dark time. You saved my life. Will I ever be able to see you in the flesh? I know the real guru is within, but I want to see the human form that the Lord manifested in who is gracing the earth with this portal. I would do anything to be able to speak with you and learn from your advice.

Thank you,
Dhananjay

Answer
1. If the described Sadhana is honestly adhered to, all fears, doubts and fanciful tendencies of the mind vacate. The impairments of the body will also taper and go away. Constant meditation on the self is the key.

2. The state of the enlightened being is known through experience. That alone is the way.

3. Take 5-6 pods of raw garlic with dinner. Eat pomegranate regularly. Let the food be fiber rich with many smaller meals, rather than 2 large meals of the day.

4. People meet others when it is in divine destiny. Things happen as per HIS will.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

I have a focused question for you:

I practice brahmacharya on and off - days, weeks and 1-2 months go by between my every ejaculation.

So when I am gaining back my semen after my latest ejaculation, ie. when my reservoir is filling up again, I start feeling stronger but at the same time I am getting fatter and obese. How do I counter that? Can I become slim, strong, flat bellied without any exercises - just simply by completely stopping ejaculation and following unbroken brahmacharya?

Mind you: 100% celibacy over months and can I start getting stronger, slimmer and obese-free without any exercises?

Answer
For that, Brahmacharya is to be practiced in thought, word and deed constantly and not in an on and off manner. A youthful body is eventually produced. The Yogasana-s in Sadhana suffice as exercise.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,
Thank you for your constant support to aspirants.

You always say everything happens according to 'karma' and how one's future turns out is already decided.Isn't it just that one has tendencies based on his actions and thoughts(karma), but can overcome that? You always say everything happens according to His will. I understand when you say Him, it means 'karma'. But isn't it a way of accepting things conveniently?

Secondly, I'm planning to get into a marriage, fully platonic, for emotional support and companionship. But how do I get such a partner without making a minimum effort by searching and thinking everything happens according to 'His' will?

Answer
'HIM' refers to the Almighty. The world and its events are a play running on 'HIS' script. The efforts one may apply or not apply are also a part of this script. That said, it is the duty of each Jiva to strive to realize one's self. The purview however ends at effort. One does not have a right or control over the results, which are ultimately decided by 'HIM'.

Where has it been said that one should not put effort? Put your effort and watch silently, without attachment to the result. One is supposed to apply efforts in the required direction. Not doing so amounts to laziness which is not the way. One should however not question the results, which are governed by the higher power. That which ultimately transpires is 'HIS' will.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello Sir,

You have said good karma does not cancel evil karma, and vice versa, and that both have to be enjoyed separately.

However, a notable saint (Sri Sarada Devi) has said the reverse saying,

1.) "If you do a good act, it cancels the effects of your evil deeds. If one prays, takes the Name of God and thinks of Him, the effects of evil are cancelled."

What do you say to this assertion?

2.) Also, you have said that prayers are never answered by the Divine or god. The will of god manifests despite our prayers, and god never answers our prayers, and in fact, god is quite impartial despite our desires. If this is the case, why:

a.) Did you ask me to pray when I was experiencing severe depression, anxiety during the first phase?

b.) Why do so many other saints say the exact opposite (including the Holy Mother) and advise us to pray?

Answer
1. Negative karma is annulled only when one worship's or prays to God by letting go of the I-Aham (Ego), without asking anything in return (Nishkama karma). It is akin to meditation (merging the mind into the Atman)

No karma is cancelled in case of prayers or worship carried out with some expectation or return.

2. My dear friend, who are you? Who is God? Is God separate from you? Realize the truth first. What is prayer? It is nothing but self-surrender. Prayers are the means to let go of one's Ego. Prayer does not change divine will. It negates the Ego, whereupon the Divine self within shines and thereby lessens the suffering. So prayer is an important part of Sadhana. Nowhere has been said that prayer not of value.

Through Sadhana, first develop 'Gnyana' to understand the inner meaning behind the words of saints. Literal inference is of no use.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjayji, i hope you are progressing well in your sadhana and i sincerely thank you for your guidance in our spiritual pursuit. I have been doing meditation in two sittings- morning and evening for the last few months. Since i was fascinated by the results of meditation, recently I decided to start third sitting just before bed time to hasten my progress on spiritual path.But now I am experiencing vivid dreams and nightmares during my sleep.This has created doubts in my mind. Please guide me should I continue to meditate just before sleep? And kindly explain the reasons of vivid dreams and nightmares because of meditation, if any.

Answer
Meditation on the Atman (self) does not cause dreams. Asana, Bandha, Nadi Shodhana and Samadhi meditation are to be performed during the Sandhi kala-s (described in past answers).

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Sir,
If one is opting for Brahmacharya, he may as well go to a monastery or ashram to pursue his sadhana more efficiently and without any unnecessary hassles. Once parental care is taken care of, is there any reason for him to stay in the civil society? Please cover this as elaborately as possible.

Answer
Whether one goes to a monastery or doesn't, his thoughts and karma go with him. Hence it is not that doing so will make it easier. If doing Sadhana in a monastery is destined, it happens. Striving to realize the Atman is what is important. The wise aspirant accepts the place willed by the Lord and works diligently.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Pranaam Sir,

1. Could one achieve liberation by following Brahmcharya, Ahimsa, self purification, vairagya and selfless service alone(like Mahatma Gandhi, mother Teresa) ?

2. If the person is unable to achieve Samadhi, but has all virtues as mentioned above, what happens to him?

3. How can a simple bachelor brahmachari achieve Samadhi without kundalini awakening?

You are doing a very great service Sir

Thanking You,
Aditya

Om tat sat

Answer
1. These traits are the foundations of Sadhana to realize the self. They eventually lead to Enlightenment under right conditions.

2. He who masters the Yama-s eventually develops the other requirements as well (now or in a future birth), for they are all complimentary. This merges his mind into the Atman, which is Samadhi.

3. Kundalini is automatically awakened under the right Sadhana, at the ripe time.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Dear Dhananjay,

How goes the celibate life? Appreciate everything you do for aspiring brahmacharis on this forum.

For background, I am a 4-month novice brahmachari who is suffering with one problem that is really, really, holding my life back. Meditation and sadhana have not resolved it.

My life is really miserable due to poor digestion. I have this really annoying pattern of digestion with thick, sticky stool that doesn't come out smoothly. It sticks, it doesn't evacuate completely, and it annoys the hell out of me because I cannot do cognitively intensive work with an unhealthy gut filled with feces.

I have tried taking berberine, magnesium at night, raw garlic cloves, pomegranate etc. and all of these make the symptoms better but not the root cause because when I stop supplements everything goes back to usual: Thick, sticky stool that resembles fudge and leaves me in agony.

Is this a parasite issue? Digestive fire issue? Intestinal lubricant issue?

On a related note, why does HE put individuals through suffering? Is it all part of His plan or is there a part left to chance? For instance, seeing the terrible bombings and destruction in the Middle East, does it mean that all those poor Syrian children, women, and men have past karma that warrants their terrible suffering? Also think about all those who have been tortured in terrible ways in history (eyes gouged, tongue ripped, skin flayed, etc.). Does the celibate, once he has created an artificial ego to interact with worldly masses, feel fear?

Along this route, I must ask another question. We say that an enlightened one has no preference for pleasure or pain. But when one is engaged with the world (either with the original ego or a created ego in the case of the celibate), I feel that ANYONE would prefer a neutral state of rest compared to being tortured by being thrown in a fire. Similarly, ANYONE would prefer eating plain rice or delicious meal compared to being forced to eat feces. Although the "one who prefers" is destroyed upon enlightenment, will there Really be indifference to such choices? It is so hard to believe, as there is at least a biological respond to recoil at certain things (for example, even an enlightened soul has a brain with an amygdala that automatically makes us fearful of spiders and snakes).

Thanks and indebted to your help to a young practitioner (me!),

Richard J.

ANSWER: Do the complete set of suggested Sadhana for a few years with unbroken Brahmacharya. The issues will gradually vacate and the answers will reveal by themselves.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: Honestly, what is the use of such an answer? We come to you as you are farther along the path. Of course unbroken sadhana is the key! I will do without fail.

But I have no CHANCE of pursuing sadhana if my MIND/BODY are not working properly. It is impossible to do sadhana in a body that feels unwell, with intestines clogged with sticky stool and fatigue all over. Morning sadhana causes fatigue. Stomach issues prevent sound sleep making me tired during sadhana. It is not Tamas either~

I understand re: the other questions. But why can't you tell me answers? It will help MULTIFOLD in sadhana as the mind cannot rest without knowing these answers. How can one do sadhana when the mind is oscillated by terrorist shootings, murders, and kidnappings heard about all the time? Please be practical! I wish you would take pity on us like Swami Sivananda and give at least a few answers so that we can progress for the time being.

And please understand-I have NO guidance in this world. My family is filled with drunks and my parents are worldly to the extreme. I have sensory pleasure available at my beck and call but I have gotten tired of seeing them and request your guidance to help me when no one else does. Have you seen how promiscuous society in America is? Do you know how much sexual stimulation bombards a young 26-year old everywhere he goes? Please understand! It is so hard when there is no one to help.

Also, this is the first time I am asking for help. My fellow brahmachari had sent you an inquiry via this email previously as he had encountered some similar symptoms (you had prescribed garlic and pomegranate for thick, sluggish stools) but it didn't help me and it hasn't helped me either.

Kindly help. I am desperate, having spent thousands on supplements, visiting Ayurvedic practitioners, medical doctors etc. I am at my wits end and fear my health will fail if not amended immediately, let alone pursue sadhana peacefully.

Thank you,
Ricard

Answer
A spiritual aspirant approached a realized sage in a forest, asking him for instruction to know the self, saying he was tormented by the world. The sage asked him to sit under a peepal tree saying "Wait here till I come back".

Many hours passed and there was no sign of the sage. He felt hungry and thirsty. Some passers by gave him water to drink but there was no food.

Soon the Sun set and mosquitoes began biting him viciously. Without food and just some water leftover, the aspirant waited for the sage in that dark place. By night, there was still no sign of the sage and the weather got extremely cold. The aspirant prayed for the sage to come soon and fell asleep under the tree.

It was a painful night where he was ravaged by the mosquitoes and severely cold weather. Insects bit him, causing extreme pain. He could not sleep for a single minute. This was how the night passed. Soon it was morning, but there was no sign of the sage.

Days passed and the aspirant had endured this torture with no respite. Determined to follow the instruction of his Guru who had asked him to wait, he spent his time meditating under the tree, eating what passersby sometimes gave him. Sometimes, there was no food for days. There was no shelter against the elements. His meager clothes were the only covering.

The clothes were now dirty and soiled from days of use. He could no longer wear them. So in desperation, he went to a nearby stream, took them off, washed them and hung them on a tree to dry. He had no clothes to wear meanwhile. Children from the nearby village, who came to play in the stream started laughing and throwing stones at the naked man. The wounds bled. The aspirant sat under a tree and meditated, unmindful of the torture. The children went away after a while. There was no sign of the sage.

Days passed into weeks and months. Travelers who passed by occasionally, gave him some food or water. The aspirant fell sick under the difficult conditions. There was no one to attend to him. For days, he suffered the illness. There was no sign of the sage.

Months became years. The aspirant was unshaven and unkempt, spending most of his time in meditation, waiting under the tree, as per the instruction of his Guru. The constant meditation and life of simplicity however gave him a peculiar strength he had not experienced earlier. Illness no longer touched him frequently, though he did fall ill occasionally. He led the life of a hermit, eating what came by divine providence. There was still no sign of the sage.

After many years of such a difficult and honest life of a true Yogi, the villagers nearby realized that here was a man of some virtue. They ensured some food was given to him more frequently when they passed by. They left some old clothes for him. He had a crude shelter made from wood, twigs and barks, under which he sat in meditation. The children stopped assaulting him. The aspirant had by now become indifferent to worldly comforts. Leading a harsh life of frugality, his mind was centered on meditation of the self, waiting for the sage to turn up. There was however no sign of the Guru.

Twelve years passed this way. He had just finished his meditation and opened his eyes, and the sage was before him, smiling warmly. The aspirant's joy knew no bounds. He burst out in tears, for the sage was finally here, to impart the him instruction. He could finally realize the self. He fell at the feet of the sage and asked him -"Venerable Sir, I have waited here as per your instructions. Could you impart me realization of God"?

The realized one brought him up, blessed him and uttered the Mahāvākyam - "Tat Tvam Asi" (Thou are THAT) and the aspirant experienced full blown realization. The sage then left.

The harsh conditions and years of suffering dissolved much of the karma and helped build 'Titiksha' (spiritual endurance). The frugal life annulled his attachments to the world & its possessions. Bathing naked at the stream, with all his mind on realization, being oblivious to the reactions of people destroyed his pride, shame and self-consciousness, which are all offshoots of the Aham (Ego), the only impediment to realization. The constant Dhyana (meditation) burnt the 'Asat' (unreal) covering the Atman. By the end of the 12 years, all impediments to realization were vacated. The sage had known this to be the way the moment he saw the aspirant.

Do you see the belief the aspirant had in the words of the sage? He was asked to wait and he waited. No questions or conditions. He would have died at that very place in the wait. Such was his trust. He could have walked away after a few hours or days as most would; but the one he considered his Guru had given a simple instruction - "Wait here" and so, he waited. He never let the Ego rise up and cast its foolish doubts, nor took the easy way out. With childlike trust and devotion, the aspirant persisted. This is called unconditional surrender.

One should develop such surrender, trust and love for the Lord, who alone manifests as the Guru. Such trust & surrender alone invokes the Lord. It is true 'Bhakti' (devotion). The urge within to realize the Atman (self) should be like a raging fire. Then, the grace slowly comes. The path reveals by itself. 'Brahmavidya' (knowledge of the self) is not easily obtainable, though one himself is THAT. Such is the nature of Maya. However, how can it not come to him who makes his own existence secondary and gives in to the cause? It will come as surely as the Sun rises every morning. There need be no doubt about this.

The sufferings and impediments which an aspirant experiences are the result of strong past karma which has to work out and be annulled by Sadhana and often suffering. One must let go of impatience and first develop the determination to perform unbroken practice for a sustained number of years, for knowledge is to be sought from within and not from external instruction. The purpose of instruction ends at showing the path. One has to travel himself and realize. Theoretical or fancy queries are therefore not the way. That which is to be known will be known at the right time.

Adopt the Yogic way of life and the advised Sadhana in a gradual manner, to the extent possible. The path will gradually clear. Unbroken Brahmacharya with proper transmutation will eventually vacate the trouble in the intestines.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi Dhananjay, my humble obeisances.

Are there benefits for a brahmachari that grows his hair and beard?
I heard from the vaishnavas that hair is some type of excrement in the body and must be shaven because a brahmachari must be "neat and clean", but I really have my doubts on this statement because I feel intuitively that I should not cut my hair and beard anymore although I did it a week ago.

My best wishes.

Answer
The benefits of growing hair and beard have been addressed in detail, in past answers. It is conducive to Brahmacharya and holistic living.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hi,

If growing haair is conduces to brahamcharya and pure life then why buddhist monks in Tibet and Japan shave?

Answer
That is another school of thought and approach, aimed at forsaking attachment to one's hair and gender. There are different roads to the destination.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
As attachment to any type of sensual pleasure does not lead to God, and listening to music is a form of sensual pleasure, clearly relying on it as a form of pleasure will not lead to self realization. But, if you had any insight, I'd be interested to hear your view on how music one has preference for affects their journey to self realization and attachment to the physical world. Does it have any semblance to 'mantra' or 'sounds of God' as when you listen to pleasurable music you are engaging deeply in listening to the sounds, and if so is it conducive to practice and finding God? I personally have always had a preference for upbeat, excited music and it does not seem to have any obvious negative drawbacks unless I were to listen to it at high volumes and for extended periods of time. Of course, music that excites lust would be negative.

I've thoroughly enjoyed reading your responses and have gained great benefit and insight from your deep explanations and comments. Thank you for your contributions to humanity.

Answer
In the context of Brahmacharya, that music, which helps develop 'Bhakti' (devotion) towards the Supreme, eventually merging the mind there is beneficial. Other forms that merely give a temporary high through the senses and the mind are not of benefit.

Devotional songs extolling the greatness of the Almighty, or the journey towards the self are the best.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear sir.

Is it possible that we can achieve spiritual benefits through bineural beats??

regards

Answer
Merging the mind into the spirit (Atman) is spirituality. So there are only two things under consideration, the mind and its source, the spirit. Keep it simple and merge it back into its source through meditation. Dependence on anything else external is roundabout and unnecessary. It can become another impediment

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)
Question
Dear Dhananjay,

Each day, for sadhana, I chant OM thrice, do bandhas, nadhi shodana, then 2-3 pranayama rounds and maybe couple asanas afterward.

I have few questions for continuing to progress.

1) How long should breath be held for each bandha? For the middle bandha, when you suck up the stomach, I am feeling stomach pain-what should be done.

2) For pranayama rounds, should intake, retention, and exhale all be 16 seconds each? I find retention easy but inhaling/exhaling is choppy and sometime I can't time ti evenly or do it more quickly...will practice make better.

3) For "meditation", what exactly should I do. I think of the atman as the space around me and contemplate how I am not the mind/body/senses and am instead the space around me. Sometime if I hold in breath when thinking I will get a warm, hypnotized, "fuzzy" feeling that glows through my body. Is this correct. If not correct, what is the right meditation "procedure" to think of.

4) I know this sounds lame but my mind will only fully be at rest if I reach a certain financial goal, help my parents retire, and become a "New York Times bestselling author". Where are there desires coming from? Are they legitimate to pursue and will the almighty help me reach them.

5) The mind wants bliss because that is our source. Yet it is deluded and runs after false bliss like self-abuse, sensory pleasures, etc. During the day time, suppose I am hard at work after finishing sadhana. The mind is tired and wants to resort to sense pleasure and this is when sexual temptation becomes high. How can we keep the mind in a state of bliss, rest, and contentment when we are not in sadhana, the majority of the time.

Much gratitude
Kanth

Answer
It is clear that the past answers have not been clearly understood and followed. Do you see the mistake?

Asana, Bandha, nadi Shodhana and Pranayama is the correct order.

1. Three seconds

2. Retention alone is counted.

3. Detailed elaboration on the procedure of mediation is available in past answers.

4. Do your Sadhana and work without attachment. That which has to come will come.

5. Through constant meditation, the mind will gradually rest more in the Atmic state. Yet the desires assault and make it fall. One has to constantly endeavor this fight for years, following which that state of silence eventually becomes default. This is the war of the Mahabharata one has to wage against the senses. It is the true meaning of Jihad mentioned in the Quran.

An exceptional Sadhaka who has negated his Aham (Ego) alone succeeds.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
QUESTION: Thank you for responding to Our Questions Without asking anything in return.

My brahmacharya is going well, because of that my Practise of concentration Is a Lot easier.
But by inadvertance I Opened myself up to evil entity, of Course sometime i see picture of ugly faced being but i have been told to not bother About it.
But last month i couldn't sleep i felt like they were trying to break into my head.
everytime i meditate it become worse.
I stopped. It/they went away, then i started the practise again they came back.
(Now i stopped any practises to become grounded, now i do self enquiry)
Next week i am meeting a yogi master i believe he is a realised man, he may help.
I love meditating,but those Being do not want let progress.
What should a man who Is on the path to realisation Do In those circumstances?

ANSWER: Who is being affected and who are affecting him? It is the false Ego being affected by another set of false Ego's. If you let go of one, the other disappears. It is very simple.

That state is termed meditation, where the one who gets affected is relinquished, following which THAT (pure self or Atman) alone remains. It is of the nature of peace, bliss and infinity. Nothing touches it.

Let go of all belief in the non-self and merge into THAT. All will be well.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

---------- FOLLOW-UP ----------

QUESTION: You see i may have a problem.
I am more attracted to God than to the self.
If i am THAT. When i am in trouble who am i going to pray to?
Is it not a lot easier to surrender to the Lord, to something higher?

Answer
If one surrenders to the Lord, the Atman (self) alone remains. The Lord & pure self are one and the same, as is a wave of water in the might ocean. Where then is the problem?

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
My Lord Shri Dhananjay,
Thank you. For Everything. Your Name is etched into my heart. By remembering Your Name, I receive wisdom automatically without even talking to you. I try to take every step in my life by remembering Your teachings. Thank you. Thank you. Thank you. It is true that the Guru and the Supreme Lord Himself are but one and the same for the aspirant. Sometimes my mind confuses your Name and the Lord's, Himself. My devotion does not see the difference. Thank you.

You need not take the time to respond to this, as a response is not needed. I just wanted to express gratitude from the bottom of my heart. My Lord, Shri Dhananjay. Thank you.

Answer
The Almighty Lord's blessings shine upon everyone impartially. He who gives up the Ego through surrender to that great being, by merging his mind into THAT formless Supreme, becomes THAT. Then THAT alone remains, as it always did.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I'm doing practices quite regularly, though still yielding into thoughts from a past incident quite often. I'm thin and underweight (51kg and 174cm). Muscles are infirm. I can't go to a gym, as it is distantly located from where I live and I also feel it's artificial to do. My chest dimensions are just on the border of compliance for me to get into IOCL. Since I am studying for competitive exams, it's not possible for me to stuff myself with as much as possible to gain weight. That'd be unhealthy, and it didn't work in the past. I eat home food with abundant nutrients. Please help me what I must do in terms of food, extra sadhana, timings and any other aspect.

Answer
The focus for the Brahmachari should be on merging the mind into the Atman and not on body dimensions. Do your Sadhana with 'Mitahara' (moderate food). Good health and fitness will eventually come on their own.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Hello,

Brahamahcarya bring benefices both physical and mental according to you but why so many masters, saints , sages suffered many ills and many times had weak bodies and short life span? Brahamcharya is supposed to prolong life.

For example, Ramana Maharshi, many monks and lamas in Tibet who look very weak, almost starved or dull. Same thing could be say about christian monks and others. This is one thing i dont understand. Where is the benefice of brahamcharya such as strenght, luster and all what is said in texts about it? If those practicing it are like this then it tells us something different. DO they practice brahamcharya?

Answer
An hunter aims an arrow at a deer and releases it from the bow. Will the arrow change its course if he now wishes otherwise? Will it go elsewhere if he repents the next second for his action? No. Once shot from the bow, the arrow will hit its target without fail. The hunter has no more control over it.

One's actions are like an arrow. Once done, the doer loses control over its effect. The action will bear its resulting fruit. The resulting karma has accrued. Good or bad, one has to face it. The effect of one's past karma is called 'Prarabdha'. It cannot be side stepped. If the Jiva which is now a saint has a karmic debt from past actions that require ill health or some related problem for working out, it undergoes the same. The laws of karma are impartial, be it for a common man or a saint.

In the same way, following a healthy lifestyle is conducive to good health. However, people sometimes fall ill despite doing so. Why is it? In reply, it is to be said that there are factors in play, which are working despite the actions conducive to healthy life. That factor is 'Karma' or the result of past actions which one has to work out.

Therefore, one has to perform good deeds, selflessly and avoid the bad, for he alone has to later bear the fruit, good or bad.

Saints are generally in their last physical incarnation on the earthly plane. So the cumulative of karma performed before enlightenment, dating back to eons has to be finally worked out and got rid of forever. The saint accepts this reality and watches it silently, holding on to the self.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

I recently came across this passage from a disciple of Ramana Maharishi:

"When Milarepa was dying he was asked if he did not feel pain, his agony was so obviously great. “No,” he replied, “but there is pain.” Pain was certainly there for the body. If one is identified with the body one feels it and associates oneself with it. But for the Jnani who sees the body always as something apart from himself, pain is only an experience outside his reality.
There is pain but somehow it is not his"

Could you please explain the above? If a yogi is given the option of sitting in a plain room or being thrown into boiling water, will he really be indifferent to the two situations? I know in theory the one who wants is gone in a realized sage, but it is so hard to contemplate.

Second, will a realized sage not have the bodily processes as ordinary humans or aspirants? Nervous system, brain, etc. all recognize pain. So when the yogi's body is put in pain, will he feel it? Or is pain a product of the mind, such that the yogi who dissolves his mind into the almighty will somehow stay painless even when the body is tortured?

Thank you so much

Answer
1. Is the pain felt in a dream real? What is one's reaction when he wakes up and realizes it to be a dream? He laughs in relief and is no longer affected by the dream pain, though he vividly knows all those painful experiences which unfolded just a minute back while dreaming.

So he knows the pain, the horror and the fear which were experienced, yet he is no longer affected, for they are not real. It is outside reality now, for the one who experienced the dream is gone, replaced by the 'Real one' who cannot be touched by the dream after wake up.

Similar is the state of the realized sage. Just as the one dreaming experienced extreme pain then but was untouched by those events after 'wake up' into his reality, the realized sage who has given up the 'I-ness' [Ego] is untouched by pain or pleasure at the sensory or mind level, even if his body and mind (created mind) go through the experience. So it is perceived but not conceived. It is there, it is known, yet it is not there, like the dream pain. You are now a mere witness of these experiences, but not involved. That the body is there, but you are not the body is one of the default states of realization.

2. The bodily processes are all there, but they are at a very high level of energy & vibration. Highly refined and subtle, like light; and there is no sense of ownership, unlike the ignorant one who grieves or gets happy through the senses. So there is no doership as well. It is like being in a sea of blissful light and you are that light yourself. There is no subject or object. Silence.

ॐ तत् सत्

(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question

Sir,
I am a regular viewer of your site since Jan 2011 and also observing celibacy. Please tell me how to overcome my serious financial problem.so my mind is always in disturbing mode which hampering sadhana.the situation is very serious suicidal .what will I do now??.will spirituality help me to get rid of this problem???

Answer

One's financial state, like all other things, is the result of his past karma and present efforts. When the Jiva borrows money from someone in past existence(s) and has not returned the same, or has lived off another's wealth, or when money is taken unlawfully, or when one partakes to wealth or property which he had no right over, the karma pertaining to such past acts bears fruit in future existences. The Jiva then occurs loss of money through debt, theft, disease or other financial setbacks in the course of payback.

For this reason, one should not accept or take anything from another, which lawfully does not belong to him; for the smallest action has an equal reaction. 'Asteya' (non-stealing) and 'Aparigraha' (non-possessiveness) are important parts of the Yama-Niyama-s to the Yogi.

One's purview ends at working honestly in the occupation shown by destiny. The virtuous Yogi strives without attachment, in the profession shown by destiny and remains content with the proceeds of honest work. Looking at another's wealth with no more desire than for a lump of mud, he performs Sadhana, longing for HIM alone. He who works thus, viewing work as worship, eventually makes enough to sustain and free himself from debt.

Hence it is said in the scriptures:

मात्रवत् परदारेशु परद्रव्येशु लोष्ठवत् |
आत्मवत् सर्वभूतेशु य पश्यति स पश्यति ||

"He who looks at other's wives [or to be wives] as his mother, who looks at other's wealth as no more than a lump of Earth, who see's his own self in all other beings, see's HIM (Lord) and is blessed"

One's attitude should be -"The negative acts performed by this Ego in past existences have lead to my present state. I will henceforth be virtuous, kind, compassionate and fair to all. I will not take even a needle that does not belong to me. I will give up the Ego which made me indulge in wrong doing, causing all this suffering. Let that karma work out and be vacated forever."

With such an attitude, do your Sadhana to realize the self alone. Ask nothing in return. Things will set right with time.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Today end a long streak of celibacy.
May God forgive me.
Nonetheless i noticed that the sexual urge is very little compared to 2 years ago.
You may say that i am the self, but at the same time i pray, Who am i praying to? I feel bad to go from praying to self enquiry because i feel like i am leaving God to focus on myself.
But i am less attracted to praying and more attracted to enquiry, and not long ago believe it or not while doing it i felt a response like everything i was, was false.
The person that is praying God is false, and do not really exist.

Answer
The one who prays is not the Atman (pure self), but the Ego, which is false. It eventually merges into the self, or God or whatever you wish to call it, following which THAT truth alone remains. Enquiry, prayer, all lead to the truth alone.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I have read about human sexuality from Indian and Western sources and have come to a conclusion that continence is the natural state of life.

But, before gaining this vital knowledge, I have been a chronic masturbator for more than a decade. I regard this the darkest aspect of my life.

However, since January I have been able to practice Brahmacharya with just two-three lapses. I consider this good progress given my history of incontinent behavior. I think having the right knowledge has transformed my perception.

My question is - could you please elaborate on the indicators of progress that I could look for to be sure that I am ascending in the path of brahmacharya.

Im about to turn 28 in March and I intend to marry by 30. I have read that the sins of one generation befall on the coming generation. I would never want an innocent soul to suffer because of my mistakes or inherit unnatural tendencies. I remember finding porn cd's in my dads wardrobe when I was small, and perhaps I got this tendency from him. But I dont blame him because whether to act on my impulses or not is completely under my power and I want to do better going forward.

Could you tell me certain practices that I can undertake so that I can possess a sound body and soul and do not transmit my dysfunctionality to future generations of my family.

Thanking you for your invaluable service.

Answer
Go through the past answers where all aspects of Sadhana and their detailed procedure, for the efficient practice of Brahmacharya have been elaborated. Absorb the essence and apply the same with devotion. The path to be taken will be known.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
I must say thank you for all the answer and God bless you.
Now today, after my break in celibacy 3 days ago i started doing pranayama again. (last time i experienced dizziness because i did it wrong and irresponsabily)

Pranayama combined with fruits and carbs diet greatly diminish sexual urge.
Well i have a question about concentration (if it's still in your line of knowledge)
I concentrate on the heart (the feeling of my shirt sticking on my chest), now i do it gently, sometime i see that i am slowly slipping into dhyana(meditation).
How will i know if i am falling into dhyana or sleeping. It's good like a feeling of being in the NOW.
Any advice for a Deeper concentration?
Also i realised that the more i concentrated on being a celibate, the more i focus on women, at first i was like ooo i am a bramachari a vegan and i ended up suffering, depressed and not staying celibate more than one week.
Isn t it better to set rules and forget all about it? It become like brushing your teeth.
Because now it make me feel like brahmacharya is the goal instead of being the mean to reach the goal.

Answer
The 'heart' referred to in meditation is not the physical one but infinite consciousnesses. One must focus on the infinite expanse upon closing his eyes and merge into it, with the belief of being no different. When this is done for a long time of many years on a regular basis, the sense of I-ness gradually diminishes and is eventually lost there. That leads to 'Samadhi'

Think less and meditate more.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
(Yes i know i am asking too many questions)
As one is progressing on the path of Brahmacharya, i am wondering about the long terms.
Who knows, maybe i'll live a long life.
And i want to build the neccesary circumstances to sustain the little bit of Brahmacharya and spiritual practise that i do.
For that to become real, i must push on on my studies.
Yes i know the world is all maya and delusion, but i live in Canada a very cold country without possibility of joining a monastery or living like a monk.

My line of study is computer engineering, and eventualy network security and programing.
If God wish it i shall be able to work for myself.
I fear that it may take me away from the path. As i am 21, for the next three years i will have to concentrate on that + Brahmacharya.
Do you believe it's doable?
I will be seeing a yoga master soon also and plan to take initiation from him, and he will ask a 100% commitment.
Can i do both?
In my head it's clear that i can do it.
2 hours in the morning each day for practise during the week and the rest for wordly matters until i am able to go a 100% practise.
Please your opinion, thank you.

(i know there a lot of "I" in my message, i try to not be too egoistic)
And yes i am not the Doer, it's His will alone.

Answer
Do your Sadhana at the prescribed hours, lead a Yogic life with honest Brahmacharya and focus on your line of study/work. All will come out well.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
My Lord Shri Dhananjay,

Is emotion an off-shoot of the Aham? They are subject to change. Maya can make them dance to her tunes under the influence of the entranced ego.

Are they Asat? Should they be renounced, My Lord?

My humble obeisances unto You.

Answer
Emotion is in the realm of the Aham (Ego). It is to be managed by turning it into Bhakti (devotion) for the Supreme. Then, it becomes a tool to reside in the self.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

I suffer from horrible digestion issues.

Specifically, my stool doesn't evacuate smoothly and completely. It is dry, constipated, sometimes thick and greasy, and altogether causes great mental disturbance.

One the few occassions where bowel movements are moving properly (very rare), my mental state is sublime. Crisp, focused, memory is sharp, no brain fog.

But 99% of the time-great distress, discomfort, and today I yelled with a primal roar while sitting on the toilet.

I will follow your protocol of pranayama.

In addition, an ayurvedic expert has suggested taking slippery elm, milk thistle, barberry root, and taurine to help me solve the condition.

1) Shall I avoid this or follow the protocol?

Life is unbearable. After a slightly large meal, I rush to bathroom. Stool doesn't come completely. Remaining stool in rectum causes discomfort, brain fog, annoyance.

2) I have come to conclusion that living in a small apartment with perfect health is superior to living in a palace but besieged with illnesses like mine. Is the almighty teaching me?

3) Could you please tell me how to stifle the disgusting jealousy in my mind? It ravages me. I envy other bestselling authors, wanting to be an author myself. I envy the success of other rich people. I am poor. I also wonder how others deal with jealousy. In professional sports, some players like Nadal and Federer make millions while other players must work at low end restaurants to make money to live. Could you please suggest how an aspiring yogi should go about curbing the jealousy, which like anger is another offshoot of the ego?

4) I am terrified of losing my seed. As such, I do not know if I can ever have children. My fear is that my terrible self abuse led me to my stomach problems but I don't know. I also don't want to be lonely. Is it appropriate to find a spiritually compatible female who will live with me, support me, but stay on a platonic relationship? My work is intense and I would benefit tremendously from having someone for emotional support, cooking, cleaning, etc.

Thank you,
Devi Moo

Answer
Pranayama when practiced daily, will gradually set right the issue in the coming years. Perform the complete set of Yoga Sadhana as outlined in past answers.

1. Any natural, unprocessed food which agrees with the system can be taken in moderate quantity.

2. One gets what he has earned. The body is placed in circumstances dictated by past karma. Let it be so, for one is not the body. Realizing this, one should reside in the self.

3. Do your Sadhana honestly. Things will set right.

4. If one's Sadhana is proper with devotion to the Almighty, the path is made easy. A suitable life partner will come if so destined, at the ripe time.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Respected Sir,

I have an journey from 3.30 pm to 8.30 pm. So how can I perform yoga task at evening.

Before 3.30 pm, after 8.30 pm or ignore on that day. And what about dinner timing.

Answer
At times when it is not possible to sit for Sadhana, one can meditate by merging the mind into its source and be in silence. Have dinner at the earliest possible time.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Blood vessels in the brain are of microsize. When one sleeps laying his head towards the North, blood flows towards the head. Microsized blood vessels in the head cannot handle the rise in flow - this is one of several reasons given to why one should not sleep with his head facing the North.

In 'sheershaasana' there is a huge rush in blood volume towards head. It's always bothered me whether it'll do any. I do it for 6–8 mins. I feel groggy sometimes. Especially if I do it when I am having a headache, it worsens. Please explain to me a bit about this contradiction(that on one hand 'sheershasana' has immense benefits. And on the other hand, blood flow towards head may even rupture few blood vessels, which we may even not realise, but it certainly harms by ensuing dullness and intermittent dizziness).

Can I do 'sheershasana' as long as I feel comfortable (like 15-30 mins)? Or is there a duration limit beyond which I shouldn't do?

Please help me overcome this practical dilemma.

Answer
1. Yoga is a perfect science. It is to be done right, under proper guidance from an adept.

2. One should start holding an Asana pose for a few seconds only. Gradually, the duration can be increased to the point of comfort and not more.

A duration of 6 minutes is excessive and unnecessary.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)

Question
Dear Dhananjay,

I will follow the measure you outlined for curing my horrible IBS. During this time, are there any few supplements you would recommend to allow the mind to work well and not get distracted by the body during this time? Else mind is very distracted.

Second, suppose the problem is cured after a few months or years. Does the problem basically prevent me from having kids in the future? I don't want it to recur as it is currently ruining my life.

Third, I am about to undergo very rigorous graduate studies now. Will stress worsen the problem, and if so, how should I deal with the new demands?

Finally, I would like to understand the root source of the problem. Is thick/dry stool with difficulty/incomplete evacuation a problem arising due to lack of intestine mobility, liver issues, or something else? I am trying to understand how sadhana will help and I should emphasize any yoga practices to facilitate progress.

Thank you
Moo

Answer
1. The mind is to be controlled through Sadhana, the described Yogic lifestyle and a detached attitude.

2. Yoga Sadhana improves health and fertility and not the reverse.

3. When work is carried out with a calm, detached mind, there is no question of stress.

4. Do your Sadhana and be patient. Things will resolve at the destined time.

ॐ तत् सत्
(That Supreme being is the absolute truth)